A report of the voyage and successe thereof, attempted in the yeere of our Lord 1583 by sir Humfrey Gilbert knight, with other gentlemen assisting him in that action, intended to discover and to plant Christian inhabitants in place convenient, upon those large and ample countreys extended Northward from the cape of Florida, lying under very temperate Climes, esteemed fertile and rich in Minerals, yet not in the actuall possession of any Christian prince, written by M. Edward Haie gentleman, and principall actour in the same voyage, who alone continued unto the end, and by Gods speciall assistance returned home with his retinue safe and entire.

* * * *

Thus after we had met with the Swallow, we held on our course Southward, until we came against the harbor called S. John, about 5 leagues from the former Cape of S. Francis: where before the entrance into the harbor, we found also the Frigate or Squirrill lying at anker. Whom the English marchants (that were & alwaies be Admirals by turnes interchangeably over the fleetes of fishermen within the same harbor) would not permit to enter into the harbor. Glad of so happy meeting both of the Swallow and Frigate in one day (being Saturday the 3. of August) we made readie our fights, and prepared to enter the harbor, any resistance to the contrarie notwithstanding, there being within of all nations, to the number of 36 sailes. But first the Generall dispatched a boat to give them knowledge of his coming for no ill intent, having Commission from Her Majestie for his voiage he had in hand. And immediatly we followed with a slack gale, and in the very entrance (which is but narrow, not above 2 butts length) the Admirall fell upon a rocke on the larboard side by great oversight, in that the weather was faire, the rocke much above water fast by the shore, where neither went any sea gate. But we found such readinesse in the English Marchants to helpe us in that danger, that without delay there were brought a number of boates, which towed off the ship and cleared her of danger.

Having taken place convenient in the road, we let fall ankers, the Captaines and Masters repairing aboard our Admirall; whither also came immediatly the Masters and owners of the fishing fleete of Englishmen, to

*Page 1699
sponsored by
Sandi & Ken
Tulk,
Manuels, NL*

understand the Generals intent and cause of our arrivall there.

They were all satisfied when the General had shewed his commission, and purpose to take possession of those lands to the behalfe of the crowne of England, and the advancement of Christian religion in those Paganish regions, requiring but their lawfull ayde for repaying of his fleete, and supply of some necessaries, so farre as conveniently might be afforded him, both out of that and other harbors adjoyning. In lieu whereof, he made offer to gratifie them, with any favour and priviledge, which upon their better advise they should demand, the like being not to bee obteyned hereafter for greater price. So craving expedition of. his demand, minding to proceede further South without long detention in those partes, he dismissed them, after promise given of their best indeavour to satisfie speedily his so reasonable request. The marchants with their Masters departed, they caused foorthwith to be discharged all the great Ordinance of their fleete in token of our welcome.

It was further determined that every ship of our fleete should deliver unto the marchants and Masters of that harbour a note of all their wants: which done, the ships as well English as strangers, were taxed at an easie rate to make supply. And besides, Commissioners were appointed, part of our owne companie and part of theirs, to go into other harbours adjoyning (for our English marchants command all there) to laevie our provision: whereunto the Portugals (above other nations) did most willingly and liberally contribute. Insomuch as we were presented (above our allowance) with wines, marmalads, most fine ruske or bisket, sweet oyles and sundry delicacies. Also we wanted not of fresh salmons, trouts, lobsters and other fresh fish brought daily unto us. Moreover as the maner is in their fishing, every weeke to choose their Admirall a new, or rather they succede in orderly course, and have weekely their Admirals feast solemnized: even so the General, Captaines and masters of our fleete were continually invited and feasted. To grow short, in our abundance at home, the intertainment had bene delightfull, but after our wants and tedious passage through the Ocean, it seemed more acceptable and of greater contentation, by how much the same was unexpected in that desolate corner of the world: where at other times of the yeare, wilde beasts and birds have only the fruition of all those countries, which now seemed a place very populous and much frequented.

The next morning being Sunday and the 4 of August, the Generall and his company were brought on land by English marchants, who shewed unto us their accustomed walks unto a place they call the Garden. But nothing appeared more then Nature it selfe without art: who confusedly hath brought foorth roses abundantly, wilde, but odoriferous, and to sense very comfortable. Also the like plentie of raspis berries, which doe grow in every place.

Munday following, the General had his tent set up, who being accompanied with his own followers, sommoned the marchants and masters, both English and strangers to be present at his taking possession of those Countries. Before whom openly was read & interpreted unto the strangers his Commission: by vertue whereof he tooke possession in the same harbour of S. John, and 200 leagues every way, invested the Queenes Majestie with the title and dignitie thereof, had delivered unto him (after the customs of England) a rod & turffe of the same soile, entring possession also for him, his heires and assignes for ever: And signified unto al men, that from that time forward, they should take the same land as a territorie appertaining to the Queene of England, and himselve authorised under her Majestie to possesse and enjoy it. And to ordaine lawes for the government thereof, agreeable (so neere as conveniently might be) unto the lawes of England: under which all people comming thither hereafter, either to inhabite, or by way of traffique, should be subjected and governed. And especially at the same time for a beginning, he proposed & delivered three lawes to be in force immediatly. That is to say: the first for Religion, which in publique exercise should be according to the Church of England. The 2. for maintenance of her Majesties right and possession of those territories, against which if anything were attempted prejudiciall, the partie or parties offending should be adjudged and executed as in case of high treason, according to the lawes of England. The 3. if any person should utter words sounding to the dishonour of her Majestie, he should loose his eares, and have his ship and goods confiscate.

p. 1700

These contents published, obedience was promised by generall voyce and consent of the multitude as well of Englishmen as strangers, praying for continuance of this possession and government begun. After this, the assembly was dismissed. And afterward were erected not farre from that place the Armes of England ingraven in lead, and infixed upon a pillar of wood. Yet further and actually to establish this possession taken in the right of her Majestie, and to the behoofe of Sir Humfrey Gilbert knight, his heires and assignes for ever; the Generall granted in fee farme divers parcels of land lying by the water side, both in this harbor of S. John, and elsewhere, which was to the owners a great commoditie, being thereby assured (by their proper inheritance of grounds convenient to dresse and to drie their fish, whereof many times before they did faile, being prevented by them that came first into the harbor. For which grounds they did covenant to pay a certaine rent and service unto sir Humfrey Gilbert, his heirs or assignes for ever, and yeerely to maintaine possession of the same, by themselves on their assignes.

No. 708.

[2 May, 1610.]

CHARTER OF THE LONDON AND BRISTOL COMPANY. EARL OF NORTHAMPTON AND ASSOCIATES.

Cōn p Thēs &
societate de lez
Adventures in Newfoundland & suc
a.

PATENT ROLL 8 JAMES I. PART VIII. No. 6.

Extract.

James by the grace of God of greate Brittainē ffrance and Ireland king defendor of the faith &c. To all people to whome this p'sentes shall come societate in greeting, knowe ye whereas divers our loveing and well disposed Subiectes are desirous to make plantacon to inhabite and to establishe a Colony or Colonyes in the Southerne and Easterne partes of the Cōuntry and Isle or Ilandes cōmonlye called Newfoundlandē vnto the Coast and harboure whereof the Subiectes of this our Realme of England have for the space of ffiftye yeares and vpwards yearely vsed to resort in noe smale numbers to fishe, intending by such plantacon and inhabiting both to secure and make safe the said trade of ffishing to our Subiectes forevr And alsoe to make some comendable benefitt for the vse of mankynde by the landes and p'ffittes thereof which, hetherto from the beginnyng (as it seemeth manifest) hath remayned vnprofitable And for better p'formance of such their purpose and intencōns have humbly besought our Regall authoritye and assistance, we being well assured that the same lande or Cōuntrye adioyning to the foresaid Coastes where our Subiectes vse to ffishe remayneth soe destytute and soe desolate of inhabitanche that scarce any one savage p'son hath in manye yeares byn seene in the most partes thereof And well knowing that the same lying and being soe vacant is as well for the reasons of foresaide as for manye other reasons verie cōmodious for vs and our domynions And that by the lawe of nature and natons wee maye of our Royall authoritie possease our selues and make graunt thereof without doeing wrong to any other Prince or State considering they cannot instlye p'tend any Sovaignetye or right therevnto in respecte that the same remayneth soe vacant and not actually possessed and inhabited by any Christian or any other whomsoever And therefore thinking it a matter and acōn well beseemyng a Christian king to make true vse of that which God from the beginning created for mankynd And thereby intending not onlye to worke and p'cure the benefitt and good of manye of our Subiectes but principally to increase the knowledg of the omnipotent God and the p'pagēcon of our Christian faith, have graciously accepted of their said intencon and suite And therefore doe of our specyall grace ctayne knowledg and meere moōn for vs our heires and successors give graunt and conforme by theis p'sentes vnto our right deare and right welbeloved Cozen and Councillor henrie Earle of Norhampton keeper of our privie Seale and

p. 1702

to our trustie and right welbeloved Sir lawrence Tanfeild knight Cheife Baron of our Exchequer Sir John Doddridg knight one of our Seriantes att lawe Sir ffrauncis Bacon knight our Sollicitor gen^{all} Sir Daniell Dun Sir Walter Cope Sir Percivall Willoughby and Sir John Constable knightes John Weld Esquier Willyam ffreeman Raphe ffreeman John Slany humfrey Slanye Willyam Turner Robt Kirkam gent John Weld gent Richard ffishborne John Browne humfrey Spencer Thomas Juxon John Stokeley Ellis Crispe Thomas Alporte ffrauncis Needham William Jones Thomas langton Phillipp Gifford John Whittington Edward Allen Richard Bowdler Thomas Jones Symon Stone John Short John Vigars John Juxon Richard hobby Robt Alder mathewe haveland Thomas Aldworth Willyam lewis John Guy Richard hallworthie John Langton humfrey hooke Phillipp Guye Willyam merridith Abram Jeninges and John Dowghtye their heires and assignes and to such and soe manye as they doe or shall hereafter admytt to be ioyned with them in forme hereafter in theis p'sentes exp'ssed, whether they goe in their p'sons to be planted in the saide planta^{con} or whether they goe not, but doe adventure their moneys goodes and chattelles that they shal be one bodie or comynalty p'petuall, and shall have p'petuall succession and one Comon Seale to serve for the saide bodye and Comynalty, and that they and their Successors shalbe knowen called and incorporated by the name of the Tresurer and the Companye of Adventurers and planter of the Cittye of london and Bristoll for the Collonye or planta^{con} in Newfoundland and that they and their successors shalbe from thenceforth foever* enabled to take acquire and purchase by the name aforesaid (licence for the same from vs our heires or successors first had and obtayned) any manner of landes tenementes and hereditamentes goodes and chattelles within our Realme of England and domynion of wales And that they and their successors shalbe likewise enabled by the name aforesaide to plead and be ympleaded before any our Judges or Justices in anye of our Courtes and in any ac^{ons} and suites whatsoever. And we doe alsoe of our sayd speciall grace ctayne knowledg and meere mo^{con} for vs our heires and succeors give graunt and confirme unto the saide Tresurer and Companye and their successors vnder the reserva^{ons} lymitta^{ons} and declara^{ons} hereafter expressed all that parte and por^{on} of the said Countrie comonlye called Newfound land which is scituate lying and being to the southward of the parallell line to be conceaved to passe by the Cape or headland comonly called or known by the name of Bomviste inclusive which Cape or headland is to the Northward of the Baye, comonlie called Trinity Baye and alsoe which is scituate lying and

* sic.

being to the Eastward of the meridian line to be conceived to passe by the Cape or headland commonly called or known by the name of Cape Sancta- Maria or Cape Saint Maries inclusive which Cape or headland is to the Eastward of the Baye commonly called the Baye of Placentia together with the Seas and Ilandes lying within tenn leagues of anye parte of the Sea Coast of the Countrie aforesaide And alsoe all those Countries landes and Ilandes commonly called Newfoundlande which are scituate betweene ffirtie and sixe degrees of Northerlie latitude and twoe and ffiftie, degrees of the like latitude And alsoe all the landes soile

p. 1703

*Page 1703
sponsored by
Sandi & Ken
Tulk,
Manuels, NL*

grounds havens Portes Rivers mynes as well Royall mynes of gould and silver as other mynes myneralles pearles and pretious stones woodes quarries marshes waters ffishinges hunting hawking fowling comodityes and hereditaments whatsoever together with all p'rogatives iurisdiccions Royalties priviledges ffranchises, and p'hemynences within anye the saide territories and the p'cinctes thereof whatsoever and thereto or thereabouts both by Sea and lande being or in any sorte belonging or appteyning, and w^{ch} wee by our l^{res} patentes maye or can graunt and in as ample manner and sorte as we or any of our noble p'genitors have heretofore graunted to any Companie bodie politique or corporate or to any adventurer or adventurers undertaker or undertakers of any discovery plantacon or traffique of in or into any forrayne partes whatsoever and in as larg and ample manner as if the same were herein p'ticulerlie menconed and exp'ssed Nev'rtheles our will and pleasure is and we doe by theis p'sentes exp'sse and declare, that there be saved and reserved unto all manner of p'sons of what nation soever, and alsoe to all and everie our loveing subiectes which doe att this p'sent or hereafter shall trade or voiaq to the partes aforesaid for ffishing all and singuler liberties powers easementes and all other benefitt whatsoever as well concerning their saide ffishing as all other circumstances and incidentes therevnto in as large and ample manner as they have heretofore vsed and enjoyed the same without anye ympeachm^t disturbance or exaccon any thing in theis p'sentes to the contrarie notwithstanding To have hold possesse and enjoye all and singuler the saide landes Countries and territories with all and singuler other the p' hisses heretofore by theis p'sentes graunted or menconed to be graunted to them the said Tresurer and company their successors or assignes forever to the sole and p'per vse of them the saide Tresurer and Company their successors and assigner to be holden of us our heires and successors as of our mannor of East Greenwich in the County of Kent in fre and Common socage and not in Capite yelding and paying vnto vs our heires and successors the ffift part of all the Oare of gould and silver that from tyme to tyme and att all tymes hereafter shalbe there gotten had and obtayned for all services duties and demaundes And for as much as the good and p'sperous successe of the said plantacon cannot but chiefly depend next vnder the blessing of God and the support of our Royall authoritie upon the p'vident and good direction of the whole enterprise by a carefull and vnderstanding Councell And that it is not convenient that all the Adventurers shall be soe often drawen to meete and assemble as shall be requisite for them to have meetinges and conference about their affaires therefore wee doe ordayne establishe and confirme that there shalbe p'petually one Councell consisting of twelve p'sons here resident in london which shall governe and order all 'natters and causes which shall arrise growe or happen by reason of the saide plantacon or which shall or maye concerne the government of any Collonye or Collonyes to be established in any the said Territories or Countries of Newfounde land before lymitted or any the p'cinctes thereof, which Councell shall have a Seale for the better government and admynistracon of the said plantacon besides the legall Seale of the Companye or Corporacon each of which Seales shall have

p. 1704

our Armes ingraven on the one side thereof and our Portrature on the other side And that the legall Seale of the saide Tresurer and Companye shall have ingraven rounde about on both sides thereof this wordes Sigillm Thesaurarii et Com̃uniyatis terre noue, and that the Seale for the Councell shall have ingraven rounde about on thone side this wordes Sigillum Regis magne Britanie ffranc et Libnie and on the other side this inscripcon rounde about p Consilio terre noue And further wee establishe and ordayne that Sir Percivall Willoughby knight John Welde Esquier Raphe ffreeman Richard ffishburne John Stokely Willyam Turner Willyam Jones John Slany humfrey Slany John Weld Thomas Juxon and Thomas Jones shalbe the Councell for the saide Companye of Adventurers and planters in the saide Territories and Countries before lymitted And the saide John Slany wee ordayne to be Tresurer of the saide Companye which Tresurer shall have authoritie to give order for the warning of the Councell and somoning the Companye to their Courtes and meetinges and the said Councell and Tresurer or anye of them shall be from thenceforth nomynated chosen contynued displaced chaunged altered and supplied as death or other seṽall occasions shall requier, out of the Companye of the said Adventurers by the voice of the greater part of the said Councell and Adventurers in their assembly for that purpose, And wee doe alsoe by this p'sentes of our speciall grace c̃taine knowledg and meere motion ordayne establishe and agree for vs our heires and successors That the said Tresurer and Company shall or lawefully maye establishe and cause to be made a Coyne to passe currant in the saide Territories of or in Newfound land before lymitted betweene the people inhabiting in any the said territories or in any the p'cinctes thereof for the more ease of traffique and bargayning betweene and amongst them of such nature and of such mettell and in such manner and forme as the said Councell heere shall lymitt and appoynt And wee doe by theis p'sentes of our speciall grace ctayne knowledg and meere motion for vs our heires and successors graunt vnto the said Tresurer and Company and their successors that yf it happen at any tyme or tymes the Tresurer for the tyme being to be sicke or to have any such cause of absence from the City of London as shall be allowed by the saide Councell or the greater parte of them assembled, soe as he cannott attend the affaires of that Company. In everie such case it maye and shalbe lawfull for such Tresurer for the tyme being to assigne constitute and appoynt one of the Councell for that Company to be likewise allowed by the said Councell or the greater parte of them assembled to be the deputie Tresurer for the said Company which deputie shall have power, to doe and execute all thinges which belong to the saide Tresurer during such tyme as such Tresurer shall be eyther sicke or otherwise absent vppon cause allowed of by the saide Councell or the maior part of them as aforesaide soe fullye and wholly and in as large and ample manner and forme to all intentes and purposes as the saide Tresurer if he p'sent himself maye or might doe and execute the same And further of our speciall grace ctayne knowledg and meere motion for vs our heires and successors wee doe by theis p'sentes give and graunt full power and authoritie to the

p. 1705

saide Councell heere resident as well att this p'sent tyme as hereafter from tyme to tyme to nomynate make constitute ordayne and confirme by such-name or names stile or styles as to them shall seeme good and likewise to revoke dischargd chaung and alter all and singuler Goũnors Officers and mynisters which hereafter by them shall be thought fitt and needfull to be made or vsed for the goũment of any Colonye or plantaçon to be had or made of or in any the saide Territories of Newfound lande before lymitted and by theis p'sentes graunted or ment to be graunted, and alsoe to make ordayne and establishe all manner of orders lawes direcçons instruccõs formes and ceremonies of goument and magistracie fitt and necessarie for and conẽning the goũment of the saide Colonye or Colonyes and plantaçon or plantaçons and the same att all tymes hereafter to abrogate revoke or chang not onlye within the p'cinctes of the said Colonye or Colonyes but alsoe vppon the Sea in goeing and coming to and from the said Colonye or Collonyes as they in their good discretions shall thinke to be fitt for the good of the Adventurers and Inhabiters there. And wee doe alsoe hereby declare that for diũrs reasons and consideraçons vs therevnto especially moveing our will and pleasure is and wee doe hereby ordayne that ymediately from and after such tyme as any such Goũnor or principall Officer soe to be nomynated and appoynted by the said Councell for the goũment of anye Colonye or Colonyes as aforesaide shall arive in Newfound lande or in anye the territories aforesaide and give notice of his Comission in that, behalfe, all Officers Goũnors and mynisters formerlie constituted or appoynted shalbe discharged, straightly charging them and comaunding them and everie of them and everie other p'son resident or which hereafter shall reside in the saide Collony or Colonyes vppon their allegeaunce that they forthwith be obedient to such goūment or Goūnors as by the saide Counsell heere resident shall be named and appoynted as aforesaid and to all direc̄ons orders and comaundementes which they shall receive from them as well in their p'sent resigning and giveing vp their authoritie Offices charge and places as in all other attendance as shall be by them from tyme to tyme required And wee doe further by theis p'sentes ordayne and establishe that the saide Tresurer and Counsell here resident in london and their successors or any ffive of them being assembled (the Tresurer being one) shall from tyme to tyne have full power and authoritie to admitt and receive anye other p'son into their Company Corporāon or ffredome And further in a geñall assembleie of the Adventurers with the consent of the greater parte vppon good cause to disfranchize and put out any p'son or p'sons out of the saide freedome and company And wee doe alsoe graunt and confirme for vs our heires and successors that it shall be lawfull for the said Tresurer and Company and their successors by direc̄on of the Goūnors there to digg and to search for all manner of mynes of golde silver Copper Iron leade tynne and other myneralles as well within the p'cincte aforesaide as within anye parte of the mayne lande not formerly graunted to any other, and to have and to enioye the gold silver Copper Iron leade and tynne and all other myneralles to be gotten thereby to the vse and behoofe of the saide Company of Planters and adventurers yelding therefore and payeing yerely vnto vs our heires and successors as aforesaide without anye other manner of p'ffitt or accompt to be given or yelded to vs our heires or successors for or in respecte of the same And we doe further of our speciall grace c̄tayne knowledg and meere motion for vs our heires and successors graunt by theis p'sentes to and with the saide Tresurer and Company and their successors That it shall be lawfull and free for them and their assignes att all and everie tyme and tymes hereafter out of our Realme of England and out of all other our domynions to take and leade into the saide voyag and for and towards the sayde plantaçon and to travell thetherwardes and to abide and inhabite there in the said plantaçon all such and soe manye of our loveinge Subiectes or anye other strangers that will become our loveinge Subiectes and live under our allegiance as shall willinglie accompnayne them in the said voyage and plantaçon with sufficient shipping Armor weapons Ordynance muniçon powder shott victualles and such marchantdizes or wares as maye be fitting to transport and carrie into thos partes, and clothing ymplementes, furniture Cattell horses and mares and all other thinges necessarie for the saide plantaçon and for the use and defence and trade with the people there if anye be inhabiting in the saide Countrie or shall come out of other partes there to trade with the saide planters and in passing and retorning to and fro all such comodities or marchandize as shalbe from thence brought without yeldinge or paying subsodie custome or ymposicon or any other tax or dutye to vs our heires or successors for the space of seaven yeares from the date of theis p'sentes Provided that none of the saide p'sons soe taken and Carried for the plantaçon be such as shall be hereafter by Speciall name restrayned by vs our heires or successors And that for their further encouragment of our speciall grace and favour wee doe by theis p'sentes for vs our heires and successors yealde and graunt to and with the saide Tresurer and company and their successors and everie of them their ffactors and assignes, that they and everie of them shalbe free and quitt of all subsidies and Customes in Newfound lande or anye the territories or p'cinctes aforesaid for the space of one and twentye yeares and from all taxes and ymposicons forever vppon anye goodes or marchandizes at any tyme or tymes hereafter eyther vppon Importaçon thether or exportaçon from thence into our Realme of England or into anye other of our domynions by the saide Tresurer and Company and their successors their deputies ffactors and assignes or anye of them (except onlie the ffive poundes p Centu due for Custom vppon all such goodes and marchandizes as shalbe brought or ymported into our Realme of England or any other of theis our domynions according to the ancient trade of marchantes which ffive poundes p Centu onlie being paide it shalbe thenceforth lawfull and free for the saide adventurers the same goodes and marchandizes to exporte and carrie out of our saide domynions into for rayne partes without any custome tax or other dutie to be paide to vs our heires or successors or to anye other our Officers or deputies Provided that the saide goodes and marchandizes be shipped out within thirteene monethes after the first landing within anie parte of thos domynions and wee doe alsoe confirme to the saide Tresurer and Company and their successors as alsoe graunt to all and everie such Goūnors or other Officers or mynisters as by the

p. 1707

saide Counsell shall be appoynted to have power and authoritie of goūment and comaund in or over anye Colony or plantaēon in any the lymittes or p'cinctes aforesaide, that they and everie of them shall and lawfully maye from tyme to tyme and att all tymes for ever hereafter for their severall defence and safty encounter expulse repell and resist by force and armes as well by sea as by lande and by all wayes and meanes whatsoever all and everie such p'son and p'sons whatsoever as without the speciall licence of the saide Tresurer and Company and their successors shall attempt to inhabite within the saide sevrall p'cinctes and lymittes of the saide Colony or plantaēon and alsoe all and everie suche p'son and p'sons whatsoever as shall enterprise or attempt att any tyme hereafter destruēon invasion hurt detryment or anoyance to the saide Colony and plantaēon And that it shall be lawfull for the saide Tresurer and Companye and their successors and everie of them from tyme to tyme and att all tymes hereafter and they shall have full power and authoritie to take and surprise by all wayes and meanes whatsoever all and everie p'son and p'sons whatsoever with their shippes goodes and other furniture trafficking in any harbor Creeke or place within the lymittes and p'cinctes of any Colonye or plantaēon to be made in anye the lymittes or p'cinctes aforesaide And being allowed by the said Company to be adventurers or planters of the saide Colonye vntill such tyme as they being of any Realmes or domynions vnder our obedience shall paye or agree to paye to the handes of the Tresurer or of some other Officer deputed by the goūnors in any the saide Territories or p'cinctes aforesaide over and above such subsidie and Custome as the saide Companye is or hereafter shalbe to paye ffive poundes p Centū vppon all such goodes and marchandizes soe brought in thether, other then such as shall be brought in for the necessarie vse of ffishing as hath byne heeretof ore accustomed, and alsoe ffive poundes p Centu vppon all goodes by them shipped out from thence, other then ffish and other necessaries requisite to fishing And being strangers and not vnder our obedience vntill they have payde over and above such subsidie and Custome as the same Tresurer and Companye and their successors is or hereafter shall be to paye tenn poundes p Centum vppon all such goodes likewise carried in and out and the same sōmes of money and benifitt as aforesaide for and during the space of one and twenty,yeares shall be wholly ymployed to the benifitt and behoofe of the said Companie or plantaēon, and the saide one and twenty yeares ended the same shalbe taken to the vse of vs

our heires and successors by such Officer and mynister as by vs our heires or successors shalbe thereunto assigned and appoynted Alsoe wee doe for vs our heires and successors graunt and declare by theis p'sentes, that all and everie the p'sons being our Subiectes which shall goe and inhabite within any Colony or plantacon within anye the p'cinctes aforesaide and everie of their Children and posteritie which shall happen to be borne within the lymittes thereof shall have and enioy all libertyes ffranchises and ymmunities of free denizons and naturall Subiectes within anye of our other domynions to all intentes and purposes as if they had byn abiding and borne within this our Realme of England or in anye other of our domynions And forasmuch as it shall be necessarie for all such our loveing

p. 1708

Subiectes as shall inhabite within any the said territories or p'cinctes of New-found lande aforesaide to determyne to live together in the feare and true worship of Almighty God, Christian peace and civill quietnes each with other whereby everie one maye with more saftie pleasure and p'ffitt enioye that wherevnto they shall attaine with greate payne and p'rill, we for vs our heires and successors are likewise pleased and contented and by theis p'sentes doe give and graunt to the said Tresurer and Company and their successors and to such Goũnors Officers and mynisters as shall be by the saide Councill constituted and appoynted according to the natures and lymittes of their Offices and places respectively, that they shall and maye from tyme to tyme forever hereafter within the said territories or p'cinctes of Newfound lande or in the waye by the Seas thither and from thence have full and absolute power, and authoritie to correct punishe p'don governe and rule all Subiectes of vs our heires and successors as shall from tyme to tyme adventure themselves in any voyage thither or that shall att any tyme hereafter inhabite in the p'cinct and territorie of the said lande called Newfound lande aforesaide according to such Orders Ordinances constitucons direccons and instruccions as by the saide Councill as aforesaide shall be established, and in defecte thereof in cause of necessitie according to the good discretions of the said Governors and Officers respectivelie as well in cases Capitall and Crimynall as Civill both marine and other, soe alwayes as the saide Statutes ordynaunces and p'cedinges as neere as conveniently may be agreeable to the lawes statutes goũmentes and policie of this our Realme of England And wee doe further of our speciall grace c̄tayne knowledg and meere motion graunt declare and ordayne that such principall Governor or Governors as from tyme to tyme shall dulie and lawfully be authorized and appoynted in manner and forme in theis p'sentes heretofore exp'ssed shall have full power and autlioritie to vse and exercise marshall lawe in cases of Rebellion or mutynie in as larg and ample manner as our leeftenantes in our Counties within our Realme of England have or ought to have by force of their Comissions of lieutenancy And furthermore yf any p'son or p'sons Adventurers or planters of the said Colony or any other att any tyme or tymes hereafter shall transporte any moneys goodes or marchandizes out of anye our kingdomes with a p'tence or purpose to land sell or otherwise dispose the same within the lymittes and boundes of anye the saide territories or p'cintes of or in Newfoundland, and yet neutheles being att sea or after he hath landed within any parte of the saide territories and p'cinctes shall carrie the same into any forraine Countrie with a purpose there to sell and dispose thereof That then all the saide goodes and chattelles of the saide p'son or p'sons soe offending and transporting together with the shipp or vessell wherein such transportacon was made shall be forfeyed to vs our heires and successors And further our will and pleasure is that in all questions and doubttes that shall arrise vppon any difficulty of construc̃on or interp'tac̃on of any thing contayned in theis our tres patentes the same shall be taken and interpreted in most ample and beneficiall manner for the said Tresurer and Companie and their successors and everie member thereof

p. 1709

And fynally our will and pleasure is and wee doe further hereby for vs our heires and successors graunt and agree to and with the said Tresurer and Company and their successors that all and singuler p'son and p'sons which shall att any tyme or tymes hereafter adventure any some or somes of money in and towards the said plantãon of any Colony or Colonyes in Newfound lande or anye the territories or p'cinctes thereof and shall be admitted by the said Councill and Company as adventurers of the saide Companie in forme aforesaide and shall be inrolled in the booke or Record of the adventurers of the said Companie shall and maye be accompted accepted taken held and reputed adventurers of the saide Colonye and shall and maye enioye all and singuler grauntes priviledges libties benefittes p'ffittes comodities advantages and emolumentes whatsoever as fully largely amplie and absolutlie as yf they and everie of them had byne p'cisely playnlie singulerlie and distinctlie named and, incerted into theis our tres patentes And lastlie because the principall effect which wee can desire or expect of this ac̃on is the conversion and reduction of the people in those partes (if anye be there inhabiting) vnto the true worshipp of God and Christian Religion in which respecte we would be loath that any p'son should be permitted to passe that we suspected to affecte the sup'stitions of the Church of Roome, wee doe hereby declare that it is our will and pleasure that none be p'mitted to passe in anye voyage from tyme to tyme to be made into the said Countrie but such as first shall have taken the oath of Sup'macye for which purpose wee doe by theis p'sentes give full power and authoritie to the Tresurer for the tyme being and any three of the Councill and to everie three such p'son or p'sons as shall be by the saide Tresurer, and anye three of the

* sic.

saide Councell therevnto authorized whereof the Tresurer for the tyme being to be one And to anye our maiors Bayliffes or any other our chef Officer or Officers in any our portes havens or Townes where anye such p'son or p'sons shall take shipping to tender and exhibite the saide oath to all such p'son as shall at anye tyme be sent and ymployed in the said voyage to remayne or plant there, Provided alwayes and our will and pleasure is and we doe hereby declare to all Christian kinges Princes and Estates, that if any p'son or p'sons which shall hereafter be of any Colony or plantacon in anye the territories or p'cinctes of Newfoundlande before lymitted or any other by his their or anye of their licence or appoyntment shall att any tyme or tymes here-after robb or spoyle by Sea or lande or doe any acte of vniust or unlawfull hostilitye to anye the Subiectes of vs our heires or successors or any the subictees of any king Prince Ruler Governor or Estate being in league and amytye with vs our heires or successors or that vppon such iniurie or vppon iust complaynte of such Prince Ruler Governor or State or their Subiectes wee our heires or successors shall make open p'clamacon within anye the partes of our Realme of England comodious for that purpose that the saide p'son or p'sons haveing comitted any such Robberie or spoyle whall* within the tyme to be lymitted by such p'clamacons make full restitucon or satisfaccon of all such iniuries donne. Soe as the saide Princes and others soe complayning maye hold themselves fullie satisfied and contented and that if the saide p'son or p'sons haveing committed such Robberie or spoyle shall not make nor cause to be made

p. 1710

satisfaccon accordingle within such tyme soe to be lymitted That then it shall be lawfull to vs our heires and successors to putt the saide p'son or p'sons haveing comitted such Robberie or spoyle out of our alleageaunce and p'tection and that it shall be lawfull and free for all princes and others to pursue with hostylitie the said Offendors and everie of them; witnes our selfe att westm the second daye of maye:

p tre de priuato sigillo : &c Ex^{or}

No. 709.

FORMATION OF GUY'S SETTLEMENT.

[1895.]

EXTRACT FROM "HISTORY OF TRUE NEWFOUNDLAND," BY D. W. PROWSE, Q.C. (LONDON, 1895)

The story of the formation of Guy's Colony, called by the founder "Sea forest plantation," is one of the most interesting episodes in our early annals; as there is no detailed information about it in any extant history of Newfoundland, I have set forth all the facts that can now be gathered from the contemporary records. Young Alderman John Guy is a striking personality, shrewd, pushing, energetic, and full of ambition. The company consisted of most of the men of light and leading in James's Court. Bacon was undoubtedly the guiding spirit in the enterprise, whilst Guy and Roberrow were the working members.

We find the same individuals who were in Peckham and Gilbert's company members of Guy's association. They had become so impoverished by the dismal failure of Gilbert's unfortunate adventure and Raleigh's colonisation schemes, that when John Roberrow, John Guy, and others were appointed to committee to confer with their London associates, they decided that the scheme was quite feasible, and would be profitable and of great value to the kingdom, but a portion of the charges should be borne by the Government. As far as we can ascertain, this took place in 1607. Undoubtedly the company was the outcome of the various projects put forward by Peckham and Algernon Sidney and Carlyle, who were both Walsingham's sons-in-law. It was only by immense Court influence that money was obtained from the Government. The Stuarts as a dynasty were perennially impecunious, and it took three years' pleading and all Bacon's influence to get the desired subsidy; it must have been considerable, as Mr. Alderman Guy and his shrewd merchant associates appear to have only put in a nominal sum, less than £100 each, payable in five yearly instalments. In 1610 the charter to Bacon and his associates was issued under the Great Seal.¹ This instrument is very full and comprehensive, it is a far more practical and statesmanlike document than the loose grants of Elizabeth; the extent of territory covered by the charter is defined—from Cape St. Mary's to Cape Bonavista. The public right to the fishery is specially reserved. Guy's instructions show clearly that the charter was a dishonest attempt to give away to Court favourites land occupied and possessed by Englishmen long anterior to the grant.

*Page 1712
sponsored by
Sandi & Ken
Tulk,
Manuels, NL*

After obtaining his title deeds, Guy sailed from Bristol, May 1610, with his brother Philip, his brother-in-law Colston, and thirty-nine persons, in three ships. From the records of Bristol and other sources we are able to give a pretty accurate account of their proceedings. They had carefully chosen the site for their new colony. Old Newfoundland traders were evidently connected with the company, and all their arrangements were planned by persons well acquainted with the trade. There remains a MS.* containing the—

“INSTRUCTIONS TO JOHN GUY FROM THE ASSOCIATES OF HIS COMPANY, 1610.

“You shall furnish yourself with at least twelve months victualles with munition nets and with all manner of tooles and implements (and you shall make choice of the) skill and mannuall arts of such as are to go with you that you shall think important for the advancement (of the colonie).

“As the benefit and use of domestic creatures without whom not onlie any desolate countrie but also a (civilized countrie) could not well be inhabited we would have you take with you a small number of evrie kind of them male and female water and other things needful for their transportation not (placing them on the sea shore) but either by islands or necks of lands between Bayes where together with the care of a herdsman they shall escape from wild beasts and so increase and multiplie of which number (we would) not have anyone killed without great and urgent cause.

“When it shall please God to send you and your Companie into the Newfoundland we would have you make choice of some place which you shall find fittest within the limits of the country assigned unto us in order to plant our said colonie. The Baye of Conception we prefer before other places for the first attempt.

“Upon your first arrival there the sooner to operate our patent and to prevent ye murmuring of suspicious and jealous persons that perhaps will not (fail) to spread abroad that this enterprize wilbe to the prejudice of ye fishermen as well of our nation as others. We do hould it expedient that you call an assembly of all the fishermen that shall be nere thereabouts and there in their presence openlie and distinclie cause to be read the graunt under the King's Majesties great seal which you shall have along with you, that by the tenour of it they may be satisfied that there is no intent of depriving them of their former right of fishing which being done you shall declare in the presence of them all that you enter upon that place to take actuall seazin and possession (never by grace and assistance of God to be discontinued) in ye name of the whole country comprehended within the said grant to the use of us and our associates our heirs and assigns to be holden of our sovereign Lord the King by the rents and services secured by the said graunte and that by such your

* I was fortunate enough to find this most interesting document—the instructions from Guy's associates about the management of the plantation; the paper has been partially burnt, but the principal part of the contents have been perserved.—B.M. MSS. Otto E., VIII. 5.

p. 1713

acte the King's Majestie of England is actually invested with the title and supreme digniteie next under God of the said country.

“How you are to spend your time ther ewe need not particularlie (put) you in mind of being in good hope that according to the opinion we do conceive of you all matters shall be carefullie providently and paynefullie ordered and that there shall be no wasting of the victualles nor time misspent in idleness but all industrious courses practised to set forward the enterprise as manelie buildings to be rected for habitation.

“ . . (text burnt) . . (With the) returne of the ships after the fishing is ended all fish (which you have) made (and shall) not need for your own use (re)ceive to be transported to England and if it may be (bought?) you may also send some quantity of that wine which you . . . that trial may be made of it as also of the zansaparilla (to see if it) be good and what else you shall judge fit to be sent.

“If you can buy any train (cod oil) for eight pounds the tonne or (there-about) we would have you to deale for it for the use of the Companie and charge us by exchange for th epayment of it and to take or send to Bristoll and failing thereof to keep it in your warehouses until we do send for it in the winter time for we doubt not that ships may harbour themselves there in the winter in Januarie or Februarie seeing out of the Grand Bay being 4 degrees to the northward it is a thing yearly experimented that ye Biscainers remain until December. If you can buy there 60,000 of good dry fish reasonable you may likewise do it and charge us home by exchange and place it in our warehouses until we send a bark thither to take it in and to go with it there home to Spain which coming there alone may sell better than that which came first the great glut marring oftentimes that market.

“You shall as soon as may be conveniently done make choice and bring to the sea shore a ships lading of masts sparres and deal boards to be in a readines to reload any ship that shall happen to be sent unto you with salt which you used in fishing or to be sold to ye fishermen. By employing of shipping of great burden the trade between Bristoll and Newfoundland may be profitable. We are in good hopes that you shall find sufficient cargo there with which the said ship shall be reloaden.

“And if any persons employed in this service shall be found to be seditious mutinous or in any manner unfit you shall by the next returne of any ship from there home send them home to be discharged giving advertisement of their behaviour.

“And for the succession of the principal or head of this enterprize if it should please God to take him away it is though mette that such person shall succeed him as the said John Guy shall nominate under his hand writing and for default thereof the successor shalbe there unto elected by most of votes of the persons that shall survive and if equal votes the lot to be cast whether of them shalbe preferred.

“And we would have you to assay by all good meanes to (capture) one of the savages of the country and to intreate (him well and) to keepe him and teach him our language that you may after obtayne a safe and free commerce with them which (are) strong there.

p. 1714

“We learne that there is found there and no question (fernes?) whereby may be gathered that yf workmen experte to (make glass ? were) now sent with you with such forraine simples as the mixture of mettall requireth you might presently rase glass to nevertheless for more certaintie we now forbear onlie would have you send home some of the fearne (i.e. kelp) dried and some . . . (that) it may be considered of.

“Every ship that resorteth thither to fishing bringeth with them (sawyers?) to make or mend their fishing boates which may well be supplied (by you with) pine boards whereof you shall have plentie when ? the saw is set up.

“Such ashes as you make keep and send to Bristol that we may have tryall of them and that thereby it may be the (better proved) whether such sope ashes as come out of the Sound may (not be sent from) there home.

“And to the end that God may bless this attempt with happy prospects and success you must take order that divine service be publickly (held) and attentive hearkned unto and that you joine in devout prayers to God that the worship of him may not be neglected that pietie and charitie and sobrietie may dwell amongst us and all swearing and gamming abolished.

“You must not forget to search whether there be any trees thereabouts that will afford timber to make caske and be servicable for hoopes we have heard that pipes have been sometimes made of pine timber and for hoopes young beach will werve. the birch being there large and great as yt is yeeld? for a neede? stufte for the caske and seing it is most certaine that oakes are in some places of this country you may peradventure upon search light upon some place where it grow.

“To make experience of the nature of the country for sheep were not aims because there want not warme and firtil places and abundance of poules things most requisite for that kind of husbandrie.

“The cherrie trees and peare trees and filbred trees by removing and graffing may prove as good and as large as ours and for the filbreds though they are small yet they are good and being gathered when they are ripe may do you some pleasure we would have you send us home a few of them (for

in) flanders they guy barks lading with hazell nuts to make oyle for which (we) do (think that) these will serve as they.

“(We) require you to have a due regard (to the carrying out) of these our instructions and of all such (as you may in) your discretion judge may any kinde of way to (turn to the use) and benefit of this enterprise committed to your (care).”

No. 710.[13 Aug.
1611.]1611, August 13—ORDERS ISSUED BY JOHN GUY, GOVERNOR OF NEWFOUNDLAND.¹*Page 1715
sponsored by
Sandi & Ken
Tulk,
Manuels, NL*

Certain orders for the Fishermen to observe and keep in the Newfoundland published the thirteenth day of August, 1611, by Mr. John Guy, then Governor of the Colony there.

Whereas by authority of our sovereign Lord James, by the grace of God of England, Scotland, France, Ireland and Newfoundland King, a plantation and government is begun to be settled within this country of Newfoundland, And whereas among those persons that use the trade of fishing in these parts, many disorders, abuses and bad customs are crept in which are continued and yearly practised more of a corrupt usage than of malicious designs, forasmuch as it concerneth not only the benefit and profit of the trade of fishing, but also the public behoof and good, if all such grievances should be stopped, to the end that all persons should reform themselves in their proceedings and not plead ignorance that any prohibition was made, The now Governor of the said country in our said Sovereign Lord the King's name doth straightly charge and command all persons of what nation soever, that shall frequent those parts to exercise the trade of fishing, as well strangers as subjects to our said sovereign Lord the King, that they offend not in any thing forbidden by virtue of this proclamation, under the penalties herein specified, and as they will answer to the contrary at their perils. Dated in Cupers Cove the 13th day of August Anno Regni Regis Jacobi Nono 1611.

First that no ballast, press stones or any thing else hurtful to the harbours be thrown out to the prejudice of the said harbours, but that it be carried ashore and laid where it may not do any annoyance under the pain of five pounds for every offence.

Item that no person destroy deface or any way work any spoil or detriment to any stage, cook room, flakes, spikes, nails or any thing else that belongeth to the said stages whatsoever but that only he or they content themselves with such stage or stages as shall be needful for them and to repair them with timber to be fetched out of the woods and not with the taking down of other stages under the pain of ten pounds for every offence.

That every Admiral of each harbour for the time being rescue only so much beech and flakes or both as is needful for the number of boats, that he shall use with an overplus, only for one boat more than he hath, and that every person coming after, content himself with what he shall have necessary use for, without keeping or detaining any more to the prejudice of others next coming, under the pain of ten pounds, besides satisfaction to be made to the party next coming, that is injured thereby.

That no person cut out deface or any way alter or change the marks of any boats under the pain of five pounds for every offence.

That no person convert to his own use the boats belonging to others without their consent neither take them from the places where they be left by the owners, except in case of necessity, and then to give notice thereof to the Admiral of the harbour, and others, that the right owner may know what is become of them, under the pain of five pounds, for every offence, besides satisfaction to the party grieved.

That no person set fire in any of the woods of this country under the pain of ten pounds for every offence.

That no person at the end of the voyage destroy the stage, cook-room or flakes that he hath that year formerly used under the pain of ten pounds for every offence.

That no master of any ship do hereafter receive into his ship or custody any person or persons whatsoever, being of the Colony that are there already planted, or hereafter to be planted, by virtue of his Majesty's letters patents under his great seal of England without special warrant under the handwriting of the Governor of the said Colony or Colonies in the Newfoundland aforesaid, and that every Master of any ship which shall so offend shall¹

¹ The rest is wanting.

No. 711.ORIGIN OF DISPUTES[1618
Dec. ?]

BETWEEN RESIDENT PLANTERS AND WESTERN MERCHANTS, 1618-1620.

CAL. OF STATE PAPERS, COLONIAL SERIES, 1574-1660, p. 20-23.

[1618
Dec. ?]

39. Articles of Grievances mentioned in the petition of the Western ports, touching those of the plantation of Newfoundland. The planters have put sundry of the petitioners from the chiefest places of fishing; great quantities of their provisions have been appropriated; they have been prevented from taking birds, which are used for bait; fees have been exacted from them; and pirates harboured to their great prejudice. (On 19 Oct. 1618, the Earl of Bath incloses a petition of the merchants of Devon (wanting) to the Privy Council, concerning some hard measures offered them in their fishing at Newfoundland, by those of the late plantation there, which he recommend to their favourable consideration, and that the merchants may be secured from further disturbance in the enjoyment of their privileges. DOMESTIC Corresp. Jac. I., Vol. CIII., No. 43, Cal. p. 586.

[1618
Dec. ?]

40. Answer of the Company of the Plantation of Newfoundland to 1618 the article of grievances of the Western ports. Conceive that their chargeable Dec. maintenance of a colony entitle the inhabitants to choose their fishing places. Know of no wrongs done to the fishermen. If taking of birds has been denied, it shall be ordered to the contrary. Utterly disclaim the exaction of fees. Complain that the very great damages they have received by pirates have almost overthrown the colony. Are desirous to join with the western men in that business, and for keeping good order in the country. Inclose certain orders, which have been published in the King's name. Signed by John, Slany, Treasurer, Hump. Handforde, Hump. Slany, Robt. Gairard, Wm. Paine and Wm. Freeman. Annexed,

40. 1. Proclamation by John Guy, Governor of Newfoundland, against abuses and bad customs, by persons who use the trade of fishing in those parts. Cooper's Cove, 1611, Aug. 13. (Copy.)

p. 1718

41. Reply of the Petitioners (of the Western ports) to the answer of the Governors of Newfoundland plantation. No privilege given by the charter to planters for fishing before others; if choice of places is admitted contrary to common usage, the petitioners contend that they ought rather to have it. Desire that the liberties reserved to them by charter may be confirmed. Disclaim committing any abuses in the country, and request that the offenders may be examined. The petitioners, knowing better how to manage the fishing than the planters can direct, declare that they are altogether unwilling to be ordered by the planters, or to join with them as they desire. Annexed,

[1620
Mar. 18
Whitehall]

41. 1. Extract of the Patent, (to Henry Earl of Northampton, Sir Fran. Bacon, and others, for the colony or plantation in Newfoundland, from 46 to 52 deg. Nor. lat., together with the seas and islands lying within ten leagues of the coast), reserving to all manner of persons of what nation soever, as well as the English, the right of trade, and fishing in “the parts aforesaid.” Westminster, May 2, 1610. (Copy.)

49. The Privy Council to the Mayors of sea-port towns in the west. To give directions to the masters of vessels bound to Newfoundland for the fishing voyage to forbear from all acts of hostility, and from such other disorders as have been heretofore committed; and also to entertain friendly correspondence with those of the plantation. (Circular copy.)

No. 712.

[10 Feb.,
1634.]REGULATIONS FOR THE NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERY.

FEBRUARY 10, 1634.

mdd qd x^o die ffebr A^o R^o Caroli nono billa delibat fuit dno Custodi magni Sigilli Angl apud Westm exequend.

[* sic.]

CHANCERY WARRANTS, SERIES II., FILE 2106, No. 525.

Charles R

Charles by the grace of God Kinge of England Scotland ffraunce and Ireland Defendo^r of the faith &c^a To all whome these pntes shall come Greetinge Whereas the Region or Country called Newfoundland hath beene acquired to the Dominion of o^r Progenitors w^{ch} wee hould and o^r people have many Yeares resorted to those partes where, and in the Coastes adioyninge, they imployed themselves in fishing whereby a greate number of o^r people have been set on worke, and the Navigation, and Marriners of o^r realme hath ben much increased, And o^r Subiects resorting thither on by the other,* and the Natives of those parties, were orderlie and gentlie intreated vntill of late some of o^r Subiectes of the Realme of England plantinge themselves in that Country, and there residinge, and inhabitinge, vpon conceipt, that for wronge or Iniuries done there, either on the Shorare, or in the Sea adioyninge, they cannot be here impeached, and the rather for that wee, or o^r Progenitors have not hithervnto given lawes to the Inhabitanes there; and by that example o^r Subiectes resortinge tither iniure one anohter, and vse all manner of excesse, to the greate hinderance of the voyage, and comon damage of this Realme, ffor preventige such inconveniencies hereafter, wee doe hereby declare in what manner o^r people in Newfoundland, and upon the Sea adioyninge, and the Bayes, Creekes, or freshe Rivers there shalbe guided and governed Doe make and ordeyne the lawes following in the thinge after specified, Doe make and ordeyne the lawes followinge in the thinge after specified, comaundinge that the same bee obeyed and put in execution.

First if any man on the land there shall kill another, of if any shall secretly or forceable steale the goodes of any other to the value of fforty shillings, hee shalbe forthwith apprehended and arrested, detayned and brought Prisoner into England, and the bryme co-mitted by him, shalbe made knowne to the Earle Marshall of England for the tyme beinge to whom the delinquent shalbe delivered as Prisoner, And the said Earle Marshall shall take Cognizance of the cause, And if hee shall finde by the Testimonie of two witnesses or more

p. 1720

that the partie had there killed a man not beinge at that tyme first assaulted, by the party slayne, or that the killing were by misadventure, or had stolen such goodes, the delinquent shall suffer paine of death, and all the company shall endeavor to apprehend such malefactor^s

Secondly That noe Ballast, Prestones, or any thinge els hurtefull to the Harbours bee throen out, to the preiudice of the said Harbours, but that it bee carried ashoare, and layed where it may not doe annoyance.

Thirdly That noe person whatsoever either ffishermen or Inhabitanes doe destroy, deface, or any way worke any spoyle or detriment to any Stage Cooke-roome, fflakes, Spikes, Nayles or any thinge else, that belongeth to the Stages whatsoever, either at the ende of the voyage when he hath done, and is to departe the Country, or to any such Stages as he shall fall wthall at his cominge into the Country, but that hee or they content themselves with such Stage or Stages only as shalbee needefull for them, And that for the repayringe of such Stages as hee or they take, they shall fetch Tymber out of the Woodes, and not to doe it with the ruininge, or tearinge downe of other Stages.

[* sic.]

Fowerthly that accordinge to the auncient custom everie Shipp or ffisher that first entreth a Harbour in behalf of the shipp, bee Admirall of the said Harbour wherein for the time beinge hee shall reserve only so much Beach and ffiakes or both as is needefull for the number of Boates that he shall vse with an overplus only for one Boate more then hee needeth as a priviledge for his first cominge, And that everie Shipp cominge after, content himselfe wth what he shall have necessarie vse for, without keepinge or deteyninge any more, to the preiudice of others next cominge, And that any that are possessed of severall places in severall Harbours with intent to keepe them all before they can resolve upon w^{ch} of them to choose, shalbe bound to resolve, and send advise to such after comers in those places as expect his resolucon, And that w^{hin} forty eight howers if the weather so serve, that the said after comers may likewise choose their places, and so none receive priudice by others delays.

[* sic.]

[* sic.]

Fiftly,* That noe person cut out, deface, or anyway alter or change the markes of any Boates or Trayne fattes whereby to defraud the right owners, and that noe person convert to his owne vse the said Boates or Traynefattes so belonginge to others w^hout their consentes, nor remove nor take them from the places where they bee left by the Owners, Except in case of necessitie, And then to give notice thereof to the Admirall, and others whereby the right owners may knowe what is become of them.

Sixtly* That noe person doe diminish, take away, purloine, or steale any of the fishe on Trayne, or Salt w^{ch} is put in Caskes, Trayne fattes or Cookerome* or other house in any of the Harbours or fishinge places of the Country, or any other provision belonginge to the fishinge trade, or to the Shippes.

[* sic.]

p. 1721

[* sic.]

Seaventhly That noe peson set fire in any of the woodes of the Country or worke any detriment or destruction to the same, by Ryndinge of the Trees, either for the seelinge of Shippes, houldes, or for Roomes on Shoare, or for any other vses Except for the coveringe of the Roofes for Cookeroomes to dresse their meate in, and those Roomes not to extend above sixteene foote in length at the most.

Eightlie,* That noe man cast Anchor or ought else hurtfull, w^{ch} may breede annoyance, or hinder the haleinge of Seanes* for baite in places accustomed therevunto.

Nynthlie, That noe p'son robb the Nettes of others out of any drifte boate, or drover for baite by night, nor take away any baite out of their fishing boates by their Shippes sides, nor robb or steale any of their Nettes, or anie parte thereof.

Tenthly That noe person doe set vp any Taverne for sellinge of wyne Beere, or stronge waters Cyder or Tobacco, to entertayne the ffishermen, because it is found that by such meanes they are debauched, neglectinge thar labo^{rs} and poore illgoverned men not only spend most part of their shares before they come home, vpon w^{ch} the life and mayntenance of their wife and Children depende but are likewise hurtfull in divers other waies, as by neglectinge and making themselves vunfit for their labour by purloyninge their disord^{rs} & c^a w^{ch} dishorders they frequently followe since those oc-[̄]̄ons have presented themselves.

Lastly That upon the Sondaies the Company assemble in meete places, and have devine service to bee said by some of the Masters of the Shippes or some others, w^{ch} prayers shalbe such as are in the Booke of Common Prayer.

And because that speedie punishment may bee inflicted vpon the Offendo^{rs} against those lawes and Constitu[̄]̄ons, Wee do ordaine, that everie of the Maio^{rs} of Southampton Weymouth and melcomb Regis, Lyme, Plymouth Dartmouth, Eastlowe, ffoye, and Barnestaple for the tyme beinge may take cognizans of all complayntes, made by any offeno^r against anie of these ordinances vpon the land, and by oath of witnesses examine the truth thereof, aware amendes to the parties greeved, and punishe the delinquentes by fine imprisonment, or either of them, and of their goodes found in the partes of Newfoundland, or inthe Sea, cause satisfaction thereof to bee made by warrantes vnder their handes and Seales.

[* sic.]

And the Viceadmiralles in o^r Counties of Sourthampton, Dorsett, Devon, and Cornewall vpon complainte made of any of the premisses comitted vpon the Sea shall speedily and effectually proceede against the Offendo^{rs}

Also wee will and ordeyne, that tese lawes and ordinances shall stand in force, and put in due execution, vntill wee shall otherwise provide and ordaine.

And wee require the Admirall in everie Harbour in this next Season

p. 1722

ensuinge callinge together, such as shalbee in that harborough* publiquellie to proclayme these presentes, And that they also proclayme the same on the Shore. In witnes &c Witnes &c

Ex^t p W^m. NOYE

5 ffebr 1633.

May it please your most ext: Ma^{tie}: Vpon an humble Petiti^{on} p[']nted to yo^r Ma^{ty} in the name of the Marchantes of Plimouth, and other Westerne Townes trading to Newfound land complayninge of sundrie abuses yo^r Ma^{ty} referred the same to the Councell Board, where their Lo^{pps} having heard the same, required yo^r Attorney generall to call before him some such p^{er}sons of those Westerne partes as might give him true informa^{ti}on of those abuses, w^{ch} was done, Wherevpon these proposi^{ti}ons weere conceived for the gen^{er}all good of yo^r Ma^{ts} Service of which their Lo^{pps} well approving, comaunded the same p^{ro}posicons to bee p^{ro}vided for yo^r Royall signature, and to passe yo^r greate Seale, and that a sufficient number of Coppies shalbe printed and published aswell in the Westerne partes of this Kingdome as in the Newfound land. to the ende all men whome it shall in any sort concerne may take notice thereof and yeild due obedience therevnto accordingly.

W^m. NOYE

recepti 10 februar 1633.

Doc. signed.

On the back is:—

Charles R.

Our will and pleasure is that this being for o^r especial Service shall pass by our imediate warrante.

[13 Nov.,
1637.]GRANT OF NEWFOUNDLAND TO THE MARQUIS OF HAMILTON, EARL OF PEMBROKE AND OTHERS.PATENT ROLL, 13 CHAS I.,
PART 32.

WESTMINSTER, 13 NOVEMBER, 1637.

D con licen
ppet marques hamilton.

Excit

PATENT ROLL, 13 CHAS. I., PART 32.

Charles by the grace of God kinge of England Scotland ffrance and Ireland kinge defender of the faieth &c To all to whome these presentes shall come greetinge whereas our late deare and royall father kinge James of ever blessed memorie in his moste godly and Princely disposi^on did in the tyme of his Raigne above all thinges moste zealously endeavour the establishment and p^rpagacon of that true religion whereof himselpe was the moste renowned Professor and principall defender, And to that end and purpose and in considera^on thereof reposeinge greate truste and confidence in the fidelitie and pietie of sir George Calverte knighte one of his then principall Secretaries of State afterwards lord Baltimore deceased and vpon his the saide sir George Calvertes moste humble suite and faithfull promises for the Planta^on of that our saide fathers true religion amongste heathens whoe had noe knowledge of God, and alsoe vpon his the saide George Calvertes vndertakeinges for the enlargeinge and extendinge of our saide fathers Domyinions and Territories, Our saide deare and royall father by his l^res Pattentes vnder his then greate Seale of England bearinge date att Westminster the Seaventh day of Aprill in the one and twentieth yeare of his Raigne did vpon the Considera^ons aforesaide graunte vnto the saide Sir George Calverte afterwards lord Baltimore and his heires a certayne parte and por^on of an Island Countrey or Region comonlie called Newfoundland And by the same l^res Pattentes appoynted the same to bee called by the name of the Province of Avilonia for ever As by the same l^res Pattentes amongste diverse other liberties priviledges authorities and ymunities therein conteyned att large appeareth But the saide George lord Baltimore desertinge the saide Planta^on in his life tyme and leavinge the same in noe sorte provided for accordinge to the saide undertakeinge And yet leavinge diverse of our poore Subiectes in the said Province livinge without governement the saide lord Baltimore shortlie afterwarde dyed and Cecill lord Baltimore his sonne and heire apparant hath alsoe deserted the said Province and Planta^on, And alsoe sir ffrauncis Bacon knighte deceased afterwarde viscount lord Albons* and late lord Chauncelor of England our Cittie of

* sic.

of diverse parcelles of Newfoundland aforesaide were alsoe by severall l̄res Pattentes formerly graunted have alsoe deserted the Province and Plantaçon aforesaide wee therefore takeinge into our princely Consideraçon of what greate consequence itt is to vs and our Subiectes that the Plantaçon in our Doxnyions of Newfoundland aforesaide should by our royall power and authoritie bee cherished and speedilie promoted In pursueance therefore of the godlie and religious intençon of our saide deare and royall father for the propagaçon of true religion amongst heathens there livinge and more especially of our tender care of our owne poore Subiectes there already residinge knowe yee that wee by the advise of our lords and others of our privie counsell and att the humble Petiçon of our righte trustie and righte well beloved Cosens and Councillors James marquesse of hamilton master of our horse Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomery lord Chamberlayne of our houshold and henrie Earle of holland cheife Justice and Justice in Eyre of all our fforestes Chases and Parkes in the Southside of our River of Trente And of our welbeloved Servaunt sir David kirke knighte one of the gentlemen of our Privie Chamber, of our especiall grace c̄tayne knowledge and meere moçon have given graunted and confirmed and by these presentes for vs our heires and Successors doe give graunte and confirme to the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomery henry Earle of holland and Sir David kirke their heires and Assignes for ever all that whole Continent Island or Region aforesaide comonly called or knowne by the name of Newfoundland bordering vpon the Continent of America betweene ffortie sixe and ffiftie three degrees of northerly latitude more or lesse and every parte and parcell thereof beeinge devided from the saide Continent of America by an arme of the Sea, and all and singuler Islandes Seas Ryvers Bayes Creekes harbors Stages Portes ffortes landes wooden lakes and buildings whatsoever within the saide Continent Island or Region of Newfoundland or to the same att any tyme heretofore belonginge or with the same helde occupied or enioyed as parte parcell or member thereof And all and all manner of ffishe whatsoever in any the Seas or Rivers aforesaide to bee from tyme to tyme hereafter found had or taken And all and all manner of veynes of Gould and sylver Gemmes and precious Stones and all other mynes and mettalles within the Continent aforesaide found or hereafter to bee had found or discovered, And the Patronage and Advowson of all Churches or Chappelles which are or shall happen hereafter to bee builte within the saide Contiente Island or Region of Newfoundland aforesaide with all all* and singular the rightes Jurisdicçons Priviledges Prorogatives royalties liberties ȳnunities franchises and preheminences whatsoever as well by Sea as by land to the saide continent in any sorte belonginge or apperteyninge or to or with the same

* sic.

or any parte or parcell thereof att any tyme heretofore helde or enioyed or which to vs our heires or Successors should or oughte to apperteyne and belonge And them the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembrooke and mountgomery henry Earle of holland and sir David kirke and every of them their and every of their heires and Assignes respectively the true and absolute lords and Proprietors of the saide Continent Island and Region

p. 1725

*Page 1725
sponsored by
Sandi & Ken
Tulk,
Manuels, NL*

of Newfoundland and of all the Islands Seas Ryvers lakes Streames harbors Portes and places within the same or to the same belonging and of all and singuler other the premisses aforesaide by these our lres Pattents graunted or intended to bee graunted wee doe by these presentes for vs our heires and Successors make create constitute ordeyne and appoynte for ever by these presentes the Soveraigntie faieth and allegieance due to vs our heires and Successors alwayes saved and reserved And alsoe excepte and alwaies reserved out of these presentes And our true intent and meaninge is And wee doe here by for vs our heires and Successors declare ordeyne and appoynte That the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembrooke and mountgomery henry Earle of holland and sir David Kirke or any of them or their or any of their heires or Assignes or any Planter or Planters Inhabitant or Inhabitanes nowe or att any tyme hereafter within the saide Newfoundland or other person or persons whomsoever clayming or which may lawfully clayme in from by or vnder them or any of them shall not fell cutt downe roote vpp waste or destroie anie trees or wood whatsoever nor make erecte or builde any house or houses whatsoever or plant or inhabitt within sixe miles of the Sea shore of any parte of Newfoundland aforesaide betweene the Cape de Race lieinge in or aboute fortie sixe degrees of northerlie latitude and Cape Bonaviste lieinge in or aboute ffortie Nyne degrees and halfe of the same northerlie latitude nor within nor vpon any Iland lieinge or beeing within tonne leagues of the Sea shore betweene the saide Cape commonly called cape de Race and the saide Cape Bonaviste save only that the Planters and Inhabitanes shall have like libertie of fishing there and takeinge and cuttinge of wood for their vse aboute fishing as other our Subiectes have and enioye And alsoe shall have full power and libertie to builde any fforte or ffortes att any place or places within the saide lymitt for the defence of the saide Countrie and fshinge And shall have and take convenient tymber and wood where itt may bee spared with leaste preiudice to the fisheinge for the makeing of such ffortes and convenient habitacions therein And for the necessarie vse of aall persons residinge and inhabitinge in such ffortes for the defence thereof, And alsoe that the Inhabitanes or Residentes of Newfoundland aforesaide or any of the Islandes adioyninge shall not att any tyme hereafter appropriate to themselves or any of them or pposseesse or take vpp before the arrivall of the ffishermen aforesaide the beste or moste convenient Beaches or places for fishinge within the Capes aforesaide nor take away burne spoile waste or destroie any stages Saltboates Nettes or any necessaries whatsoever of any ffishermen corninge thither or which is or shall bee by them lefte in the saide Newfoundland within the Capes aforesaide or any parte thereof but shall pernitt and suffer the persons soe leavinge the same or the Owners thereof to have and take the same agayne vpon his or their returne thither or otherwise dispose thereof att his or their will and pleasure nor shall doe or comitt any Acte or thinge to alter change disturbe hinder or interrupte the manner and vse of fishinge nowe or att any tyme heretofore vsed or accustomed And that all and every the Subiectes of vs our heires and Successors borne or to bee borne within our kingdome of England or in any other our kingdomes and

p. 1726

Domynions nowe and for the tyme beeinge for ever hereafter shall and may from tyme to tyme and att all tymes for ever hereafter peaceably and quietlie have hould vse and enjoye the freedome of fishinge in any the Seas lakes or Ryvers in or aboute or adioyninge vnto the saide Continent or Island of Newfoundland as fullie freelie liberallie effectuellie and beneficiallie as att any tyme heretofore hath bene vsed and accustomed with full power and authoritie to goe on the shoare or land in or vpon any place of the saide Contymnt of Newfoundland aforesaide as well for dryeing saltinge and husbandinge of their fishe on the shoares thereof cuttinge off all manner of trees and woods for makeinge of Stages shippes and Boates, and makeinge all manner of provisions for themselves their Servauntes marriners shippes and voyages and for doeinge all other thinges necessarie or vsefulle to or for themselves or their trade of fshinge or marchandize as att any tyme heretofore Lath bene had vsed or enjoyed To have and to hould possesse and enjoye the saide Continent Island and Region of Newfoundland and all and singuler other the premises aforesaide with their and every of their rights members jurisdictiones prerogatives royalties and appurtenances whatsoever (excepte before excepted) to them the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke and to every of them their and every of their heires and Assignes to the sole and proper vse and behoofe of them the saide James marquesse of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomery henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke their heires and Assignes for ever To hould of vs our heires and Successors kinges of England in Cheife by knightes service yeildinge to vs our heires and Successors twoe white horses whensoever and as often as wee our heires or Successors shall happen to enter into the saide Continent Island or Region aforesaide and alsoe yearely and everie yeare the ffifth parte of all Gould and silver Oare Gemmes and ꝑ ciuous stones which within the saide Continent Island or Region or in any the Seas Ryvers Creekes Portes harbors shoares and places to the same belonginge shall from tyme to tyme or att any tyme hereafter happen to bee found gotten or gayned vpon or within them or any of them And because we have made and ordeyned them the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomery henry Earle of holland and sir David kirke and everie of them their and everie of their heires and Assignes respectivelie the righte lords and Proprietors of Newfoundland aforesaide knowe yee further that wee for vs our heires and Successors doe by these presentes give and graunte full and free libertie power and authoritie to them the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke and to their heires and Assignes respectively of whose integritie prudence justice and circumspec̃on wee are verie confident for the good happie and peaceable governement of Newfoundland aforesaide and the Inhabitantes thereof to erecte make and enacte anie lawe whatsoever either for the publique state of the saide Continent or Island or the private proffitt of the Inhabitantes aforesaide accordinge to their good discrẽons together with the cõnon assente and approbãon of the ffreeholders of the Continent or Island afore-

p. 1727

saide or the maior parte of them which ffreeholders our will and pleasure is shall vpon due sum̃ons from tyme to tyme give their attendance when and as often as they shall bee therevnto required And the saide lawes soe made and ordeyned and vnder the Seale or Seales of them the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke their heires and Assignes ratified and confirmed to putt in Execucon p̃mulgate or proclayme as occasion shall require within all or any parte of the Continent aforesaide And the penalties in them or any of them conteyned to inflicte vpon anie the Inhitantes thereof or within the lymittes of the same for the tyme beeinge Savinge and excepted alwayes and our will and pleasure is That the saide lawes or penalties or powers aforesaide shall not extend to anie fishermen maryners or other our subiectes whatsoever that shall come thither to fishe accordinge to the libertie before by these presentes given but that all such persons and all matters and thinges conacerninge the saide persons and fishinge shall bee from tyme to tyme for ever hereafter free from the power authoritie governement and punishmente of the saide lordes and Inhabitantes of the saide Newfoundland and bee Subiecte vnto and ymediately vnder the Order rule and Governement of vs our heires and Successors and the lordes of our Privie Councell of England or such Cõmissioners or Councillors for forraigne affaires or otherwise as wee our heires and Successors shall from tyme to tyme appoynte and directe and to the lawes orders and direc̃ons made in the

Nineth yeare of our Raigne which wee hereby declare and ordeyne shall bee inviolably kepte and observed by the saide ffishermen and the saide Lordes and Planters and all other our Subiectes inhabitinge in the Newfoundland aforesaide vntil the same shall bee altered or revoaked by vs our heires or Successors And wee doe alsoe hereby give and graunte vnto them the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgornerie henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke their heires and Assignes power and authoritie to nomynate constitute make and ordeyne from tye to tyme and att all and everie tyme and tymes hereafter att their willes and pleasures lievetenētes Judges Justices and Officers of what kinde or quallitie soever to governe examyne heare and determyne all Causes Complaintes Crimes and Offences whatsoever ariseinge within Newfoundland aforesaide (excepte before excepted, from tyme to tyme as often as occasion shall require And all offenders then and there convicted or not convicted to pardon release or discharge or to punishe accordinge to Justice as the Offences shall demerritt And to doe all other thinges whatasoever that to Justice shall apperteyne And alsoe to doe and execute all and everie Acte and Actes for the fulfillinge or perfecōon of Justice or concerninge Courtes and Tribnalles of Justice and the formes and manner of proceedinges in them and everie of them thoughe in these presentes there bee noe particuler menōon of them or any of them which saide lawes and everie of them wee will enioyne and by our Regall authoritie for vs our heires and Successors doe strictlie charge and cōmaund to bee firmly and inviolably kepte observed and performed of all the Subiectes and liege people of vs our heires and Successors residinge and inhabitinge within the same accordinge to the true intente and meaninge of the same vnder the paynes and penalties in the same expressed and to bee expressed (excepte the persons before excepted) Soe as the saide lawes bee not repugnant or contrarie to the lawes Statutes rightes and Customes of this our Realme of England And soe as the same bee not contrarie or repugnant or doe not extend to any the persons places or restrayntes and prejudice of the libertie of fishinge and other the liberties and powers excepted and reserved to our Subjects in these presentes and because in the governement of soe greate a Continent sundry Causes may oftentimes happen which will require speedie remedies before the saide Island bee replenished with Inhabitantes and before the freeholders of the same canne bee called together to enacte or ordeyne the saide lawes nor will itt bee convenient dailie in such cases to assemble together so manie people Therefore and for the better governement of the saide Continent Island or Region of Newfoundland wee will and ordeyne and by these presentes for vs our heires and Successors doe graunte vnto them the saide James marquisse of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke their heires and Assignes that the saide James marquisse of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and Sir David kirke their heires and Assignes by themselves or by their magistrates and Officers in that behalfe duely constituted and ordeyned may from tyme to tyme make and constitute fitt and wholesome Ordinances to bee kepte and observed within the saide Continent and the lymitted liberties and precinctes thereof (except before excepted) as well for preservacon of the peace as alsoe for the better governement of the people there (excepte before excepted) And the same to publishe and make knowne to all to whome the same shall in any manner touch or concerne which saide Ordinances and everie of them, our will and pleasure is and wee doe hereby for vs our heires and Successors ordeyne and appoynte shall bee inviolably observed within the saide Continents lymitted and precinctes aforesaid vnder the paynes therein to bee conteyned and expressed (excepte before excepted) Soe as the saide ordinances bee not repugnant or contrarie (but as neere as may bee agreeable to the lawes Statutes and Customes of this our Realme of England, and soe that the same Ordinances extend not to the righte or intereste of any person or persons whatsoever in his or their freehold estates or by meanes whereof their or anie of their goods or Chattels may bee destreyned engaged burthened or taken away from them and soe as the same bee not contrarie or repugnant or doe not extend to anie the persons places or restrayntes or prejudice of the libertie of fishinge and other the liberties and powers excepted and reserved to our Subjects in these presentes moreover that the newe Colonie of people thither resortinge maye the better and staynely increase and bee protected from the incursions of barbarous and other Enemies Pirates and Robbers wee doe therefore for vs our heires and Successors give and graunte full and free licence leave libertie and authoritie to all manner of persons our owne Subiectes and the Subiectes of our heires and Successors (excepte such as shall bee specially forbidden to transporte themselves and

p. 1729

theire and everie of theire families into the saide Continent Island or Region called Newfoundland aforesaide with fittinge shippes and convenient provision there to settle live and inhabitt and to builde Castles towers Bulwarkes and other ffortes accordinge to the Judgmente and direccon of them the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle, of Pembroke and mountgolnerie henrie Earle of holland and Sir David kirke theire heires and Assignes for the publique defence of Newfoundland aforesaide (excepte before excepted) And further of our more especiall grace wee doe hereby for vs our heires and Successors graunte will and comaund constitute ordeyne and appoynte that all the whole Continent Island or Region of Newfoundland aforesaide And all the lymittes liberties and Precinctes thereof shall bee for ever of our Alleageance and of the alleageance of our heires and Successors And that all and singuler the Subiectes and liege people of vs our heires or Successors broughte or to bee broughte thereunto and theire Children there alreadie borne or hereafter to bee borne may or shall bee free Denizens and liege people of our kingdome of England and of vs our heires and Successors and all thinges shall bee helde and reputed as the faithfull liege people and Denizens and naturall borne Subiectes of vs our heires and Successors borne within this our Realme of England and shall and may without gaynesayeinge or contradiccon purchase receive take hould buy and possesse landes tenemente revercons, services and other hereditaments whatsoever within this our Realme of England and other our Domynions aid the same att their willes and pleasures to give sell alyen and bequeath And alsoe shall and may have and possesse all other liberties franchises and Priviledges of this kingdome and them vse and enjoye as lour naturall liege people borne or to be borne within this our kingdome of England without any the ympediment molestacon vexacon trouble or contradiccon of vs our heires or Successors whatsoever Anie Statute Acte ordinance or provision to the contrarie thereof in anie wise notwithstandinge, ffurthermore that our Subiectes may vndertake this plantacon with more readines and allacrite knowe yee therefore that wee of our more especiall grace certayne knowledge and meere mocon doe by theise psentes for vs our heires and Successors give and graunte full and free licence power libertie leave and authoritie to all and everie the subiectes of vs our heires and Successors that shall goe to inhabitt in our Newfoundland aforesaide to carrie and convey all and singuler theire goods and Chattles moveable and ymoveable wares and mar chandizes Armes and warlike instrumentes as well offensive as defensive into what Portes soever of vs our heires and Successors to bee shipped and transported by themselves their Servauntes and Assignes into Newfoundland aforesaid without payeing any ymposte subsidie Custome or other thing whatsoever to vs our heires or Successors in regard thereof, and without any ympediment lett molestac̃on or hinderance of vs our heires or Successors or of any other the ffarmers or officers whomsoever of vs our heires or Successors Anie Statute Acte ordinance or other thing whatsoever to the contrarie notwithstanding Provided alwaies that before the saide goods and other the premises aforesaid or anie of them shall bee laden aboard anie shipp or other vessell whatsoever the lord Treasurer of England for the tyme beinge or the

p. 1730

Com̃issioners for the treasure or sixe or more of the privie Councill of vs our heires or Successors of this our Realme of England doe give warrant vnder their handes in writinge for the doeing thereof To which saide Treasurer Com̃issioners for the Treasure and Privie Councillors of vs our heires and Successors wee have gyven and graunted and by these presentes for vs our heires and Successors doe give and graunte power and authoritie to give warrant in everie the Cases aforesaid And because in soe remote a Countrey and amongste soe manie barbarous nations situated incursions and invasions by the Savages there abidinge and alsoe by Enemyes Pirates and Robbers may iustlie bee feared, Therefore for vs our heires and Successors wee have given and graunted and by these p'sentes for vs our heires and Successors doe give and graunte power and authoritie to them the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomery henrie Earle of holland and Sir David kirke their heires and Assignes by themselves their Generalles Com̃aunders Colonelles Captaynes and other Officers of anie of them to call to their Standard or Ensigne all men of what Condiçon soever or wheresoever residinge or inhabitinge in Newfoundland aforesaid excepte the ffishermen and persons before excepted to wage warr and pursue after the enemyes Pirates and Robbers aforesaid by Sea and land, And if God give the victorie to take them Captives att their pleasures And to doe all and singuler other thinge and thinges whatsoever which to the righte and power of our Generall or other warlike officer doeth belonge or apperteyne soe fullie free and largelie as any Generall Comaunder Colonell Captayne or other Officer bath at anie tyme heretofore vsed or enjoyed, And further wee will and by these presentes for vs our heires and Successors doe give and graunte vnto them the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomery henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke their heires and Assignes full power libertie and authoritie in case of Rebellion by any tumulte or sediçon of anie which God forbid shall happen to arrise vpon the land in Newfoundland aforesaid or vpon the Sea in iourneyinge thither or returninge thence or by or amongste their Comaunders Captaynes Deputies or other Officers vnder their handes and Seales therevnto authorized To whome alsoe wee for vs our heires and Successors give and graunte by these presentes full power and authoritie to due and proceede againste the Authors of sedition and novelties revoulters Traytors vagabondes loyterers and other delinquentes excepte the ffishermen and other persons before excepted, accordinge to the course and order of militairie discipline as fullie and freelie and in as ample manner and forme to all intentes and purposes as any Captayne Generall by virtue of his office may or hath heretofore vsed and accustomed, And furthermore that men of birth and quallitie intendinge this present expediçon may bee advanced to honors and dignities accordinge to their well deservinges of vs our heires and Successors in tymes of peace and warre though in soe remote a region wee therefore for vs our heires and Successors doe by these presentes give and graunte vnto them the saide James marques of hamilton, Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke their heires and Assignes full and free power and

p. 1731

authoritie to confer favours graces and honnors vpon any weldeserving person or persons inhabitinge or which shall hereafter inhabitt within Newfoundland aforesaide and them to honor by what titles and dignities soever soe that they bee not such titles and honnors as att this present are usuall within this our kingdome of England And to erecte and incorporate villages into Borowghes and Borowghes into Citties for the merritt of the Inhabitanes and the opportunities and scituaçon of the places with fittinge priviledges and ÿmunities And to doe and cause to bee done all other thinges necessarie in or concerninge the premisses which to them and everie of them shall seeme meete and convenient though they bee such as of their owne nature may require more speciall warrant then in these presences is expressed And because all our Subiectes and the Subiectes of our heires and Successors in the saide Continent of Newfoundland nowe inhabitinge and that shall hereafter there dwell and inhabitt may bee the more anymated and encouraged to goe on cheerefullie in their way of plantinge trade and marchandize Our will and pleasure is, And wee doe hereby graunte for vs our heires and Successors that all the present and future dwellers and Inhabitanes within Newfoundland aforesaide or the liberties lynettes and precinctes thereof shall and may for ever hereafter lawfullie and freelie att his and their will and pleasure importe their and everie of their goods and marchandize of that growth of that Continent or Island or of anie other Continent land or region whatsoever whither the same bee land or Sea Comodities by themselves their ffactors or Assignes into what partes soever of vs our heires and Successors of our kingdomes of England Ireland or anie other our domynions and the same

there to vnlade and dispose of for his and their beste benefitt and advantage or otherwise to dispose of the same by transporta^on and exporta^on into any partes whatsoever paying vnto vs our heires or Successors such and the like Customes subsidies ymposi^ons and taxa^ons and noe other then att this presente are or hereafter shall bee from tyme to tyme due and payeable by and from the Subiectes and Inh^ātantes of our saide kingdomes and Domynions respectivelie And of our more speciall grace certayne knowledge and meere mo^oon wee doe hereby graunte for vs our heires and Successors vnto them the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke their heires and Assignes full and free licence power and authoritie to make erecte and builde within the saide Continent of Newfoundland aforesaide and the liberties lymittes and precinctes thereof soe many and such ffortes excepte within the sixe miles and Islands within the lymittes and p^oncinctes before excepted in anie other manner then in the saide excep^on is expressed soe manie and such ffortes as to them and everie of them shall seeme moste fitt and expedient Saveing alwaies and reserving vnto vs our heires and Successors and to the Subiectes of vs our heires and Successors as aforesaide free and absolute libertie of fishinge from tyme to tyme as well in anie the Seas Rivers Creekes and lakes of the saide Island and the aforesaide priviledges and ymunities from tyme to tyme of saltinge and dryeing of all and everie the saide ffishes therein taken vpon anie the shoares of the saide Island of Newfoundland aforesaide or upon anie

p. 1732

the shoares of anie the Islandes to the same belonginge adioynge or apperteyninge which saide liberties and priviledges our will and pleasure is that our saide Subiectes and the Subiectes of our heires and Successors shall froth tyme to tyme enjoye in as ample and free manner and forme to all intent and purposes as they have att anie tyme heretofore vsed and accustomed And because that all other kinges princes and Potentates their Allies and Subiectes may knowe and acknowledge our iuste and vndoubted righte and intereste in and to the saide Continent Island or Region of Newfoundland and in and to all and everie the Islandes Seas and places to the same belonginge and to all other the Islands Seas and places within thirtie leagues thereof Our will and pleasure is, And wee doe hereby for vs our heires and Successors constitute ordeyne and appoynte that there shall bee for ever from and after the ffeaste of the birth of our lord God nexte ensueinge the date hereof levied and taken to the vse of vs our heires and Successors of and from all and everie straunger and straungers which shall att anie tyme or tymes hereafter make vse of anie the grounds or Beeches within anie the Portes or harbours within Newfoundland aforesaide erected or to bee erected: nor within anie other Islands within thirtie leagues of the Island of Newfoundland aforesaide in or aboute the dryeing or makeinge of ffishe and makeinge vse of the woods in all or anie the Islands aforesaide for their or anie of their stages after the rate and proporcion of five fishes out of everie hundred ffishes in the Seas Ryvers or places aforesaide to bee had or taken within the terme hereafter menconed accomptinge after the number of five score fishes to everie hundred respectivelie and all and everie straunger and straungers aforesaide which after the ffeaste aforesaide shall come into the Islands Seas Ryvers or places aforesaide or anie of them with shipps comonlie called sakes and shall there buy anie ffishe of anie person or persons whomsoever the like proporcion of five fishes out of everie hundred fishes accomptinge sixe score fishes to everie hundred thereof And alsoe of everie straunger and straungers according to the same proporcion and quantitie of five p Centum for all manner of Oyles and other thinges to bee made on anie the shoares within the Continent and Islandes aforesaid or anie of them out of the proceede of all or anie sorte of fishe to bee thereabout from tyme to tyme taken and had for and dureinge the terme of yeares hereafter in and by these presentes graunted and confirmed to bee demaunded and taken from tyme to tyme and att all tymes after the ffeaste above-menconed as aforesaide And wee doe alsoe for vs our heires and Successors authorize will and require the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke their heires and Assignes to cause the same to bee putt in due execucon in everie Porte haven and Creeke of the same Islandes aceordinge to our pleasure herein declared And that our Customers and the Collectors of our Customes subsidies dueties and ympostes in everie of our Portes havens and Creekes of all and everie the Islandes aforesaide and partes thereof for the tyme beeing shall from and ymediatelie after notice to them given of this our pleasure leavie collecte and take vpp to the vse of vs our heires and Successors the saide severall and respective quantities and numbers of fishe Oyles and other thinges out of everie hundred aforesaide and otherawise accordinge to our pleasure herein declared before their ladinge of their or anie of their shippes or vesselles or before their departure from anie such harbour or Porte as they and everie of them shall aunswere the contrarie att their perilles (excepte before excepted wilalinge further authonzinge and comaundinge the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and Sir David kirke and everie of them their and everie of their heires and Assignes and our saide Comptrollers and Collectors for the tyme beeing within all and everie of our Portes havens and Creekes of the Islands aforesaide and everie of them to see that the saide Customers and Comptrollers of all and everie the portes harbours and keyes within the Islands aforesaide and everie of them bee charged to aunswere to vs our heires and Successors all and everie the paymentes aforesaide Customes Subsidies and duties and somes of money beforemencioned accordinge to our true intente and meaninge herein declared moreover wee takeinge into our royall Consideraçon that verie greate will be the danger and the charge excessive which muste of necessitie bee overgone and expended before a Plantaçon of such an Extente and a worke of that difficultie canne be broughte to anie perfecçon either to maynteyne or defend itt selfe knowe yee therefore that wee of our more abundant grace certayne knowledge and meere moõon have demised graunted and confirmed And by their presentes for vs our heires and Successors doe demise graunte and confirme vnto them the saide James marquesse of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and Sir David kirke their Executors Administrators and Assignes the aforesaide quantitie or some of five fishes out of everie hundred ffishes accomptinge five score to the hundred as aforesaide vpon the saide Straungers herein beforemencioned respectivelie to be sett and ymposed demaunded and taken from tyme to tyme from all and everie straunger and straungers which shall att anie tyme or tymes hereafter make vse of anie the grounds or beeches aforesaide within anie the saide fortes or harbors within Newfoundlande aforesaide erected or to bee erected or within anie other the Island aforesaide within thirtie leagues of the saide Island of Newfoundland in and aboute the drieinge and makeinge of fishe and vseinge the woods aforesaide in anie the Islands aforesaide for their or anie of their stages And alsoe the like quantitie or some of five fishes out of everie hundred ffishe accomptinge sixe score fshes to everie hundred as aforesaide vpon everie straunger and straungers aforesaide herein beforemencioned to bee sett and ymposed demaunded and taken from tyme to tyme which shall att anie tyme or tymes hereafter arrive or come into anie the harbours Seas Rivers or places belonginge to the Islands aforesaide or anie of them with anie the saide shipps or vesselles called Sackes herein beforemen̄oned (excepte before excepted, And alsoe accordinge to the same propor̄con of five p Centum of the aforesaide Oiles and other thinges to bee made in or vpon anie the shoares within the Continent and Islandes aforesaide or anie of them out of the proceede of all or anie sorte of ffishe thereaboutes to bee from tyme to tyme taken and had for and duringe the terme of yeares hereafter men̄oned and everie of them the saide severall and respective propor̄cons and number of (fishes and oyles to bee demaunded had and taken from tyme to tyme and att all tymes after the ffeaste aforesaide when and as often as the saide straunger or straungers or anie of them shall happen to come or arrive in the Islandes Seas Rivers or places aforesaide or anie of them for the Causes intentes and purposes herein beforemen̄oned or anie of them To have and to houlde leavie receive perceave take and enioye the saide Customs ympostes quantities propor̄cons and number of fishes oyles and other thinges by these presentes graunted demised and confirmed or men̄oned to bee graunted demised and confirmed (excepte before excepted) vnto them the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and Sir David kirke their Executors Administrators and Assignes from the date of these presentes for and dureinge the tyme and terme of one and ffiftie yeares from thenceforth nexte ensueinge fullie to bee compleate and ended without Accompte or other thinge to bee rendred paied or given therefore or for any parte thereof to vs our heires or Successors other then those partes and por̄cons thereof in and by these presentes reserved and expressed to bee paied yeildinge and payeinge therefore And the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and Sir David kirke for themselves theire Executors Administrators and Assignes and for everie of them doe hereby coven̄nt promise and graunte to and with vs our heires and Successors for and in Considerācon of the Customes and ympostes aforesaide as well to yeilde and pay vnto vs our heires and Successors yearelie and everie yeare dureinge the terme by these presentes granted and confirmed the full and entire Tenth parte of all and singuler the benefitt proffitt and Comoditie some and sōmes of money whatsoever which shall or may from tyme to true growe arrise or bee payeable out of all and singuler the ympostes Customes and paymentes aforesaide and everie or anie of them, And shall and will in like manner yearelie and everie yeare deliver or cause or procure to bee delivered vnto the Treasurer or Comissioners for the Treasurie of vs our heires and Successors of this our Realme of England a faire and true Accompte in writinge of all and singuler the Gold and silver oare gemmes and precious stones, and of all other proffittes and Com̄odities sōme and sōmes of money which shall or may happen to growe arise or bee paieable vnto vs our heires and Successors out of all and singuler the saide Customes ympostes and paymentes aforesaide and everie of them And of our further especiall grace certayne knowledge and meere mo^ocon wee have hereby given graunted and confirmed, and by these presentes for vs our heires and Successors doe give graunte and confirme vnto the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke their heires and Assignes the sole trade in all and singuler the saide Continent Island and Region of Newfoundland and in all the Islands and places Seas Ryvers and lakes aforesaide to the same belonginge excepte the ffishinges fishermen and persons aforesaide within the Precinctes lymittes and Islandes aforesaide before in these presentes excepted And the sole trade and traffique from thence and att the places aforesaide for all manner of Com^odities and merchandizes whatsoever and for all Com^odities whatsoever which are vsuallie carried from hence into the Continent of Newfoundland aforesaide or into anie the Islands or places therevnto belonginge soe as noe other of the Subiectes of vs our heires or Successors from merchandizeinge buyinge or exchanginge of anie merchandizes or Com^odities whatsoever shall haunte or frequent any of the places aforesaide (excepte for ffishinge as aforesaide therevnto belonginge and all the persons before in and by these presentes onlie excepted) And alsoe wee doe by these presentes graunte and agree for vs our heires and Successors that the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke their heires and Assignes shall and may from tyme to tyme att their willes and pleasures receive take and admitt into their Societie and Partnership of and in the trade aforesaide such a competent number of marchautes or anie others as they from tyme to tyme shall see fittinge convenient and necessarie to bee ioyned with them in the trade or traffique aforesaide which marchautes and others and everie of them shall and may have the like Priviledge and freedome in the saide trade and and* other wise as they the, saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke their heires and Assignes shall graunte and allowe vnto them or may or oughte to vse and enioye by virtue of these presentes (excepte before excepted) And wee doe further by these presentes for vs our heires and Successors graunte and agree to and with the saide James marquesse of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henry Earle of holland and Sir David kirke their heires and Assignes that wee our heires or Successors will not at anie tyme or tymes hereafter ympose or cause to bee imposed anie imposi^ocon Custome or other taxa^ocon whatsoever in or vpon the dwellers or Inhabitanes of Newfoundland

p. 1734

p. 1735

* sic.

aforesaide or vpon anie landes tenementes goodes Chattles or merchandize within the same or to the saide Island of Newfoundland belonginge or in anie sorte apperteyninge savinge for such goodes as they or anie of them shall ymporte into our kingdome of England aforesaide or anie other our Domynions. And for the greater encouragement of them the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke their heires and Assignes and of all and everie other person and persons interested or to bee interested in the Plantacon aforesaide Our will and pleasure is and wee doe hereby graunte for vs our heires and Successors that their and everie of their shippes Barkes and Pynnaces and their and everie of their marryners Saylers Servautes and Agentes and all and everie other person and persons whom soever ymployed and to bee ymployed from tyme to tyme hereafter in and aboute the Plantacon aforesaid for and dureinge the

p. 1736

terme of one and ffiftie yeares aforesaide shall bee exempted freed and discharged from beinge pressed taken or staid in anie place or places wheresoever by vs our heires or Successors or by anie the Officers or ministers of vs our heires or Successors for anie occasion matter or thinge whatsoever excepte onlie in case of inevitable daunger and necessitie for the safetie preservacon and guardinge of our kingdomes of England Scotland and Ireland or anie of them from hostilitie incursion or invasion And to the end that God Almightye may give his blessinge to this Plantacon, And that the Inhabitanes thereof may live in Peace and prosperitie and that none may thither resorte to inhabitt that are not of that true Christian faieth whereof on earth itt is our cheefeste happines to bee Professor and defender Our will and pleasure is that everie person and persons of the age of twelve yeares or vpwardes either before hee or they shall leave this our kingdome of England or Dñon of Wales or anie other our Domynions or att his and their arrivall into the Island of Newfoundland aforesaide or anie the harbors Portes or places to the saide Island or anie other the Island or Islandes therevnto belonginge or apperteyninge (except the ffishermen and persons before in and by these presentes excepted) shall vpon the holie Evangeliste take the severall and respective oathes of allegiance and supremacie before the said James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke or some or one of them their heires and Assignes or before their and everie or anie of their Comaunders Deputies leiftenātes or Agentes To whome for vs our heires and Successors wee doe give power and authoritie And wee doe by these presentes enioyne and commaund them and everie of them to administer the oathes aforesaide accordinglie And to the end that our Subiectes in Newfoundland aforesaide resideinge or inhabitinge may bee comforted and may find the effectes of our Princely care and respectes towards them, wee doe hereby for vs our heires and Successors require and straightlie charge and comāund them the saide James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and Sir David kirke their heires and Assignes with all convenient speed to prosecute and accomlishe the Plantacon aforesaide and therein to establish that orthodoxe religion publicuelie professed and allowed in our Church of England, And to convey and transporte thither all thinges necessarie for the speedie effectinge thereof that the saide Island of Newfoundland and all and singuler the Islandes Seas Bayes Ryvers (fortes Portes and places and all other thinges aforesaide or in the saide Island begunne to bee founded or shall bee necessarie to bee done or performed for the advancinge and furtherance of the Plantacon aforesaide and all matters and thinges whatsoever therevnto belonging may bee acted and executed in convenient tyme that the saide Island of Newfoundland and all other the Seas places royalties and ŷmunities aforesaide and everie of them may bee solelie appropriated vnited and confirmed to vs our heires and Successors and to our Crowne ymperiall of this our kingdome of England for ever And lastlie wee doe hereby for vs our heires and Successors straightlie charge and comāund all and singuler the Subiectes Officers and ministers of

p. 1737

vs our heires and Successors of what degree quality or Condiçon hee they or anie of them bee or shall bee hereafter to bee aydinge assistinge and helpinge vnto them the said James marques of hamilton Phillipp Earle of Pembroke and mountgomerie henrie Earle of holland and sir David kirke their heires and Assignes and to his and their Officers marchaunts Comāunders Captaynes Deputie and Deputies Deputie and Deputies concerninge the premisses aforesaide and of our will and pleasure herein expressed accordinge to the true meaninge of these presentes as they tender our pleasure and will avoide the contrarie att their perilles In witness &c witnes our selfe att westminster the Thirteenth day of November.

p Bře de Priuto Sigillo

No. 714.RECALL OF SIR DAVID KIRKE.Whitehall.
April 8.
1651.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS 1574-1660.

April 18,
1651.

The Council of State to Capt. Thos. Thoroughgood, commander of the Crescent. It having been resolved that Sir David Kirke, now in Newfoundland, shall appear at the Council, they desire him to receive Sir David on board his ship, and bring him to England. (Ibid., Vol. CXVII., p. 114.)

Warrant for a Commission to John Littlebury, John Treworgie, Walter Sikes, Nicholas Redwood, Thos. Griggs, Miles (? Wm.) Pyle, Alexander Clotworthy, and William Hendry, to examine upon certain interrogatories, witnesses on the part of the Commonwealth and of the Adventurers to Newfoundland, and to receive informations concerning any miscarriages committed by Sir David Kirke since the time of his living there. (Ibid., Vol. XCIII., p. 243.) Annexed,

1. The Interrogatories above mentioned. Benefits made by adventurers' goods carried over by Sir David Kirke. Money received of planters for fishing boats, licensing taverns, granting leases for land, and selling wines. Sale of beaver and other skins. Profits by fishing and buying and selling. (Ibid., pp. 243, 244.)

No. 715.

C

[April 8.
1651.]APPOINTMENT OF COMMISSION

TO ADMINISTER AFFAIRS IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, 1574-1660.

Warrant to John Littlebury, John Treworgie, Walter Sikes, Capt. Thos. Thoroughgood, commander of the Crescent, Capt. Thos. Jones, commander of the Ann and Joyce, and Capt. Wm. Haddock, commander of the America, or any two of them, to take into their possession, for the use of the Adventurers to Newfoundland, Sir David Kirke having been ordered to repair to England, all ordance, ammuniton, houses, boats, and other appurtenances belonging to the fishing trade in Ferryland, or any other part of Newfoundland, and to collect the impositions upon fish paid by strangers, until Parliament declare their further pleasure. (INTERREGNUM, Entry Bk., Vol. XCIII., p. 244.)

No. 716.[June 3.
1653.]APPOINTMENT OF JOHN TREWORGIE AS COMMISSIONER FOR NEWFOUNDLAND.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, 1574-1660.

Orders of the Council of State. Instructions read for (John) Treworgie to Newfoundland, to be written out, signed, and sent. The security given by Sir David Kirke being approved, the sequestration or former seizure upon his estate in Newfoundland, to be taken off; and all that remains except the ordance, and other things properly belonging to the Commonwealth, delivered to such persons as he may appoint. (INTERREGNUM, Entry Bk., Vol. XCVII., pp. 197, 204.)

No. 717.INSTRUCTIONS TO JOHN TREWORGIE, COMMISSIONER FOR NEWFOUNDLAND,WITH ANNEXED LAWS AND ORDINANCES.¹[3 June, 1653.]

Instructions to John Treworgie Gent. appointed Commissioner for managing and ordering the affairs and interest of this Commonwealth in Newfoundland for this present year.

Whereas upon consideration had of the present state and condition of affairs in Newfoundland relating unto this Commonwealth, The Council have thought it expedient to continue you for this summer upon the place as a Commissioner for managing and ordering the affairs there.

You are therefore to demean yourself in that trust and employment according to the powers, instructions, and authority hereafter mentioned:—

1st. You are hereby required and authorised to take care for the Government and well ordering of the said country of Newfoundland and the people there inhabiting and likewise the fishery according to such laws and ordinances as are hereunto annexed.

2nd. You are by yourself or such fit persons as you shall appoint to collect the imposition of fish due from and paid by strangers, and likewise the imposition of oil for the use of this Commonwealth, and the adventurers aforesaid, until the Supreme Authority shall declare their futher pleasure therein.

3rd. You are to use your best endeavours to secure the fishery there against any that shall attempt to distrub or interrupt it, and to that end you have hereby full power and authority to command such ships and vessels as are upon that coast or in any of the harbours to keep together or otherwise to dispose of themsevles in such manner as may be most for the common safety and to use such other means for the end aforesaid as you shall judge meet. And all Captains of convoys are hereby required to be assisting to you in the execution thereof. And you are to consider in what manner any of the harbours and bays, belonging to the country may be fortified for preservation both of the country and fishing.

¹ "Reprinted from App. to British Case, North Atlantic Coast Fisheries Arbitration at the Hague, pp. 511-512."

4th. Whereas security is given by Sir David Kirke such as the Council do approve of, for his appearance to the Council and being responsible as to any matters to be objected against him, upon which the sequestration or former seizure upon his Estate is to be taken off, you are therefore to deliver up unto such person or persons as he shall appoint all that remains of his there that was formerly sequestered or seized, or that belongeth to him, only of the Ordnance or any other things that do properly belong to the Commonwealth, You are to take a particular notice & Inventory, and unto the person or persons in whose charge you shall leave the same you are to give strict directions that they take care the same be preserved and forthcoming to the use of the Commonwealth.

You are to receive and examine all such complaints as shall be made unto you as well by strangers as others of any wrong or injury done unto them by any person or persons whatsoever, and to certify their particular Cases unto the Council.

You are upon the close of this summer's fishery to return back into England and to repair to the Council or the Supreme Authority, of this Commonwealth and to give as well a just and true account of all such money and profits as have come to your hands due to the Commonwealth or Adventurers, as of all your proceedings and in what condition you left all things there at your coming away.

[Annexed Laws and Ordinances.]

Laws, Rules and Ordinances whereby the affairs and fishery of Newfoundland are to be governed until the Parliament shall take further order.

1. That no ballast, prest-stones nor anything else hurtful to the harbours be thrown out to the prejudice of the said harbours but that it be carried ashore and laid where it may not do annoyance.

2. That no person whatsoever either fishermen or inhabitants do destroy or deface or any way work any spoil or detriment to any stage, cookroom, flakes, spikes, nails or anything else that belongeth to the stages whatsoever either at the end of the voyage, when he hath done, and is to depart the country, but that he or they content themselves with such stage or stages only as shall be needful for them, and that for the repairing of such stages as he or they take, they shall fetch timber out of the woods and not to do it with ruining or tearing down of other stages.

3. That according to, the ancient custom, every ship or fisher that first entereth a harbour in behalf of the ship, be

Admiral of the said harbour, wherein for the time being he shall only reserve so much beach and flakes, or both as is needful for the number of boats that he shall use, with an overplus only for one boat more than he needeth as a privilege for his first coming; and that every ship coming after content himself with what he shall have necessary use for, without keeping or detaining any more to the prejudice of others next coming. And that any that are possessed of several places in several harbours with intent to keep them all before they can resolve upon which to choose shall be bound to resolve and send advice to such after comers in those places as expect his resolution and that within 48 hours if the weather so serve, that the said after comers may likewise choose their places and so none receive prejudice by others' delays.

p. 1742

4. That no person cut out, deface, or any way alter or change the marks of any boats or train vats whereby to defraud the right owners, and that no persons convert to his own use the said boats or train fats so belonging to others without their consent nor remove, nor take them from the places where they be left by the owners except in case of necessity and then to give notice thereof to the Admiral and others whereby the right owners may know what is become of them.

5. That no person do diminish, take away, purloin, or steal any of the fish, or train, or salt which is put in cask, train vats, or cookrooms, or other houses in any of the harbours or fishing places of the country, or any other provisions, belonging to the fishing trade or to the ships.

6. That no person set fire in any of the woods of the country or work any detriment or destruction to the same by rinding of the trees either for the sealing of ships holds or for rooms on shore, or for any other uses, except for the covering of the roofs for cookrooms to dress their meat and these rooms not to extend above 30 foot in length at the most.

7. That no man cast anchor or ought else hurtful which may breed annoyance or hinder the haling of sains for bait in places accustomed there-unto.

8. That no person rob the nets of others out of any drift, boat or drover for bait by night, nor take away any bait out of their fishing boats by their ships' sides nor rob or steal any of their nets or any part thereof.

9. That no person do set up any taverns for selling of wines, beer or strong waters, cider or tobacco to entertain the fishermen, because it is found that by such means they are debauched, neglecting their labours, and poor ill governed men not only spend most part of their shares before they come home upon which the lives and maintenance of their wives and children dependeth, but are likewise hurtful in divers other ways, as by neglecting and making themselves unfit for their labour, by purloining and stealing from their owners, and by making unlawful shifts to supply their disorders, which disorders they frequently follow, since these occasions have presented themselves.

10. That no planter be permitted to keep any more stage room than he hath fishing-men in possession for the managing of it, and that every planter in each harbour may take their stages and fishing room together in one part of the harbour and not scattering as they now do, wasting as much room for one or two boats as may serve 6 or 8 boats.

p. 1743

11. That no planter be permitted to build any dwelling-house, store-house, court-ledge or garden or keep any pigs or other cattle upon or near the ground where fish is saved or dried.

12. That all provisions imported for sale necessary for fishing be free for any person to buy for his own present occasion, so it be demanded within six days after its arrival, and not to be ingrossed by a few to make benefit on others thereby.

13. That upon the Lord's day the company assemble in meet place for divine worship.

Signed

JOHN DISBROW, Pst.

Whitehall, 3rd of June 1653.

No. 718.

[26 Jany.,
1660.]STAR CHAMBER RULES OF CHARLES I. AND ADDITIONS BY CHARLES II.¹

Charles the Second by the grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland Defender of Faith &c. and to all to whom these presents shall come, Greeting:

Whereas our late Royal father of blessed memory by his Letters Patent under his Great Seal of England bearing date at Westminster the tenth day of February in the ninth year of his reign hereby reciting that the region or country called Newfoundland had been acquired to the Dominion of his progenitors which he held and his people had many years resorted to those parts where and in the coasts adjoining they employed themselves in fishing, whereby a great number of his people had been set on work and the navigation and mariners of his Realm had been much increased and his subjects resorting thither one by the other and the natives of those parts were orderly and gently intreated until then of late some of his subjects of the Realm of England planting themselves in that country and there residing and inhabiting upon conceipt that for wrongs or injuries done there either on the shore or in the sea adjoining they could not be here impeached and the rather for that he or his progenitors had not thentofore given laws to the inhabitants there and by that example his subjects resorting thither injured one another and used all manner of excess to the great hindrance of the voyage and common damage of this Realm, for preventing of such inconveniences for the future he did thereby declare in what manner his people in Newfoundland and upon the sea adjoining and the bays, creeks or fresh rivers there should be guided and governed and did make and ordain and we do by these presents renew, ratify and confirm the laws following in the things after specified commanding that the same be obeyed and put in execution. First if any man on the land there shall kill another or if any shall secretly or forceably steal the goods of any other to the value of forty shillings, he shall be forthwith apprehended and arrested, detained and brought prisoner to England, and the crime committed by him shall be made known to the Earl Marshall of England for the time being to whom the delinquent shall be delivered as prisoner. And the said Earl Marshall shall take cognizance of the cause and if he shall find by the testimony of two witnesses or more that the party had there killed

*Page 1745
sponsored by
Sandi & Ken
Tulk,
Manuels, NL*

a man not being at that time first assaulted by the party slain, or that the killing were by misadventure or had stolen such goods, the delinquent shall suffer pain of death and all the company shall endeavour to apprehend such malefactor. Secondly that no ballast prestones, or anything else hurtful to the harbours be thrown out to the prejudice of the said harbours, but that it be carried ashore and laid where it may not do annoyance. Thirdly that no person whatsoever either fishermen or inhabitant do destroy deface or any way work any spoil or detriment to any stage, cookroom, flakes, spikes, nails or anything else that belongeth to any the stages whatsoever either at the end of the voyage when he hath done and is to depart the country, or to any such stages as he shall fall withal at his coming into the country, but that lie or they content themselves with such stage or stages only as shall be needful for them and that for the repairing of such stages as he or they take they shall fetch timber out of the woods and not to do it with the ruining or tearing down of other stages. Fourthly that according to the ancient custom every ship or fisher that first entereth a harbour in behalf of a ship be Admiral of the said harbour wherein for the time being he shall reserve only so much beach and flakes or both as is needful for the number of boats as he shall use with an overplus only for one boat more than he needeth as privilege for his first coming and that every ship coming after content themselves with what he shall have necessary use for without keeping or detaining any more to the prejudice of others next coming, and that any that are possessed of several places in several harbours with intent to keep them all before they can resolve upon which of them to choose shall be bound to resolve and send advice to such after comers in those places as expect his resolution and that within forty eight hours if the weather do serve that the said after comers may likewise choose their places and so none receive prejudice by others delays. Fifthly that no person cut out deface or any way alter or change the marks of any boats or train vats whereby to defraud the right owners, and that no person convert to his own use the said boats or train vats so belonging to others without their consents nor remove nor take them from the places where they be left by the owners, except in case of necessity, and then to give notice thereof to the Admiral and others whereby the right owners may know what is become of them. Sixthly that no person do diminish take away purloin or steal any of the fish or train or salt which is put in casks train vats or cookrooms or other house in any of the harbours or fishing places of the country or any other provision belonging to the fishing trade or to the ships. Seventhly that no person set fire on any of the woods of the country or work any detriment or destruction to the same by rinding of the trees either for the sealing of ships holds or for rooms on shore or for any other uses except for the covering of the roofs for cookrooms to dress their meat in and those rooms not to extend above sixteen feet in length at the most. Eighthly that no man cast anchor or ought else hurtful which may breed annoyance or hinder the haling of seines for bait in places accustomed thereunto. Ninthly that no person rob the nets of others out of any drift boat or drover for bait by night nor take away any bait out of their fishing boats by their ships sides nor rob or steal any of their nets or any part thereof. Tenthly that no person do set up any tavern for selling of wine beer strong waters cider or tobacco to entertain the fishermen because it is found that by such means they are debauched neglecting their labours and poor ill governed men not only spent most part of their shares before they come home upon which the life and maintenance of their wives and children depend but are likewise hurtful in divers other ways as by neglecting and making themselves unfit for their labour by purloining and stealing from their owners, and by making unlawful shift to supply their disorders which disorders they frequently follow since those occasions have presented themselves. Eleventhly that upon the Sundays the Company assemble in meet places and have divine service to be said by some of the masters of the ships or some others which prayers shall be such as are in the Book of Common Prayer. And moreover and further then was ordained by the laws of our said late father and for the encouragement of our subjects in the said Newfoundland and in the seas adjoining, and for the benefit of the said trade there we do hereby straightly charge prohibit and forbid all and every the owners of ships trading in the said Newfoundland fishery that they nor any of them do carry or transport or permit or suffer any person or persons to be carried or transported in their or any of their ships to the said Newfoundland other than such as are of his or their own or other ships Company or belonging thereunto and are upon the said ships hire and employment or such as are to plant and do intend to settle there. And because that speedy punishment may be inflicted upon the offenders against the laws and constitutions aforesaid We do ordain as was formerly ordained by our said late father that every of the mayors of Southton, Weymouth and Melcombe Regis Lyme Plymouth Dartmouth Eastlowe Foy and Barnstaple for the time being may take cognizance of all complaints made by any offenders against any of the laws or ordinances aforesaid upon the land and by oath of witnesses examine the truth thereof and award amends to the parties grieved and punish the delinquents by fine and imprisonment or either of them and of their goods found in the parts of Newfoundland or in the sea cause satisfaction thereof to be made by Warrants under their hands and seals, And the Vice-Admirals in our Counties of Southton Dorset Devon and Cornwall upon complaint made of any of the premises committed upon the sea shall speedily and effectually proceed against the offenders Also we will and ordain that these laws and ordinances shall stand in force and be put in due execution until we shall otherwise provide and ordain And we do require the Admiral in every harbour in this next season ensuing calling together such, as shall be in that harbour publicly to proclaim these presents and that they also proclaim the same on the shore In Witness &c Witness our self at Westminster the six and twentieth day of January.

p. 1746

per ipsum Regem

No. 719.[27 Nov.,
1663.]PETITION FROM WEST OF ENGLAND MERCHANTS

FOR ENFORCEMENT OF REGULATIONS.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, 1661-1668, p. 170.

589. Petition of the mayors and merchants of Dartmouth, Totnes, Plymouth, and Barnstaple, trading to Newfoundland, to the King and Council. Pray that the rule may be enforced prohibiting the carrying to Newfoundland any other persons than such as properly belong to the ship's company or owners' employment, or such as go to inhabit there; by reason of many violating this clause and going out as passengers to Newfoundland and taking up the principal fishing ports, the trade is so reduced that men can only be found for a quarter of the ships formerly sent out, whereby both the trade and his Majesty's service suffer great hurt. Annexing,

Reasons for granting the petition the number of ships and of seamen fit for the King's service will thus greatly increase, handicraftsmen be benefited, and the owners of ships will cease to suffer great loss through keepers of private boats drawing away able seamen. (Dom. Chas II., Vol. LXXXIV., No. 71, Cal. p. 353.)

No. 720.ORDER OF HIS MAJESTY[4 Dec.,
1663.]REQUIRING MAYORS AND MAGISTRATES OF CERTAIN ENGLISH TOWNS TO OBSERVE RULES RE CARRYING OF MEN TO NEWFOUNDLAND.*Page 1748
sponsored by
Sandi & Ken
Tulk,
Manuels, NL*

NEWFOUNDLAND. (612) WHITEHALL, 4 December 1663.

ACTS OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL, COLONIAL SERIES, 1613-1680, p. 374.

The Letter touching the regulating of the Fishery of Newfoundland being this day read at the Boord, His Majestie was pleased to approue therof, And did Order that Copies thereof be sent to the Maiors of the seuerall Townes hereunder written.

(Southampton, Weymouth and Melcombe Regis, Lyme, Dartmouth, Plymouth, Fowey, Barnstaple.)

Whereas his most gracious Majestie by Letters under his great Seale of England, bearing date the Six and Twentieth day of January in the Twelfth yeare of his Reigne, hath amongst other wholesome Laws and Constitutions for the well guiding and governing his People in Newfoundland, and the Seas and Creeks adjoyning, declared constituted and Ordained, That for the encouragement of his Subjects in the said Newfoundland, and in the Seas adjoyning; and for the benefitt of the Trade there, no Owners of Ships trading in the said Newfoundland Fishery nor any of them, shall presume to carry or transport, or permitt and suffer to be carried or transported, in their or any of their Ships to the said Newfoundland, other then such as are of his or their owne or other Ships Company, or belonging thereunto, and are upon the said Ships Hire or Employment, or such as are to plant, and do intend to settle there, Notwithstanding this Prohibition his Majestie and this Boord haue receiued Complaints from seuerall Fishing Townes in the West of England trading to Newfoundland, That divers Owners of Ships do presume to violate this Law and Constitution for their owne private Ends to the greate decay of that Trade, and lessening the number of Ships and Seamen, the consequences of which, if not prevented, will be very prejudiciall to his Majesties service to the ruining of many Handicrafts men, whose Livelyhood and Subsistance depends thereupon, and in fine when this present Stock of Seamen is worne out, may be a destruction of the whole Trade for want of supplies of Mariners, who are now yet yearely bred by the Owners of Ships, Wee do therefore in his Majesties name hereby Order and require you the Maoirs and Magistrates in your respectiue places to be carefull that the aforesaid Law and constitution be punctually observed, and duly executed according to the Powers graunted to you by the aforesaid Letters Patents, and Wee do also appoint that the Officers of his Majesties Customes in their respectiue Ports, do straitely charge all Masters of Ships trading to Newfoundland to obserue and keepe the said Rule.

No. 721.[28 Aug.,
1667.]PETITION AGAINST APPOINTMENT OF A GOVERNOR FOR NEWFOUNDLAND.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, AM. & W. I., 1661-1668, p. 494.

1561. Petition of Merchants, Owners of ships, and others, inhabitants of Plymouth and places adjacent, trading to Newfoundland, to the King. The carrying on of the useful fishing trade tends greatly to the increase of mariners and shipping, and of the customs; yet several persons for their own sinister ends have endeavoured to establish a Governor, which hath heretofore been very destructive to the trade. Have had very great losses of late, and cannot bear the charges of solicitation and sending witnesses at so great distance to testify against such an appointment; pray that persons in the county of Devon (in regard the trade is chiefly carried on by inhabitants thereof) may be empowered to hear and examine the whole matter. Signed by George Storey, Mayor, and 52 others. Annexed, 1561. I. Petition of merchants and shipowners of Totness, trading to Newfoundland, to the King. To the same effect. Signed by John Ley, Mayor, and 16 others.

1561. II. Order in Council, on above petitions, empowering Sir Edw. Seymour and other baronets and gentlemen to examine matters of fact concerning the miscarriages of former Governors of Newfoundland to the damage of the trade of that place, with authority to give oaths to witnesses; the petitioners to prepare reasons to make good the allegations in their petitions, and the whole result with such reasons to be transmitted to the Council board. (Dom., Chas., II., Vol. CCXV., Nos. 47, 8, 9, Cal., p. 423.)

[28 Aug.,
1667.]APPOINTMENT OF COMMISSIONERSTO EXAMINE INTO MISCARRIAGES OF FORMER GOVERNORS OF NEWFOUNDLAND TO THE DETRIMENT OF THE FISHERY TRADE.*Page 1750
sponsored by
Sandi & Ken
Tulk,
Manuels, NL*

NEWFOUNDLAND. (716) WHITEHALL, 28 August (1667).

ACTS OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL COLONIAL SERIES, 1613-1680, p. 432.

Whereas sundry Petitions were this day presented and read at the Board (his Majestic present in Councill) Subscribed by many Merchants, Owners of Shippes, and other Inhabitants of the Townes of Totnes, Plymouth, Dartmouth, and Places adjacent in the Westerne parts of England. Tradeing to New-found-Land, Representing, That the carrying on of that vsefull ffishing Trade tends greatly to the Increase of Mariners and Shipping, and augmentation of his Majesties Customs Yet severall Persons vnder specious pretences of Regulating that Trade, but intending their owne sinister ends, have endeavoured to establish a Governour, which hath heretofore proved very pernicious to the said Trade, And the Petitioners being Informed that the like endeavours are now setting on ffoote without their Consent or knowledge; And that the Petitioners sufferings and losses of late have been very great, they are disabled to attend, and beare the Charges of Sollicitation, and sending Witnesses at so great a distance to evidence the many Inconveniencies they have already Laboured vnder, and the impossibility that any advantage should accrew to his Majestie, or any Improvement to the ffishing Trade by such an Vseless and insupportable Charge of a Governour there; and Praying his Majestie would be graciously pleased to Impower such Persons of the County of Devon as his Majestic should thinke fitt, to heare and examine the whole matter, and make Report vnto his Majestie and this Board . . . Sir Edward Seymour, Sir John Northcott, Sir William Courtney, Sir Thomas Carew, and Sir Walter Yong Baronetts John Fowell, Thomas Reynell, Richard Cabell, Thomas Boone, John Hale, and Gilbert Eveleigh Esqrs . . . are Constituted and appointed by this Board to Examine Matters of ffact concerning the Miscarriages of former Governours of New-found-Land to the damage of the Trade of that Place. (These, or any four of them, being Justices of the Peace are empowered to take depositions on oath, which are to be forwarded under their seals to the Board, to which the petitioners are also to transmit reasons in support of their allegations that order may be given for the good of the trade.)

[8 Jan.,
1668.]MEMORIAL RESPECTING OCCUPATION OF PLACENTIA BY THE FRENCH.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, AM. & W. I., 1661-1668, p. 537.

*Page 1751
sponsored by
Sandi & Ken
Tulk,
Manuels, NL*

1666. Address to his Majesty showing the present condition of Newfoundland, drawn from the evidence of Major John Scott, Capt. Wm. Hill, John Hoyle, Mr. Wacombe, Capt. John Rayner, the petitioning merchants, and others. From its first discovery in 1496 till the treaty of 1632 the French were not permitted to fish at Newfoundland, or in any place on the main of America; but after that treaty the French trading to Canada and Acadia presumed to make dry fish on Newfoundland; for prevention whereof Sir David Kirke was sent there Governor, in whose time every French ship trading or making dry fish there was forced to pay 5 or 10 per cent.; and in the time of the late rebellion they were compelled to do the like. But about five years past the French planted there, and presumed to raise a garrison of 18 guns (since made 32) in Placentia. Four years since Capt. Rayner, then Deputy Governor, sent to his Majesty by Robert Prouse of Dartmouth information concerning the French proceedings on the oath of Issac Dethick; and 2 ½ years past the inhabitants sent a petition to his Majesty by Nehemiah Froute of Plymouth, setting forth the prejudice they sustained by the Dutch under de Ruyter in June 1665, by calculation 36,000*l.*, and their great fear of the French now planted there, and praying his Majesty to secure the country from Rochelle with two stout ships of war, &c.; and the French planters being now more than the English, and thus fortified, make dry fish where they please and load therewith at least 100 great ships, whereas last year there were not above 10 or 12. By the product of this fish his Majesty's Customs have amounted to 40,000*l.* per ann. and the return to the nation 300,000*l.*; and the merchants of London, Bristol, Hampton, Weymouth, and other parts petitioning and consenting to the settlement and securing of Newfoundland are concerned three-quarter parts in carrying on the fishing trade. Indorsed, "recd. the 8th of Jan. 1667-8." 1 p. (Col. Papers, Vol. XXII., No. 5.)

[15 April,
1668?]MEMORIAL FOR REMOVAL OF FRENCH AND ESTABLISHMENT OF GOVERNMENT.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, AM. & W. I., 1661-1668, p. 557.

*Page 1752
sponsored by
Sandi & Ken
Tulk,
Manuels, NL*

1729. Memorial concerning Newfoundland fishing. Two years since the French planted upon Newfoundland eight or ten guns and 30 or 40 men, and last year 20 pieces of ordnance and 90 or 100 men, showing their King's broad seal for government of the island, and driving the English from their habitations who will desert the land if there be not some timely remedy. This proceeds because the island (except the province of Avalon) is without government, the forts all ruined, and all in confusion. The fishermen rob, kill, and spoil the inhabitants as bad now as before his Majesty's restoration. It is humbly desired on behalf of the inhabitants that a frigate or two may remove the French, that a Government may be settled, and for defraying the charge that every boat may pay one quintal, which is a very small charge, every boat ordinarily catching three or four hundred quintals. Indorsed, "Read in Council, April 15th. Memorial exhibited by the Duke of York. Ordered ditto." Annexed, 1729. 1. Deposition of John Rayner, late Deputy Governor in Newfoundland. In 1662 a great French ship full of men and women put into Grand Placentia, where she landed a great number of soldiers and passengers, who fortified the harbour with 18 pieces of ordnance, as one Isaac Dethick, who was there, affirmed. Dethick saw the Governor's Commission under the Great Seal of France for the command of the whole country of Newfoundland, and the following year was forced to remove from his plantation and settle at the Bay of Ards, where deponent found him and took from him an account of the French proceedings, which he sent for England by Mr. Robert Prowse, to be presented to the King. On the 6th June 1665 the harbour of St. John's was invaded by De Ruyter, who took all the ships and goods, and destroyed cattle and houses, and made the like spoil in the Bay of Butts and Petty Harbour, but De Ruyter said if there had been but six guns mounted in St. John's he would not have ventured in. Deponent was present and lost his whole estate there, to the value of 2,000l. Jurat 2 January 1668.

No. 725.

[1668.]

STATEMENT OF REASONS FOR SETTLEMENT OF NEWFOUNDLAND UNDER REGULAR GOVERNMENT.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, AM. & W. I., 1661-1668, p. 558.

1730. Reasons for the settlement of Newfoundland and the trade under Government. First, in respect of his Majesty's interest. It is the greatest if not the only nursery for seamen, and when the trade flourished it bred 10,000 yearly. Under a Government it produced 50,000*l.* customs yearly, by the product of fish sent to foreign countries, and foreigners permitted to fish paid 51. per cent. to the Governor, but for want of it the French have encroached, possessed three of the best harbours, mounted 30 or 40 guns in each place, and use all means to debauch his Majesty's subjects to live under their protection. Secondly, in respect of the trader's interest. When the trade flourished under a Government it brought to the nation 500,000*l.* per annum, but since then not one-third so much. No harbours being fortified and there being no settled Government, the traders are liable to all pirates and enemies, all stages, boats, fishing crafts, &c. are destroyed by the planters or the fishermen that came first, whereby the fishermen are obliged to a month's delay and 20 per cent. loss, so that foreigners undersell them in all markets. The cutting down and firing of the woods near the sea will prove the destruction of the trade if not speedily prevented; the tipping houses where the poor fishermen spend all they get might be prevented; also the encroachment of houses and gardens on land fit for drying fish. The chief harbours are spoilt by casting ballast into them, great abuses are committed by unseasonable fishing, and the west country owners at the end of the year send their men to New England to save their passage home, by which fishermen are made scarce, and many serviceable seamen lost. By reason of a late Act for turning the planters six miles into the country, the chiefest have gone to New England, and the rest will go to the French, who are so well fortified that in case of a war they would quickly possess the whole country; for by a late proclamation of the French King, every master of a ship is allowed five livres for every man and three for every woman he carries to Newfoundland. Thirdly, in respect of the inhabitants. By settled Government and harbours fortified they will avoid the abuses of the ungoverned seamen who deal with them as they please, they will be preserved from sea rovers and enemies, have a minister to christen, bury, marry, and instruct them, whereas now they live like brutes. And they will have equal justice, which will

*Page 1754
sponsored by
Sandi & Ken
Tulk, Manuels,
NL*

p. 1754

greatly encourage all except those who desire to live under no government, but in all things to be their own carvers. Two copies. 2 pp. (Col. Papers, Vol. XXII., Nos. 68, 69.)

1731. Capt. Robinson's proposals to the King concerning Newfoundland. Because Sir David Kirke's Government was careless or severe, it does not follow that if there be a bad Governor over a Plantation that therefore the Governor and the Plantation shall be removed, and so the country left to any other nation or people whatsoever, but rather that a better Governor be appointed and his Majesty's honour and interest still maintained. The destruction of stages, houses, woods, and harbours; the want of justice; breaking the Lord's day and having no offices of christianity, his Majesty being Defender thereof so that the very natives take notice of it, are some of the consequences of the want of a Governor. Arguments as to whether Newfoundland ought not to be kept from an enemy when it may be done at 1 per cent. on the fish. If the French should take it, whereas they now employ about 400 sail and 18,000 seamen, and the English 300 sail and 15,000 seamen, they would employ near 700 ships and 30,000 seamen, and the English be shut out of 700,000l. yearly, besides which the French would make double that sum. The great advantages of the Newfoundland fishery as a nursery for seamen. If the French should add what the English have planted there to what they possess already in Canada, Nova Scotia, and other places thereabouts, they would be bad neighbours to his Majesty's flourishing Plantations of New England, New York, and Virginia. 2 pp. (Col. Papers, Vol. XXII., No. 70.)

No. 726.REPLY OF WEST OF ENGLAND MERCHANTS

[1668.]

TO PLEA FOR REGULAR GOVERNMENT.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, AM. & W. I., pp. 560-1.

1732. Reply to the King in Council of the Merchants, Owners and [1668.] Masters of ships of the Western parts to the allegations of Capt. Robert Robinson concerning the Newfoundland fishery. For many years past few have made 10 per cent. on this fishery, and last year both Dartmouth and Plymouth lost considerably. The memory of Sir David Kirke's actions little encouragement for another Governor, which was sufficiently proved upon a commission from his Majesty to several gentlemen of Devon in the 19th year of his Majesty's reign (1667). Placentia Bay was never possessed by the English but was fortified by the French to secure them from the "solvages (natives of the country)." As to fear of God and honour of his Majesty, seeing the country is most barren and rocky, is productive of no commodities as other Plantations, or affords anything of food to keep men alive or employment for the people, they conceive it fittest that some be brought away, and the rest transported where they may not live so idle, and dishonourable to God and this nation, so that the trade in provisions, &c. now mostly supplied from New England, may be carried on by fishing ships from England and the seamen augmented. Laws are violated, and trees, woods, and stages destroyed by the inhabitants' increase. If another Governor follow he will doubtless continue the same. Capt. Robinson will remember what he did himself at St. John's in 1661. From Bonavise north-ward to Trepasse southward is all that ever was and is now possessed by the English, which reaches 300 miles, wherein are 48 fishing places, and if St. John's were fortified and a Governor resident there, it would signify nothing to the other places. Therefore, seeing the many other fishing places that cannot be secured, and that may be done as well by the Admiral, they conceive that a Governor will be more disadvantageous than profitable either to the public or the trade. And lastly, though the charge proposed of one penny per quintal of merchantable fish, and a halfpenny on refuse fish and corr, and 12 pence per hhd. on train, seem so inconsiderable, it will amount to 1 per cent. on fish, and 2 per cent. on oil, occasion vexation to the fishing ships, and hinder the reviving of this decaying trade. Such imposition is positively contrary to several Acts of Parliament, particularly that of the

p. 1756

15th year of his Majesty's reign. Besides they assert that as this fishery through Sir David Kirke's indulgence, contrary to their patent, is already carried on by the inhabitants and boat keepers in great part, so if a Governor be settled and the inhabitants continued, the trade in a few years will be removed from this kingdom, and become as that fishery of New England, which at first was maintained from these parts, but is now managed altogether by the inhabitants of New England, so that not one ship hath gone on that employment out of England these seven years. Pray his Majesty with the serious advice of his Council to consider the premises, and against those pretences and designs to weigh not only the former practice of his Royal progenitors but also the present state of France, so flourishing of late through their fisheries and consequent increase of seamen, and that this is almost the only nursery for seamen, and to continue his former respects for its encouragement and reviving. Indorsed "An answer to Capt. Robinson's proposals." (Col. Papers, Vol. XXII., No. 71.)

No. 727.[(23 Dec.,)
1670.]PETITION FORM MAYORS OF WEST OF ENGLAND TOWNS,

FOR OBSERVANCE OF EXISTING REGULATIONS.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, AM. & W. I., 1669-1774, pp. 143-4.

362. Petition of the merchants, owners, and masters of ships, and inhabitants of the western parts of this kingdom adventuring to the Newfoundland in fishing voyages, to the King in Council. That the laws for regulating the fishery have been confirmed by his Majesty, who by letter of 4th Dec. 1663 commanded certain mayors of corporations and others to see them put in execution. That notwithstanding private boatkeepers still continue to fish in Newfoundland and great number of passengers still go there. That the whole state of this affair is now presented in an address to the King. Pray that the fishery may be maintained by fishing ships, and that the mayors may depute persons to execute laws for the fishery. Signed by the Mayors of Exeter, Dartmouth, Plymouth, Lyme Regis, Barnstaple, Weymouth, and Poole. Annexed, 362. I. The address to the King above referred to, showing that about 30 years since 270 sail of ships were employed in the fishery and 20,000 seamen. That in process of time loose persons stayed in the country, who tend much to destroy the trade and are useless in all respects, Newfoundland being a barren island. That in consequence the fishermen's houses are torn down, timber is burnt, and the seamen are debauched. The fishery is carried on without fishing ships by the inhabitants. And the French in their seamen and shipping by their fishery do much increase. The inconveniences through permitting private boatkeepers being allowed to fish.

362. II. Additional powers desired by the petitioners about the Newfoundland fishing.

362. III. Order by the King in Council upon above petition, read at the Board 23 Dec. last, when it was ordered that Mr. Gould and all other parties concerned should give their attendance, who being fully heard it was now ordered that all papers relating thereto be referred to his Majesty's council of Plantations, who are to consider the best ways and means whereby the fishing trade in Newfoundland may be regulated, advanced, and protected and secured from foreigners and

p. 1758

*Page 1758
sponsored by
Sandi & Ken
Tulk,
Manuels,
NL*

managed for the increase of seamen and the advantage of his Majesty and his subjects; also to take into consideration his Majesty's charter and the additional powers desired by the western traders, and to report their opinion to his Majesty within 14 days. Whitehall, 11 January 1670-1.

362. IV. Report of his Majesty's Council for Foreign Plantations. Having heard the petitioners and all parties concerned, they offer, as their opinion and advice, That his Majesty grant, by way of addition to his former charter and rules and orders for the government of said fishery: That all his Majesty's subjects enjoy the freedom of taking fish in any of the rivers in Newfoundland, provided they submit to the orders established for the fishery. That no stranger be permitted to take bait or fish, no inhabitant to burn or destroy any wood or plant within six miles of the sea shore, nor take up any stage before the arrival of the fishermen out of England. Masters of ships to bring back all seamen, fishermen, and others, and none to be suffered to remain in Newfoundland. Fines and forfeitures on offenders. Encouragement to the inhabitants of Newfoundland to go to Jamaica or other foreign plantations. These rules and orders are contained in 29 articles. 1670-1, March 2.

362. V. Order of the King in Council approving above report and directing Sir Heneage Finch, Attorney-General, to prepare a bill for his Majesty's signature to pass the Great Seal, containing his confirmation of said charter, with the additional powers hereby ordered to be inserted therein, as also for establishing a certain way of judicature for hearing and determining felonies and murders and other offences committed in Newfoundland. Together 24 pp. (Col. Entry Bk., No. 65, pp. 39-62).

[March, 10,
1670.]No. 728.*ORDER OF HIS MAJESTY KING CHARLES II. IN COUNCILAPPROVING OF THE REPORT OF THE COUNCIL OF PLANTATIONS.¹At the Court of Whitehall, the 10th of March, 16⁷⁰/₇₁.

Present:

The King's Most Excellent Majesty.

His Royal Highness the Duke of York.	Earl of Sandwich.
His Highness Prince Rupert.	Earl of Anglesy.
Lord Keeper.	Earl of Craven.
Duke of Ormond.	Earl of Lauderdale.
Lord Great Chamberlain.	Lord Arlington.
Lord Chamberlaine.	Lord Newport.
Earl of Bridgewater.	Mr. Treasurer.

Mr. Secretary Trevor.

Whereas in pursuance of an order of this Board of the 11th January last, upon the petition of the merchants, owners, and masters of shippes, and inhabitants of the western parts of this Kingdom, adventuring to the Newfoundland in fishing voyages The Right Honorable his Majesty's Council for foreign Plantations did this day represent to the Board, that they have called before them, and heard the petitioners and the other parties concerned, and after due consideration of the best ways and means, of regulating, securing, and improving the fishing trade, in Newfoundland, do humbly offer unto his Majesty as their opinion and advice, That his Majesty would be pleased to grant by way of addition to his former charter an establishment of the powers, rules, and orders for the government of the said fishery as followeth, viz.

That all the subjects of his Majesty's Kingdom of England shall and may for ever hereafter peaceably hold and enjoy the freedom of taking bait, and fishing in any of the rivers, lakes, creeks, harbours or roads, in or about Newfoundland, or in any of the islands adjoining thereto, with liberty to go on shore in any part of the Newfoundland, or the said islands, for the curing, salting, drying, and husbanding of their fish, and making of oil, and for the cutting of all manner of wood, and trees for the building, or making of stages, rooms, train vats, hurdles, ships, boats, and other necessaries, for themselves and their servants, seamen, and fishermen, and all things which may be useful, or advantageous to their fishing trade, as fully and freely as at any time heretofore hath been used, and enjoyed there by any of the subjects of His Majesty's royal predecessors.

Provided always that they submit unto, and observe all such rules and orders as now are, or hereafter shall be established, by his Majesty, his heirs, or successors, for the government of the said fishery in Newfoundland.

2. That no alien, or stranger be permitted to take bait, or fish in any of the rivers, lakes, creeks, harbours, or roads in Newfoundland, between Cape Race, and Cape Bona Vista, or in any of the islands thereunto adjoining.

3. That according to the establishment of his Majesty's royal father of blessed memory in the 13th year of his reign, no planter or inhabitant in, or upon the said Newfoundland, be permitted to fell, cut down, root up, waste, burn, or destroy any wood, or timber trees, or erect or make any houses, buildings, gardens, &c. or inhabit or plant within six miles of the shore, or in any part of the said Newfoundland, between the Cape de Race, lying in or about 46 degrees of North latitude, and the Cape d'Bonavista lying in or about 49½ degrees likewise of North latitude, nor upon any island within ten leagues of the shore between the said capes.

4. That no planter or inhabitant in Newfoundland, do take up, or possess any of the stages, cookrooms, &c. beaches, or places for taking bait, or fishing, before the arrival of the fishermen out of England, and that they be all provided.

5. That the clause in his Majesty's charter of confirmation of rules, and orders for regulating the Newfoundland fishery bearing date the 26 of January in the 12th year of his Majesty's reign concerning the transportation of men thither, may be altered, and enlarged in manner following. That is to say

That no master, or owner of any fishing ship do transport, or carry any seamen, fishermen, or other persons in his ship to Newfoundland, other than such as are truly belonging to his or their ships company, and such as are engaged in the voyage and share, or shares, or hire of the said ship.

6. That no master or owner of any fishing ship do transport or carry in any one ship for a, fishing voyage, more than sixty persons to one hundred tons burthen of the said ship, and so proportionately for all ships of a greater, or lesser burden.

7. That it be strictly provided for, and commanded, that every fifth man yearly carried out of England, be a greenman (that is to say) not a seaman.

8. That the masters and owners of all fishing ships trading out of England to Newfoundland be enjoined according to the number of men in their respective ships, to provide in England victuals, and other necessaries (salt only excepted) for the whole voyage, or fishing season, for themselves and companies, and to put the same on shipboard before the going out of port here.

9. That it be likewise strictly commanded that no fishing ship or company do depart out of England directly for Newfoundland on any fishing voyage in any year, before the first day of March, nor to the Isles of Cape d'Veerde intending from thence to Newfoundland before the 15th day of January.

p. 1761

10. That from henceforward all masters of fishing ships trading to Newfoundland shall yearly before the beginning of their voyage, give bond in His Majesty's name to the mayors for the time being of the ports of Southampton, Poole, Weymouth, Melcombe Regis, Lyme, Exeter, Dartmouth, Plymouth, East Looe, Fowey, Falmouth, Biddiford, Barnstaple, and Bristol, and all other ports and towns upon the coast of England respectively, according to the port or place from whence they shall set out, under the penalty of one hundred pounds, with condition that they shall not carry out any seamen, fishermen, or other persons, other than such as are truly belonging to his or their, or other ships company, and such as are engaged in the voyage, and share, or shares, or hire of the said ship or ships respectively.

And that they shall bring or cause to be brought back into England, all such seamen, fishermen and other persons as they shall carry out (mortality and danger of the seas excepted) and also such persons as shall be employed from the Newfoundland in English ships with fish for market voyages.

Provided nevertheless that if any of the said seamen, fishermen, &c., shall run away, or desert their ships, the master or masters of such ship or ships, paying such person's share or shares or hire to the mayor of the place from whence the said ship set out, shall be discharged of his or their bond or bonds respectively.

Or if no complaint shall be made against the said masters in three months after their return from the said voyage, then his or thier bonds to be delivered up unto them respectively.

11. That no master of any fishing ship or others do take up or use any stage already built, in any port, harbour, or bay, between Cape Race and Cape Bona Vista, with a less number of men than twenty-five, who are to be of one entire company.

12. That no fisherman or seaman carried out as aforesaid be suffered to remain in Newfoundland in the winter, after the fishing voyage or season is ended.

13. That the Admirals, Vice-Admirals, and Rear-Admirals of and in every port and harbour in Newfoundland for the time being be authorized and required to preserve peace and good government among the seamen and fishermen in their respective harbours, as well as on the shore, to see his Majesty's rules and orders concerning the regulation of the fishery duly put in execution, and to cause all offenders to be apprehended, that they may be punished according to their demerits.

14. That the Admirals, Vice-Admirals, and Rear-Admirals in their respective harbours, bays, &c., may according to ancient custom be empowered to apprehend and secure all offenders for any crime committed in Newfoundland, on shore, or at sea, and to bring them into England.

p. 1762

15. That the several Admirals in their respective harbours and bays in Newfoundland do, on or about the 20th day of September yearly, publish in their said harbours and upon the shore his Majesty's orders and commands forbidding all seamen or fishermen to stay or remain in or upon the said Newfoundland, after the last day of October.

16. And that the said Admirals do yearly keep journals of their proceedings there, and at their return into England, deliver copies of them, with an account of the number of ships, boats, stages, train vats, &c., and of the seamen and fishermen belonging to and employed in their respective harbours, unto his Majesty's Council for foreign Plantations.

17. That the several Recorders, or their deputies, and the Justices of the Peace for the time being, of the respective ports, towns, and places before-named, and one neighbouring justice of the Peace for the same county, may be joined in commission with the mayors of the said ports, towns, and places respectively, and any two, or more of them, be empowered to take cognizance of all complaints made of any offenders against the laws, rules, and orders established by his Majesty for regulating the Newfoundland fishery, and to hear and determine the same according as is provided and directed to the respective mayors alone by his Majesty's said charter of confirmation.

18. That reasonable fines, penalties, and forfeitures may be imposed upon all masters, and owners of ships, seamen, fishermen, and other persons employed in or about the fishery in Newfoundland as shall offend in breaking his Majesty's rules and orders established for the said fishery.

And that all such fines, penalties, and forfeitures relating to the fishing trade may be apportioned out, one third part of them to the use of his Majesty, one third part to the use of the poor of the place where such offence shall be prosecuted, and the other third part to the informer, that shall prosecute the same, or otherwise in such manner, and to such uses as his Majesty shall think fit.

All which having been this day read and seriously considered at the board, his Majesty was pleased to approve thereof, and did order, that the several rules, powers, and authorities above recited be added to, and inserted in the charter formerly granted by his Majesty for the regulating of the Newfoundland fishery.

And to that end Sir Heneage Finch Kn^t and Bar^t his Majesty's Attorney-General, is hereby authorized and required to prepare a bill for his Majesty's royal signature to pass the great seal of this kingdom containing his Majesty's confirmation of the said charter, with the additional powers and authorities, hereby ordered to be inserted therein.

And whereas the said Council for foreign Plantations did further represent unto his Majesty as their humble opinion and advice, that the clause in his Majesty's said charter of confirmation, which concerneth the powers of the earl marshal in the punishing of felonies, murders, &c. committed in Newfoundland, may be reviewed, there being at present no such office or court, and in lieu thereof if his Majesty shall think fit, that a certaine way of judicature may be established, for the hearing and determining of treasons, felonies, and murders, and all criminal matters committed or done in Newfoundland, on the shore or at sea, according to law and equity, and for the awarding of execution thereupon, as the cause shall require.

p. 1763

It was thereupon ordered by his Majesty in council, that the said Attorney-General, with the assistance of his Majesty's council learned do review the said clause, and consider of establishing a certain way of judicature for the hearing and determining all such cases aforesaid, and the same to present to this Board with all convenient speed.

JOHN NICHOLAS.

No. 729.

[1670.]

REPLY OF CAPT. ROBINSONTO THE ANSWER OF THE WEST COUNTRY MERCHANTS TO HIS OWN
PROPOSALS ABOUT NEWFOUNDLAND.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, AM. & W. I., 1669-1674, p. 147.

*Page 1764
sponsored by
Sandi & Ken
Tulk,
Manuels,
NL*

368. Reply of Capt. Robinson to the answer of the West Country Gentlemen to his own proposals about Newfoundland (see previous vol. of Cal., 1661-1668, No. 1, 1732). The papers of the West Country Gentlemen given in after so long premeditation on his proposals were not very pertinent to his Majesty's interest, but only a discourse on their own particular trade, nor is it material to insist on Sir David Kirke's Government, how careless or severe soever, for if there be a bad Government it doth not follow that said Governor and planters should be removed, and so the country left to any other nation, but rather that said bad Governor be removed. Still asserts that Sir David Kirke was Governor round great part of the island, and made many of the French pay toll; that Sir Humphrey Gilbert took possession by patent from Queen Elizabeth in 1586 (sic, mistake for 1583; he died in 1584), as Capt. Whitbourne an eye-witness relates in his book of that plantation; and that there is constant destruction of stages, outhouses, and woods, and the harbours spoiled, besides abuses between fishers and planters without any justice between them, and no offices of Christianity or public worship amongst them. But the thing in hand is, whether Newfoundland ought not to be kept from an enemy, and his Majesty's subjects encouraged and secured, being surrounded by the French to the north and south, Placentia Bay to the west with 100 ships before it, and the Bank to the east. That nation are not as they were 50 or 60 years ago, when they durst not encroach on the rights of the Kings of England, nor did mind any trade in navigation, nor delighted in their navy strength, nor had they men to man their few ships. Now 'tis otherwise, for that King is busy to increase his trade and to settle plantations in several parts, and increase his trade and navy at a strange rate, is rich, and values not wronging his neighbours for his own profit, and certainly will use all ways to gain such a nursery for seamen. Knowing that country may be kept at little charge, so it may be kept, if taken, from us, especially if the planters are taken off as some have begged. Some say if St. John's harbour were taken there are fishing places enough beside, as if they could not as well take the smaller and weaker as the greater, Havre-de-Grace to the north, and Friezeland to the south, and so command the whole country. But the main thing to consider is, if the French should take it, whereas now they employ 400 ships and 18,000 men, and we 300 ships and 15,000 men, they would then employ 700 ships and 30,000 seamen and others, and we be shut out of that nursery and its returns of 700,000*l.* yearly, for which is not carried out of the kingdom 100*l.* per annum, which the French would make better worth than 1,400,000*l.* yearly; and we that have been so flourishing a nation for seamen, have his Majesty at a loss to man his ships of war, whilst the French King shall have at his devotion 30,000 men, which will man 90 ships. Who would believe that any English noble spirit would plead with his Majesty against having a strength in those parts, we having so dearly paid for it by leaving places of concernment without forts, and power to withstand an enemy. Besides if the French gain this to what he possessed already, Canada, Nova Scotia, and other places, he would be an exceeding bad neighbour to New England, New York, and Virginia; and therefore as 500 men more would secure that harbour, country, and trade, he presents it to his Majesty's favour, especially at this juncture, and when their neighbours are lower they may be called off if thought convenient. Endorsed, "Capt. Robinson's reply to the answer of the West Countrymen about Newfoundland, 1670. Recd. in 1676." 2 large pp. closely written. (Col. Papers, Vol. XXV., No. 110.)

p. 1765

Privy Council
Documents

Volume IV
Contents

No. 730.

REPORT OF CAPT. DAVIS OF H.M.S. "SUCCESS."

[9 Sept., 1671.]

On board of H.M.S.
Mary Rose in the Bay of Bulls.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, AM. & W. I., 1669-1674, p. 257.

616. (Capt. Davis) to (M. Wren). Arrived 3rd August with the Success, and sent word to the West and South that the first convoy would be ready board of to sail 15th August, and that the writer should sail 20th September. It was 20th August before any ships arrived, and on 28th the first convoy sailed with 23 vessels. The fishers generally have not made above 140 kintalls per boat, unless in the Bay of Consumption (? Conception) where they have made over 200. Has now 15 vessels, and waits for the rest, and will not miss any opportunity of following his orders. Great complaint by the inhabitants against the West Countrymen's petition for removing them into the woods; but it is only the West Countrymen that are in fault, for he sees the stages for fuel broken down, and the transportation of men to New England is done by the masters of the fishing ships, who employ them to the end of the year, and then to save provisions and freight pack them away to New England. Is sorry to see how many have gone this year, and fears that most of the inhabitants, being so affrighted with this order for their removing, if not speedily prevented, will repair to the French, who fortify two places, keeping in one fort 50 soldiers in continual pay, and are very kind to the English who come to them, the King of France if they require it sending them a protection and giving them a year's salary. Encloses the report of a French merchant, who affirms it on his oath. "By Mr. Parker and Mr. Herneman of Dartmouth." 4 pp. Endorsed, "Capt. Davis to Mr. Wren. . . Recd. on the 8th December 1676." (Col. Paper, Vol. XXVII., No. 27.)

Privy Council
Documents

Volume IV
Contents

No. 731.

ORDER FOR FORTIFICATIONS IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

[4 Feb.,
1672.]

Feb. 4.
Whitehall.
1672.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, AM. & W. I., 1669-1674, p. 328.

751. Order of the King in Committee of Council for Foreign Affairs. On the suit of the merchants and traders to Newfoundland from the several western parts. Said merchants and traders being called in, his Majesty declared they should have liberty to proceed in their voyages to that fishery, and have protection allowed them according to regulations heretofore settled and herein set forth; provided the master of every such vessel first give security, on penalty of 250*l.* to each vessel of 100 tons, and so proportionably, to carry all sorts of fit and necessary instruments for fortifying St. John's in said island, and other places, viz., each ship of 100 tons to the value of 5, and so proportionably, and also to carry 20 fire-arms with ammunition; to obey his Majesty's frigates appointed for their convoy; and not to carry more men than their proportion, and punctually to return them at the end of the voyage, mortality excepted; and those that go to market, as they end their market voyage. 1 p. (Col. Entry Bk., No. XCIII., f o. 51.)

[5 May, 1675.]

ORDER FOR REVIVAL OF REGULATIONS

OF 1670-1671 WITH ADDITIONS.

Newfoundland.
(1023.) Whitehall,
5 May, 1675.

ACTS OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL COLONIAL SERIES, 1613-1680, p. 621.

The Council approve and direct the issue of all necessary orders in accordance with the following report of the Committee:—

Wee have in Obedience to your Majesties Order in Councill of the 12th of February last past taken into Consideration the Petition of Mr. Hinton, and all the papers presented by him touching the necessity of placing a Governor at Newfound Land for the advantage of that ffishery. Wee have also in pursuance of the said Order perused all the Petitions, Papers, Orders, and Resolutions touching this Affayre, either as the same hath been Transacted formerly at this Board, or before the late Councill of Plantations.

Wee have also sent Advertisement to all the Western Ports, and did for severall dayes heare their Agents, and other Principall Merchants of the Exchange concerned in their Opinions and discourses either way, some for the Encouragement of a Colony and Governor, but many more against both; And the Points that seemed to be made out very clear vnto vs were as

1. That the French have of late yeares applied themselves with great industry, and publick encouragement vnto the Fishing Trade, vpon one of the sides of Newfound Land, so that the English serve none of the Marketts of France as formerly they did, but on the contrary the French are found in many other of the Foreigne Marketts as early as the English themselves.

2. That the People of New-England, do on their own Coast take great quantityes of large Fish, about sixty Thousand Kintalls a yeare, and by encreasing the Trade there, bring much detriment to that of Newfoundland.

3. That for some late yeares the Fish has fayled in Newfound Land, the Adventurers have lost many of their Shippes in the late Warrs, especially in that with Spain, and the late Warrs have much diminished the hands which vsed to take ffish. The Inhabitants and Planters, who contrary to their old

Charter live within Six Miles of the Sea, have destroyed the woods, do continue to destroy whatever the Adventurers leave yearly behinde; They possesse early the Places of greatest Conveniency before the Adventurers returne, and which is very pernicious do most of them sell wine and Brandy, whereby the Seamen are withdrawne form their Labor, and many seduced to stay in the place, while their Farnilyes do thereby become Burthens to their respective Parishes at home.

p. 1769

From all which Reasons 'twas easy to beleive there was a decay of the Trade as to England, and that the Complaynst thereof were very just. But as to Mr. Hintons proposall for curing all by a Governor We could not finde that a Governor could cure any part.

1. Because the Planters who are now there in Number Eight Hundred or One Thousand, do live scattered in Five and Twenty severall Harbours betwixt Renouse and Bonavista, which are allmost Eighty Leagues assunder.

2. That in all the Winter when the abuses are many of them done, there is no passing by Sea or Land from One Place to another, so that neere Forty Harbours would have no Government though a Governor were in the Country.

3. That besides the Charge of Forts, and of a Governor which the Fish Trade cannot support, 'tis needless to have any such defence against Forreigners, the Coast being defended in the Winter by the Ice, and must in Summer by the resort of your Majesties Subjects, for that place will allwayes belong to him that is superior at Sea; So that vnlesse wee saw proper Reasons for a Coloney, We could see none for a Governor; And against a Coloney there are not onely the rigours of the Climate, and infertility of the Land, which, as is alleaged, oblige all those who are there all the Winter to Idlenes, and inclines them to Debauchery, But they cheifely consume the Products of New England, the Shipping of which Country furnish them with French Brandy, and Madera Wines in exchange for their Fish, without depending for any supply from hence; And We had reasons to presume that if the Climate and Soyle could favor a Colony, they would rather adhere to New England, and in time tread in the same stepps, to the losse of those many advantages, which at present, by the Method things are in, we yet enjoy. For We could not hope for a like Regulation on the Product of this Place, as on the Products of your Majesties other Plantations, because Fish cannot beare the Charge of comeing home, but must goe directly to the Marketts abroad.

Our next enquiries were concerning the French, and by what Methods they proceeded in this Trade, and We have not found that they do otherwise manage it, then by the Adventurers Ships that yearely goe out and returne back; 'tis true they have a Fort at Placencia in the South part of the Island, with some Gunns in it, which are to defend them from the Indians, who at certayn times come off from the myane and molest them in their Beavor Trade, for which Trade onely, and not for ffishing they doe Inhabite there; and we were the more convinced herein when by computing and Comparing the Charge of Catching Fish to the Adventurer, and to the Planter, Wee found the former could doe it cheaper then the latter; which turn'd our whole Enquiry to finde out whether the French have any thing which enables them to Catch Fish Cheaper, or any Art in the preserving, to make them sell dearer then the English; And by the various Accounts of the Merchants who appeared (though differing in Opinion) Wee had reason to beleive, that the English do in generall still preserve a superiority in the Trade, They Catch it as cheap, Cure it as well, come as early to Market, can there sell as dear, and afford it as cheap as any the French can doe.

p. 1770

So that after Consideration of the whole Matter, We had recourse vnto those Rules which were formerly on like occasion settled in Councill by your Majesties Order of the 10th of March 1670-1 and We found them all so proper, and effectuall for the advantage of this Trade, as to need onely some few Additions to make the Trade revive and flourish, And those Additions We humbly propose to your Majestie as followeth.

1. That all Plantation and Inhabiting in that Country be discouraged; And in order herevnto, That the Commander of your Majesties Convoy have Commission to Declare at his goeing this yeare, your Majesties will and pleasure to all the Planters, that they come voluntarily away, and in Case of disobedience, that your Majestie will beginn the next yeare and so from time to time as often as your Convoys are sent thither, to putt in execution the ancient Charter, which strictly forbids any planters to Inhabit within six Miles of the Shore from Cape Race to Cape Bonavista; and finding any of them within that District, to Seize, bring away, or send them home as Offenders, to Answer their Contempts, and the Mischeifs before recited, which have been occasioned by such their Inhabiting contrary to the Charter; And in this single point (as We humbly conceive) does consist the validity and good effect of the whole Regulation.

2. We further humbly Offer that the Convoy who is now goeing, may have Instructions to help and assist those in their Transportation who shall be desirous vpon this intimation of your Majesties pleasure to returne home; And to Declare, that in Case they shall rather chuse to betake themselves to any of your Majesties Forreigne Plantations, That the Governors are now writ vnto, and Commanded by your Majestie to receive them with all favor, and afford particular help and assistance towards their settlement; and such Letters We humbly propose to be speedily sent vnto the said Governors.

Also that the said Convoy, besides those points wherein he is already Instructed by the Lords of the Admiralty, be further Ordered to enquire if any Strangers doe in this time that they are in warr with each other, come there to Fish vnder the pretext of being English, and in Case of any Jealousy, to enquire into their passes and Sea-Breifes, and by what meanes, or whose Authority they have procured the same. Also to make enquiryes into the State of the French Trade, the Number of their Ships, and whether the same are this yeare more or lesse then formerly they have been; And of all his Observations and Journalls there, to send a Duplicate vnto this Committee.

3. That your Majesties Council Learned be directed (as formerly they were) to enquire into and review the Powers formerly given by your Majesties Charter of Confirmation for the Trying of Treasons, Felonies, Murthers &c. done in that place, and that if the same be in any thing deficient, or Inconvenient, that they Report what sort of Judicature would be convenient to be Erected for the hearing and determining of such, offences.

p. 1771

4. And when the same is Reported, and your Majestie shall in Councill settle and determine into what hands the administration of that Power shall be placed, That then the Mayors of the Westerne Ports be required to Renew their Charter, with the additionall Rules and Powers above-mentioned. Also that the same Charter may be printed, and a Proclamation Issue to enforce the observation of all that shall be established thereby, for the better exciting of all persons to their Dutyes who are concerned therein, or Obliged to take notice of the same.

Whitehall Aprill 15th 1675. Anglesey, Craven, G. Carteret, J: Williamson, Robert Southwell.

[24 July, 1675.]

REPORT OF SIR JOHN BERRY

ON CONDITIONS IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

July 24.
Bristol frigate in
St. John's Harbour,
Newfoundland,
1675.

CAL. STATE PAPERS AM & W. I., 1675-1676, p. 259

628. Sir John Berry to (Sec. Sir Joseph Williamson). Arrived 11th instant in St. John's Harbour and found H.M.S. Swann with 40 ships, the greatest part bound to a market. Has sent two able persons as far as Capes Bonavista and de Race to call in all the harbours, bays, creeks, &c., and take exact account as directed, and to declare his Majesty's pleasure to all the Planters. Has already done it in this Harbour, and they promised obedience, but the greatest part are too poor to remove unless his Majesty will send a ship for them, and at last they must be put on the Parish wherever they come. A labouring man will get in a summer season near 20 l., and their daily food comes out of the sea, while such a person would not get 3 l. in England. Has made diligent inquiry into all those things laid to the Planters' charge by the Merchants and finds most of them false, manifested in this single point. Summoned the Admirals and Commanders of 45 ships, and told them he thought it would be convenient that no stages, flakes, storehouses, or anything else should be pulled down, but preserved till next season; several old and experienced Commanders were for the preservation of all, but three-fourths were for taking them down, making many pretences that they had been at great charge and labour to build them, and why should another enjoy their goods next year? In conclusion told them his Majesty's Charter forbids that any spike or nail should be drawn, but everything entirely preserved, and he would take particular notice of those that should offend, and acquaint his Majesty therewith. All these things are laid to the Planters' charge. It is a common practice with the Commanders to brew beer, wood their ships, and sell the remains of the stages and houses to the sack ships. Has had experience of it 20 years since in a voyage here, and taken them in the very act of doing it since he came here. The charge laid to the Planters of enticing the men to stay behind and neglect their families is as true as the former; for when the voyage is ended, to save 30s. or 40s. for their passage, the Commanders persuade the Planters to receive them, and the seamen to tarry behind, as some Commanders have confessed, pretending they knew no order to the contrary. As to buying wine and brandy from New England in exchange for fish, has ordered them all to give account of all the wine, brandy, and other goods they have bought this year, with names of ship, master, and where she belongs. These

p. 1773

Planters are not so bad as the Merchants make them, but some “self-ended” persons have a mind to engross all into their own hands. It is the opinion of several experienced Commanders that if those people be removed from this Country, his Majesty's subjects would in few years find the ill-effects of it, for undoubtedly the greatest part would settle among the French, where they are already invited with great promises, or else for New England; they implore his Majesty's favour to continue, and promise all obedience to what orders shall be given. Several of the ships whose Merchants made such a clamour for convoy are scattered up and down, and going away without taking any notice of him. Designs to sail in August for the Bay of Bulls, there to make up the fleet, and to sail thence 20th Sept. at furthest, unless the ships cannot be ready. The fishers are like to make an indifferent good voyage, having taken about 200 kintalls per boat; the “Caplinge scoole” of bait is gone, which is a great detriment. St. John's is an excellent Harbour, large enough for 100 sail, with a narrow entrance and very high land; a small charge may fortify it to keep out a considerable fleet, and several think that, if the inhabitants be taken away, the French will soon possess it, to the loss of several advantages his Majesty's subjects yet enjoy, it being in the middle of the land. Has inquired in this Port, and cannot find that any New England vessels have been here with the goods before mentioned; but, on the contrary, that New England has taken good quantities of those goods from hence, the product of which is shipped in English vessels for a market. Has given account to Mr. Sec. Coventry and Mr. Pepys to the same effect. Endorsed, “R. 23, Aug. 1675.” 3 pp. (Col. Papers, Vol. 34, No. 118.)

No. 734.

REPORT OF SIR JOHN BERRY

[12 Sept., 1675.]

ON CONDITIONS IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

Sept. 12.
H.M.S. Bristol,
Bay Bulls,
Newfoundland.
1675.

CAL. STATE PAPERS AM & W. I., 1675-1676, p. 275

665. Sir John Berry to Secretary Sir Joseph Williamson. Refers to his former letter of 24th July (see ante, No. 628). Encloses a perfect account of all the fishing ships employed by the merchant adventurers from Cape de Race to Cape Bonavista, with their boats, men, and where bound. This year there are 175 ships, with 4,309 men, and 688 boats which at 250 kentalls per boat at 12s. per kentall amounts to 103,200 l.; 7 hhds. of train oil per boat at 40s. per hhd. is 9,816 l.; and 20 kentalls of core fish per boat at 5s. per kentall is 3,440 l.; which in all comes to 116,272 l. Has likewise sent an exact account of the planters, who are 1,655 men, women, and children, they employ 277 boats, and cured upwards of 69,250 kentalls of merchantile fish, most of it shipped in English vessels, which, with their core fish and oil will amount to 46,813 l., upwards of one-third of the fish taken by the merchant adventurers. By this his Honour may see what a loss his Majesty will have if those poor people should remove, for they design to settle amongst the French on the other side of Cape de Race, unless his Majesty will let them continue. Stands in admiration how people could appear before his Majesty with so many untruths against the inhabitants. It was never known since the memory of the oldest man using the trade that any New England ship brought wine or brandy for exchange for fish, only some provisions, taking those goods for payment. For better satisfaction, encloses a list of all ships that have furnished them this year, with master's names, and where they belong. The masters are the beginners in destroying the stages, and to save 30s. for a seaman's passage care not how many are left behind. Believes his Majesty will never have a regulation of this fishery unless a governor be settled, for the strongest treads down the weakest. Most of the ships bound to a market are gone away two or three in company, scorning convoy. Shall not be above 30 sail, and the weather proving ill for curing will keep them till the 20th or 25th instant. Has sent home one Jno. Bastard, who was apprehended for the supposed murder of John Tozer, his fellow boatman, in May before his arrival, and having examined the matter, has bound over four witnesses to prosecute. Cannot get any certain account of the French and their ships; they have two men-of-war of 40 and 30 guns for convoy, and

p. 1775

rendezvous at Trepassey, near Cape de Race; the St. Maio fleet of 20 sail go without convoy, being all considerable ships, and about 40 or 50 with convoy. Endorsed, "r. 11 Oct. 1675." Encloses, 665. 1., II. Duplicates of inclosures Nos. 1., II. to Sir J. Berry's letter of this date to Sir Robert Southwell. Together, 14 pp. (Col. Papers, Vol. 35, Nos. 16, 16 I., II.)

No. 735.MINUTES OF THE COMMITTEE OF TRADE AND PLANTATIONS[4 Dec.,
1675.]Dec. 4,
Whitehall,
1675.

ON BERRY'S REPORT

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS 1675-1676, p. 310

731. Minutes of the Committee of Trade and Plantations. Mr. Cranfield's letter of 22nd Sept. last from Jamaica touching the arrival of his Majesty's subjects from Surinam reported, but not read; also his unfortunate killing of Thomas Yonge, chief mate of the America, and how he had been tried and cleared. Debate concerning the letter of Sir John Berry from Newfoundland of 12th September touching the misinformation of the Western men on which several of the Lords' resolutions were founded, which was read, and the complaint of Sir John Vowell and Messrs. Parrot and Ryder, &c., that the inhabitants of Newfoundland who were intended to be removed had taken such encouragement from what Sir John Berry had intimated to them, that they send to their friends to come over, and talk as if a colony and plantation were to be encouraged, on which the By-boat keepers throng over, getting 100 or 150 men into a ship of 100 tons, where 50 are sufficient and so the Adventurers get no men; and they pressed that the order passed might be enforced, and all masters obliged to give bond for the return of their seamen, so that at least no encouragement be given for increasing the inhabitants; and that an order might be strict for confining a ship of 100 tons to 50 men, which would destroy the By-boat men, who unless they could fit out more boats at their coming to Newfoundland could not live by it; whereas the Adventurer rides his own horse or takes up money at much less per cent. Objection of Mr. Sec. Williamson that this design was to exclude the poor from being sharers in anything, and these gentlemen of the West Country were shown to be very faulty, who having for five years had his Majesty's allowance for additional rules had neglected to pass them; they acknowledged that the fault was their own, but that now they would close all. 2 pp. (Col. Entry Book, No. CIV., 46, 47.)

[27 Jany., 1676.]

Confirmacond le
Newfoundland
TradersCHARTER OF THE WEST COUNTRY ADVENTURERSFOR THE FISHERY AT NEWFOUNDLAND. WESTMINSTER, 27TH JANUARY, 1676.

Extct.

PATENT ROLL. 27 CHAS. II. PAR 11. NO. 12

Charles the second by the grace of God &c whereas our late Royall ffather of blessed memory by his l'res Patentés under the greate Seale of England bearing date at Westm' the tenth day of ffebruary in the nineth Traders yeare of his reigne Thereby reciteing that the Region or Country called Newfoundland had been acquired to the dominion of his Progenitors which he held & his people had many yeares resorted to those partes where & in Extct. the Coastes adioyning they employed themselves in ffishing whereby a greate number of his People had been sett on worke and the Navigaõn & marriners of this Realme had been much increased & his subiectes resorting thither one by the other and the natives of those partes were orderly & gently intreated until then of late some of his subiectes of the Realme of England planting themselves in that Countrey & there resideing & inhabiting upon conceite that the wronges or Iniuries done there either on shoare or on the sea adioyning they could not bee here impeached And the rather for that hee or his Progenitors had not thentofore given laws to the Inhabitantes there & by that example his subiectes resorting thither iniured one another and used all manner of exesse to the greate hinderance of the voyage & comon damage of this Realme ffor p'venting of such inconveniences for the future hee did thereby declare in what manner his people in Newfoundland & upon the Sea adioyning & the Bayes Creekes or ffresh Rivers there should bee guided & governed And did Ordeyne and we by l'res Patentés under our greate Seale of England beareing date the six & twentieth day of January in the twelfth yeare of our reigne did renew ratify & confirme the lawes following in all thinges after specified comanding that the same should bee obeyed & putt in execuõn.

ffirst If any man on the land there should kill another Or if any should secretly or forceably steal the goods of any other to the value of forty shillinges hee should bee forthwith apprehended & arrested deteyned & brought Prisoner into England and the crime comitted by him should bee made knowne to the Earle marshall of England for the tyme being to whome the Delinquent should be delivered as Prisoner.

Secondly That noe Ballast Presse Stones or any thing else hurtfull to the harbours should bee throwne out to the p'iudice of the said harbours

p. 1778

but that it should be carryed ashoare & layd where Itt might doe (noe) annoyance.

Thirdly That noe Person whatsoever either ffisherman or Inhabitants should destroy deface or worke any spoyle or detriment to any stage cooke roome fflakes spykes nayles or any other thing that belonged to any the stages whatsoever either att the end of the voyage when hee had done & was to departe the Countrey or to any such Stages as hee should fall withall at his comeing into the Countrey but that hee or they content themselves with such stage or stages onely as were needfull for them and that for repayreing of such stages as hee or they tooke they should fetch Tymber out of the woodes and not to doe itt with the ruining and tareing downe of other stages.

ffourthly That according to the Auncient custome every shipp or ffisher that first entreth a harbour in behalfe of shipp bee Admirall of the said harbour wherein for the time being hee should reserve onley soe much Beach or ffakes or both as was needfull for the number of boates which hee should use with an Overplus onely for one boate more then hee needed as a Priviledge for his first comeing And that every shipp comeing after content himselfe with what hee should have necessary use for without keeping or deteyning any more to the p'iudice of the others next comeing And that any that were possessed of several places in severall harbours with intent to keepe them all before they could resolve upon which of them to choose should bee bound to resolve or send advice to such Aftercomers in those places as expected his resolucon and that within forty eight houres if the weather soe served that the sayd Aftercomers might likewise choose their places & soe none receive p'iudice by others delay.

ffifthly That noe p'son cutt out deface or any wayes alter or change the markes of any Boates or Train fattes whereby to defraud the right owner & that noe person convert to his owne use the said boates or Trainfattes soe belonging to others without their Consentes nor remove nor take them from the places where they should bee left by the Owners Except in case of necessity & then to give notice thereof unto the Admirall & others whereby the right Owners might know what was become of them.

Sixthly That noe person doe diminish take away purloyne or steale any the ffish or Trayne or salt putt in the Caske Trainfattes or Cooke roomes or other house in any the harbours or ffishing places of the Countrey or any other Provision belonging to the ffishing trade or shipp.

Seventhly That noe person sett ffire on any of the woodes of the Countrey or worke any detriment or destructiō to the same by rending of the trees either for the Sealeing of shippes holdes or Roomes on shoare or for any other uses Except for the covering of Roomes for Cookeroomes to dresse their meate in and those roomes not to extend above eighteen foot in length at the most.

p. 1779

Eighthly That noe man cast anchor or doe ought else hurtfull which may breede annoyance or hinder the hayleing of sayles for bayting places accustomed thereunto.

Ninethly. That noe persons robb the nettes of others out of any drift Boate or drover for bayte by night nor take away any bayte out of their ffishing boates by their shippes side nor robb or steale any of their nettes or any parte of them.

Tenthly That noe person sett upp any Taverne for selling of wine beere strong water sider or Tobacco to entertayne the ffishermen because It was found that by such meanes they were debauched neglecting their labours and poor illgovern'd men not onely spend most of their wares before they come home upon which the lives & maintenance of their wives & children depended but were likewise hurtfull in divers other wayes as by neglecting & makeing themselves unfitt for their labors by purloyning & stealeing from their owners & by makeing unlawfull shift to supply their disorders &c which they frequently followed since those occasions had p'sented themselves.

Eleventhly That upon Sundayes the Company assemble in meet places & heare divine service to bee said by some of the masters of the shippes or some others which Prayers should bee such as were in the booke of Comon Prayers. And for the encouragement of our subiectes in the said Newfoundland & in the seas adioyning and for the benefitt of the said trade there wee did streightly charge prohibitt & forbidd all & every the Owners of shippes tradeing in the said Newfoundland ffishery That they nor any of them should carry or transporte or p̄mitt or suffer any person or p̄sons to bee carryed or transported in any of their shippes to the said Newfoundland other than such as were of his or their owne or other shippes Company or belonging thereunto and upon the said Shippes hire & employment or such as were to plant & did intend to settle there.

And because that speedy punishnt might bee inflicted upon the Offenders against the lawes & Constitutiōns aforesaid wee did Ordeyne as was formerly ordeyned by our said late Father That every of the mayors of Southton Weymouth & Melcombe Regis lyme Plymouth Dartmouth East Looe ffoy and Barnestable for the tyme being might take cognizance of the Complayntes made of any Offenders against any of the lawes or Ordinances aforesaid upon the land And by the Oath of Witnesses examine the trueth thereof & award amendes to the Parties greeved & punish the Delinquentes by ffine & Imprisonmt or either of them And of their goods found in the Partes of Newfoundland or in the sea cause satisfac̄on thereof to bee made by warrant under their handes and seales. And that the Vice admiralls in our Counties of Southon Dorsett Devon and Cornewall upon Complaint made of any of the ꝑmisses comitted upon the Seas should speedily & effectually proceed against the Offenders. Alsoe wee did will & Ordeyne that those lawes & Ordinances should stand in force & bee putt in due execūon until wee should otherwise provide and Ordeyne As in and by the said severall letters Patentes may appeare.

p. 1780

Now know yee that wee upon the humble Petīon of the merchantes Owners & masters of shippes & Inhabitanes of the westerne parts of this kingdome the Newfoundland in ffishing voyages And after due considerāon had of the best wayes & meanes of regulateing secureing & improveing the fishing trade in Newfoundland have thought fitt to ratify & confirme the said lawes & orders And accordingly wee doe hereby ratify & confirme the same other then such of them as are hereby altered or otherwise provided for And wee doe further also for us our heires and successors grant declare & enioyne as an addīon & alterāon to the said former lawes & Rules for the better government of the said ffishery the severall powers rules & Orders following that is to say ffirst That all our Subiectes of the kingdome of England shall & may forever hereafter peaceably hold and enjoy the ffreedome of takeing bayte & fishing in any of the Rivers lakes Creekes harbors or Roades in or about Newfoundland or any of the Islandes adioyneing thereto with liberty to goe on shoare in any parte of the Newfoundland or the said Islandes for the Cureing salting drying & Husbanding of their ffish & makeing of Oyle & for the cutting of all manner of wood & trees for the building & makeing of stages Roomes Trainfattes hurdles Shipps Boates & other necessaries for themselves & their Servantes Seamen & ffishermen & all thinges which may be usefull or advan- tageous to their ffishing trade as fully & freely as at any tyme heretofore hath been used & enjoyed there by any of the Subiectes of our Royall Pre- decessors soe as they submitt unto & observe all such rules & Orders as now are or hereafter shallbee established by us our heires or successors for the government of the said ffishery in Newfoundland.

secondly That noe aliene or stranger shall or shalbe permitted to take Bayte or ffish in any of the Rivers lakes Creekes harbours or Roades in Newfoundland betweene Cape Race & Cape bonavista or in any of the Islandes thereunto adioyning.

thirdly That according to the establishment of our Royall ffather in the thirteenth yeare of his Reigne noe Planter or Inhabitant in or upon the said Newfoundland shall or shalbee permitted to fell cutt downe rook upp wast burne or destroy any wood or Timber trees or erect or make any houses buildinges gardens &c or Inhabitt or Plant within six miles of the shoare or in any parte of the said Newfoundland Betweene the Cape de Race lying in or about forty six degrees of North latitude and the Cape de bona vista lying in or about forty nine & an halfe degrees of North latitude now upon any Island within tenn Leagues of the shoare betweene the said Capes.

ffourthly That noe Planter or Inhabitant in Newfoundland doe or shall take upp or possesse any of the stages Cooke roomes & Beaches or places for takeing bayte or ffishing before the arrivall of the ffishermen out of England and that they bee all provided for.

p. 1781

ffifthly That noe master or owner of any ffishing shipp doe transporte or carry any Seamen ffishermen or other Persons in his Shipp to Newfoundland other then such as are truely belonging to his or their shippes Company & such as are engaged in the voyage and have or shall have share or shares or hyre of the sayd shipp.

Sixthly That noe master or Owner of any ffishing shipp doe transporte or carry in any one shipp for a ffishing voyage more than sixty persons to one hundred Tunns burthen of the said shipp & doe proportionably for all shippes of a greater or lesser burthen.

seventhly That every ffisherman yeerly carryed out of England bee a Greenman and not a Seaman And that the masters & Owners of all ffishing shippes tradeing out of England to Newfoundland according to the number of men in their respective shippes doe provide in England Victualls & other necessaries (salt onely excepted) for the whole voyage or ffishing Season for themselves and Companies & putt the same on shippboard before the going out of Porte here.

Eightly That noe ffishing shipp or Company doe departe out of England directly for Newfoundland on any ffishing voyage in any yeare before the first day of March now to the Isles of Cape de Verde intending from thence to Newfoundland before the fifteenth day of January.

Ninthly That from henceforward all masters of ffishing shipp trading to Newfoundland shall yearly before the begining of their Voyage give bond to us our heires or successors before the mayors for the tyme being of the respective Portes of Southton Poole Weymouth Melcombe Regis lyme Exeter Dartmouth Plymouth Eastlooe flowery fflalmouth Biddeford Barnstable & Bristol & all other Portes & Townes upon the Coast of England respectively according to the Porte or place from whence they shall sett out of the penalty of one hundred poundes condiconed that they shall not carry out any seamen ffishermen or other Persons other then such as are truely belonging to his or their or other shipp Company & such as are engaged in the voyage & have share or shares or hire of or in the said shipp or shipp respectively And that they shall bring or cause to bee brought backe into England all such seamen ffishermen & other persons as they shall carry out (mortality & danger of Seas excepted) And alsoe such persons as shall bee imployed from the Newfoundland in English shipp with ffish for markt voyages provided nevertheles that if any of the said seamen ffishermen or p̄sons aforesaid shall runn away or desert their shipp The master or masters of such shipp or shipp paying such persons share or Shares or hire to the major of the place from whence the said shipp sett out shalbee discharged of his or their bondes respectively Or if noe Complaint shall bee made against the said masters in three months after their returne from the said voyage then his or their bondes to be delivered up unto them respectively.

Tenthly That noe master of any ffishing shipp or others doe take up or use any Stage already built in any Porte harbour or Bay between Cape Race & Cape bona Vista with a lesse number of men then twenty five who are to bee of one intire Company And that noe ffishermen or Seamen carried out as aforesaid bee or shalbee suffered to remaine in Newfoundland in the winter after the ffishing voyage or Season is ended.

Eleventhly That the Admiralls viceadmiralls & Reare Admiralls of & in every porte or harbour in Newfoundland for the tyme being bee & are hereby authorized & required to p'serve Peace & good govenmt amongst the Seamen and ffishermen in their respective harbours as well as on the shoare to see the rules & Orders concentering the regulacon of the ffishery duely putt in Execucon and to cause all Offenders to bee apprehended that they may be punished according to their demerittes.

Twelfthly That the Admiralls Vice Admiralls & Rear Admiralls in their respective harbours Bayes &c shall and they are hereby according to auncie(nt) custome impowered to apprehend & secure all Offenders for any Crime comitted in Newfoundland on shoare or att Sea & to bring them into England.

Thirteenthly That the severall Admiralls in their respective harbours and Bayes in Newfoundland doe on or about the twentieth day of September yeerly publish in their said harbours & upon the shoare these our Orders & Comandes forbidding all seamen or ffishermen to stay or remaine in or upon the said Newfoundland after the last day of October.

ffourteenthly That the said Admiralls doe yeerly keepe Journalls of their proceedings there And att their Return into England deliver Coppies of them with an Account of the Number of Shippes Boates Stages Trainfattes &c and of the Seamen & ffishermen belonging to & imployed in their respective harbours unto our Councell for forreigne Plantacons. And lastly because there is at p'sent noe Court marshall in England wee doe therefore further require & Comand That if any man in Newfoundland shall kill another Or if any shall secretly or forceably steale the goodes of any other to the value of forty shillinges hee shall forthwith be apprehended & arrested deteyned & brought Prisoner into England and the Crime comitted by him made known to one of our Principall Secretaries of State To the end that due Order may be given to punish such Offenders according to law In Wittness &c Wittnes the King at Westm the twenty seventh day of January by Writt of Privy Seale.

Privy Council
Documents

Volume IV
Contents

April 19.
Whitehall.
1676

No. 737.

ORDER IN COUNCIL

DIRECTING THAT INFORMATION BE OBTAINED RESPECTING NEWFOUNDLAND.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, AM. & W. I., 1675-1676, p. 378

891. Order of the King in Council. That several heads of inquiries to the Commander-in-Chief of his Majesty's ships now going to Newfoundland approved by the Lords of Trade and Plantations are hereby referred to the Lords of the Admiralty to give instructions accordingly. Then follow the heads of inquiry concerning the trade of the French there, the trade with New England, the number of planters, destruction of woods and stages, the boat-keepers, number of ships, &c. (Col. Entry Bk., Vol. XCVI., pp. 63-65.)

No. 738.EVIDENCE OF SIR JOHN BERRY AND CAPTAIN
DAVIS1676
Aug. 8.
Whitehall.

RESPECTING NEWFOUNDLAND.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, AM. & W. I., 1675-1676, p. 439.

1015. Journal of the Lords of Trade and Plantations. Sir John Berry and Captain Davies attended to give account of the present condition of Newfoundland, with their opinions concerning the removal or encouragement of inhabitants there. Sir John Berry's letter of 12th September last again read (see ante, No. 666), and Sir John asserts all is true, and Captain Davies is of the same opinion for encouragement of a Colony for security of the fishing trade, or else the French would take the advantage to make themselves masters of all the harbours and fishing places, or would entice the English to settle amongst them. That the abuses complained of are wholly occasioned by the West country adventurers. That the masters of ships at their departure pull down their stages for firing on board their ships, and leave their men merely to save charges of returning them to England. Captain Davies says he had orders some few years past to carry guns thither for strengthening the harbours, but by reasons of the war with Holland those designs were laid aside. Further consideration deferred till next winter, since no ships go for Newfoundland till next spring, when the West countrymen are to be summoned to give answer, and, in the meantime, Sir John Berry to see their former reasons for removal of the Colony. (Col. Entry Bk., Vol. CIV., pp. 193, 194.)

March 3-
4.
Whitehall.
1677

No. 739.CONSIDERATION OF NEWFOUNDLAND AFFAIRS BY LORDS OF TRADE.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, AM. & W. I., 1677-1680, pp. 76-8

215. Journal of Lords of Trade and Plantations. Letter read from Sir Jonathan Atkins of 6/16 Dec. (see preceding Volume, No. 1174). It is agreed to report to His Majesty as follows (see ante, No. 210), it not appearing that His Majesty had ever sent any stores to Barbadoes for which payment was not to be made there. Also was read another letter from Governor Atkins of 8/18 February (see ante, No. 48).

In pursuance of the King's order (see ante, No. 97) their Lordships met to find out what is proper to be done for security of the fishery of Newfoundland, and settlement of that plantation, both parties concerned called in; their Lordships' report of 15th April 1675 (see previous volume of Calendar, No. 524) and Sir John Berry's letter to Sir Robert Southwell having first been read, Counsel on behalf of the Adventurers argues that the manner of catching fish by ships is very ancient and the plantation settled of late years, since which the fishery is very much decayed by reasons of abuses committed by the planters. That they debauch the seamen, destroy the stages, and are of no security or strength against any enemy in time of war, and that in time of peace His Majesty's sovereignty is sufficiently provided for by the yearly sending out of ships, by which possession is actually maintained for half the year. That the French have so large a tract of land, and so great conveniency of harbours to exercise their fishery, as that they will not easily be provoked to encroach upon us or disturb our fishery. Mr. Perrot being sworn alleges several instances of injuries he supposes to have been done by the inhabitants to the Adventurers. Benjamin Scutt assures their Lordships the fishing ships are forced to leave England six weeks sooner by reason of damages done by the planters, that of late years the fishery is decreased one half upon the encouragement the inhabitants have received out of England. That upon renewal of the Western Charter two years ago, whereby no person was to inhabit within six miles of the shore, the trade again revived, and last year 7,500 men went out on fishing ships besides those on the sack ships. Mr. Pollexfen also sworn to the same effect. Counsel on behalf of the Planters deny what is alleged against them and offer to give security not to destroy the stages of the fishermen or do them any injury and conceive in case the Plantation ceases, His Majesty can by no means secure his right to the country.

p. 1786

Besides that the planters are already settled there by virtue of former patents, whereby the soil is granted to them. John Downing, as agent for the planters, assures their Lordships he has frequented the island above thirty years, that there is a colony of one hundred and fifty families amounting to sixteen or seventeen thousand souls (sic). That the fishermen belonging to the ships at their departure pull down their stages for firing on board, and ruin the flakes to brew drink. That the planters are very useful to them in keeping their stores, and he had one year six hundred hogsheads of salt in his custody for the fishermen. And by Sir John Berry's order, undertook to preserve their stages preferring the admiral to make good all damages. That it is impossible for the planters to inhabit six miles from the shore, all their houses are near the water and none farther off than a quarter of a mile. He affirms the French have at least 250 families of about 2,000 men and 400 soldiers, that the King of France daily encourages the plantation, so it is much increased since 1670, and the French have at length exempted themselves from the impost of five fish for one hundred and twenty which they paid to the proprietors in Sir David Kirke's time, and during the late usurpation unto the men of war that were sent thither. That the French forts are not maintained for the security of the beaver trade against the Indians, there being none that live, or ever come near the French plantations. That we ought to be more apprehensive of the growth of the French colony as so near to ours, from Placentia Bay to Trinity harbour but three miles. Mr. Downing's account of how the inhabitants employ themselves after the fishing ships are gone away and during the winter season. Captain Davis who had been many years in Newfoundland says if the inhabitants be obliged to desert the island, the French will immediately possess themselves of it and destroy our fishery. Several points may be made defensible, as St. John's Harbour, which is of so great a strength as De Ruyter confessed if there had been six guns mounted he could have done the ships no injury. That the abuses against the charter are practiced by the ships' companies who cut down their stages. All persons being withdrawn their Lordships agree to report to His Majesty according to these several informations, with their opinions that no alteration be made this year in relation to the Colony or the fishery. And Meanwhile that three Commissioners be sent over with the convoys to enquire into the French trade and plantation, and the present complaints.

May
4.

Instructions to be given to said Commissioners considered and all means to be used to get information from France as to their trade and plantation. Report made to His Majesty in Council which is ordered to be referred back to hear the Western men and planters and consider of fit regulations to prevent the adventurers receiving any prejudice from the planters. (Col. Entry Bk., Vol. CV., pp. 31-38.)

Privy Council
Documents

Volume IV
Contents

March 16.
Drury Lane.
1677.

No. 740.

LORD ANGLESEY TO SIR JOS. WILLIAMSON, RESPECTING CONTEMPLATED CHANGES IN REGULATIONS.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, AM. & W. I., 1677-1680, p. 36

91. Lord Anglesey to Secretary Sir Joseph Williamson. Indisposition prevented his going to the Council. Desires him to move for directions to be sent to Newfoundland by the first shipping for all things to continue in that Plantation as they are till His Majesty, upon full consideration, shall settle affairs there as he shall judge best. Several ships from the West have gone already, and others go daily who may disturb affairs there. If orders be not sent to prevent mischief we shall run great hazard to lose that country with the trade and give it up entirely to the French, which he hopes Williamson will prevent by speeding away with orders, the agent attending here from that country. 1 p. (Col. Papers, Vol. XXXIX., No. 46.)

No. 741.

Sept. 15
St. John's,
Newfoundland.
1679.

CHAS. TALBOT'S ANSWERS TO ENQUIRIES

RESPECTING STATE OF FISHERY AT NEWFOUNDLAND.

CAL. STATE PAPERS, AM. & W. I., 1677-1680, p. 417.

1121. Charles Talbot to Sir Robert Southwell. We came so late to Newfoundland that the season for boats to adventure to the northward was past, neither could we get any. What I could learn in answer to the enquiries I have enclosed. Annexed.

1121. 1. Answers to enquiries respecting Newfoundland. (1). The colony consists of about 1,700 men, women, children, and servants. Trade in summer fishing ; in winter sawing of boards, building boats and making oars for the Adventurers. After the ships are gone they generally fish till All Hallowtide. There is furring to the north, but little to the southward. They observe the rules of their charter more than the Adventurers, for they preserve their stages, while the Adventurers people destroy theirs for firewood for the homeward voyage. (2). The inhabitants are not able to subsist, and the less for want of a government to protect them in their labours. From England they get their bread, clothing, malt, flesh and pease, from Ireland both provisions and clothing, from New England tobacco, sugar, molasses, rum, flesh, bread, and flour. What relates to the fishery comes solely from England in English ships. (3). They make no use of the wood except for purposes of the fishery, and building &c.; they do their best to secure the Adventurers' concerns which are left with them, but it is a common practice for the Adventurers to rifle the stages and rooms and boats to fit themselves, so I am informed, and the fact is not denied by some of the masters. (4). Few of the Colony keep above three boats, and none of them take up more room than is convenient; far from being prejudicial the trade could not be so well managed without them. (5). The boat-keepers left behind must be esteemed part of the Colony, but there are many that pay their passages out and home, and fish the season. These cannot be prejudicial to the Adventurers' concerns, though when the stages are ruined by the ships' companies I suppose the colonists make bold with the rest for firewood. (6). The Colony and bye-boats are supplied with brandy, wine, salt, &c., from

p. 1789

France, Spain and Portugal, but only in English ships.

(7). The country is mostly barren and cumbered with wood. Winters are so severe and long as not to afford winter corn. In summer they might do somewhat, but servants' wages are so excessive that clearing ground and sowing corn would not be profitable. It is a Colony not of husbandmen but fishermen. (8). New England trades with Newfoundland for fish. It is false that the fishermen are debauched by the Colony and forced to hire themselves for satisfaction of their debts; but as some of the servants return yearly to England when the summer voyage is over, they hire others in their places, thereby gaining their passages the year ensuing. (9). It is supposed that the Colony own a fourth part of the fishing boats and generally make better voyages, but their expenses being greater they cannot afford to sell cheaper. (10). Those of New England fish little on this coast, but their own fisheries increase, for they steal fishermen every year from Newfoundland. (11 and 12). Referred to Captain Wright's report. (13). The masters are glad to have the provisions of such men as are willing to stay with the Colony. (14). The Adventurers' people break up their stages, and were beginning at St. John's when we were there, until forbidden. In short, they offer so many abuses to the Colony that some have removed to the French and more threaten to do so.

As to the French,—

They manage the trade as we do by a colony and fishing ships. Placentia is fortified, garrison of twenty men; ten families of England and French and more at other ports in the south; at least 40 ships fish on that side, come sooner, and go for the Straits a month before us. Northward at least 150 ships fish, according to Christopher Martin. They sail for St. Maio and thereabout. No information as to Colony or fortifications. They have a great trade for beaver in Canada and Nova Scotia. As to the present state of the fishery at large:—The trade is prejudiced for want of government. The fishermen are negligent and insolent. If the masters are severe the men desert to New England. The stages are generally destroyed; a great waste of wood and abuse to the Colony. (2). The island is a possession of the British Crown. The Colony preserve it, having been settled by patent as a colony of fishermen with liberty to build stages, houses, or forts if they would, but not to make plantations within six miles of the fishery places so as to preserve the woods necessary for the fishery. (3). If the Colony be not allowed to follow the fishing trade, the King's Customs will suffer, and many of his subjects be lost by removal to the French, to which several have been driven already. (4). In case of war with France one ten-gun frigate might burn all the boats and destroy the Colony. St. John's and a few other harbours may be made impregnable. (5). The way to secure Newfoundland is to settle a Governor and Government, fortify some of the choice harbours, and maintain good garrisons which may be done at little cost to the King.

p. 1790

(6). The Colony has declared its willingness to contribute, but the Adventurers and sack ships should contribute also, as they will profit, say, one penny per quintal or two quintals per boat, and the sack ships to find ammunition as in New England. (7). The sum thus raised will pay for fortifications and garrisons. 3pp. Endorsed. Recd. 13 Feb. Read 21 and 26 Feb. 1679-80. (Col. Papers, Vol. XLIII., No. 121, 121 1.)

No. 742.

AMENDMENTS TO REGULATIONS

Feb.
16,
1680

BY LORDS OF TRADE AND PLANTATIONS.

CAL. STATE PAPERS AM. & W. I., 1677-1680, p. 480

1294. Journal of Lords of Trade and Plantations. Business of Newfoundland, pursuant to Order in Council of 15th instant. Read, an account of the past history and present of the Colony, the Report presented to the King, 15th April 1675, and several reports made by the Convoys annually sent to the Colony, which their Lordships see no reason not to accept as true and authentic. The Western Charter confirmed and enlarged on the 20th January 1675 was examined. Agreed that the first article be put into execution and a more effectual way of judicature be found, whether by the convoys then present, or by such as the King shall appoint. Remaining articles of the preamble agreed to except the 10th, prohibiting the setting up of taverns, which was altered so as to enable the inhabitants to keep taverns and public houses, and leave it to masters of ships to see that their men do not debauch themselves. As to the added portion of the Charter, the following amendments were made :—3rd Article : To allow the planters to live as near the shore as they please. 4th Article : That the inhabitants shall retain possession of their stages, but build no more until the Adventurers be all arrived, after which they may erect new stages which they shall always possess ; and that no Planters or Adventurers meddle with the stages belonging to each other. 5th Article : To permit the inhabitants to hire servants in England and transport them to Newfoundland, though they be not of the ship's company or have no share therein. 6th Article : That no owner carry more than sixty persons per hundred tons. 8th Article : The order obliging fishing ships to stay till the 1st March is superseded ; agreed that the King be recommended to send one convoy at the first season to protect the ships bound to Newfoundland. Their Lordships also recommend that one Minister, or as many more as the inhabitants can maintain, be sent over by the next convoy, who are to go from place to place to baptize children, &c., and that the person to be commissioned by the King be ordered to visit the settlements yearly, and take care that the people do not go to the French, and keep an exact register of them and of their ships, to be furnished to the Council annually. (Col. Entry Bk., Vol. CVI., pp. 122-127.)

No. 743.MEMORIAL OF INHABITANTS OF NEWFOUNDLAND.[Feb.
21,
1680]

CAL. STATE PAPERS AM. & W. I., 1677-1680, p. 483

1301. Representation of the inhabitants of Newfoundland to Lords of Trade and Plantations. They have never in their former petitions designed the least prejudice to fishery or navigation they desire only the security of the King's property, the advancement of his Customs, and encouragement of the fishery in general. If the King do now make a full settlement of the country, they desire that their servants may be brought to them yearly by freight or hire, according to the practice of the fishing ships, but they conceive it necessary and for the good of all that, as by the violence of the Western Adventurers they have been forced to disperse to twenty different places, the King should reduce them to four, viz., Trinity Harbour, St. John's, Ferryland, and Trepassey, or such other harbours as the Lords may think fit. Thereby not only will the Colony be easily governed, but also enabled to oppose the French, provided St. John's, which is a place easily fortified, be one of the places assigned to them. The inhabitants are willing, for the greater satisfaction of the Western Adventurers, to contain themselves within their present number and possess only their existing stages, provided that their children, as in time they increase, be permitted to erect stages and get an honest livelihood by a trade which is so advantageous to the Kingdom. Signed, William Downing. 1 p. Endorsed. Read 21 Feb. and again 26 Feb. 1679-80. (Col. Papers, Vol. XLIV., No. 27.)

No. 744.

FURTHER CONSIDERATION OF NEWFOUNDLAND AFFAIRS

BY LORDS OF TRADE AND PLANTATIONS.

[Feb.
26,
1680]

CAL. STATE PAPERS AM. & W. I., 1677-1680, p. 490

1306. Journals of Lords of Trade and Plantations. Business of Newfoundland resumed (see ante, No. 1300). Agreed that it is undesirable for the Governor to have further power over the men belonging to the Adventurers or Sack ships than to send them on board to their masters ; also that Planters be forbidden to keep buildings, other than necessary for the fishery, orchards or gardens within a quarter of a mile of the shore, lest the fishery be thereby disturbed ; also that the fortification of St. John's be first undertaken and the King advised to grant guns and ammunition ; also that the mayors of each fishing port in England be directed to require the journals prescribed by the Western Charter of the Admirals of their respective harbours, all of the Admirals except one having failed to comply with this direction ; also that, in view of the abuses pointed out by Mr. Hinton (see below) circular letters be addressed to the mayors of the western towns directing them to take effectual care that the Western Charter be observed in all such particulars as are not superseded by the King's order, also that the Governor be instructed to report to the Council what has become of the great guns left by Sir David Kirke. In view of the effect of the intended regulations of the Newfoundland fishery upon the King's Customs, the Commissioners of Customs are desired to inspect the papers and report to the Lords of Trade and Plantations on Monday next, when Mr. Downing will be present to say on behalf of the inhabitants what contribution they will furnish for the maintenance of the Governor ; the captains of convoys are also directed to attend at the same time. Sir William Stapleton's letter containing his negotiation with the Count de Blenac read, and report thereon considered (see post, No. 1320). (Col. Entry Bk., Vol. CVI., pp. 134-138.)

No. 745.

EXTRACT FROM BOARD OF TRADE JOURNAL.

[26 Feb. 1679-80.]

C.O. 391. VOL 3, p. 134.

At the Committee for Trade & Planta[̄]cons
In the Council-Chamber at Whitehall
The 26th of February 1679 / 80.

Newfoundland

Present

Lord President	Earl of Essex
Lord Privy Seale	Visc ^t Fauconberg
Marquiss of Worcester	M ^r Hide.
Earl of Bridgewater	M ^r Secr ^{ty} Coventry
S ^r Leolin Jenkins.

Fishery

Vpon a further consideration of the business of Newfoundland, their Lo^{ps} are of opinion That it is not convenient for the Governor to have any other influence or command over y^e Seamen or ffishermen belonging to the Adventurers or Sackships than to secure them to send them on board to bee punished by / their respective Masters, when they shall commit any ryot or misdemeanor on shore.

And that the ffishery may not receive any inconvenience from y^e Planters, it is thought fit that they bee not permitted to keep any buildings, orchards or gardens which may give any disturbance to the ffishery within one quarter of a mile of the shore, other than such stages, Flakes, and rooms as are necessary for the catching and curing of ffish. And because it is thought necessary that some fortification bee erected and maintained in Newfoundland (as the french doe) for preservation of his Ma^{tie}'s Sovereignty, and security of the ffishing Trade, their Lo^{ps} will Report, That S^t John's Harbour may bee first fortified, and that his Ma^{ty} will bee pleased to allow some Guns and Ammunition for that service.

No. 746.THE BOARD OF TRADE.

(Guide to the Materials for American History, to 1783, in the Public Record Office of Great Britain. Vol. I. The State Papers by Charles M. Andrews, pp. 82–83.)

The Board of Trade, in origin at least, did not constitute a separate department of government, and therefore its papers, though in character departmental and arranged according to the common departmental plan, properly belong among the state papers. The board was legally only a body of advisers to the crown and its papers would naturally fall into the same class as those of the Privy Council and the Secretary of State.

Regarding the early history of the bodies created for plantation control nothing need be said here. Before 1696 great dissatisfaction was expressed by the mercantile classes because the control of trade was in the hands of courtiers without experience, and therefore Parliament determined to obtain the direction of matters of trade and plantations. It charged the administration with neglect of the interests of the merchants and in 1695 and 1696 adopted a large number of resolutions providing for a Parliamentary control of trade. But the king refused to allow this encroachment on his prerogative and a compromise was effected. On May 15, 1696, William III. caused a commission to issue under the great seal constituting a special council or board for the purpose of promoting the trade of the kingdom and of inspecting and improving the plantations in America and elsewhere. This commission followed in all respects the resolutions of the House of Commons, which in their turn were based throughout on the instructions to the Shaftesbury council of 1672.

The commission erected a council composed of two groups of members. First, the high officials of state, including afterward the auditor general of the plantation revenues. These officials were ex officio members, whose presence was not required unless they desired to attend or the public business demanded it. Nevertheless, the board took pains to remind each one, when he entered on his term of office, that he was a member, requesting him to attend when he could. Many did attend, particularly the secretaries of state, and took an active part in the work of the board. Second, the active or paid members, supposedly competent men, upon whom the actual work of the board fell. Three constituted a quorum for ordinary business. Yet even with this small number a quorum was sometimes wanting, and in 1709 the Secretary of State had to write to the board insisting that if any had to be absent on account of private business they should relieve one another and take their turns "always having enough in town to do business in pursuance of their commission." At first, reports and representations had to be signed by five members, but after 1697 the number was reduced to four or more and this continued to be the rule for the remainder of the board's history. Generally one or two meetings a week were held, except during August when the board broke up for a recess, but later the number varied, sometimes rising to five and at other times, notably in 1774, dwindling to two meetings a month. The duties of the board, as the many commissions show, were rather the protecting and furthering of trade and commerce than the administration of the colonies. In fact, with the administration of the colonies as such the board had nothing to do, though it was required to keep itself informed on this point and to obtain such information as was necessary to hasten the settling and improving of the plantations so as to render them more useful and beneficial to the kingdom of England. The main object of the board was to develop the colonies in the commercial interest of the mother country.

No. 747.
REPORT BY COUNCIL OF TRADE AND PLANTATIONS TO THE KING, RESPECTING IMPORTANCE OF TRADE OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, AMERICA & W. INDIES, 1696-1697, p.
303.

583. Council of Trade and Plantations to the King. In obedience to your Order in Council of 12 November last, on the petitions of the West Country Merchants relating to Newfoundland, we report as follows. The trade of Newfoundland is of very great importance to the Kingdom, employing numbers of poor people in the West of England in making nets. The exports to it are all English produce except salt ; the imports from it are not only the bare returns of what is carried out, but the fruit of all the labour employed therein, while the employment of numbers of ships and seamen increases the naval strength of the country. To recover and preserve it, we recommend that besides the convoy already appointed for the salt ships at the end of the month, four frigates (two at Plymouth and two at Milford) be appointed for the fishing-ships at the end of February, and two more (at Plymouth and Milford) for the salt-ships at the beginning of June. These convoys, while they remain at Newfoundland, should be ordered to cruise for the security of the fishing-fleet or to annoy the enemy, and should at the end of the season escort the ships to their markets. Besides the fishing-ships that resort thither annually, planters are convenient to preserve the boats, oars, stages, etc., and, in time of war, to protect the ports. But the number of these inhabitants left there during the winter should be limited to 1,000, lest by the increase of their numbers they engross the fishery to themselves, to the prejudice of our navigation. The French have already so fortified themselves in the Island, and seem so intent on the improvement of their interests there that the planters cannot suffice to protect our part. In order therefore to establish some military force by land to protect the harbours from such attacks as that made upon Ferryland, last summer, we think that little forts or redoubts should be built, two at St. Johns, one at Ferryland, and one at Fermouse, and that an engineer should be sent out for the purpose. We think that at least three companies of soldiers are necessary during the war for defence of these places ; and since some think that a general Governor would be too great an encouragement to the planters, to the obstruction of the fishery, we think that each captain should command separately in each place, and have no power over the fishermen and planters except in case of actual invasion. Lastly we recommend that all suitable encouragement should be given to the inhabitants of Ferryland now residing at Appledore, Devon, for their relief and re-establishment.

Signed, J. Bridgewater, Ph. Meadows, Wm. Blathwayt, Jno.
Pollexfen, Abr. Hill. Memo. This was not presented. (Board of Trade, Newfoundland. 25 pp, 58-61.)

REPORT OF COLONEL GIBSON ON NEWFOUNDLAND AFFAIRS.1697
June 28
St. John's,
NewfoundlandCALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, AMERICA & W. INDIES, 1696-1697, p.
522.

1,115. Colonel Gibson to Council of Trade and Plantations. We sailed from St. Helens on Saturday, 17 April, and all arrived here on 7 June, except the hospital-ship and a small French banker, her price, which have since arrived. We were very uneasy for some time at hearing nothing of our store-ships and provision-ship, but they came in here yesterday at last under convoy of the Portland and a fire-ship. H.M.S. Bonadventure, which came with them to Trinity Bay, has put into Trinity Harbour to make good defects, and I have been much concerned to hear that the masters of the three ordnance-store ships have been obliged to serve out full allowance of provisions from the time they went on board till their arrival here, so that their three months' full provisions, which ought to have lasted four months and a half, are already expended. The want of materials at our first arrival was very prejudicial to us. We could command neither spade, shovel nor pickaxe, so that it was with much ado that, with the help of the grenadiers' hatchets, we made huts to shelter the men ; but now that the store-ships are come, all hands shall be set to work. Several of the inhabitants have been to us from Conception Bay, Trinity Bay and Bonavista, but we hear of nothing but destruction from them all, for nothing escaped the barbarous fury of the enemy but Bonavista and the little island of Carbonere. The last defended themselves bravely, which, in my opinion, was partly the reason why the enemy did not go so far as Bonavista. To southward of this there is not an inhabitant left but two or three in the Bay of Bulls, and two at Brigos by South and from there to Trepasse, which is the southmost of the English Plantations. There is not a living soul left, yea not at Ferryland, which was always looked upon (as I am told) as the best harbour and the pleasantest place in the whole Island. However, when we have secured this, I mean to go to Ferryland with a part of my regiment and secure that also, which may possibly encourage the people to settle there again. There are several other places to southward of that which in my humble opinion ought to be secured, for if we do not I fear the enemy will, before next spring, if a happy peace does not prevent it. I am afraid that, the summer being so far spent and our provisions like to fall short, I shall not have time to do what I would for the security of the harbours formerly possessed by the English ; and it were ten thousand pities but that care were taken of them. For

p. 1799

though the continual fogs make approach to the island difficult, there are not better harbours in the world. All that I heard in England as to the advantage of the country is not comparable to what I have seen during my three weeks ashore here. I see little difference in the climate, nor do I believe that what grows in England will not grow here, for such a quantity of strawberries I never saw nor heard of. The few meadows within two miles of this place are full of them and of currants, both red and white, and raspberries growing wild in the wood. But all this has not sufficed to make the inhabitants cultivate the ground, for they apply themselves wholly to fishing, which gives them vast advantage, and far more than they could make by labouring the ground. You know how many debates there have been for and against a Governor here, nor shall I concern myself therein, but it is too evident that the want of a good Governor has been the ruin of a great many families in the country who were in a very flourishing condition. Let the King do what he may, unless there be some government settled— I do not mean a military government but the civil and Church government also, for in the little time that I have been arming them, the people have lived more like heathens than Christians — (he will accomplish nothing). I shall write further by next opportunity and indeed was unwilling to write by this, only as a ship was going to Bristol I thought I could not do less than give you this account. I believe that the Commodore has written to the Admiralty about the fleet. Signed, J. Gibson. P.S. —Commodore Norris goes cruising to-morrow for twenty-one days, by which time we shall be ready for Ferryland. I begin to fear the want of provisions. We are now at half allowance of bread and short allowance of all other. 2¼ pp. Endorsed, Recd. Read, 4 Aug. 1697. (Board of Trade, Newfoundland, 3. No. 81 ; and 25. pp. 123-127).

No. 749.

REPORT OF CAPTAIN NORRIS ON NEWFOUNDLAND AFFAIRS.1698
March 17.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, AMERICA & W. INDIES, 1697-1698, p.
137.

301. Captain John Norris, R.N., to Council of Trade and Plantations. I think that the fishery of Newfoundland cannot be better than under its old constitution. If you wish to make part of the country defensible in case of war, I think St. John's harbour the most advantageous place by nature. The country is so woody and mountainous that an enemy can't easily march to it and cannot possibly bring cannon by land to the place ; hence the redoubt built by Colonel Gibsone may be sufficient defence against such attacks. As to the sea, the narrow entrance to the harbour and the great height of the land on both sides create such eddy-winds and calms that an attack would be very difficult, especially if you approve of a boom and chain being fixed across the harbour's mouth. On the north side, at a place called One-o'clock, is a convenient place and distance from the boom for a battery of from fourteen to eighteen guns. Right against it on the south side is another place for three or four guns. These two places, in addition to what is already, would, I believe, make the harbour defensible. I think that if planks and materials were sent there at the time of the convoy's going, the labour of their ships-companies might complete the work this year. The battery on the north side should have a place to put powder in. To man these batteries I think that the inhabitants would suffice, but for the care of the guns and stores there should be gunners and store-keepers ; but that power should have no influence over the inhabitants for fear of prejudicing the trade ; and to prevent any abuses by mismanagement the convoy for the year, together with the Admiral and Vice-Admiral of the port, should examine all the stores to check embezzlement. I would suggest whether, against the outbreak of war, it would not be proper to have dormant commissions among the inhabitants to summon the people for the defence of St. John's until the King send what may be proper, allowing them pay while the service lasts. This power should in my opinion be subordinate to the Admiral of the port, if one be there, because the masters of the merchant-ships may probably have seen more service than any of the planters, and the planters in general are a kind of servants to the merchant-men. To fix the boom there must be an iron bridle to go over the rock on the north side, and a crab or capstan on the south side to heave the boom across. Signed, Jno. Norris. 2½ pp. Endorsed, Reed. Read 17 March, 1697-8. (Board of Trade, Newfoundland, 3. No. 96 ; and 25. pp. 182-184.)

No. 750.

FURTHER REPORT OF CAPTAIN NORRIS.

1698
Nov 18.
H.M.S
Winchester
Cadiz Bay.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, AMERICA & W. INDIES, 1697-1698, p.
550.

990. Commodore Norris to Council of Trade and Plantations. I enclose particulars of such information as I could obtain in Newfoundland. I think that if the merchants adventurers have the preferable encouragement before the planters boat-keepers it would make the trade most beneficial for England, they making yearly returns of their labour. For, if the planters and boat-keepers should have encouragement to induce them to reside in Newfoundland, they would have such an advantage of the shipping that in a short time the shipping, instead of making their voyages themselves, would be forced to buy, and instead of a return to England the country, like other Colonies, would be of little use but to itself. But if the yearly Adventurers were encouraged I think that the shipping would increase ; for some of the planters and boat-keepers have told me in discourse that if the shipping should be encouraged before them, they must endeavour to be masters of ships themselves, and you know best which is most advantageous for England. I had some doubts as to sending you a letter herein copied, on account of its compliments to myself, but I do so on account of its giving a relation of a part of Newfoundland seeming very advantageous for England. Signed, Jno. Norris. 1 p. Endorsed, Recd. 2 Jan. Read 6 Feb., 1698-9. Enclosed.

990. I. Answer to the Council of Trade's heads of enquiry as to Newfoundland. (2). The Colony cannot subsist itself, for it produces nothing. New England supplies it with rum, molasses, some provisions and tobacco ; great quantities of liquor have lately been imported from Spain and Portugal and this year also from France ; all of which liquor has been very prejudicial to the Adventurers by debauching their men, so that they could not make the voyages which they would have made owing to the drunkenness of their people. To prevent this and for the general good of trade all ships making voyages to Newfoundland should be obliged to clear from England, and not bring more liquor than should be thought fit to allow for each ship. Of late several ships have come from Spain and Portugal to make voyages, and pretend all to have English owners, but as they make foreign ports their place of clearance at every voyage by paying off their men there and laying out all the expenses of their voyage there, it deprives the Western ports of England of the benefit of that outlay and prevents the seamen from returning to England. Therefore it would be most for the good of England that all ships trading to Newfoundland should be obliged to make their outset from England each voyage. (3). The inhabitants are destructive to the Adventurers by pulling down the stages in winter and staving the boats, so that the shipping cannot be so forward in the fishing as they. (4). The boat-keepers remain in the country to keep possession of the most convenient room, and are destructive. By keeping their constant stages they encroach (sic) most of the room near the water-side, so that the Adventurers are forced to work behind them, which puts them to the expense of one man in five, or at least to hire stage and room from them. This could be prevented by an order that all boat-keepers should be obliged to return yearly or not fish next year, and this would put them on an equal footing with the Adventurers who cannot possess a stage or room except yearly as they arrive. (6). The boat-keepers are wholly supplied with their craft and clothes from England, and most of the provisions are brought from England and Ireland. (7). The country affords no subsistence to the planters but a few fowl in winter, and at Bonavista they have a small gain in furs. (8). This is answered in No. 2. (9). See the annexed list. The inhabitants sell at the same price as the Adventurers. (10). The people of New England never exercise the fishing-trade, but generally sell their cargo for money and bills, which makes 25 per cent. to them in New England ; but if they cannot get them they buy refuse (? refuse) fish and go to the West Indies. (11). Adventurers, while in the country, victual mostly in fish, and at sea give about the same manner of allowance as in other voyages. The men's wages are generally regulated by the shares, which is one-third of the fish and train divided among them. (12). See the annexed list. (13). Those that come passengers to fish generally pay about £3 for their passage out, and a third or a half less for the passage home. (14). The rules of the Western Charter have in some measure been broke into on all sides. It would be a benefit to the Adventurers if they were revived, to prevent any people pretending an inheritance to the stages and room.

p. 1802

Here follows, Copy of a letter from William Cock to Commodore Norris. Bonavista, 1 September, 1698. I am heartily glad that so wise, knowing and judicious a person as yourself has been entrusted with the Government of this country, and I wish you all success. Kindly inform me whether the bread which you spared me last year has been paid for or not, for you may command payment from me. Lieutenant Leigh, who bears this, has been for some time settling the affairs of this harbour which were in confusion, but by his prudent management all is adjusted to general satisfaction. On the north side of this bay are many extraordinary harbours and better fishing. One William Wyng has fished for some years fourteen leagues N.W. by N. of this place, and has still exceeded the inhabitants of this considerably. This year one Nevill has been that way and has more fish for his two-men-boats than those here for shallops, so that next summer several inhabitants of this harbour design to remove thither, as also the masters of ships that have fished here this year, for it is certain that the fewer the boats that are kept in a place the better is the fishing. I tell you this that the power of those whom you send this way to settle affairs may extend as far as Cape Frills, that being the northernmost cape of this bay. If a draught of that place were drawn it would greatly encourage shipping to fish this way, there being many secure harbours and roads, and room for 500 sail. Letter ends.

p. 1803

My emissary to Placentia arrived there on 4 September. Walking round the fort he counted thirty-six guns, chiefly eighteen pounders, all facing the harbour's mouth, where he saw also a chain and boom. The inward part of the fort has no guns, being protected on the land side by a fort on the hill, in which he saw eight guns facing to the sea ; but one of their soldiers seeing him brought him back to the lower fort and he was not permitted to go to it afterwards. At Bluff Head on coming in are mounted eight guns in two tiers. On the 6th he saw the soldiers mustered and exercised in the fort and counted them to be about eighty, which some of the inhabitants told them was their number. There was a French man-of-war of about fifty guns and about thirty sail of merchantmen ; the inhabitants said that about twenty more had gone to market, the catch being 300 quintals or upwards to a boat, which is about what our ports have made this year. The man-of-war was bound to the Fogo, which is to the northward of our plantation, to sail with their ships ; and the French report that there were as many ships fishing to the northward as at Placentia. These ships generally sail from St. Malo. The French had fourteen sail that fished at St. Peter's Island, three at little Placentia, two at Collonet, five at St. Mary's, and four at Trepassy. They sold their fish at Placentia for twenty-four raiills per quintal. The ships make their voyages with boats and people as we do, which people generally return with the shipping. There are about twenty-nine families of planters at Placentia, and about 160 people remained there in the winter ; at little Placentia are twelve families, and (according to the information of one who had lived in Placentia) there were with the soldiers about 300 people in the winter. This year every ship was obliged by the King of France to bring one hogshead of lime for every boat they were to keep, for the building of works at Placentia. He saw about 200 hogsheads of lime by the fort of Placentia. The French do not cultivate their land ; their trade, like ours, being wholly fishing.

Thomas Barrington, master of a Boston ship, was stranded close to one point of Placentia bay, and getting off anchored afterwards in the bay in August. He saw thirty sail of merchantmen and heard of twenty more already sailed. The rest were expected to be ready to sail at the end of September. They gave over fishing on the 3rd of August. He was told that in Placentia Fort were thirty guns, and in the fort on the hill eight guns, but was not allowed to go to them. There is another fort on the hill which, he thinks, had no guns. On the point on the larboard side are eight guns. There were two mortars in the fort and a bomb-vessel riding in the harbour. He believes there are about 150 soldiers and 200 inhabitants that remain in the winter. They make their voyages as we do, and some pay by the share and some by the voyage. Dated, 12 September, 1698.

p. 1804

Petition of the masters in Newfoundland to Commodore Norris. We daily see great abuses and encroachments of inhabitants and boat-keepers on ships' fishing room, especially in this harbour. We beg you to give the necessary instructions to the inhabitants, and to make such a representation to the Council of Trade that the Adventurers may enjoy free liberty of fishing in this country without interruption. (1). The small boat-keepers of our parts fitting out for Newfoundland have the advantage of the Adventurers by taking the choice of the ablest fishermen and shoremen, and before they have made up their complement of men it is very difficult to engage an able fisherman or shoreman, the reason being that they live somewhat easier with them, not being obliged to do any ship-work, but only to do the labours of the voyage, and so rest in time when it is not weather to work about the fishery. Frequently when we have brought a landman with us a voyage or two, we find that they engage themselves with the bye-boat-keepers, whereby they seldom or never become sailors, neither we nor our officers having any command over them on the passage. (2). These bye-boat-keepers in England generally choose the best sailing-ships so as to gain their passage sooner, and if they reach the country early they place themselves in the best and most convenient places by the water-side, whereby later ships are often obliged to hire both stage and room from them and to carry their fish so far backward that we are forced to allow a man more to every boat than they, besides the inconvenience in making our fish, the disadvantage to our owners and the discouragement to our crews. (3). These boat-keepers are so numerous “that when as we would go on for the keeping a considerable quantity of boats in order for the catching our ship's lading, we often pass with a great deal less number of men, by which means instead of catching our lading we are obliged to make use of our owners' credit to buy our lading from the boat-keepers, otherwise must go dead freighted.” (4). This present year many of the boat-keepers have resolved to stay in the country, and if this be tolerated we must expect the best places for stage-room in this harbour to be possessed by them, so that we cannot expect to find convenient room for our ships another year. Commonly when they leave the country they make sale, as they call it, of their plantations, and so pass them from one to another as their own land. So likewise the likeliest young men for the King's service, when there is most occasion for them, absent themselves in the woods till the men-of war are sailed and so remain in the country or go to New England, where they bestow themselves most out of the way for serving their country. This is chiefly occasioned by their masters, the boat-keepers, to save the charge of their passage home, though the cost is never above half or two-thirds of a passage outwards. (5). The people who stay in the country for the winter always take care to build their stages and houses much larger than is really necessary for the crews they keep, and so make their advantage on the later comers by exacting in the highest degree. We have known from £5 to £15 given this year for a boat's room in this harbour, which we believe to be no other than selling the King's land, to the great abuse of the Merchants-Adventurers. (6). “Some here are passing by the name of Planters now in possession of room as they would have called Patent-room, although contrary to our ancient charter, which room although cannot occupy themselves yet yearly make encroachments further which they set out to hire, making great benefit thereby to the cost of our employers in England, for prevention of which no liver ought to build a stage on any ship's room but ships' crews only.” (7). Traders from New England are constantly bringing great quantities of liquor from thence and from the Caribbee Islands, whereby our men are debauched and are encouraged to steal and embezzle from their masters much of our fishing craft and other necessaries, to our great loss and hindrance. By such means, too, men extravagantly spend great part of the money which should support their families in England. (8). We beg that for the future all unfree ships may be debarred from trading in Newfoundland, for in justice to our nation, traders to these parts should not only be free ships but such as are like to clear and fit out yearly from England, which will much promote our fishery. King, merchant and tradesman will then wholly reap the benefit of our labours and not foreigners and unfree ships, as we now yearly see. At least one-fourth of the ships here come from Spain and Portugal, supplying the land with all manner of necessaries, selling them cheaper than our owners can afford and returning with their cargoes of fish, and glutting the market abroad. Their merchants living on the spot can generally undersell our Merchants-Adventurers, whereby our owners are much discouraged. To prevent this, no ship whatever ought to make a second voyage to Newfoundland without returning to England to clear. Signed by fifteen masters.

p. 1805

A Relation taken by Captain Norris from people who had fished to the Northward. Thomas Weymouth, who was taken prisoner by the French in 1693, deposed to being carried to a port called Grand Callery, when the French told him that in time of peace they had from eighty to one hundred sail that made fishing voyages between Charles Straits and Cape Frills.

They carry boats and people with them and leave no inhabitants behind at the end of the season. In this bay there are thirty-two places where they fish and ride their ships, all open to the sea except Flower de Luce, which has a narrow entrance and a very fine harbour with room for two or three hundred sail. The ships never try to be there before the 1st of June, as the ice lasts longer there than elsewhere, and leave on the 1st of September. Their fishing is very plenty and lies nearer to the shore than in many of our ports.

Thomas Mitchell, master, was taken by the French and carried into White Island, about sixteen leagues north of Cape Frills, in 1697. There were no more ships in that place, but there were accounts of thirty or forty sail making fish in the several ports. The Frenchmen arrived on 27 June, and left about 10 September, with a cargo of 3,000 quintals. The French said that in time of peace they used to fish about sixty sail annually in those ports.

They left no inhabitants behind them, partly for fear of Indians. Signed, Jno. Norris. The whole, 9½ pp. Endorsed, Read 2 Jan., 1698-9.

[(Oct.
27.)
1684.]

900. II. List of ships, with their ladings, trading to Newfoundland in 1698. Total number of ships, 252 ; tonnage, 24,318 ; crews, 4,244 ; passengers, 935 ; boats, 532 ; fish made, 114,770 quintals ; fish bought, 157,848 quintals ; loaded for return voyage, 365,198 tons ; unfree ships, 18. 18 pp. Endorsed as No. I. (Board of Trade, Newfoundland, 3. Nos. 126, 126 I., II., and (without enclosure II.) 25 pp., 263-276.)

No. 751.

C

CAPTAIN FRANCIS WHELER'S REPORT ON NEWFOUNDLAND.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, AMERICA & W. INDIES, 1681-1685, p. 707.

1907. Captain Francis Wheler, R.N., of H.M.S. Tiger, to William Blathwayt. Answers to the queries annexed to the instructions given to the commander of the convoy concerning Newfoundland :—1. A list of inhabitants and their servants is enclosed. These latter change from year to year and covenant with their masters for the fishing season of the year at high rates. The best of the sport is over by the 20th August, but they fish on till November when the ice and snow comes and then they do little but provide fuel against the cold. I have answered at large how they keep the Western Charter. 2. The Colony cannot support itself. The earth, or rather the rock, produces no more than enough to keep a few cattle in summer, which must be slaughtered during the winter for want of forage. The place is provisioned from England, New England, and Ireland. 3. At St. John's they go two miles to fetch their wood owing to the demand for fuel, but elsewhere there is no scarcity. It is the general complaint that the adventurers' stages are pulled down in the winter, and I am sure it is partly true. The inhabitants are so united that the offenders cannot be known. But I find that the fishermen build their stages slight, and five months' bad weather and ice tear the posts down. The inhabitants prevent the whole work from perishing by repairs, but the damage to the stages makes the ships come a month before they need, and this can only be prevented by a magistrate on the spot. 4.

Every inhabitant that keeps boats has his own stage, which he keeps always ; but in all ports the ships have room enough. I find that in spite of an Order in Council there are several warehouses built close to the sea which take up good room for stages, and would be much better further

p. 1807

back. On the fishing-places there is room for twice the number of ships. 6. All clothing and tackle is brought from England ; salt, liquors, and provisions are from France and New England. 7. There is no sort of arable or pasture land in the Colony, nor any fur trade except towards Cape Bonavista. 8. The New England trade is considerable, chiefly rum and molasses. If Bills of Exchange are taken it is for English goods ; if fish, the fish is taken to Barbados. The rum is pernicious, for it makes planters and fishermen drink out all they are worth in the winter to a shameful degree. Other liquor comes from England wines from Fayal ; but I believe it would be impossible to continue the trade, for ten hours in the boats every day in the summer and the intolerable cold of the winter makes living hard without strong drink. But the worst thing is that the New England men carry away many of the fishermen and seamen, who marry in New England and make it their home. 9. The wages paid to the servants are so high that planters can hardly help getting behindhand. An account enclosed from an intelligent planter explains this. They make something by the liquor, which they sell at a very dear rate, but many of the servants having families in England are not very prodigal. Certainly there is hardly a planter in the country who is not a great worse than nothing, but they are bound to go on fishing or the merchants will sell them no provisions for the winter. 10. The New England men do not fish on this coast though a great deal on their own, and have a fish trade with Portugal. 11. The fish are sold to the sack-ships, and so they go home with their train-oil and men. I have calculated the cost and profits of one of their ships. But the trade being carried on for the most part by men who take up their money at bottomry at 20 per cent. (very usual in the West country) they are obliged to sell dearer. Able merchants would turn the trade to better account. The men called boat-keepers in the list do not fish on the ships' account but are hired by particular men. 12. The list of sack-ships is annexed. 13. All men employed by masters of ships are upon bargain to be paid in England, which keeps them from staying in Newfoundland. Occasionally they stay, but last year there were but 120. 14. My answers as to the Western Charter are annexed. 15. Placentia is the best French fishing-place. They get to work six weeks before us, and take such catches that they are generally gone before the end of July. Their ships are large, some of them six and thirty guns. Their victualling is rather cheaper than ours. No fur trade. 16. The inhabitants are much fewer than our colony. 17. The planters are of no use to fishing except to secure their boats in the winter. 18. The French catch 300 quintals to a boat of four men, while we catch but 100 quintals. The usual price is six livres. The French catch more, victual cheaper, finish earlier, and get the first of the market, so they profit more by the trade than we. 19. The French markets are France, Spain, Portugal, and Italy. 20. Their trade generally increases except during war with Spain. 21. The French inhabitants are as negligent about defence as our Colony. They are supplied with salt provisions from France and with rum and molasses from New England. 22. A few English live among the French, but there is no correspondence between their Colony and ours.

p. 1808

23. No foreigner fishes on the Eastern Coast except on the bank fifty leagues from shore, which the French frequent much. The French have a Governor at Placantia, who is of great use. The French have no convoy to Newfoundland, the ships being strong. At Trepasse English and French fish together without quarrelling. 24. I learn that the French are numerous up the river of Canada, and have two good forts. They do not fish, but trade with the Indians for fur. The French begin to fish about ten leagues to north of Cape Bonavista. Being at utter defiance with the Indians in those parts they do not stay for the winter, and all the summer have their arms by them. They have a large fleet and twenty armed boats on the Coast to guard against the Indian canoes ; any man of whatever nation who pays his proportion of this expense may fish on the coast. They catch 200 quintals to a boat of five men, and here their trade is worse than ours and decaying much. 26. The French have the advantage of us in the fishing trade at Placentia for reasons already given. Our trade decays by its being overstocked with sack-ships, for it is plain by the annexed account that the fishing ships profit greatly. The great plenty of fish that is housed this winter in Newfoundland for want of sack-ships, reminds me that the fish which is taken one year is held as good as any next year. If the adventurers would sacrifice a year's profits they could send their sack-ships in the spring and get the first of the market. Signed, Fra. Wheler. 14 pp. Endorsed. Recd. 27 Oct. 1684. Annexed,

1907. 1. Observations of Captain Wheler as to the Western Charter and the articles which are kept or broken in Newfoundland. 1st article is kept ; 2nd is broken every day by seamen throwing ballast into the harbours ; 3rd is broken by the destruction of stages in the winter ; 4th is kept ; 5th is kept. The fishermen now use cask instead of fats to carry home the train oil ; 6th to 9th are kept ; 10th is so absolutely broken that hardly a house does not sell drink. 11th is broken ; if the people do assemble, it is not to hear divine service. 12th is interfered with by an Order in Council of 16th January 1678. Of the additional articles, 1st and 2nd are kept ; the 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 6th are interfered with by Orders in Council ; as to the 7th the practice differs for fishermen and passengers ; the 8th is kept ; the 9th is superseded by Order in Council ; the 10th is broken by the boat-keepers, who take a stage though they have but two men ; as to the 11th, the Vice- and Rear-Admiral take upon them to command, but only to serve their own turn. The poor inhabitants are in misery for want of a Governor. Those that have most servants take what they please from the poor by force, and there is no redress in the absence of a king's ship. I have had a hundred complaints before me, and when I have spoken to the admirals they would not do justice, but answered that they wouldn't trouble themselves ; 14th and 15th I can give no account. 4 pp. Endorsed. Recd. 27 October '84.

They left no inhabitants behind them, partly for fear of Indians. Signed, Jno. Norris. The whole, 9½ pp. Endorsed, Read 2 Jan., 1698-9.

[(Oct.
27.)
1684.]

900. II. List of ships, with their ladings, trading to Newfoundland in 1698. Total number of ships, 252 ; tonnage, 24,318 ; crews, 4,244 ; passengers, 935 ; boats, 532 ; fish made, 114,770 quintals ; fish bought, 157,848 quintals ; loaded for return voyage, 365,198 tons ; unfree ships, 18. 18 pp. Endorsed as No. I. (Board of Trade, Newfoundland, 3. Nos. 126, 126 I., II., and (without enclosure II.) 25 pp., 263-276.)

No. 751.

C

CAPTAIN FRANCIS WHELER'S REPORT ON NEWFOUNDLAND.

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, AMERICA & W. INDIES, 1681-1685, p. 707.

1907. Captain Francis Wheler, R.N., of H.M.S. Tiger, to William Blathwayt. Answers to the queries annexed to the instructions given to the commander of the convoy concerning Newfoundland :—1. A list of inhabitants and their servants is enclosed. These latter change from year to year and covenant with their masters for the fishing season of the year at high rates. The best of the sport is over by the 20th August, but they fish on till November when the ice and snow comes and then they do little but provide fuel against the cold. I have answered at large how they keep the Western Charter. 2. The Colony cannot support itself. The earth, or rather the rock, produces no more than enough to keep a few cattle in summer, which must be slaughtered during the winter for want of forage. The place is provisioned from England, New England, and Ireland. 3. At St. John's they go two miles to fetch their wood owing to the demand for fuel, but elsewhere there is no scarcity. It is the general complaint that the adventurers' stages are pulled down in the winter, and I am sure it is partly true. The inhabitants are so united that the offenders cannot be known. But I find that the fishermen build their stages slight, and five months' bad weather and ice tear the posts down. The inhabitants prevent the whole work from perishing by repairs, but the damage to the stages makes the ships come a month before they need, and this can only be prevented by a magistrate on the spot. 4.

Every inhabitant that keeps boats has his own stage, which he keeps always ; but in all ports the ships have room enough. I find that in spite of an Order in Council there are several warehouses built close to the sea which take up good room for stages, and would be much better further

p. 1807

back. On the fishing-places there is room for twice the number of ships. 6. All clothing and tackle is brought from England ; salt, liquors, and provisions are from France and New England. 7. There is no sort of arable or pasture land in the Colony, nor any fur trade except towards Cape Bonavista. 8. The New England trade is considerable, chiefly rum and molasses. If Bills of Exchange are taken it is for English goods ; if fish, the fish is taken to Barbados. The rum is pernicious, for it makes planters and fishermen drink out all they are worth in the winter to a shameful degree. Other liquor comes from England wines from Fayal ; but I believe it would be impossible to continue the trade, for ten hours in the boats every day in the summer and the intolerable cold of the winter makes living hard without strong drink. But the worst thing is that the New England men carry away many of the fishermen and seamen, who marry in New England and make it their home. 9. The wages paid to the servants are so high that planters can hardly help getting behindhand. An account enclosed from an intelligent planter explains this. They make something by the liquor, which they sell at a very dear rate, but many of the servants having families in England are not very prodigal. Certainly there is hardly a planter in the country who is not a great worse than nothing, but they are bound to go on fishing or the merchants will sell them no provisions for the winter. 10. The New England men do not fish on this coast though a great deal on their own, and have a fish trade with Portugal. 11. The fish are sold to the sack-ships, and so they go home with their train-oil and men. I have calculated the cost and profits of one of their ships. But the trade being carried on for the most part by men who take up their money at bottomry at 20 per cent. (very usual in the West country) they are obliged to sell dearer. Able merchants would turn the trade to better account. The men called boat-keepers in the list do not fish on the ships' account but are hired by particular men. 12. The list of sack-ships is annexed. 13. All men employed by masters of ships are upon bargain to be paid in England, which keeps them from staying in Newfoundland. Occasionally they stay, but last year there were but 120. 14. My answers as to the Western Charter are annexed. 15. Placentia is the best French fishing-place. They get to work six weeks before us, and take such catches that they are generally gone before the end of July. Their ships are large, some of them six and thirty guns. Their victualling is rather cheaper than ours. No fur trade. 16. The inhabitants are much fewer than our colony. 17. The planters are of no use to fishing except to secure their boats in the winter. 18. The French catch 300 quintals to a boat of four men, while we catch but 100 quintals. The usual price is six livres. The French catch more, victual cheaper, finish earlier, and get the first of the market, so they profit more by the trade than we. 19. The French markets are France, Spain, Portugal, and Italy. 20. Their trade generally increases except during war with Spain. 21. The French inhabitants are as negligent about defence as our Colony. They are supplied with salt provisions from France and with rum and molasses from New England. 22. A few English live among the French, but there is no correspondence between their Colony and ours.

p. 1808

23. No foreigner fishes on the Eastern Coast except on the bank fifty leagues from shore, which the French frequent much. The French have a Governor at Placantia, who is of great use. The French have no convoy to Newfoundland, the ships being strong. At Trepasse English and French fish together without quarrelling. 24. I learn that the French are numerous up the river of Canada, and have two good forts. They do not fish, but trade with the Indians for fur. The French begin to fish about ten leagues to north of Cape Bonavista. Being at utter defiance with the Indians in those parts they do not stay for the winter, and all the summer have their arms by them. They have a large fleet and twenty armed boats on the Coast to guard against the Indian canoes ; any man of whatever nation who pays his proportion of this expense may fish on the coast. They catch 200 quintals to a boat of five men, and here their trade is worse than ours and decaying much. 26. The French have the advantage of us in the fishing trade at Placentia for reasons already given. Our trade decays by its being overstocked with sack-ships, for it is plain by the annexed account that the fishing ships profit greatly. The great plenty of fish that is housed this winter in Newfoundland for want of sack-ships, reminds me that the fish which is taken one year is held as good as any next year. If the adventurers would sacrifice a year's profits they could send their sack-ships in the spring and get the first of the market. Signed, Fra. Wheler. 14 pp. Endorsed. Recd. 27 Oct. 1684. Annexed,

1907. 1. Observations of Captain Wheler as to the Western Charter and the articles which are kept or broken in Newfoundland. 1st article is kept ; 2nd is broken every day by seamen throwing ballast into the harbours ; 3rd is broken by the destruction of stages in the winter ; 4th is kept ; 5th is kept. The fishermen now use cask instead of fats to carry home the train oil ; 6th to 9th are kept ; 10th is so absolutely broken that hardly a house does not sell drink. 11th is broken ; if the people do assemble, it is not to hear divine service. 12th is interfered with by an Order in Council of 16th January 1678. Of the additional articles, 1st and 2nd are kept ; the 3rd, 4th, 5th, and 6th are interfered with by Orders in Council ; as to the 7th the practice differs for fishermen and passengers ; the 8th is kept ; the 9th is superseded by Order in Council ; the 10th is broken by the boat-keepers, who take a stage though they have but two men ; as to the 11th, the Vice- and Rear-Admiral take upon them to command, but only to serve their own turn. The poor inhabitants are in misery for want of a Governor. Those that have most servants take what they please from the poor by force, and there is no redress in the absence of a king's ship. I have had a hundred complaints before me, and when I have spoken to the admirals they would not do justice, but answered that they wouldn't trouble themselves ; 14th and 15th I can give no account. 4 pp. Endorsed. Recd. 27 October '84.

Privy Council
Documents

Volume IV
Contents

No. 752.

ORDERS TO GOVERNOR ANDROS RESPECTING SMUGGLING IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

[12
Jan., 1687.]

1687.
Jan 12.
Custom House

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, AMERICA & W. INDIES, 1685-1688, p.
309.

1,097. Commissioners of Customs to Governor Sir Edmund Andros. We find that under colour of a trade to Newfoundland for fish, great quantities of European goods are imported into the American Colonies, and particularly into New England. The Island is become a kind of magazine of contraband goods. You will give all people to understand that Newfoundland is not a plantation like other of the King's Plantations, and that all such goods will be seized ; and you will take effectual care that no goods are introduced from them into New England, by strict enforcement of the Navigation Acts. Signed, D. North, Cha. Cheyne, Jo. Werden, N. Butler, William Dickinson, J. Buckworth. (Col. Entry Bk., Vol. LXI., pp. 410-411.)

No. 753.

OBSERVATION OF SECRETARY, BOARD OF TRADE, RESPECTING CONDITIONS IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

[10
May, 1698.]

1698.
May 10.
Cockpit

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, AMERICA & W. INDIES, 1697-1698, p.
207.

440. William Popple to John Pulteney. I am to thank you for the report of the Board of Ordnance (see No. 418) as to Newfoundland, and am to acquaint you (for the prevention of mistakes) that there are no planters nor any manner of Government in that Island as there are in other Plantations, the trade thither being only by fishing-ships, and a few poor fishermen on the shore who cannot contribute anything towards the things now proposed for defence of the place. (Board of Trade. Newfoundland, 25. p. 216.)

No. 754.

1699. IMPERIAL ACT 10 & 11 WILLIAM III, CAP. 25.

AN ACT TO ENCOURAGE THE TRADE OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

Vide Vol. I, p. 250.

Privy Council
Documents

Volume IV
Contents

No. 755.

REPORT OF GEORGE LARKIN,

ON CONDITIONS IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

[20 Aug., 1701.]

1701.
Aug. 20.
St. John's
in Newfoundland

CALENDAR OF STATE PAPERS, AMERICA & W. INDIES, 1701, pp. 430-434.

756. George Larkin. to the Council of Trade and Plantations. I am now about to leave this place, where I arrived the 24th of the last month, having delivered to the Commander in Chief the duplicate of the Commission, copies of the Act of Parliament and Proclamation. As to the Rules and Forms of Proceedings, which I have settled here with the Commissioners, I crave leave to refer your Lordships to the papers, which comes herewith enclosed, a copy of which I have left with the Commission for the succeeding Commandore, which by directions of the Lords of the Admiralty is to be deposited in the hands of the Commanding Officer of the Fort. Captain Graydon hath appointed one Mr. Henry Newman, a merchant here, to be Register, to whom I have given such Instructions as are necessary, and have layd downe everything so plaine, that if any pirates shall happen to be seized, I think there cannot well be any error in the proceedings. I have not heard of any that have been upon the coasts of Newfoundland this year. I find that the Rules and Orders conteyned in the Act for the more advantagious management of the Fishery are not so much regarded as I could wish they were. The reason I attribute to the want of a penalty ; the trees are rinded, and the woods destroyed as much now as they were before the making of the Act, and in few years, unless prevented, there will not be a stick fit for the use of the Fishery within five or six miles of this and some other harbours where I have been, and the Flakes which are to be left standing, are most of them made use of by the inhabitants for firing in the winter. The present Admiral of this harbour, Capt. Arthur Holdsworth, Commander of the Nicholas of Dartmouth, brought over from England this fishing season 236 passengers all or great part of which are By-boat keepers, and under a pretence of being freighters aboard his ship, which is only for some few provisions for their necessary use, he hath put and continued them in the most convenient stages etc. in this harbour, which all along since the yeare '85 have belonged to fishing-ships, insomuch that several Masters of fishing-ships have been obliged to hire room of the Planters. These By-boat keepers are most of them able fishermen, and I don't heare that there is any Freshmen or Greenmen amongst them as the Act directs. I am credibly informed that this very person, and one or two more that constantly use the Newfoundland trade, in the beginning of the year make it their business to ride from one Market Town to another in the West of England on purpose to get passengers, and make an agreement with them that in case they shall happen to be Admirals of any of the harbours (that) they will put and continue them in fishing-ships roome. This is a very great abuse and discouragement to the Adventurers. Besides, these By-boat keepers can afford to sell their fish cheaper than the Adventurers, which must lessen the number of fishing ships.

p. 1812

The great complaint is against the New England men and some merchants of that country, that for these seven or eight years last past have resorted to this place during the fishing season, that they have their Agents in most harbours in the land, by means whereof they know what is brought to every place, and so drive an indirect Trade, and supply the Plantations with several commodities, which they ought to have directly from England ; that their vessels generally make two or three trips in a year with bread, flower, porke, tobacco, molasses, sugar, lime-juice and rum ; that they sell their provisions some small matter cheaper to the inhabitants, but then they oblige them to take a quantity of rum. This rum the inhabitants sell to the fishermen, which encourages them to stay behind and leave their families in England, which oftentimes become burthensome to their respective parishes ; that the inhabitants sell rum also to their servants, who run in debt, and are forced to hire themselves for payment thereof ; one month's profuse living and a pair of shoes leaves them in bondage for a whole year, and though as good fishermen as any in the land and may deserve 15l. or 20l. per annum, they make them serve for seven ; that the New England men never carry their fish, which they receive in exchange from the inhabitants and planters for their cargo to market, but either sell the same upon bill in England, by which they gain five or six and thirty pounds per cent., or else for wine, brandy, dowlas and other sorts of linen cloth, silks, alamode and lustring, sarcenets and paper from France ; that in the close of the year they inveigle and draw away a great many seamen, fishermen, and servants with promises of great wages, and when they come there, not meeting with that encouragement they expected, several of them betake themselves to a dissolute sort of life, and in the end turne Rogues and Pyrates. I am told that the New England vessels last year carried out of Conception Bay upwards of 500 men, some of which were headed up in casks, because they should not be discovered. Of what consequence this is to England, your Lordships are the most proper judges. But if your Lordships think fitt, the same may be for the future prevented by the Master of every New England vessel's giving bond of such penalty as shall be thought meet at the Custom House where he is cleared, that he shall not carry any seamen, fishermen, or servant as passenger or otherwise (except his ship's company) from Newfoundland to New England, or any of the King's Plantations, without leave in writing first had from the Commander in Chief of the Newfoundland Convoy ; And that there is scarce a vessel that comes from New England to Newfoundland, whose bills of lading and stores mention above one halfe of the cargo that they have aboard, or returnes again to

p. 1813

New England but what is seizable. I don't hear but of one New England vessel that fisheth upon this coast this yeare, and that is one Captain Pitt at Ferryland.

The inhabitants and Planters of Newfoundland are a poor, indigent, and withall a profuse sort of people that care not at what rates they get into debt, nor what obligations they give, so that they can but have credit, but the seizing of their fish for debts seems to me to be both irregular and unjust as to the time and manner of doing it, and the fishermen seeing the rocks stript before the fishing season is half over are discouraged from proceeding any further, which often proves the ruin and overthrow of severall of the Planters' voyages. Debts were never wont to be paid in Newfoundland till the 20th of August, but for these two or three yeares past the Rocks have been stript by night, and the fish carryed off in June and July, without weighing, a second hath come and taken it from the first, and perhaps the Planter hath had twenty or thirty quintalls of fish spoyled in the scuffle, and the rest of his creditors are forced to go without any satisfaction ; nay, the poor Fishermen who helped to take the fish have not one penny wages : salt provisions and craft are all payable here before wages, and considering how poor fishermen are used, I admire how the Planters and Inhabitants procure hands from England to fish for them. Indeed, when complaints of this nature have been made to the Commander-in-Chief, he has ordered the fish to be redelivered and dividend to be made, but my Lords, here is in Newfoundland at least 5 or 6 and 20 several harbours, besides coves, and it's a great way for people to come from Bonavista and Firmooze to St. John's to make their complaints. The Admirals they'l not concern themselves, but leave all to the Commandore. They ought to see to the preservation of peace and good government among the seamen and fishermen, that the orders for the regulation of the fishery be put in execution ; and to keep journals, but instead of this, they are the first that break the orders, and there is not one of them where I have been that hath kept any Journal. The late Act gives the Planters a title, and it's pity but that they had some Laws and Rules by which they should be govern'd, tho' it's the opinion of all that I have conversed with since I came here, that it had been much better if all Plantations in Newfoundland had been absolutely discouraged, for it's now become a sanctuary or place of refuge for people that break in England, and the Masters of the fishing ships do encourage several of their men to stay behind, persuading them that they will soon get estates here, purely to serve the charges of their passage back to England.

It hath been customary for the Commander in Chief upon complaints to send his Lieutenant to several harbours and coves, to decide all differences betwixt Commanders of merchant ships and the Inhabitants and Planters, and betwixt them and their servants. Its truly an absolute shame to hear how matters have been transacted upon such occasions. He that makes a present of the most Quintalls, is sure to have the matter determined in his favour. The whole Country exclaims against the Lieutenants in Capt. Poulton and Fairborne's time, and do not stick to say that some former Commanders in Chief have been a little faulty. The present Commander hath taken a great deal of pains to do the country justice, and to settle Religion amongst them, and everybody seems to be very well satisfied with him. There has never been any account or registry kept of any of the orders or rules that have been made for the good of the fishery ; what one Commander in Chief hath confirmed, the next hath vacated. I have prevailed with this to leave an abstract of all such as have been made during his time with the Commission for tryall of Pirates for his successor. Several quarrels and differences happen here after the fishing season is over, and in the rigor of the winter Masters beat servants, and servants their Masters. I would therefore propose that one of the most substantiall inhabitants in every harbour be appointed in the nature of a Justice for preservation of peace and tranquility, and that some person that understands the Laws be sent with the Commander in Chief, or to reside here, in the nature of a Judge-Advocate, to decide all differences and matters of meum and tuum betwixt Masters of ships, Inhabitants, Planters and Servants ; that he have a power to administer an oath to parties or witnesses for determination thereof in the most summary way, and that he be obliged to go every year to Bonavista, Trinity, New Perlican, Old Perlican, Carboneer, St. Johns, Bay of Bulls and Ferryland, and to stay a fortnight or three weeks each of them. He may be usefull here upon several occasions. Besides your Lordships will not fail of a true account, how all matters are transacted in Newfoundland.

p. 1814

I meet with very few here that can give any account of the French, only that they have fiefty sail of ships, all Adventurers, at Placentia this season ; that provisions of all sorts are cheaper there ; that their boats have made much the same voyages that ours have here, viz., from two to four hundred quintalls for a boat ; that there is but one ship of war, which brought stores, and that they are very busy in fortifying the Fort at Placentia. We have had very stormy weather upon this coast. Three ships have been cast away in Petty harbour, a Ketch and another vessel in Tuds Cove. Signed, Geo. Larkin. Endorsed, Recd. 15th, Read Oct. 16, 1701. 4 closely written pp. En- 30 closed, 756. i. Abstract of preceding. 1¼ pp.

756. ii. Rules and Forms of proceedings, to be observed in the Admiralty Courts for the trial of pirates at Newfoundland, drawn up by Geo. Larkin and the Commissioners on board H.M.S. Assistance in the Harbour of St. Johns, Aug. 11, 1701. Endorsed, Recd. Oct. 15, 1701. 61 pp. (C. 0. 194, 2. Nos. 44, 44. i., ii. ; and (without abstract) 195, 2. pp. 447-466.)

No. 756.

COPY OF A REPRESENTATION OF THE LORDS COMMISSIONERS FOR TRADE AND PLANTATIONS TO HIS MAJESTY,RELATING TO THE NEWFOUNDLAND TRADE AND FISHERY ; DATED 19 DECEMBER, 1718[19
Dec., 1718]

PAPERS RELATING TO THE NEWFOUNDLAND, 1718–1793, pp. 1–22

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

May it please Your Majesty,

The Fishery at Newfoundland having been obstructed and discouraged for many Years past, not only by the late Wars, but by the Irregularities of the Inhabitants, Traders, and Fishermen, who reside in and resort to that Island ;

We have, in Obedience to Your Majesty's Commission, whereby we are directed to enquire into the several Obstructions of Trade, and the Means of removing the same, considered the past and present State and Condition of the aforesaid Fishery, in what Manner it was formerly and is now carried on, and by what Regulations and Laws it has been and still is directed and governed.

And thereupon we most humbly crave Leave to represent to Your Majesty,

That the Fishery in Newfoundland was at first settled by Merchants and other Adventurers inhabiting the Western Parts of this Kingdom, and successfully carried on for many Years, under the Restriction of such Customs and Laws as were agreed upon by the Fishermen among themselves.

That although the Harbours and Fishing Places were for some Time left open and free to all Nations (without Prejudice, however, to the Sovereignty of Your Majesty's Royal Predecessors) nevertheless great Numbers of Ships and Seamen were Annually employed by the said Adventurers, some in fishing, and others in supplying them with Salt from France and Portugal, and in carrying their Fish to Foreign Markets ; which Ships being furnished with Provisions and all other Necessaries of English Production and Manufacture for the whole Voyage, it was not only a particular Advantage to the Western Counties, but likewise to the Nation in general, by increasing the Factories in Foreign Countries, and by promoting the Consumption of our Manufactures.

And forasmuch, as the Fishing Ships required more Hands than were barely necessary to navigate them, the Masters and Owners, constantly bred up many Servants and others unacquainted with the Sea, by which Method the Charge of the Voyage was lessened, and the Number of Seamen for the Service of the Crown and Kingdom was wonderfully increased ; and to excite their Industry, as well as to reward their Labour, instead of allowing them Wages by the Month or Voyage, according to the present Practice of most of the Fishing Towns, every One had a certain Share or Shares in the Fish and Oil that was taken and made during the Voyage ; and upon their Return the whole Cargo was sold, and the Proceed divided, Two Thirds to the Owners, and One Third to the Ship's Company, in such Proportions as were agreed on, which made it their Interest to attend diligently to their Employment, and raised an Emulation among them to outvie one another.

The First Account of this Fishery that we have met with is from Mr. Anthony Parkhurst ; who relates, that in the Year 1574 Thirty English Ships were employed in fishing at Newfoundland, and that in 1578 their Number was augmented to Fifty Sail.

The succeeding War with Spain checked the Increase of the Fishery for some Years ; but after the Peace was concluded in 1604 it flourished exceedingly. Afterwards, in the Year 1615, Captain Richard Whitburn, who was sent to Newfoundland with a Commission from the Court of Admiralty to enquire into the Disorders and Abuses committed on that Coast, reported, that 250 Ships belonging to this Kingdom were engaged in the Fishery, which he computed, One with another, at 60 Tons and 20 Mariners, and that each Ship had taken 120,000 Fish, and made Five Tons of Train Oil.

In all 15,000 Tons of Shipping,
5,000 Seamen, and
1,250 Fishing Boats.

Which encouraged the Merchants of London and Bristol, in 1610, to solicit a Grant, which they obtained from his Majesty King James the First, for a considerable Part of Newfoundland, in order to settle Colonies, that by their Assistance they might be enabled to share the Advantages of the Fishery with the Western Adventurers : But after they had expended large Sums to no Purpose, they quitted their Design, being convinced that the Country was not capable of subsisting English Colonies ; and if it had, that the Charge of supporting and governing them was too great to be borne by a Fishery.

However, as some of the looser Sort, both of the Planters and Mariners, remained in the Country, because they vainly imagined that they could not be impeached there for such Injuries and Wrongs as they had committed, and were supplied with Rum, strong Liquors, and Tobacco from New England and other Parts, they retailed them, contrary to the Rules of the Fishery, among the Seamen ; whereupon Idleness and Debauchery soon prevailed, and increased to that Degree, that at last the Masters and Owners of the Ships were obliged to petition his Majesty King Charles the First to restrain,

p. 1817

by his Royal Authority, those Disorders, which evidently tended to the Ruin of the Fishery.

His Majesty, to prevent these Irregularities and Excesses for the future, upon granting the Propriety of Newfoundland to several Noblemen and others, “That Person should plant or inhabit Six Miles of the “Sea Shore between Cape Race and Cape Bonavista.”

And, that nothing might be wanting to encourage the Adventurers diligently to attend to and vigorously to prosecute the aforesaid Fishery, the Star Chamber, in January 1633, adjusted and settled several Orders for the Regulation and Government thereof ;. and on the 20th February following, his said Majesty was graciously pleased to grant a Charter to all his Subjects trading to Newfoundland, according to the Tenor of the said Orders, which was commonly called the Western Charter ; whereby it is provided, 1st, That if a Man kills another, or steals to the Value of 40s. he shall be brought Prisoner to England ; and that the Earl Marshall shall take Cognizance of the Cause ; and if it be proved by Two Witnesses, the Delinquent shall suffer Death.

2nd, That no Ballast or Presstones be thrown out to the Prejudice of the Harbours.

3d, That no Person deface or spoil any Stage, Cook Room Flakes, &c.

4th, That according to ancient Custom, every Ship that first entereth a Harbour shall be Admiral of the said Harbour, &c.

5th, That no Person cut out, deface, or alter the Marks of any Boats or Trainfats, to defraud the right Owners.

6th, That no Person steal any Fish, Train, or Salt, or other Provisions belonging to the Fishing Ships.

7th, That no Person set Fire to the Woods, or rind the Trees, except for Cook Rooms.

8th, That none cast Anchor so as to hinder the haling of Seynes for Bait.

9th, That none rob the Nets of any Drift Boats, or take away any Bait or Nets.

10th, That no Person shall set up any Tavern for selling of Wine, Beer, Strong Waters, or Tobacco, &c.

11th, That on Sundays the Company assemble to hear Divine Service. And, that speedy Punishment may be inflicted upon the Offenders against the said Laws and Constitutions,

It is ordained, that the Mayors of Southampton, Weymouth, &c. take Cognizance of all Complaints made against the Offenders of these Ordinances upon the Land ; And,

p. 1818

That the Vice Admirals of the Counties of Southampton, Dorset, Devon, and Cornwall proceed against the Offenders upon the Sea :

That these Laws be in Force until annulled by His Majesty : And,

That the Admirals proclaim the same in every Harbour, and on the Shore.

The ancient Customs and Constitutions of the Fishery being in this Manner confirmed, and the Magistrates in the Western Counties impowered to put the aforesaid Laws in Execution, the Fishing Trade was again revived, and at length, by the frugal Management and industrious Application of the Adventurers (notwithstanding they were frequently obstructed and injured by the Governor and Inhabitants, contrary to the Conditions of the Grant in 1628, by virtue of which they had settled there) most of their Foreign Competitors were constrained to abandon the said Fishery, and the European Markets were plentifully supplied with dry Fish by the Subjects of this Kingdom, at such moderate Rates as promoted and secured its Consumption, to the vast Encouragement and Increase both of Navigation and Trade.

The best and exactest Account of the Fishery under this Regulation, that is to be found in our Office, is in a Representation from the Merchants and others of the Western Ports in 1674 to his late Majesty King Charles the Second, wherein it is asserted, that about the Year 1644 at the least 270 Fishing Ships were Annually employed in the Newfoundland Fishery, besides those that supplied them with Salt and other Necessaries, and that carried their Fish to Market.

The Burthen of these 270 Sail may be computed at 80 Tons each, and for every 100 Tons 50 Men and at least 10 Boats.

In all 21,600 Tons,
10,800 Seamen, and
2,160 Boats

To each Boat they generally allowed 5 Men, and usually made 200 to 300 Quintals of Fish per Boat, which was then sold in the Country at 14 to 16 Rials, of from 7s. to 8s. per Quintal, and some Times higher, as the Season proved more or less favourable.

But the Course of this Success was soon after interrupted by that unnatural War which broke out in this Kingdom ; by the Measures that were concerted and taken by the Government in 1650 and 1655 for settling a Governor and Colonies in Newfoundland ; by the many Losses sustained by the Adventurers during the Wars, first with Holland and then with Spain, especially in the latter ; and by a pernicious Practice, lately introduced by the Masters and Owners of the Fishing Ships of carrying to Newfoundland Bye Boatkeepers, and their Crews and Servants, to assist the Inhabitants in their Fishing.

So that at the Time of the Restoration of King Charles II. the Fishery was very inconsiderable.

In order therefore to retrieve and recover the Fishing Trade, his Majesty was graciously pleased, upon the humble Petition of the Western Adventurers, by Letters Patent, bearing Date 26th January 1660, to confirm the aforesaid Charter, with an additional Clause to prevent the transporting of Bye Boatkeepers and Servants ; viz^t.

p. 1819

“Moreover, and further than was ordained by the Laws of Our said late Father, and for the Encouragement of Our Subjects in Newfoundland, and in the Seas adjoining, and for the Benefit of the said Trade there, We do hereby straitly charge, prohibit, and forbid all and every the Owners of Ships trading in the aforesaid Newfoundland, that they nor any of them do carry or transport, or permit or suffer any Person or Persons to be carried or transported, in their or any of their Ships, to the said Newfoundland, other than such as are of his or their own Ship's Company, or belonging thereunto, and are upon the said Ship's Hire and Employment, or such as are to plant and do intend to settle there.”

But this Prohibition not being enforced by proper Penalties (which were now become more necessary than formerly) it was evaded and opposed by some of the Masters and Owners of Fishing Ships, who chose rather to quit Part of their Annual Fishery by lessening the Complements of their Men and Boats than to lose the Advantage they made by carrying of Passengers, and by disposing of their trifling Adventures to the Inhabitants ; from whence several unhappy Consequences ensued ; viz^t.

That the Number of the Fishing Ships and Seamen employed in Newfoundland was considerably reduced, and that the breeding up of young Men for that Service was generally neglected :

That the Price of Fish in Newfoundland was enhanced, from 14 or 16 Rials per Quintal as aforesaid, to about 24 Rials the Quintal, whereby the Consumption thereof was lessened in all Foreign Parts :

That the Merchants of London were induced to set up a Fishery in New England, which has been ever since carried on to the great Discouragement of the Adventurers ; and though it may possibly be a Question, whether this unlucky Management did not first prompt and encourage the French to settle at Placentia in 1662 ; yet it is not to be doubted, but that it contributed to the Establishment of their Fishery, and enabled them to supply not only their own Markets, but to rival us in Portugal, Spain, and Italy.

However these Innovations, by the Remissness of some, and by the Contrivance of others, were not restrained ; nor does it appear that any Notice was taken of the Complaints exhibited against those that had violated the aforesaid Law and Constitution, until the latter End of the Year 1663, when by His Majesty's Command circular Letters were wrote by the Lords of the Council to the Mayors and Magistrates of the Western Corporations, requiring them to be careful that the said Law should be punctually observed and duly executed ; and at the same Time the Officers of the Customs were directed to charge all Masters of Ships to observe and keep the said Rule.

But this Order being likewise eluded, in February 1669 his Majesty in Council enjoined the Observance thereof, and commanded that a Return should be made of the Names of such as were Offenders, and in the mean Time to stop their proceeding on the Voyage.

And whereas the Western Adventurers had been for some Time past opposing the placing of a Governor in Newfoundland, which was proposed as absolutely necessary to check the Encroachments of the French, His Majesty, on the 4th of the said Month, upon the Report of the Lords of the Council for Foreign Plantations, rejected the said Proposal, and thereby removed the Fears and Jealousies that the Adventurers had entertained, to the great Discouragement of the Fishing Trade.

Nevertheless the Fishery was so severely affected by the aforesaid Disorders and Disputes, that the Merchants, Owners, and Masters of Ships, and Inhabitants of the Western Parts of this Kingdom adventuring to Newfoundland were obliged, in December 1670, to petition His Majesty, that the said Fishery might be maintained by Fishing Ships according to its ancient Custom, that Encroachments thereupon might be removed, and that the Majors mentioned in their Patent might be empowered to authorize and depute, from Time to Time, Persons to execute the Laws and Constitutions for the Fishery according to the Intent of the same ; and on the 11th of February following, after the Petitioners, and those that opposed them, had been fully heard by His Majesty in Council, the whole Matter was referred to His Majesty's Council of Plantations ; and it was ordered that their Lordships should consider of the best Ways and Means whereby the Fishing Trade in Newfoundland might be regulated and advanced, and also protected and secured from Foreigners, and how the said Trade might be managed for the Increase of Seamen, and the Advantage of His Majesty and His Subjects, as likewise to take into their Consideration His Majesty's Charter, and the additional Powers desired by the Western Traders, and to report their Opinion upon the Whole to His Majesty.

Accordingly their Lordships, on the 2d of March following made their Report, and offered it as their Opinion and humble Advice to His Majesty, that the several new Regulations contained in the said Report be added to the Charter ; and on the 10th of the same Month, after the said new Regulations had been seriously considered by His Majesty in Council, those that related to the Adventurers were all approved, except One, whereby it was proposed, that Encouragement might be given to the Inhabitants to transport themselves and their Families to Jamaica, St. Christopher's, or some others of His Majesty's Plantations ; and it was ordered that the said Rules should be added to and inserted in the Charter.

But when the Adventurers found that the Removal of the Inhabitants from Newfoundland could not be obtained, they seemed to be very indifferent about renewing of the Charter, so the Trade was left to take its Course ; and in 1671, Captain Davies, the Commander of the Convoy, affirmed, “That the said Trade was not then by Two Third Parts so good as he remembered it, when 200 Sail of Ships and 10,000 Men were Yearly employed, and at length trained up to the Sea,” with which Account the Memorials of the Adventurers also agree.

p. 1821

In 1674 the Solicitations for a Governor were again renewed, and on the 12th of February it was ordered by His Majesty in Council, That the Lords of the Committee should re-consider this Affair ; who reported on the 15th April 1675, that it had been clearly made out to them,

That the French had considerably advanced their Fishery at Newfoundland.

That the People of New England took on their own Coast Yearly about 60,000 Quintals of Fish :

That the Adventurers had lost many of their Ships in the late War :

That the Hands which used to make Fish were diminished ; and that the Inhabitants destroyed the Woods, and whatever the Adventurers left Yearly behind ; that they possessed early the Places of greatest Conveniency ; and that most of them sold Wine and Brandy, whereby the Seamen were withdrawn from their Labour, and many seduced to stay on the Place.

From all which Reasons it was easy to believe there was a Decay in the Trade as to England ; but as to the Proposals for curing all by a Governor, their Lordships could not find that a Governor could cure any Part ;

“Because the Planters lived scattered in 25 several Harbours which, are almost 80 Leagues asunder.

That in the Winter, when the Abuses are done, there is no passing by Sea or Land from one Place to another.

That besides the Charge of Forts and of a Governor, which the Fish Trade cannot support, it is needless to have any such Defence against Foreigners, that Coast being defended in the Winter by Ice, and must in the Summer be defended by the Resort of His Majesty's Subjects, for that Place will always belong to him that is superior at Sea.

So that unless they had seen proper Reasons for a Colony, they could see none for a Governor ; and against a Colony there are not only the Rigours of the Climate, and the Infertility of the Land, but that they, the Inhabitants, chiefly consumed the Products of New England, and other Foreign Parts, &c.

Their Lordships further observed, That the French managed their Trade by Adventurers Ships Yearly going out and returning Home ; and that upon computing and comparing the Charge of catching Fish to the Adventurers and to the Planters, they found the former could do it cheaper than the latter, and they had Reason to believe that the English Adventurers in general preserved a Superiority in the Trade, and that they did catch their Fish as cheap, cured it as well, came as early to Market, could there sell as dear, or afford it as cheap, as any of the French could do.”

p. 1822

So that upon the Whole their Lordships having Recourse unto the Rules settled in Council by His Majesty's Order of the 10th of March 1670, found them all so proper and effectual for the Advantage of the Trade, as to need only the following Additions to make the Trade revive and flourish :

1st. That all Plantation and Inhabiting in that Country be discouraged ; and in order thereunto that the Commander of His Majesty's Convoy should have Commission to declare, at his going this Year, His Majesty's Will and Pleasure to all the Planters, that they come voluntarily away ; and in case of Disobedience, that the Charter be put in Execution next Year, for in this single Point consists the Validity and good Effect of the whole Regulation.

2d. That the Convoy help and assist those in their Transportation who desire to return Home ; and to declare that if they choose to betake themselves to any other of His Majesty's Plantations, that the Governors are wrote unto to receive them with all Favour, &c.

On the 5th of May following His Majesty in Council thought fit, for the several Considerations in the said Report mentioned, to order the Commander of his Convoy bound to Newfoundland to admonish the Inhabitants, either to return Home to England, or to betake themselves to others of His Plantations, and to direct that Letters be prepared unto the several Governors of the said Plantations, that in case any of the said Inhabitants of Newfoundland should arrive within their respective Governments, that they be received with Favour, and that all convenient Help and Assistance towards their Settlement be afforded unto them.

And on the 27th of January 1675, His said Majesty, after due Consideration had of the best Ways and Means of regulating, securing, and improving the Fishing Trade in Newfoundland, passed the new Charter which recited and confirmed all the old Laws, and several others were added for the better Government of the Fishery ; which if they had been as steadily supported and executed, as they were carefully concerted, in all Probability the Subjects of France and the People of New England had reaped very little Benefit by their Fisheries, and this valuable Branch of the British Trade had been firmly re-established and secured.

The additional Regulations to the Charter are as follows :

1st. That His Majesty's Subjects may take Bait and Fish in Newfoundland, and cut Wood for Stages, &c. provided they submit unto and observe the Rules and Orders that are or shall be established.

2d. That no Alien take Bait or Fish between Cape Race and Cape Bonavista.

3d. That no Planter cut down any Wood, or inhabit within Six Miles of the Shore.

p. 1823

4th. That no Planter shall take up any of the Stages, &c. before Arrival of the Fishermen ; and that they be all provided for.

5th. That no Master of a Fishing Ship transport any Seaman or others to Newfoundland, unless they belong to his Ship's Company.

6th. Not more than 60 Persons to 100 Tons.

7th. That every Fifth Man carried out of England be a Green Man, and not a Seaman ; and that the Masters provide in England Victuals and other Necessaries for the whole Voyage, Salt only excepted.

8th. That no Fishing Ship do depart directly for Newfoundland in any Year, before the 1st of March.

9th. That the Masters give Bond in £.100 to His Majesty before the respective Mayors, conditioned not to carry out any Persons to Newfoundland as aforesaid, and to bring back such as they shall carry out, unless employed in the carrying Fish to Foreign Markets.

10th. That no Master take up any Stage already built with less than 25 Men ; and that no Fisherman remain in the Country after the Fishing Voyage is ended.

11th. That the Admirals, Vice Admirals, and Rear Admirals be and are authorized and required to preserve the Peace in the Harbours as well as on the Shore, and to see the Rules of the Fishery put in Execution.

12th. And to secure and bring Offenders Home to England.

13th. That they Yearly publish in their respective Harbours, on the 20th of September, these Orders, forbidding all Seamen to remain in Newfoundland after the last of October.

14th. That they keep Journals, and deliver Copies unto His Majesty's Council for Foreign Plantations.

And lastly, because there is no Court Martial in England at present, that if any Man in Newfoundland shall kill another, or steal Goods to the Value of 40s. he shall be brought Prisoner into England, and his Crime made known to One of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, to the End Order may be given to punish such Offender according to Law.

Upon these Encouragements and Assurances the Western Adventurers immediately returned to the Fishery, and employed

	In	1675	1676	1677
Fishing Ships		105	126	109
Seamen		3,278	4,556	4,475
and Boats		677	894	892

p. 1824

and in the same Years the Number of the Inhabitants (beside Women and Children) was as follows :

	1675	1676	1677
Planters	140	138	152
their Servants	1,250	943	1,355
and Boats	277	206	337

for, notwithstanding His Majesty's Orders as aforesaid, they still remained in the Country.

However, the Adventurers being encouraged by the Lords of the Committee to put the Laws of the Charter in Execution, they began in 1676 to restrain the Disorders of the Planters, and to prevent the Transportation of their Servants ; but upon Petition of the said Planters in November following, and the Solicitation of those who were either excited by the Hopes of procuring Advantage for themselves, or influenced by the French, whose fishery must have been soon rendered precarious if the Charter had been observed, an Order was obtained on the 18th of May 1677, importing,

“That the Planters in Newfoundland be continued in Possession of their Houses and Stages according to the Usage of the last Years, until further Orders.”

The said Inhabitants being flushed with this Success, the old Schemes for establishing the Colony and settling a Governor were again revived, and the Necessity thereof strenuously asserted by some, and opposed by others.

The Right honourable the Lords of the Committee hereupon directed the Commissioners of the Customs to consider those Proposals, and to report their Observations and Opinion relating to the Settlement of the Trade and Fishery at Newfoundland.

Accordingly the said Commissioners, on the 26th March 1680, after they had fairly stated the whole Matter, offered to their Lordships, as their Opinion,

That the Settlement of a Governor and a Colony in Newfoundland, under such Rules and Methods as were proposed, and that to entrust the regulating of the Fishery in a Governor, will tend greatly to the Prejudice of the Newfoundland Fishery ; that by discouraging the English Fisherman the French will be greatly encouraged ; that what little of this Trade shall remain in the Hands of the English will by Degrees fall wholly into the Hands of the Planters and New Englanders, and that by consequence His Majesty's Customs both Outwards and Inwards will be greatly prejudiced.

But if His Majesty should think fit to fortify the Harbour of St. John's, and to make a Governor of the Fort, and to arm the Governor with a Military Power to command the People of that Country (on Occasion) for their Defence, and with Civil Power for punishing Vice and keeping good Order, without having a Power over the Fishery, or infringing the Charter, they thought the same might be of good Use ; and no Prejudice to the Trade or His Majesty's Customs.

Nevertheless these Arguments had not their due Effect ; and on the 18th of April 1680 it was further ordered, that His Majesty's Intentions to settle a Governor and erect a Fort in Newfoundland for the Preservation of His Sovereignty, and good of the Fishery, should be signified unto the Magistrates of such Towns in the West of England as were chiefly concerned in that Trade, that they might transmit their Opinions in what Manner and under what Regulations such a Governor might be settled.

In Obedience to His Majesty's said Order the Western Corporations respectively represented the Hardships and Difficulties they had formerly struggled with under a Governor in Newfoundland, and that they apprehended the Fishing Trade would be greatly discouraged and prejudiced if a Governor was settled there, and therefore they pray that His Majesty's Sovereignty may be maintained by Ships of War to be sent Annually thither, and that the Charter granted by His Majesty in the 27th Year of His Reign, for the Encouragement of the Fishery, may be enforced and put in Execution, as the best and only Methods to preserve and secure the Trade.

These Representations had so much Weight that the aforesaid Proposals relating to a Governor were laid aside ; but the Regulations and Laws of the Charter being enervated by these Disputes, the Fishing Trade very sensibly declined from the Time that the Order for removing the Planters was revoked.

And in	1682	and	1684	it was reduced to
	32		43	Fishing Ships,
	1,012		1,489	Seamen
	183		294	Boats,
though the Inhabitants employed in the same Years
	299		304	Boats,

But this Decay of the Fishing Trade was not the only Loss this Kingdom sustained on this Occasion ; for as Captain Jones, One of the Commanders of the Convoy in 1682, hath affirmed of his own Knowledge, the Traders from New England to Newfoundland Yearly made Voyages for the Sake of spiriting away the Fishermen ; so that the Newfoundland Fishery, which was formerly the great Nursery for breeding up stout and able Mariners, was now become a mere Drain, that carried off very many of the best and most useful of all the British Sailors ; and it is too notorious that this Practice has prevailed ever since.

Neither can we omit observing from the Accounts transmitted to the Lords of the Committee by Sir Francis Wheeler, the Commander of the Convoy in 1684, that the Planters carried on their Fishing Trade with great Disadvantage, their extraordinary Charge of Wages and Provisions amounting to One Third Part more than was expended by the Western Adventurers ; and although their selling of Strong Liquors to the Fishermen at dear Rates

p. 1826

did somewhat help them, yet this was such an apparent Prejudice and Discouragement to the Adventurers, that it was no Wonder so many of them were driven away from the Fishery in 1682 and 1684, as has been already mentioned.

Nor doth it appear to us that the Fishing Trade was afterwards, during the Reign of King James the Second, upon a better Foot, or that the least Care was taken to remove the aforesaid Obstructions, much less to retrieve Trade ; but, on the contrary, notwithstanding the French Fishery was prodigiously increased both at Placentia and to the Northward of Cape Bonavista, and that the Value of the Fish taken by the English Adventurers after the Year 1682 fell short of the Value of what was taken in 1676 at least £.100,000 per Annum ; nevertheless the Subjects of this Kingdom were restrained, by the Treaty concluded between Great Britain and France in 1686, from fishing in such Places as were held or possessed by his Most Christian Majesty in America ; which seems derogatory to the Charter, and to the Statute 15 Car. II. Chap. 16, whereby several Regulations are prescribed and ordained to be observed in any of the Harbours in Newfoundland.

Moreover, the succeeding War with France in 1689 still added to the Misfortunes of the said Trade, not only as it was thereby rendered impracticable to pursue such Measures as were necessary to reform the aforesaid Disorders and Mismanagement, but from the Difficulties and Hazards that unavoidably attended the Adventurers in prosecuting the same. However, they employed every Year some Ships more or less, as they could obtain Protection for their Men ; and the Inhabitants maintained (as formerly) about 300 Boats per Annum, until the French, in 1696, without any Regard to what was stipulated by the 18th Article in the Treaty of 1686, ravaged several of the Harbours in Newfoundland, and destroyed all that appertained to the Fishermen ; whereupon His late Majesty King William the Third erected a Fort at St. John's for the better Security and Protection of His Subjects and their Trade.

But upon the Conclusion of the Peace at Ryswick, the Adventurers, either forgetting the Difficulties their Predecessors were not able to surmount, or imagining that the Inhabitants, by Reason of the severe Losses they had lately suffered, were rendered incapable of carrying on the Fishery ; or else very probably adhering (for their own private Ends) to the Practice of those refractory Masters of Ships who could not be restrained from transporting Passengers, they re-assumed and returned to their old Trade with fresh Vigour ;

And in 1698 there were employed by the

Adventures	143	Fishing Ships
And	532	Boats,
And by the Inhabitants and Bye Boat Keepers	397	Boats,
In all, Boats	929	who took
	265,198	Quintals of Fish

p. 1827

The Fishery at Newfoundland being thus revived, and His said Majesty, in His most gracious Speech from the Throne on the 9th December 1698, having recommended it to His Parliament to employ their Thoughts about some good Bills for the Advancement of Trade, they were engaged to take the State of this Fishery into their Consideration ; and in order to restore good Government, and to prevent Contentions and Disorders for the future, an Act was passed in that Sessions, intituled, An Act to encourage the Trade to Newfoundland.

The abstract whereof is as follows :

1st. That it is and shall be lawful for all His Majesty's Subjects residing in England to have and enjoy a free Trade to Newfoundland as formerly ; and that no Alien or Stranger whatsoever take any Bait or Fish there.

2nd. That no Ballast be thrown out to the Prejudice of the Harbours.

3rd. That no Person destroy or deface any Stage, Cook Room, Flakes, &c.

4th. That according to ancient Custom, every Ship that first entereth a Harbour shall be Admiral of the said Harbour, &c.

5th, That Stages, &c. taken up and detained since 1685, be relinquished for the Use of the Fishing Ships.

6th. That no Inhabitant shall possess any Stage which since 1685 did or shall belong to any Fishing Ship, until the Fishing Ships from England are provided.

7th. Provided that such Persons as have built any Houses, Stages, &c. that did not belong to Fishing Ships since 1685, may enjoy the same.

8th. That no Bye Boat Keeper shall meddle with Stages,

&c. which did belong to Fishing Ships since 1685.

9th. That Bye Boat Keepers shall carry out, and Inhabitants employ, Two Fresh Men in Six, and Fishing Ships One Fresh Man in Five ; and that the Masters of the Ships and Boats make Oath accordingly.

10th. That every Master of a Fishing Ship shall have in his Ship's Company One Green Man in Five.

11th. That no Person cut out or alter the Marks of any Boats or Trainfats to defraud the right Owner.

12th. That no Person shall rind the Trees, nor set Fire to or destroy the Woods, except for necessary Uses ;

Nor cast Anchor so as to hinder the haling of Seynes in Baiting Places ;

Nor rob the Nets of any Drift Boats, or take away any Bait or Nets out of the Fishing Boats.

13th. That Murders, Felonies, and all other Capital Crimes, committed in Newfoundland, shall be heard and determined in England.

p. 1828

14th. That the Admirals of the several Harbours be and are required (in order to preserve Peace and good Government as well in the Harbours as on the Shore) to see this Act put in Execution.

15th. That the said Fishing Admirals determine all Differences between the Masters of the Ships, Inhabitants, and Bye Boat Keepers, concerning the Right or Property of Fishing Rooms, Stages, &c.

But if any think they are aggrieved by such Determination, they may appeal to the Commanders of any of His Majesty's Ships of War.

16th. That the Lord's Day shall be strictly and decently observed ; and that none of the Inhabitants shall sell or dispose of any Liquors on that Day.

Upon the passing of this Act, and the Success of the Fishery in the last Year, the Adventurers, Bye Boat Keepers, and Inhabitants, applied themselves very earnestly to the Fishery ; and there was employed,

	In 1699.		In 1700.
By the Adventurers ..	{ 168	..	171	Fishing Ships.
	{ 669	..	800	} Boats.
By the Boat Keepers ..	115	..	90
And by the Inhabitants ..	457	..	674

But as this Act had not that good Effect which the Adventurers expected, they were from this Time forwards constrained to give Place to the Inhabitants; for in 1701 the Fishery of the Adventurers was reduced to 75 Fishing Ships and 338 Boats.

Whereas there was then kept,

By the Bye Boatmen	97	}	Boats.
and
By the Inhabitants	558

Afterwards during the War there was employed,

	Fishing Ships.	Fishing Ships Boats.	Bye Boats and Inhabitants Boats.
In 1702	16	35	380
1703	23	44	214
1704	23	—	—
1705	20	60	200
1706	46	136	232
1707	70	196	257
1708	49	170	356
1709	35	130	258
1710	49	153	365
1711	62	168	439
1712	66	198	370

That is, Communibus Annis, 41 or 42 Ships per Annum.
p. 1829

And since the Conclusion of the Peace,

	Fishing Ships.	Fishing Ships Boats	Bye Boats.	Inhabitants. Boats.
In 1713	46	162	195	288
1714	106	441	133	362
1715	108	376	197	468
1716	86	319	184	408
In the said 4 Years	346	1,298	709	1,526
That is, Com^s Annis	86	324	117	381

According to the preceding	Fishing Ships Boats	Bye-Boats and Inhabitants Boats.
----------------------------	------------------------	-------------------------------------

Accounts of the Fishery, it may be asserted,
That the Western Adventurers in 1615, whilst the Trade was open and free to all Strangers, employed	1,250
In and about 1644, when the Colony was in a Manner deserted, and the Foreigners fairly driven out of the Trade, at least	2,160
Before the Year 1660, and for several Years after, it was generally agreed that the Fishery was reduced, by divers Misfortunes and evil Practices, to less than One Third Part, or	720
That upon restraining the Transportation of Passengers by the new Charter, and enjoining the Planters to remove by a special Order, the Trade began to revive again in 1676, and maintained	894	206
Upon the Revocation of the said Order, and the Design to settle a Governor, a full Stop was put to the Increase of the Trade, and in 1684 it sunk to	294	304

And it is computed that it continued (Communibus Annis) near upon the same Foot from that Time to the Conclusion of the Peace at Ryswick in 1697.

	Fishing Ships Boats.	Bye-Boats and Inhabitants Boats.
That in the three following Years there was Annually employed in a
Medium	677	577
But in 1701, the Adventurers being discouraged, the Trade fell off to	338	655
Afterwards during the War, from 1701 to 1712 inclusive, it was carried on, Communibus Annis , by no more than	120	300
And on a Medium of Four Years, from the Conclusion of the Peace, by	324	558

So that the Difference between the Fishery in 1644 and since the present Peace may be computed as follows :

In 1644 the Adventurers employed 2,160 Boats, and by the great Industry of the Fishermen there was seldom less taken than 250 Quintals of Fish per Boat.

In all, Quintals 540,000 per Annum, which produced about 3,375 Tons of Train Oil, at one Hhd. for 40 Quintals.

And since the Peace, the Adventurers, Bye Boat Men, and Inhabitants, have employed, Corn. Annis, 882 Boats ;

And have taken . . 95,424 Quintals of Fish ;
That is 108 Quintals per Boat.
And 365½ Tons of Train Oil, at One Hhd. per . . 64 Quintals.

Consequently therefore the Quantity of Fish taken in 1644, and about that Time, exceeded what has been taken since the Peace 444,576 Quintals per Annum.

Which at 8 s. per Quintal, amounts to . .	£177,830	— — and of Train Oil 3,009½ Tons.
Which at £. 12 per Ton, amounts to . .	36,114	— —
	<hr/>
Value of the Fish and Oil in Newfoundland	213,944	— —
Freight of the said 444,576 Quintals of Fish to Europe, at One P ^s of 8, or 4 s. 6 d. per Quintal . .	100,029	— —

Lost Annually to England by the Decay of the Trade . .

313,973 — —

Not including in this Account what was gained by the Merchants upon the Sale thereof in Foreign Markets, nor what was paid for Provision, strong Liquors, &c. to New England and other Places.

It is therefore very apparent, from what has been already mentioned,

p. 1831

That the Fishery at Newfoundland, from its first Establishment, has either flourished or languished according as the Inhabitants have been discouraged or encouraged.

That the principal Obstructions which have attended that Trade since the Reign of King Charles the First, when it was at the greatest Height (exclusive of those that proceeded from the Wars this Kingdom has been engaged in) are entirely owing to the Project for carrying on the said Trade by a Colony of Fishermen, in Opposition to the Fishing Ships belonging to the Adventurers.

That the first immediate Cause of the Decay of the Fishing Trade, and of the Disorders that have depressed it ever since, was from the Encouragement that was given to the Transportation of Passengers, by appointing Mr. John Treworgey Governor of Newfoundland in 1650, and by granting a Patent and Commission to Sir David Kirk, John Claypole, and others in 1655.

That the pernicious Consequences which evidently ensued upon the diverting the Course of the Fishery into this new Channel, were the only Motives that induced King Charles the Second (after every Circumstance relating to the Trade had been strictly examined and seriously considered) to order the Commander of the Convoy in 1675 to admonish the Planters to return Home, and to grant in the same Year a new Charter, which provided and guarded against every Inconveniency and Abuse that had interrupted the Adventurers in the Prosecution of their Fishing Trade.

That when these Regulations were settled there was a fair Prospect of retrieving and reviving the Trade ; but that the Indulgence shewn to the Planters in 1677, by permitting them to remain in the Country, rendered the Charter ineffectual, reduced the Fishery to the lowest Ebb, and favoured both the French and New Englanders in carrying on their Fishing Trade.

And that the unhappy State of the Trade from that Time to this (which is upwards of Forty Years) is an undeniable Argument that it cannot flourish under the present Regulations; which will be farther demonstrated by examining and comparing the Rules and Methods that were formerly observed by the Western Adventurers, with the extravagant and irregular Measures and Practices that of late Years have been introduced and pursued in the Management of the Fishery. For Instance :

Before the Fishing Ships became Transports to the Planters and Bye Boat Keepers, the usual Complement of a Ship containing 100 Tons fitted out for a Fishing Voyage, was 50 Men and 10 Boats, and this Practice was continued until 1677 ; in which Year, according to Sir William Poole's Accounts, there were employed in the Fishery 109 Fishing Ships, containing 9,035 Tons and 4,475 Men which amounted to upwards of 49 Men for every 100 Tons ; but upon a Medium of Four Years, since the Peace of Utrecht, the 86 Fishing Ships Annually employed in the Trade as aforesaid contained 9,010 Tons and but 1,839 Men, which is little more than 20 Men for every 100 Tons. The present Adventurers have therefore Annually wanted 2,666 Men to complete the Number their Predecessors maintained formerly on the same Tonnage in the Fishery ; and had their Ships been fully manned, the aforesaid 2,666 Men would have taken to the Value of at least £. 20 each, that is in the Whole £. 53,320 per Annum, over and above what they have now gained, and whatsoever is taken by the Fishing Ships entirely belongs to and is a certain Addition to the Stock of Your Majesty's Subjects residing in this Kingdom.

p. 1832

Whereas all the Advantages that the Inhabitants enjoy at present by the Fishery (unless the Season proves exceeding favourable) never answers their Charge ; for as they are in general very idle, indigent, and necessitous, they are always indebted and enslaved to the Traders from New England and other Parts, by whom they are supplied with Provisions for their Subsistence, and with vast Quantities of strong Liquors, Molasses, and Tobacco for Sale ; and many of them not having wherewithal to satisfy their said Creditors, they are in course stript of all they have taken before the Fishery is well over, and the rest when their Debts are discharged have seldom enough left to secure a sufficient Stock for their own and their Servants Support and Debaucheries in the winter ; so that New England reaps all the Fruit of their Labour, except what is paid for the Passage of their Servants, and for the Goods that are exported from Great Britain for their Consumption.

How much the Transportation of their Servants out and Home may amount to is uncertain ; but since few return from thence, we compute it cannot exceed
.. £4,500

And the Value of the Goods exported thither, according to the Custom House Accounts, upon a Medium of 3 Years after the present Peace, was 8,133

Communibus Annis . . 12,633

Another Instance of the Prejudice that Great Britain receives by the Inhabitants of Newfoundland, is from their Abuse of that Liberty which is given them to transport Servants to assist them in carrying on their Fishery.

For it must be observed that in the Years 1677 and 1701

The Number of the Inhabitants and their Men Servants amount to 1,507
2,159
And they maintained Boats 337
558

Which in the first Year falls short of Men $4\frac{1}{2}$, and in the last Year of Four Men to each Boat.

But in the Years 1715 and 1716

The Number of the Inhabitants was 3,153
2,611
And they maintained only, Boats 464 408

p. 1833

Which being after the Rate of $6\frac{3}{5}$ Men to every Boat, it necessarily follows they were supplied in 1715 and 1716 with 920 Men per Annum more than they would have employed in the same Number of Boats, according to their Management in the Year 1677 ; and since the Fishing Ships in Proportion to their Men, have taken a greater Quantity of Fish than was taken at the same Time by the Inhabitants, and that in the Year 1716 Servants were so scarce in Newfoundland, that they were forced to give £. 18 to £. 20 per Man for the Fishing Season, it can never be pretended that the said 920 Supernumeraries were employed in the Fishery ; but it manifestly confirms the Truth of all those Complaints that have been made for upwards of 40 Years past, that the New Englanders, by the Assistance of the Planters of Newfoundland, have carried away every Year from thence as many of the English Fishermen as they could persuade or seduce to proceed with them ; by which means they have established a very considerable Navigation, and gained a Fishery on their own Coast, which at present is probably superior to that at Newfoundland. Moreover, it will serve to justify and support what Captain Passenger, the Commander in Chief of the last Year's Convoy, has advised us on the 1st of October past, that he was very well informed the New England Vessels had carried away from Newfoundland, in 1716, One thousand Three hundred Men. From hence therefore it plainly appears, that the Navigation of this Kingdom has suffered exceedingly ever since the Transportation of Passengers to Newfoundland has been connived at ; and there can be no Doubt but that it has been One of the principal Causes of the Want of Seamen for Your Majesty's Service.

The next irregular and pernicious Practice of the Inhabitants that must be taken Notice of, is, their retailing of Rum and other Strong Liquors among the Fishermen.

That the Fishery was severely affected by the unhappy Consequences of this Practice soon after the First Planters were settled in Newfoundland, is apparent from the Charter of King Charles the First : whereby it is ordained in the 10th Article,

“That no Person shall set up any Tavern for selling of Wine, Beer,
&c. to entertain the Fishermen, &c.”

And it is as certain that the flourishing State of the Fishing Trade during the aforesaid Reign was, in a great Measure, owing to this wholesome Prohibition ; for as long as it was maintained, so long the Trade prospered, and it was no sooner dispensed with but the Trade sensibly declined ; and although the Planters were afterwards kept in Awe for some Time by the Charters that were granted by King Charles the Second, which confirmed the said Prohibition ; nevertheless, when that Difficulty was surmounted, and they were at Liberty to pursue their own Measures, the Fishery immediately languished. Nor has it rendered to this Kingdom from that Time above One Third Part of the Profit that was formerly enjoyed thereby ; excepting only after the Conclusion of the Peace at Ryswick, when for Three

p. 1834

Years the Fishing Trade was vigorously carried on, in Hopes that the said Peace would have favoured the Consumption of their Fish in Foreign Parts, and that the settling of the Trade by an Act of Parliament would have effectually prevented all Abuses and Disorders, and restored good Order and Government in the Fishery. But the said Act having only restrained the Inhabitants who keep Public Houses from selling upon the Lord's Day, or Sunday, any Liquors whatsoever, and without imposing any Penalty upon the Transgressors, even upon that Day, Newfoundland is now become a perfect Scene of Drunkenness and Debauchery ; nor can it be otherwise whilst such vast Quantities of Rum and Strong Liquors, Tobacco, and other Stores, are Annually imported from New England, the Leeward Islands, and other Places ; and that the Inhabitants, who carry on their Fishing Trade at a much greater Charge than the Fishing Ships, and are under the Necessity of selling their Fish at the same Price, have no other Way to reduce the Price thereof but by what they gain upon the Sale of their said Liquors to the poor Fishermen, who being always too prone to drink, are easily drawn into Debaucheries and Excesses, until they have profusely expended and consumed all, or at least a large Part of their Wages, to the great Prejudice of their Families. And as this has been always justly resented as an intolerable Abuse and Burthen, so the Disorders that naturally arise from the said Debaucheries have obstructed the Trade, by discouraging the Masters and Owners of the Fishing Ships from engaging in these Voyages ; it being evident that the Fishermen are become negligent and careless in their Employment ; that they are hereby rendered unfit for their Labour ; that they are often refractory and ungovernable ; and that, to support their Extravagances, they are guilty of many Embezzlements and Thefts ; which are Difficulties that are insuperable in a Fishing Voyage, the Success whereof absolutely depends upon the utmost Care and Frugality of the Master, and the Diligence and hard Labour of the Fishermen, especially when they are to contend with a Foreign Rival, who cherishes Industry, and crushes every Irregularity that increases the Charge of their Fishery.

Neither are these the only Hardships under which the Fishing Ships labour, for upon their fitting out, the best and ablest Fishermen generally decline serving in them until the Boat Keepers have their full Complements, the Boat Keepers Crews being exempted from working on Board Ship in their Passage, and in Newfoundland, when bad Weather hinders their Attendance on the Fishery.

And whereas the said Bye Boat Keepers always take their Passage on the earliest Ships and best Sailers, the Fishing Admirals, under the Pretence of their being Freighters of Ships, put them in Possession of the best and most convenient Places by the Water Side, to the great Prejudice and Discouragement of the later Ships, whose Masters have been frequently constrained to hire both Stages and Room from the said Boat Keepers, and obliged to carry their Fish so far backward, that they could not avoid allowing One Man extraordinary to each Boat.

Moreover, since it is now customary for many of the Bye Boat Keepers to remain every Winter in the Country, to secure their Stages and Rooms against the next Fishing Season, and that the aforesaid Act of 10th and 11th Gul. III. has provided, “ That all such Persons as since the 25th of March 1685 have built, cut out, or made (or at any Time hereafter shall build, cut out, or make) any Houses, Stages, Cook Rooms, Trainfats, or other Conveniencies for Fishing there, that did not belong to Fishing Ships since the said Year 1685, shall and may peaceably and quietly enjoy the same to his or their own Use, without any Disturbance of or from any Person or Persons whatsoever : ”

It is found by Experience, that the Shipping which was employed in the Fishery about the Time King Charles the Second granted his Second Charter, cannot be now accommodated as formerly in the principal Harbours where the Planters generally remain.

For the Number of those Ships being reduced some Years before 1685 to One Third Part or thereabouts of the Number that was Annually employed in 1675, 1676, and 1677, and the Trade continuing near upon the same Foot from 1685 to the Time the said Act was under Consideration, the said Ships neither did nor could occupy in that Interval more than One Third Part of the Stages and Rooms which had been in the Possession of the Fishing Ships in the aforesaid Three Years ; and without Doubt the rest were either decayed or destroyed in their Absence. But the Inhabitants having built, cut out, and made, since 1685, several Houses, Stages, Trainfats, &c. in the same Places where the other Two Third Parts of the Fishing Ships, Rooms, and Stages were formerly erected and fixed, the Fishing Ships are deprived by the Act of the Right they had to the said Places ; wheresoever, therefore, they shall be again encouraged to return to the Fishery, they will be obliged to hire their Conveniencies of the Planters in the same Manner as in 1698, in which Year, according to the Accounts transmitted by Sir John Norris from Newfoundland, they paid from £. 5 to £. 15 per Boat, which must be assigned for One of the Reasons why they quitted the Fishing Trade so soon after the Act passed, and why they have declined it ever since ; nevertheless, as the said Act has directed, by a preceding Clause, that those who had detained after 1685 any Beach or other Places for curing, drying, or husbanding of Fish, which before that Time belonged to the Fishing Ships, should relinquish the same to the public Use of the Fishing Ships arriving there. It cannot be imagined that the aforesaid Proviso was intended to abridge them of so great and necessary a Privilege, much less to permit the Planters to possess more Flakes and Beach than they actually want for curing and drying their Fish, in proportion to the Number of Boats they employ or to extend their Flakes and Huts by the Water Side, or behind those of the Fishing Ships, contrary to the ancient Custom of the Fishery.

It must be also remarked, that notwithstanding Placentia and several other Places lately possessed by the French in Newfoundland, were surrendered to Great Britain in compliance with the Treaty of Utrecht, the Fishing Ships enjoy no other Advantage thereby than by fishing at the Island of St. Peter's ; the Stages, Beaches, &c. at Placentia, and in those Parts, being engrossed by some of Your Majesty's Subjects inhabiting there. For

p. 1836

although the French, by the 14th Article of the said Treaty, were only allowed to remove with their moveable Effects, yet her late Majesty, by her Letter of the 23d of June 1713, to Colonel Nicholson, having permitted them to dispose of their Houses, Beaches, and other Immoveables, they were bought up by particular Persons in Hopes of letting them out Annually to the Fishermen, which has effectually discouraged the Fishing Trade in that Part of the Country.

To which may be added, That the Importation of Wine, and all other Necessaries (except Salt) for the Fishery by the Ships which proceed to Newfoundland from Portugal, Spain, and other Foreign Parts, is a Discouragement to the Adventurers in general, whose Ships are victualled, and Stores provided in this Kingdom.

Nor can we conclude without taking Notice, that we have lately received Letters from Your Majesty's Consuls, and the Merchants residing in Spain, Portugal, and Italy, that the Fish brought to those Markets from Newfoundland, for some Years past, has been for the most Part so very ill cured, that the Consumption thereof is greatly abated, and that the Trade is in Danger of being thereby lost.

Upon the Whole, therefore, we most humbly crave Leave to offer it as our Opinion to Your Majesty.

That this important Fishery at Newfoundland can never be revived or restored to its former flourishing State and Condition until it be again wholly carried on by Fishing Ships, according to its ancient Custom, and regulated by Laws agreeable thereunto.

And that the most effectual Method to remove all the afore-mentioned Obstructions, and to restrain the Irregularities and Disorders of the Fishermen, as well as to encourage the Adventurers to return to their Employment, would be to remove the Inhabitants or Planters to Nova Scotia, or to some other of Your Majesty's Plantations in America.

Nevertheless, lest this should be esteemed a Hardship on such of the Inhabitants as have erected Houses, or made any other Conveniencies for their fishing in Newfoundland, under the Encouragement which seems to have been given them by the Act of the 10th and 11th Gul. III. we shall shortly beg Leave to offer to Your Majesty some Heads of a Bill for remedying the Difficulties and Abuses the said Fishing Trade doth at present labour under, to the great Prejudice of Your Majesty's British Dominions.

All which is most humbly submitted.

(Signed) J. CHETWYND, CHA. COOKE,
P. DOCMINIQUE,
T. PELHAM,
MARTIN BLADEN.

Whitehall,
Dec. 19th 1718.

Office of Committee of Privy Council for Trade, Whitehall, 11th March 1793. A true Copy.

GEO. CHALMERS,
Ch^f Cl^k Com. C^l Trade.

Page	1	2	3	4	5
------	---	---	---	---	---

No. 757.ORDER OF HER MAJESTY IN COUNCIL,

APPROVING OF DRAFTS OF A COMMISSION AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR CAPTIAN, HENRY OSBORNE, AS GOVERNOR AND COMMANDER-IN- CHIEF IN AND OVER THE ISLAND OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

[22
May, 1729.]

C.O. 5. VOL. 21

At the Court at Kensington the 22 day of May 1729.

Present

The Queen's most Excellent Majesty

Upon reading this day at the Board a Report from the Lords of the Committee of His Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council with a Draught of Instructions for the Lord Vere Beauclerk, Commander in Chief of the Convoy appointed for the preservation of the Fishery of Newfoundland— And also with a Draught of a Blank Commission and Instructions for a Governor and Commander in Chief in and over the Island of Newfoundland in America, the Fort and Garrison at Placentia, and all other Forts and Garrisons Erected or to be Erected in that Island. Her Majesty taking the same into Her Consideration, was pleased with the advice of His Majesty's Privy Council to approve of the said severall Draughts, and to order, as it is hereby ordered that the said Draught of Instructions for the Lord Vere Beauclerk be prepared for Her Majesty's Royall signature, And that a Warrant be prepared for passing the said Draught of a Commission for a Governor of Newfoundland under the Great Seal of Great Britain, and that the Instructions for such Governor be prepared for Her Majesty's Royall signature.

And Her Majesty doth hereby further order ; that the Blanks left in the said Draughts of Commission and Instructions for the Name of the Governor be filled up with the Name of Captain Henry Osborn Commander of His Majesty's Ship the Squirrell— and that in Case of his Death William Coalsea first Lieutenant of His Majesty's Ship the Oxford or the first Lieutenant of the said Ship for the time being, be appointed to take upon him the administration of the Government of the said Island— And one of His Majesty's Principal Secretarys of State is to Cause the necessary Directions to be given therein accordingly :

Endorsed : May 22^d 1729.

Order of Council for preparing a Commission and Instructions for a Gov^r of the Island of Newfoundland.

No. 758.

COMMISSION PASSED UNDER THE GREAT SEAL OF GREAT BRITAIN

APPOINTING HENRY OSBORNE TO BE GOVERNOR AND COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF IN AND OVER THE ISLAND OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

[31
May,
1729.]

PATENT ROLL, 2 GEO. II., PART 3, NO 2.

D Con Osborn Ar Commission	}	George the Second by the Grace of God &c. To Our Trusty and welbeloved Henry Osborne Esquire Comander of Our Ship the Squirrel Greeting whereas wee did by Our Letters Patents vnder our Great Seal of Great Britain
-------------------------------	---	---

bearing date at Westminster the Eleventh day of September in the Second year of Our Reign Constitute and Appoint Richard Phillips Esquire Governour of Placentia in Newfoundland and our Captain General and Governor in Chief in and over Our Province of Nova Scotia or Accadie in America for and during Our will and pleasure And whereas wee have since thought it necessary for Our Service that Newfoundland Placentia and all other the fforts Islands and places thereunto belonging should be vnder the Government of one and the same Person and that a Governor should be appointed there to prevent the Great Irregularities Outrages Rapes ffelonies murthers and other heinous offences which are frequently Committed in Our Island of Newfoundland and especially during the winter Season by wicked people for want of Proper Persons legally Authorized to restrain and Punish such Offenders Now know you therefore that wee have Revoked Determined and made void And by these presents do Revoke Determine and make void so much of the recited Letters Patents and every part Clause and Article therein contained so farr as the same mençons or relates to the Government of our Garrison of Placentia or any other ffort Place or Part of Our said Island of Newfoundland or the fforts or Garrisons Erected or to be Erected thereon or any the People or Inhabitants abiding or resorting thereto And reposing especial Trust and Confidence in the Prudence Courage and Loyalty of you the said Henry Osborn of Our especial Grace certain knowledge and meer mocon have thought fit to Constitute and appoint and by these presents do Constitute and appoint you the said Henry Osborne to be Our Governor and Commander in Chief in and over our said Island of Newfoundland Our fort and Garrison at Placentia and all other fforts and Garrisons Erected or to be Erected in that Island And wee do hereby require and Comānd you to do and Execute all

p. 1839

* [to time]

* [an]

* [fit]

things in due manner that shall belong to your said Comānd and the Trust wee have reposed in you according to the several powers and Direcēons Granted or appointed you by this present Comīssion and the Instrucēons either herewith given to you or by such further Powers Instrucēons or Authorities as shall at any time hereafter be Granted or appointed you vnder our Signet or Sign manual or by Our Order in Our Privy Council And wee do further Give and Grant vnto you the said Henry Osborne full power and Authority from time* and at any time hereafter by your selfe or by any other to be Authorized by you in that behalfe to Administer and give the Oathes menconed in* Act passed in the first Year of Our late Royal ffathers Reign Entituled (An Act for the further Security of his maiesties Person and Government and the Succession of the Crown in the heires of the late Princess Sophia being Protestants and for Extinguish[ing] the hopes of the Pretended Prince of Wales and his open and Secret abettors) and to all and every such Person and Persons as you shall think* who shall at any time or times pass into our said Island or shall be resident or Abiding there And wee do by these presents Give and Grant vnto you full power and Authority to Constitute and Appoint Justices of the Peace with other necessary Officers and Ministers for the better Administracon of Justice and keeping the Peace and Quiet of the said Island which Justices of the Peace so Authorized may and shall hold and keep General Quarter Sessions of the Peace in such Places as you shall appoint according to the Custome of this part of Great Britain called England and to Adiourn such Session from time to time and from place to place as shall be most convenient and necessary for the Peace and welfare of Our Subjects Inhabiting there Provided you nor they do any thing by virtue of this Our Comīssion or the Powers hereby Granted contrary or repugnant to the Act for Encouraging the Trade to Newfoundland passed in the tenth and Eleventh years of the Reign of king William the third nor any way Obstruct the Powers thereby given and Granted to the Admirals of harbours or Captains of Our Ships of warr or any other matter or thing either prescribed by the said Act or by such Instrucēons as you shall receive from vs as aforesaid and all such Justices of the Peace and their Inferiour Officers and Ministers whom you or they shall Appoint amongst the Planters or Inhabitants resident and abiding there be Strictly required and enioyned in all Cases and times whenever necessary to be Aiding and Assisting to the vtmost of their Power to the Commadore or Comānders of Our Ships of warr and to the several Admirals in their respective harbours in putting in Execucon the several good Rules and Orders p^rscribed by the said Act for Encouraging the Trade to Newfoundland And provided also that no Person or Persons so by you appointed to be Justices of the Peace as aforesaid or other Office or ministers belonging or Appertaining to them do presume or be suffered to Act in such Officers or place vntill he or they have taken the aforesaid Oaths men̄oned in the said Act (ffor the further Security of his majesties person and Government and the Succession of the Crown in the heirs of the late Princess Sophia being Protestants and for Extinguishing the hopes of the pretended Prince of Wales and his open and Secret Abettors) as also make and Subscribe the Declaracon

* [the]

p. 1840

men̄oned in an Act of Parliament made in the five and twentieth year of the Reign of King Charles the Second Entituled (An Act for preventing Dangers which may happen from Papish Recusants) and also to take such Proper Oath or Oaths as are usally taken in this kingdom by persons Executing such Offices and Trusts which said Oathes and Declaracon you shall Administer and give or cause* same to be Administered and given to all and every Person and Persons who ought to take the same according to the laws and Customes of this kingdom And wee do hereby give and Grant vnto you the said Henry Osborn full power to Erect appoint and sett apart one or more convenient Court house or Court houses for the more Orderly meeting of such Justices of the Peace in order to hold such their Quarter or other Sessions with a convenient Prison adioyning thereto for the keeping of such Offenders as may be found necessary to be comitted to safe Custody vntill such Court or Sessions conveniently be held for trying and delivering Offenders against our Laws and the Peace of our Subjects And wee do hereby require and Command all Officers Civil and military and all other Inhabitants of Our said Island to be Obedient Aiding and Assisting vnto you in the Execution of this Our Com̄ission and of the Powers and Authorities herein contained And in Case of your Death Our will and pleasure is that William Coalsett first lievtenant of Our Ship the Oxford or the first lievtenant of Our said Ship for the time being do take vpon him the Administracon of the Government of Our said Island and Execute our said Com̄ission and Instrūcons and the several Powers and Authorities therein contained in the same manner to all intents and purposes as you Our said Governor and Com̄ander in Chief might or ought to do for and during Our will and pleasure And wee do hereby Declare Ordain and appoint that you the said Henry Osborne shall and may hold Execute and Enioy the Place of Our Governor and Com̄ander in Chief in and over our said Island of Newfound[land] with all and Singular the Powers and Authorities hereby Granted vnto you for and during Our Will and pleasure In Witness &c Witness Caroline Queen of Great Britain &c Guardian of the said Realm at Westminster the one and Thirtieth day of May

By Writt of Privy Seal

No. 759.ATTORNEY-GENERAL YORKE'S OPINIONpp. 538-541.

ON THE POWERS OF THE SEVERAL OFFICES AT NEWFOUNDLAND.

[29 Dec.,
1780.]

CHALMERS' "OPINIONS OF EMINENT LAWYERS ON VARIOUS POINTS OF ENGLISH JURISPRUDENCE," ETC., 1ST AMER. ED. [BURLINGTON : 1858].

To the King's most excellent Majesty.

May it please your Majesty.

In humble obedience to your Majesty's commands signified to me by his Grace the Duke of Newcastle, your Majesty's principal secretary of state, referring to me an extract of the commission to Captain Osborne, Governor of Newfoundland, so far relates to the authority and direction thereby given to him, to appoint justices of the peace in the several districts of that colony, and an extract of a letter received from him, with copies of two papers therein referred to, (all which are hereunto annexed,) by which it might appear how he is obstructed in the execution of your Majesty's commands to him in this respect, and particularly, that it is pretended to be contrary to the act of parliament for encouraging the fishery of Newfoundland, and directing me particularly to take that act into consideration, and report to your Majesty how the law stands in this point, and whether there is any foundation for that objection, or any interfering between the powers given by the act to the fishing admirals, and the authorities which justices of peace, in the manner they are established here, are invested with by their commission : I have considered the said annexed papers, and also the act of parliament above mentioned, which was made in the 10th and 11th years of the reign of his late Majesty, King William III ; and I humbly certify to your Majesty, that by the said Act, it is enacted "That the admirals of and in every port and harbour of Newfoundland, for the time being, be, and are, thereby authorized and required (in order to preserve peace and good government amongst the seamen and fishermen, as well in their respective harbours as on the shore,) to see the rules and orders in the said act contained, concerning the regulations of the fishery there duly put in execution ; and that in case of any difference or controversy shall arise in Newfoundland, or the islands thereunto adjoining, between the masters of fishing-boats and the inhabitants there, or any by-boat keeper, for, or concerning, the rights and property of fishing-rooms, stages, flakes, or any other building or conveniency for fishing or curing of fish in the several harbors or coves, the said differences, disputes, or controversies, shall be judged and determined by the fishing admirals in the several harbors and coves ;” and in case any of the said masters of fishing-ships, by-boat-keepers, or inhabitants, shall think themselves aggrieved by such judgment or determination, and shall appeal to the commanders of any of your Majesty's ships of war, appointed as convoys for Newfoundland, the said commander is hereby authorized and empowered to determine the same, pursuant to the regulation in the said Act.

p. 1842

These are all the clauses in the said act of parliament which relate to the present question, whereby it appears that the whole authority granted to the fishing admirals is restrained to the seeing the rules and orders, contained in that act concerning the regulation of the fishery there, duly put in execution, and to the determination of differences arising between the masters of fishingboats and the inhabitants, or any by-boat-keeper, touching the right and property of fishing-rooms, stages, flakes, or any other building or conveniency for fishing or curing of fish, in the several harbors or coves of Newfoundland, which is a kind of civil jurisdiction in particular cases of property ; whereas the authority of justices of the peace extends only to breaches of the peace, and other criminal matters, and therefore, I am humbly of opinion that the powers granted by your Majesty to captain Osborne, to constitute justices of the peace in Newfoundland, is not contrary to, or inconsistent with, any of the provisions in the said act ; and that there is no interfering between the powers given by that act to the fishing admirals, and the authorities which justices of the peace are invested with by their commission.

P. YORKE.

December 29, 1730.

[11 Apr.,
1750.]No. 760.*ORDER OF HIS MAJESTY IN COUNCIL,

APPROVING OF REVISED DRAFTS OF A COMMISSION AND INSTRUCTIONS FOR FRANCIS WM. DRAKE, AS GOVERNOR AND COMMANDER-IN- CHIEF IN AND OVER THE ISLAND OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

C.O. 5. VOL. 21

At the Court at St. James's the 11th day of April 1750.

Present

The Kings most Excellent Majesty in Council.

Upon reading at the Board a Representation from the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantation dated the 6th of this Instant, Setting forth that they have prepared a Draught of a New Commission for Francis William Drake Esq^r Commander in Chief in and over His Majestys Island of Newfoundland, revoking and determining His Majestys former Commission to the said Francis William Drake, and empowering him, together with other Powers usually given to His Majestys Governors of the said Island, to constitute and appoint Judges and in Cases requisite, Commissioners of Oyer and Terminer for the Hearing and Determining of all Criminal Causes, Treason excepted, in the said Island— And further setting forth, that they have also prepared a New Draught of Instructions for the said Francis William Drake, wherein they have made no alterations from the former Instructions to him, excepting, that they have, in Obedience to His Majesty's Commands, added an Article agreeable to that prepared for Philip Vanbrugh Esq^r His Majesty's Governor of the said Island in the Year 1738 relative to the Clause inserted in his Commission, whereby he is empowered to appoint Judges, and in Cases requisite, Commissioners of Oyer and Terminer for the Trial of Criminal Causes — His Majesty this day took the said Representation, together with the said Draughts of a Commission and Instructions into His Royal Consideration, and was pleased, with the Advice of His Privy Council, to approve the said Draughts, And to Order as it is hereby Ordered, that His Grace the Duke of Bedford One of His Majestys Principal Secretarys of State, Do Cause a Warrant to be prepared for His Majesty's Royal Signature in Order to pass the said Draught of a Commission under the Great Seal. And that His Grace do likewise cause the said Draught of Instructions to be prepared for His Majesty's Royal Signature.

W. SHARPE
O. signed.

Endorsed : Order of Council, 11th April 1750, Gov^r of Newfoundland.

[23
Apr,
1750.]

No. 761.

COMMISSION PASSED UNDER THE GREAT SEAL OF GREAT BRITAINAPPOINTING FRANCIS WM. DRAKE TO BE GOVERNOR AND COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF IN AND OVER THE ISLAND OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

PATENT ROLL, 23 GEO. II., PART IV., NO 4.

Francis William Drake
Governor of Newfoundland} George the Second by the Grace of God of Great Britain France and Ireland King Defender of the Faith &c To our Trusty and Wellbeloved

Francis William Drake Esquire Greeting Whereas We did by our Letters Patents under our Great Seal of Great Britain bearing date at Westminster the Twenty sixth day of January in the Twenty third Year of Our Reign Constitute and Appoint You the said Francis William Drake to be our Governor and Commander in Chief in and over our Island of Newfoundland in America our Fort and Garrison at Placentia and all other Forts and Garrisons Erected and to be Erected in that Island for and during our Will and Pleasure as by the same Letters patent relation being thereunto had may more fully and at large appear Now Know You that We have Revoked Determined and made void and by these Presents Do Revoke Determine and make void the said recited Letters patent and every Clause Article and thing therein contained And We reposing especial Trust and Confidence in the Prudence courage and Loyalty of You the said Francis William Drake of our especial Grace certain knowledge and meer motion Have thought fit to constitute and appoint And by these Presents Do Constitute and Appoint You the said Francis William Drake to be our Governor and Commander in Chief in and over our said Island of Newfoundland Our Fort and Garrison at Placentia and all other Forts and Garrisons Erected or to be Erected in that Island And We do hereby require and Command You to do and Execute all things in due manner that shall belong to your said Command and the Trust We have reposed in you according to the several Powers and Directions Granted or appointed You by this present Commission and the Instructions either herewith given to You or by such further powers Instructions or Authorities as shall at any time hereafter be Granted or Appointed You under our Signet or Sign Manual or by Our Order in our Privy Council And We do further Give and Grant unto You the said ffancis William Drake full Power and authority from time to time and at all times hereafter by yourself or by any other to be Authorized by you in that behalf to Administer and give the Oaths mentioned in an Act passed in the first Year of our late Royal ffathers Reign Entituled (An Act for the further Security of his Majesties Person and Government and the Succession of the Crown in the Heirs of the late Princess Sophia being Protestants and for Extinguishing the hopes of the pretended Prince of Wales and his open and Secret Abettors) to all and every such Person and Persons as You shall think fit who shall at any time [or times] pass into our said Island or shall be resident or abiding there And We do by these Presents give and Grant unto You full power and authority to Constitute and Appoint Judges and in Cases requisite Commissioners of Oyer and Terminer for the hearing and determining of all Criminal Causes Treason Excepted according to Law and for awarding Execution thereupon with all reasonable and necessary powers authorities flees and Priviledges belonging thereunto* Justices of the Peace with other necessary Officers and Ministers for the better Administration of Justice and keeping the Peace and Quiet of the said Island which Justices of the Peace so authorized may and shall hold and keep General Quarter Sessions of the peace in such places as You shall appoint according to the Custom of this part of Great Britain called England and to Adjourn such Session from time to time and from Place to Place as shall be most convenient and necessary for the peace and Welfare of our Subjects Inhabiting there Provided neither you nor they do anything by virtue of this Commission or the powers hereby Granted contrary or repugnant to the Act for Encouraging the Trade to Newfoundland passed in the Tenth and Eleventh Years of the Reign of King William the Third nor any way Obstruct the powers thereby Given and Granted to the Admirals of Harbours or Captains of our Ships of War or any other matter or thing either Prescribed by the said Act or by such Instructions as You shall receive from Us as aforesaid And We do hereby give and Grant unto You full power and authority where you shall see cause or shall Judge any Offender or Offenders in Criminal matters or for any ffines or forfeitures due unto Us fit Objects of our Mercy to Pardon all such Offenders and to remit all such Offences ffines and forfeitures Wilful Murder only excepted in which Case You shall likewise have power upon extraordinary Occasions to Grant Reprieves to the Offenders until and to the intent our Royal Pleasure may be known therein And all such Justices of the Peace and their Inferiour Officers and Ministers whom You or they shall appoint amongst the planters or Inhabitants resident and Abiding there are strictly required and enjoyned in all Cases and times whenever necessary to be aiding and Assisting to the utmost of their Power to the Commodore or Commander of our Ships of War and to the several Admirals in their respective Harbours in putting in Execution the several Good Rules and Orders Prescribed by the said Act for Encouraging the Trade to Newfoundland And Provided also that no person or persons so by You appointed to be Justices of the Peace as aforesaid or other Officers or Ministers belonging or appertaining to them do presume or be suffered to Act in such Office or Place until he or they have taken the aforesaid Oaths mentioned in the said Act

p. 1845

*
sic

p. 1846

*
sic

for the further Security of his Majestys Person and Government and the Succession of the Crown in the Heirs of the late Princess Sophia being Protestants and for Extinguishing the hopes of the pretended Prince of Wales and his open and secret Abettors as also made and Subscribed the Declaration mentioned in an Act of Parliament made in the Twenty fifth Year of the Reign of King Charles the Second Entituled An Act for preventing Dangers which may happen from Popish Recusants and also taken such proper Oath or Oaths as are usually taken in this Kingdom by Persons Executing such Offices and Trusts which said Oaths and Declaration You shall Administer and give or cause the same to be Administered and given to all and every Person and Persons who ought to take the same according to the Laws and Customs of this Kingdom And We do hereby Give and Grant unto You the said ffrancis William Drake full Power to Erect Appoint and Set apart One or more convenient Court House or Court Houses for the more Orderly Meeting of such Justices of the Peace in Order to hold such their Quarter or other Sessions with a Convenient Prison adjoining for* thereto for the keeping of such Offenders as may be found necessary to be Committed to Safe Custody until such Court or Sessions can conveniently be held for Trying and Delivering Offenders against our Laws and the Peace of our Subjects And We do hereby require and Command all Officers Civil and Military and all other Inhabitants of our said Island to be Obedient Aiding and Assisting unto You in the Execution of this our Commission and of the powers and authorities herein contained And in Case of Your Death our Will and Pleasure is that the Person upon whom the Command of our Ships under your Command shall devolve do take upon him the Administration of the Government of our said Island and Execute our said Commission and Instructions and the several powers and authorities therein contained in the same manner to all intents and purposes as You our said Governor and Commander in Chief might or ought to do for and during our Will and Pleasure And We do hereby Declare Ordain and Appoint that You the said ffrancis William Drake shall and may hold Execute and Enjoy the Place of the* Governor and Commander in Chief in and over our said Island of

*
sic

Newfoundland with all and singular the Powers and Authorities hereby Granted unto You for and during our Will and Pleasure In Witness &c Witness &c the Twenty third day of April in the Twenty third Year of our Reign.

By Writ of Privy Seal

No. 762.

[May,
1752.]EXTRACT FROM “AN EXAMINATION OF THE ACT OF PARLIAMENT RELATIVE TO THE TRADE AND GOVERNMENT OF THE AMERICAN COLONIES,” &c.¹

BY JA. ABERCROMBY [MAY, 1752].

CAN. ARCH., SHELBURNE PAPERS. VOL. 47, p. 3.

“Having thus stated the different and particular constitutions of Government in all these Colonies, For as to that of Newfoundland, tho. Rank'd amongst the Best, and first, In point of Property belonging to this Kingdom, from the Discovery thereof by Cabot, for Henry the 7th in the year 1497 ; Yet the object of that Government relates to a kind of Police amongst Fisher Men, and to them only.”

¹ This treatise was prepared for the use of Pelham, First Lord of the Treasury, and Granville, President of the Council, and contains an elaborate survey of the charter and constitution of each of these colonies.

No. 763.

EXTRACT FROM A REPRESENTATION OF THE LORDS OF TRADE TO HIS MAJESTY,

RELATING TO THE NEWFOUNDLAND TRADE AND FISHERY.

[29
April,
1765]

C.O. 195. VOL. 9, p. 397.

To the King's most excellent Majesty.

May it please Your Majesty,

As the Fisheries of Newfoundland and of the Territories dependent thereupon, which have been added to Your Majesty's Dominion by the definitive Treaty of Paris, are of the greatest Importance to the Commerce and Navigation of these Kingdoms, We thought it our Duty the last Year, upon Your Majesty's Appointment of Captain Pallisser to be Governor of that Island, and of the said Territories, to form his Instructions in such manner as, joined to the Confidence we had in that Gentleman's Ability, gave us reasonable Ground to hope for the fullest Information of the true State of the said Fisheries, in the carrying on of which it appeared, that many great Irregularities and Disorders had prevailed ; nor have we been disappointed in the Expectations we had entertained by the Conduct of Your Majesty's Governor on this Occasion, whose Attention to the due Execution of those Parts of his Instructions, which regard immediately the State of the Island and of the Fishery of Your Majesty's Subjects, is no less deserving of Your Majesty's favourable Notice, than that which he has shown to the more delicate and difficult Parts of those Instructions, for his Proceedings on which We humbly beg Leave to refer to our Representations of the 11th of Decem^r last and of the 16th instant.

It would be mispending Your Majesty's Time to trouble Your Majesty with a Recital of all the Facts mentioned, and the Observations suggested in the Letters we have received from Captain Pallisser, and in his Answers to the several Queries contained in his Instructions ; and therefore we shall content ourselves for the present with representing to Your Majesty, what appears to be the general State of this important Branch of the Commerce of Your Majesty's Kingdoms, resulting from those Facts and Observations, which have been Collected with greater Exactness, and are stated with more Accuracy and Precision, than, will, we conceive, be found in former Returns.

It would be equally unnecessary to enter at present into a in its progressive State, as Your Majesty will find every Circumstance relative thereto, already fully set forth and enlarged upon by our Predecessors in Office in a Representation made to His Majesty King George the first in the Year 1718: in which Representation many Facts are stated and Arguments deduced therefrom, and several Propositions submitted, which we apprehend will be very worthy of Attention, whenever it shall be found necessary to go into a Consideration of those Measures, which it may be ultimately proper to pursue in Respect to this Fishery in every part of it.

It may however be necessary briefly to premise, that for more than a Century after the first Discovery of Newfoundland and the Establishment of its Fisheries, the Opinions of Government as to the most advantageous Plan of carrying it on for the national Benefit, appear to have been very unsettled ; wavering between two different and in some Measure adverse Propositions viz^t either the planting the Island and establishing a civil Government, and thereby encouraging a promiscuous Fishery ; or the discouraging Inhabitancy, and thereby confining the Fishery entirely to Ships fitted out from these Kingdoms : and thus by some times adopting and pursuing the one, and some times the other, as different Interests prevailed, the Nation lost many Advantages, which would have been derived to it, had either one or the other of the Propositions been firmly and uniformly pursued.

The Attention, which was given after the happy Revolution to those Measures, which might most effectually promote and extend the Commerce of Great Britain, necessarily introduced an Examination into the State of this important Branch of that Commerce ; and, after a full Discussion of the two different Propositions, which had been before alternately pursued, in respect to the Mode of carrying on the Fishery, the latter was, though not without great Difference of Opinion, adopted; and those Regulations for the Management of it, which had been in former Reigns prescribed by Charters from the Crown, were, with some small Alterations, enacted into Law by the Statute of the 10th and 11th of William the third.

As that Act was however soon followed by a War between England and France, it was difficult to judge with Precision of the Effect of it under such a Circumstance of accidental Discouragement to the Trade : But it is evident from the Returns of the number of Ships employed in the Fishery from Great Britain, not only during the War but for several Years after the Peace of Utrecht, that the Act had not the Effect to restore the Ship-Fishery, which we conceive to have been the principal Object of it ; This is nevertheless not to be wondered at, seeing that, however perfect and complete the Regulations of the Act may be as to many Points, yet the Observance of them is not enforced by any Penalty or Mode of Prosecution ; nor, if it were, do any of them directly operate to the restraining that Inhabitancy, which had, for many Years, been gradually increasing to the Prejudice of the Ship-Fishery, and which Inhabitancy does in its Consequences contradict and counteract those Principles upon which the Act appears to have been formed ; But the Circumstance relative to this Act which has of all others most directly tended to defeat the intention of it, and subvert the System it means to encourage, is that Proviso in it, by which it is enacted, “that all such Persons, as since the Year 1685 have built, cut out, or made, or shall at any Time thereafter build, cut out or make any Houses, Stages, Cook-rooms, Train-Fats or other Conveniences for fishing there, that did not belong to fishing Ships since the said Year 1685 shall and may peaceably and quietly enjoy the same to his or their own Use without any Disturbance of or from any Person or Persons whatsoever ;” which Proviso will we conceive upon a View of the other Regulations of the Act appear to be a direct Contradiction of them.

p. 1850

It is true indeed, that as long so the Fishery of the British Subjects was confined to that small Part of the Island, which was in the Possession of Your Majesty's Royal Predecessors antecedent to the Treaty of Utrecht, this Proviso neither had nor could have any great Effect to the Prejudice of the Ship Fishery ; because in that Part of the Island most of the Places in the several Harbours, which afforded Conveniencies of Beach and Flake for the Fishery, were and actually had been for many Years prior to the enacting of that Regulation, occupied by the Owners of the fishing Ships from England under the former Establishment ;—But when the Fishery, by the Cession of the whole Island of Newfoundland at the Treaty of Utrecht, came to be extended to Placentia, and all the Southern Parts of the Island, and might have been, though it was not till after the Commencement of the last War, extended to every Part, it was evident, admitting, as it is contended by some Persons, that the Act does extend to the whole Island, what the Effect of this Proviso must be in Places where no fishing Ships from England had any such Possession as the Act supposes, and consequently where all the Places most convenient for the Fishery, would be, as they actually have been, in many Parts, engrossed and claimed by Inhabitants and By-boat-Keepers to the Exclusion of the Ship Fishery, not only of Your Majesty's Subjects, but also of those of France intitled under the Treaties of Utrecht and Paris to a concurrent Fishery between Bonavista and Point Riche ; such Inhabitants or By-boat-Keepers pretending a Right to acquire unlimited Property, not only under the Proviso of the Act, but also under Grants from preceding Governors of the Island.

It appears however to be the Opinion of your Majesty's Servants in the Law, which Opinion is hereunto annexed, that the Act of King William was not meant to extend to those parts of the Island that were not in Possession of the Crown of Great Britain at the Time the Act was made ; if therefore Your Majesty shall think proper to adopt this Opinion, it is our Duty, in order not only to avoid Disputes between Your Majesty's Subjects and those of France in carrying on the concurrent Fishery ; but to prevent vexatious and expensive Litigations among your Majesty's Subjects, several Instances of which already appear in Westminster Hall, most humbly to recommend, that Your Majesty's Governor should be instructed not to allow any exclusive Possession to be taken of any Lands, Rivers or Islands, as private Property, in the northern Parts of Newfoundland, upon Pretence of the aforesaid Proviso in the Act of Parliament, or of Grants from Governors, who never had any

p. 1851

Authority by their Commission to make such Grants ; and that he take Care, that the fishing Ships do choose their Stations as they respectively arrive, and do take up, subject to his Controul, such Space only of Beach as shall be proportioned to the .number of their Boats ; conformable to the Directions of the Act of King William in respect to those Parts of the Coast, which were in Possession of the Crown of Great Britain at the Time the Act was passed, and to which Your Majesty's Servants in the Law seem to confine the Extent of it in the before mentioned Opinion.

We most humbly desire however, that it may not be understood from what we have said on this Subject, that we mean to declare an Opinion, or take upon us to decide, that this Act of King William is, either in its general Principles or particular Regulations, adapted to the present State of the whole Island of Newfoundland and the Territories dependent upon it, we have been induced to recommend this Instruction to Your Majesty for the present, as it appears to us necessary to prevent the Inconveniencies, which might result from the before mentioned Proviso in the Act applying itself to a particular part of the Fishery under particular Circumstances.

The Consideration of what may be ultimately proper to be done for establishing the whole of this valuable Branch of the national Commerce arid Possessions upon such a Basis, and under such Regulations, as that Your Majesty's Subjects may derive all the Advantages they are capable of affording, is of very great Extent, and depends upon a great Variety of Facts and Circumstances, which have as yet been but little known or understood ; and therefore it will be our Duty to proceed to lay before your Majesty as briefly as possible, what appears to be in general the present State of the Island of Newfoundland, of the Territories lately annexed thereto, and of the Fisheries belonging to each respectively, according to such Returns and Informations as we have received from Your Majesty's Governor ; to the End that Your Majesty may be the better enabled to form a Judgement upon the whole.

It will already have appeared to Your Majesty from what we have before stated, that, antecedent to the passing the Act of the 10th and 11th of William the third, the Fishery of Newfoundland had by a gradual Increase of Inhabitants begun to vary from the Plan upon which it had been originally established, and was become in part a sedentary Fishery ; and though it is evident, that this Act was intended to check this Deviation, and to restore the antient System ; yet it is as evident, that partly from the Impropriety of some of the Regulations, partly from the Want of Penalties to enforce them, and partly from the Ignorance, Neglect and Inattention of those, to whom the Execution of them and the Superintendency of the Fishery were entrusted, it had little or no Effect ; few or none of the Rules and Regulations were observed ; and, the Masters of Ships, which carried out Passengers from this Kingdom and from Ireland, either not having Power to oblige them to return, or perhaps not finding it their Interest to bring them back when the fishing Season was over, the Practice of their remaining there began, and has continued, and gradually increased to the Extent at which it is at present arrived.

p. 1852

It is difficult to ascertain with Precision the present Number of Inhabitants having constant Residence in Newfoundland : but from the best Accounts we have been able to collect it cannot be less than fifteen thousand, including Men Women and Children ; and from the Report made to us by Your Majesty's Governor of the State of the Island, and of the Condition and Employment of these People, it appears, "That the greatest Part of them are Roman Catholicks ;"

"That they are under no Controul of any regular civil Government, except what arises from the ineffectual Establishment of Justices of the Peace, who oftener use their Authority for their own private Interest than the publick Welfare.

"That, except at St. John's, they have not any where the necessary Offices of Religion administred to them ; but live in the most Savage State, abandoning themselves to every Species of Debauchery and Extravagance, which such a Condition must necessarily introduce.

"That for seven Months in the Year there is not Employment for a tenth Part of these Inhabitants ; and that consequently they spend that Time in Idleness, and subsist for the greatest Part by Robbery, Theft, and every Species of Violence and Wickedness.

"That they burn and destroy great Quantities of Wood growing near the several Harbours, which ought to be preserved for Building, and repairing Boats, Storehouses, Stages, Cookrooms, and other Structures essentially necessary to the Fishery.

“That they are principally, if not altogether, supplied with Provisions, (Beef, Pork and Butter excepted, which are supplied from Ireland,) and also with Rum, Sugar, Molasses, and many other Articles of necessary Consumption from the other Plantations, to the Amount of more than double in Value what they take from this Kingdom ;

“That these as well as all other Articles of Importation are engrossed by a few opulent Merchants, Store Keepers, and considerable Boat Keepers, who retail them to the rest of the Inhabitants, and to those they employ under them in the Fishery at exorbitant Prices ; by which means they keep them poor and in Debt, and dependent upon them ; and that these Merchants, Storekeepers and Boat Keepers, in Order to secure the Produce of the Labour of the poor Inhabitants to themselves, press their Goods upon them in advance for that Produce, so that they contract Debts without a Possibility of paying them ; and thus mortgaging the Fish before it is caught, their only Study is how to defraud their Creditors, contract fresh Debts with other Merchants, and so become indifferent about prosecuting their Fishery ; and if they do prosecute it, it is only to sell their Fish clandestinely to others for immediate Supplies or to the French.

“That the Inhabitants under these Circumstances of Oppression, and deprived of every View of bettering their Condition, become abandoned to that dissolute Way of Life above stated, and remain under a slavish Servitude to the Merchant Suppliers, Store Keepers and Boat-Keepers whose Object it is by every Method to induce and compel such as come out Passengers from England and Ireland, to remain in the Country, exercising every scandalous Act to defraud and cheat those Servants, whom they cannot persuade to run out their Wages in Truck or Liquors ;

“That all the Ship-Rooms and other Conveniences used for the Fishery in those Parts of the Island, which were the antient Possession of the Crown of Great Britain, are now become altogether the private Property of Merchants, Store Keepers and Boat-Keepers, who reside constantly in the Island ; by which means the Ship-Fishery is entirely dropped, except as to a few Bankers, and with it the Observance of the Rules and Regulations of the Act of King William, all of which are as to any good purpose laid aside ; The End for which the Admirals in the several Harbours were instituted, forgot ; their Duty neglected ; and their Authority despised ; and the Act never appealed to but to support Claims of Property to Land, as unwarrantable as they are inconsistent with the Principles it adopts.

“That there being no proper Establishment in the Island for the Execution of the Laws of Trade, there is an opening for the most illicit Practices in this respect, more especially with the French at Miquelon and S^t Peters, who endeavour by every Artifice and Temptation to introduce a Commerce with Your Majesty's Subjects, which for want of such Establishments will necessarily have it's full Scope and Effect during the Absence of Your Majesty's Ships of War ; and lastly,

“That there is Reason to fear, that many of the Ships employed in the Newfoundland Fishery as British Ships are in part owned and belong to Spaniards, or to the Subjects of other foreign States.”

Such, may it please Your Majesty, is the melancholy Picture, which Your Majesty's Governor draws of the State of the Island of Newfoundland, and we fear, in most parts of it bears but too just a Resemblance ; this alone therefore we trust is sufficient to evince the Necessity of an immediate Attention to so important a Part of the national Interest : But, when combined with the Considerations suggested by us to Your Majesty in this, and the two former Representations, we have had the Honour to lay before Your Majesty upon this Subject, will render the neglect of it as disgraceful to the Policy, as it would be disadvantageous to the Commerce of Your Majesty's Kingdoms.

The Principles, upon which the Newfoundland Fishery was established and carried on under the great Western Charter, and which the Act of King William attempts to restore, are, as far as they extend, so true in Policy, and the Arguments in Support of that Plan are so plausible, that it should seem at the first View of it to admit of no Competition ; since by confining the Fishery to Ships from Great Britain, and requiring those Ships to take out and bring back a certain Number of Green Men every year, it not only supposes a large Increase of Sea Men, but also offers to ensure to

p. 1854

these Kingdoms the exclusive and immediate Supply of every Article of Consumption in this Branch of Trade ; but Experience has shewn, that this Plan, however plausible in Speculation, and at first answering in some Degree to its Objects, failed nevertheless in it's Execution ; and that it was impracticable by any Regulations to prevent that Inhabitancy, which it became the Interest of those, engaged in the Fishery, to encourage, and which in Fact has finally subverted a System confined to particular Objects, which, however desirable upon particular Consideration of State Policy, did we conceive lay the Trade under many Difficulties, and subject it to many Disadvantages inconsistent with the general Interests of it ; for it is evident on the other hand, that the sedentary Fishery, carried on by Persons resident upon the Island, has many Advantages over that Fishery carried on by the fishing Ships, which must operate to the Benefit of this Branch of Commerce in general, seeing that they can go earlier and stay later upon their fishing Stations, and have also many superior Advantages and Conveniencies of repairing their Vessels, Stages, Storehouses and other Works, and of making Preparations in the Winter for the ensuing Season and, notwithstanding all the Disorders, Abuses and Irregularities we have stated, it does appear, that the number of Ships employed in this Trade and the Quantity of Fish cured and carried to Market, are, independent of many other peculiar Advantages which would not attend a mere Ship Fishery, as great now as are stated to have been employed and caught in the most flourishing Time of this Fishery under the antient Establishment, whilst the Value of our Exports to this Island is five Times as great as what it is stated to have been at that Period ; and though it be true as is represented, that the Value of what they take from the Colonies is double what they take from this Kingdom, yet that must not be accounted for Loss, since whatever Profits are gained by them finally center in this Kingdom.

Upon this View therefore of the State of this Fishery it does appear to us very doubtful, whether it would consist with true Policy to attempt to restore it to the Principles and System, adopted by the Act of King William, was such a Measure practicable ; but as we conceive this is not practicable in the present State of the Country, or at least not so without a very great Expence to the Publick, attended perhaps with Circumstances of Injustice, if not of Inhumanity, it will remain to be decided by Your Majesty, what Plan it may be proper to pursue for the better Management of this important Island, and for the Regulation of it's Fishery under it's present State, that, with as little Prejudice as possible to the Ship Fishery of Your Majesty's British Subjects, and without infringing the Rights of the Subjects of France, may produce civil Order and good Government, and prevent those Irregularities and Abuses, which, if suffered to continue, must probably ruin the whole Fishery, and will certainly introduce every Species of illicit Commerce, to the Diminution and Injury of the Trade, Manufactures and Navigation of this Nation.

We do not mean however in what we have suggested to declare an Opinion, that, if Your Majesty shall think it advisable, under some more perfect and uniform Plan of Government, to allow of Property and Inhabitancy in this Island, it would be expedient, that such Allowance should extend to every Part of it : Informed as we are at present, we rather think this Allowance ought not to take place in those Parts, where the Concurrent Fishery is established by the Treaties of Utrecht and Paris ; but that the Northern Parts of the Island from Point Riche on one Side to Cap Bonavista on the other should be reserved for a Ship Fishery only, to be carried on by the Subjects of Your Majesty's Crown and those of France ; under most of the Rules and Regulations enacted by the Act of King William.

p. 1855

We have nothing further to add with regard to Newfoundland, but, that, if it shall appear to Your Majesty, from a Consideration of what we have offered respecting the present State of the Island, that some more perfect and settled Plan of Government should take place, or that the Inhabitants should be removed and the Fishery restored to it's antient Establishment throughout the whole Island, it will be our Duty, upon a Signification of Your Majesty's Pleasure, to consider and propose such Measures against the next Session of Parliament, as shall appear to us proper for carrying into Execution which ever of these Propositions Your Majesty shall, with the Advice of Your Privy Council, think proper to adopt.

* * * *

HILLSBOROUGH.
SOAME JENYNS.
EDW^D BACON.
GEO: RICE.
ORWELL.
BAMBER GASCOYNE.
J. DYSON.

Copy.

Whitehall,

April 29th, 1765. } Ex^d

Page	1	2
------	---	---

[27
March,
1766.]

No. 764.

EXTRACT FROM A REPRESENTATION OF THE LORDS OF TRADE TO HIS MAJESTY THE KING,

RELATING TO THE NEWFOUNDLAND TRADE AND FISHERY.

C.O. 195. VOL. 9, p. 440.

* sic

To the King's most excellent Majesty.

May it please Your Majesty,

It appearing from the Reports of the State of Newfoundland made last Year to this Board by Your Majesty's Governor of that Island, That the military Establishments were neglected and the principal Fortifications in Ruins ; That an illicit and destructive Commerce had been carried on between Your Majesty's Subjects there and the French at Miquelon and S^t Peters ; That great Difficulties and Embarrassments had occurred in the Execution of the Instructions given by Your Majesty for the well ordering the Fishery in those Parts, where the Subjects of France are allowed by Treaty a concurrent Fishery ; and that a State of Inhabitancy, unrestrained by any Form or Consitution * of civil Government, had operated to the total Subversion of that Policy upon which the Fisheries dependent on that Island were originally established, and to defeat those great national Advantages, which were the Objects of the Regulations of the Statute of the 10th and 11th of William the third ; our Predecessors in Office thought it their Duty humbly to lay before Your Majesty in their Representations of the 11th of December 1764 and the 29th of April 1765, a full State of these several Matters, to the End that Your Majesty might, with the Advice of Your Council, take such Measures, and establish such Regulations as should be found necessary and expedient in a Case of so great Importance to the Interest of this Nation, and which appeared to require Attention.

In Consequence of this Proceeding it becomes a necessary and indispensable Duty in us most humbly to lay before Your Majesty such further Reports, as have been made to us by Your Majesty's Governor of Newfoundland, of the present State of that Island, and of the several Occurrences during the last Fishing Season, so far as they relate to those Parts of his Duty, on which he was directed to correspond with this Board.

From these Reports, as contained in the Papers hereunto annexed, it will appear to your Majesty, That the Fortifications still continue in a State of Ruin and Decay ; That the illicit Commerce between Your Majesty's

p. 1857

Subjects and the French has been greatly enlarged and extended, That, from Claims of exclusive Property set up by Your Majesty's Subjects, the Difficulties attending the Execution of those Instructions of Your Majesty, relative to that Part of the Coast where the French are allowed a concurrent Fishery, have become more and more urgent ; and that the same disordered State of Inhabitaney still operates to subvert that Plan of Fishery adopted by the Statute of King William, and to render it's Provisions and Regulations nugatory and useless ; insomuch that it is the Sense and Opinion of Your Majesty's Governor, that it would be better for the national Interest, in respect to the Encouraging the Increase of Seamen, which is one main Object of the Act of King William, not to have any Fishery at all, than that it should continue to be carried on under the Disadvantages that at present attend it, in this View of the Spirit and Intention of that Act.

How far Your Majesty's Governor is well founded in this Opinion, we do not take upon us to determine ; but certain it is, that the present State of this Island and of the Territories dependent thereupon does require the fullest Consideration ; and that a Revision of the several Regulations, which have been heretofore made in respect thereto, is now become essentially necessary.

Every Information, which this Office can furnish relative to the antient Policy and present State of this important Part of the national Interests, is already before Your Majesty ; But that nothing may be wanting which may be of use in this great Consideration, we further beg leave humbly to lay before Your Majesty a Paper of Observations upon the State of the Newfoundland Fisheries communicated to us by Your Majesty's Governor since his Return to this Kingdom ; in which Paper are contained several Propositions for the future Regulation of this important Branch of Commerce tending to re-establish it upon the antient Policy of a Ship Fishery, the Propriety of which Policy Your Majesty's Governor appears in all his Plans and Measures to have zealously adopted.

* * * *

DARTMOUTH.
GEO. RICE
I. DYSON
W^M. FITZHERBERT.
ORWELL.

PALMERSTON

COPY.

Whitehall,
Mar. 27th 1766. } Ex^d

No. 765.[Enclosure in No. 763.][18 Dec., 1765]COPY OF GOVERNOR PALLISER'S REMARKS ON THE PRESENT STATE AND MANAGEMENT OF THE NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERY.

DATED 18 DECEMBER, 1765

PAPERS RELATING TO NEWFOUNDLAND, 1718-1793, pp. 3-14.

The first and most important National Object from the Fishery, as set forth in the Preamble to the said Act, is the raising and maintaining a Number of Seamen for speedy manning our Fleets in Times of Danger ; it therefore in the First Place provides for preserving, extending, and improving the Ship Fishery in Preference to all others, that being the ancient and by far the most if not the only advantageous Method to the Nation, therefore it grants to the Ship Fishers, and from Britain only, many and great exclusive Privileges; and in every Part of the Act relating to Inhabitants and Bye Boat Keepers, is a Clause for preserving inviolable to the Ship Fishers those Rights and Priveleges ; notwithstanding which the Ship Fishery is now wholly dropt and excluded by Encroachers and Monopolizers, the Inhabitants under Merchant Suppliers, by which every Rule and Order ordained by that excellent Act, for the Prosperity of the Fishery, is rendered ineffectual for the Purpose intended by it ; One Consequence of which is, the French employ more Ships, raise Ten Times the Number of Seamen, catch more Fish, and the Yearly Return of Men directly to England, from our exclusive and extensive Fishery, without Bounds, is scarce One Eighth Part of the Number that Yearly return directly to France from their Fishery, though limited to the worst Parts. This appears by the compared State of this Year's Accounts of Ships and Men employed by both, hereto annexed.

We have, according to the Accounts I have collected, 16,000 People remaining in that Country during the Winter, but I am satisfied they are 20,000 of which 10,000 are Men who are all totally lost, for they (a very few excepted) have no Employment during the Winter, but live a most savage, detestable, wicked Life, spending their Time in Idleness, Debaucheries, and Excesses, and running in Debt on their next Year's Wages.

As the Value of the Labour of Seamen is undoubtedly the greatest of all labouring Men, for Defence of the State or for bringing in Wealth from abroad, so Ten Thousand of them being lost to this Nation for either of those Purposes, during Six or Seven Months every Year, is alone a Matter deserving serious Consideration.

These Inhabitants never become either good Fishermen or good Seamen; or if they were so, they are always out of Reach to be of Use for manning our Fleets on any Occasion, as effectually so as if they were taken and carried to a French Prison before a Declaration of War.

Inhabitants such as above described are no Security to the Country, but the contrary ; for they always have and always will join an invading Enemy, as well from Necessity as Inclination, on such Occasions, and Three Fourths of them are Roman Catholicks.

Those Inhabitants, besides being a Loss to this Country, are a Nuisance to that, particularly by their great Consumption of Wood for Fuel, causing a Scarcity thereof at Hand for the Use of the Fishery, and this lays the Country more and more open to an invading Enemy.

By an Inhabitant Fishery, the Regulations in the Act for employing Green Men for the Increase of Fishermen and Seamen, is totally defeated ; nor have we such Increase, though the Public supposes it is our best Nursery ; nor can there be any Fishing Admirals of Harbours, consequently the Law, and all the Rules and Regulations, together with the Power of executing them, are in Effect superseded, and every National Good intended by the Law is defeated ; they are the unfittest People to be employed in the Fishery, being habituated to Idleness, Debaucheries, and Wickedness ; they are Strangers to the Mother Country, to Government, Religion, and good Order, which is the Mother of Labour and Industry, therefore they are neither laborious nor industrious, they have no Motive to be so, for they are no better than the Property or Slaves of the Merchant Suppliers, to whom, by exorbitant high Prices of their Goods, they are all largely in Debt, more than they can ever work out during Life ; they have hitherto had no Means of freeing themselves from that State of perpetual Servitude, therefore the Fishery still went on, though universally allowed to be Yearly declining. People doomed to perpetual Servitude are ever wishing for change of Masters, so when Men find an Opportunity of becoming free and independent, they will certainly embrace it ; therefore, now that the French have a Territory in the Midst of the Fishery, there is no Doubt but these People will fly there, as many have already done, with their Boats, Tackle, Fish and all, or become Fishers for them, beginning a fresh Score for Supplies with them, which great Numbers have already done ; thus the Fishery and Men also are on the Point of being lost, who will hereafter be wholly employed for the French both in Fishing and clandestine Trade, to the utter Ruin of our Trade and Fishery.

The next most important National Object from the Fishery, as set forth in the Preamble to the Act, is to increase the Consumption of the Produce and Manufactories of this Kingdom, and for promoting Trade and Navigation.

p. 1860

How an Inhabitant Fishery operates in this Respect may be judged of from the following Facts :

These 16 or 20 Thousand Inhabitants, as well as others employed in Fishery, are subsisted and supplied as follows :

From England . . .	{	With a very small Quantity of Provisions of any Kind, scarce sufficient to victual the Men that navigate the Ships for their Passage out.
From Ireland . . .	{	With almost all their Beef, Pork, Butter, Linen, and some Manufactories clandestinely brought in.
From the Plantations . . .	{	With all their Bread, Flour, Rum, Sugar, Melasses, some Beef, Pork, Pease, and sundry other Articles, amounting the last Year to £.102,304. 3s. full Nine Tenths of which is immediately paid for in Bills of Exchange upon England.
From Foreign Countries	{	A considerable Quantity of every Kind of Goods and Manufactories used in the Fisheries, as well from the French as from other Countries, brought by the Salt Ships ; besides many Foreigners are concerned with our People in the Shipping so employed.

The present Managers of the Fishery pay Wages, &c. with these Provisions, Necessaries, and Cloaths, at most exorbitant Rates ; thus the Wages, though nominally high, is reduced very low, the Men become their Property, and cannot get out of the Country, nor afford to wear but little Cloaths, especially as they are idle, and drink such immense Quantities of Rum, and thus they become averse to and unfit for Labour ; but were they to return to England Yearly, they would get all Necessaries and Cloaths from 1 to 500 per Cent. cheaper, as they would not be idle or running in Debt during Six or Seven Months ; but on the contrary, earning more Money, they would certainly become good industrious People, and expend more of the Produce and Manufactories of this Country ; besides 30,000 such Men passing and re-passing every Year, that alone would employ above 200 Ships more, which would also create an Increase of the Consumption of our Manufactories, and be an immense Encouragement to Shipping, Trade, and Navigation.

The other great National Object from the Fishery, as set forth in the Preamble to the said Act, is by Returns for the Fifth from Foreign Countries, of great Quantities of sundry useful Commodities to the Increase of His Majesty's Revenues ; this Object is equally injured by an Inhabitant Fishery, they, for afore-mentioned Reasons, being neither laborious, industrious, nor able Fishermen, there is not Half the Quantity of Fish taken as would be, it is not so well cured as it ought to be, which is the Cause of such great Quantities of bad Fish going to Market, which spoils the credit of English Fish, keeps the Prices low—consequently the Return, and the King's Revenue, is thereby proportionably lessened.

p. 1861

Upon the Whole, if no Inhabitants were allowed, but the Fishery to be laid open and free to all the King's Subjects, and carried on by Ship Fishers, or even if the Ship Fishery was only restored to the original Footing, as directed by the Act of the 10th and 11th of William the Third, it most certainly would occasion double the Quantity of Fish to be taken, a Yearly Return of more Men to England than now returns to France; instead of Two or Three thousand Men, as at present, we should have, in Time of Danger, a Yearly Return of 30,000 always ready for our Fleets ; this Addition of Wealth and Strength to the State would always be increasing.

The Fishery would certainly thereby be effectually secured, and so extended and improved, as would provide Employment for all our Men, and none need be seeking Employment in Foreign Countries : By this Method only all illicit Trade and Dealings of our People with the French and other Foreigners can be effectually prevented.

The Consumption of the Produce and Manufactories of this Country, also Shipping Trade, and Navigation, would be greatly increased.

More than double the Quantity of Fish would be taken, be better cured, carried to Market at a cheaper Rate, in better Condition, and fetch a better Price, to the great Increase of the Importation of useful Commodities, and of the King's Revenue.

By encouraging our Ship Fishery to the Northward, the French Fishery there would be greatly lessened, as our People would share with them the exceeding fine Conveniences ready made (which they will not do, whilst they have Expectations of getting Property) ; and a Ship Fishery there, in common with the French, is agreeable to our own Laws, most for the Benefit of the Nation, and strictly agreeable to Treaty ; but to allow only an Inhabitant Fishery there, and our People to hold and possess as Property the Fishing Conveniences (which they are contending for, to the Exclusion of all Ship Fishers, as they have done in all other Parts of Newfoundland) will be contrary to our own Laws, contrary to the National Interest, and directly contrary to the Privileges granted by Treaty to the French; for Inhabitants will, in the Absence of the Ships, destroy all their Works, both English and French, then build new ones, and call them their own Property, and claim a Right to be protected therein.

A few Monopolizers, whose particular Interests are incompatible with the true Interest and Security of the State, endeavour to have it believed, that to restore the Fishery to the State it ought to be, and as is provided by the Act of the 10th and 11th of William III. is impracticable ; but the following Proposals being duly considered, and improved by abler Heads, will provide effectual Cures for some, if not all the present Evils, without the least Injustice to any One.

p. 1862

As the ancient and constant Custom by which an Person gained an exclusive Right of possessing any Fishing Conveniency ever was by a Certificate from the Governor or Commodore of the Convoy, that such Person had performed the Conditions required by the Proviso in the Act of the 10th and 11th of William III. to entitle him to such exclusive Possession, and those Certificates described the Situation and Dimensions of the Places for which they were granted, and set forth that due Proof had been laid before him by the Fishing Admirals of the Port (who by Law are the Guardians of their own Rights and Privileges) that the Place had never been a Ship's Room since the Year 1685, let it be ordered that all Persons holding Possession of any Place by virtue of such Certificates, shall, on or before the Day of produce such Certificates to the Governor, to be by him examined, and he, being satisfied of the Authenticness thereof, to enter them in a Book of Record, to be carefully kept for that Purpose in the Fort at St. John's, and a Copy with the Board of Trade ; and all Persons now possessing Places by virtue of such Certificates so produced and registered, to be confirmed in their Possessions, with all Works and Buildings thereon, according to the true Intent and Meaning of the Act.

For confirming and securing all lawful Claims to Property in Fishing Conveniences.

1st. All Places whatever, that are not held by Certificates of a Right to possess them as above mentioned, should remain public and free for all British Fishing Ships, and be deemed Ships Rooms, according to the true Intent and Meaning of the Act, after the Death of the present Possessors, the present pretended Owners.

2nd. Whereas all the Land is in the Crown, and no Governor has ever been vested with Power to give or grant it away, it is necessary that the Proviso in the Act that says,

For encouraging and supporting the Ship Fishers.

“Provided always, that all such Persons as since the 21st of March 1685 has built, cut out, or made,” &c. should be farther explained as to the Nature of the Tenure by which Possession of a Fishing Conveniency is to be held under that Proviso of the Act ; (that is to say) whether such exclusive Possessions are to be only for Life of the original Proprietors, or whether they are to be considered as Real or Personal Estates, different Governors having determined Causes various Ways, which produces infinite Numbers of Disputes, to the great Obstruction of the Fishery ; causing great Expence and Loss of Time to those concerned, and to the Public, by a vast Number of good Places lying Waste because of such disputed and obsolete Claims.

3rd. That nothing but a Ship Fishery be permitted in that Part of Newfoundland lying between Cape Bonavista and Point Riche, or on any other Part of the Coast of Newfoundland that was not actually in the Possession of the English when the said Act was made, nor on the Coast of all the conquered Lands and Islands now annexed to the Government of Newfoundland; but that the Whole of the Act of the 10th and 11th of William III. be hereafter in full Force in those Lands and Islands, except what relates to exclusive Possessions under the aforementioned Proviso in that Act.

4th. For preventing any Fishing Conveniences being lost (as great Numbers now are) whether from Obsolete Claims, long Suits depending about the Rights and Titles, or from Idleness of some, or Inability or Obstinacy in others, let it be ordered, that notwithstanding any Right or Title that have or may be acquired to such Places under the abovementioned Proviso in the said Act, if any of those Places hereafter lie unoccupied or unused for the Fishery during One or Two Fishing Seasons, the same to be become public and free for the Use of all British Fishing Ships, and be deemed Ships Rooms.

5th. Conformable to the aforesaid Act, and according to ancient Custom, no Ship shall be deemed a Ship Fisher, or enjoy the Privileges thereto belonging, nor the Master exercise the Authority of an Admiral of a Harbour, except such as arrive from Britain, cleared out at the Custom House as such that Same Year, and employeth at least Twenty-one Men and Boys actually brought with her that Season, and who are engaged to return after the Fishery is over; and that occupieth and useth a public Ships Room, and not a hired One, or that is held and possessed as private Property.

6th. Whereas by sundry unlawful Practices of Inhabitants destroying the Stages, Flakes, and other Conveniences belonging to the Ship Fishers, during the Absence of the Ships in the Winter, the Ship Fishers have been ruined, and excluded from the Fishery, and those inhabitants become unlawful Possessors of all the old and best Fishing Conveniences, which by Law ought to be preserved for the Use of Ship Fishers only—let it be ordered, that in all Harbours where there are, or hereafter may be, any Ships Rooms, the same shall be inviolably preserved for the Use of Ship Fishers only ; and if any Damage is done to any such Stages, or other Conveniences thereto belonging, in the Winter during the Absence of the Ships, all the Inhabitants of that Place shall be obliged to make good such Damages immediately on the Arrival of the Fishing Ships ; and the Fishing Admirals of the respective Harbours to be authorised by Law to compel such Inhabitants to restore such Ships Rooms, and the Fishing Conveniences thereto belonging, into the same State and Condition in which they were left the preceding Season ; and till such Damages are so repaired, the Masters of such Fishing Ships to be authorized to occupy and use any Stage or Room possessed by any Inhabitant in that Harbour, that he pleases to make Choice of ; for the Ship Fishers, according to the above-mentioned Act, must never be disappointed of their Voyage, where there is or ever was any lawful Ships Rooms.

7th. All Admirals transmitting to the Governor or Commodore a Report of the State of their Fisheries in their respective Harbours, as directed by the Act of the 10th and 11th of William III. on producing from

p. 1864

the Governor or the Captain of any of the King's Ships a Certificate of the Receipt thereof, such Admiral Ships should be entitled to some Privilege or Reward ; printed Forms for such Reports to be delivered gratis to every Fishing Ship when she clears out at the Custom House in Britain.

No Laws, Rules, or Regulations that ever have or can be made for such People as the present Inhabitant Fishers of Newfoundland are, will ever be of any Use, without Pains and Penalties being annexed to Offences against those Laws.

The encouraging and obliging the Men to return Yearly to England.

1st. The greatest Part of the Fishermen now residing in the Country, called Planters or Master Boat Keepers, are a Kind of Prisoners or Slaves to their Suppliers, who, to prevent their Return, threatened them with a Gaol for Debt ; which Debts have been contracted by shameful Impositions and Oppressions, for the Purpose of keeping them there. Those Creditors know it is not possible ever to be paid those debts in Newfoundland ; nor are those Debts, if they were to be strictly examined into, either lawful or just. Suppose it should be enacted, that all such Fishermen so in Debt at this Time, contracted there, who may hereafter return from Newfoundland to Britain, should be exempt from Arrest for such Debts so long as they continue to go to and return from Newfoundland Yearly to Britain.

2nd. No Debt whatever contracted in that Country by any Fisherman, or Servant serving for Wages, should be recoverable.

3rd. It is the Practice of Inhabitants to engage men to serve Two Summers and a Winter : It should not be lawful for any Men to bind themselves to serve in that Country for more than Six Months, or for One Fishing Season.

4th. It is the general Practice of Masters to credit their Fishermen Servants to the Amount of their whole Wages, above Half of which is most commonly Rum : Thus, when their Time is out, they are distressed, and necessitated to stay, having nothing to pay their Passage ; they must steal for their Subsistence, or sell themselves to the Plantations, which Thousands do from this Cause.

5th. For Remedy of these Evils, no Deductions from any Servants Wages for Liquor should be lawful, nor for Supplies of any other Kind in Newfoundland exceeding Shillings.

6th. Every Master should by Law be obliged to pay, out of the Wages of each Man he employs, the Passage Money for the Man's Passage Home to the Master of a Passage Ship, in the same Manner as by Custom they now pay for the Passage out of any Man they hire on his Arrival. This Encouragement to Ships will make a certain Provision of a sufficient Number of Ships to carry all the Men Home ; but now from the Uncertainty of getting such Freights very few Ships put up for Passengers Home.

p. 1865

7th. No Dietors, or People who entertain Fishermen or Servants in the Country in the Winter, on the Credit of their Wages, should be allowed in Newfoundland ; all such Men, as well as their Entertainers, being Idlers, and a Public Loss.

8th. As farther Encouragement for Shipping to bring Home Men from the Fisheries, suppose that every Ship bringing Home at the least Men Passengers from the Fisheries was to be entitled to some Privileges ; such as, in Times of Press, such Ships to be allowed a certain Number of Men free from Press, in the same Manner, and for the same good Purposes, as the Greenland Ships have now by Act of Parliament, for the Encouragement of that Trade, a Protection for a certain Number of Men. Masters of Ships to be entitled to such Protections, on producing what may be judged a proper Certificate of the exact Number of Men he has actually landed in Britain, or in His Majesty's Dominions in Europe : Thus the exact Number returning will be nearly known.

9th. As a farther Security for the Return of the Men, let it be unlawful to pay any Servant's Wages in Newfoundland otherways than by Bills of Exchange for the Balance due, such Bills to be drawn payable to the Man only; but to make such Bills negociable, they may be payable to the Man's Order, provided he indorses it after landing in the King's Dominions in Europe, in the Presence of a Justice of the Peace, such Justice attesting such Indorsement: A Form of the Bills to be used for this Purpose to be annexed to the Act.

Of the Government or Superintendency of the Fisheries

The Prosperity of the Fishery requires, in all Disputes and Differences, short, speedy, and unexpensive Issues; and the Act of the 10th and 11th of William III. directs, that certain Disputes and Differences shall be determined on the Spot, in a summary Way, by the Admirals, appealable to the Captains of the King's Ships. But under the present Management of the Fisheries there are no Admirals for hearing and determining such Matters; which is the Occasion of many endless Disputes, to the great Obstruction of the Fishery, and Loss to the Public. It is therefore absolutely necessary to restore the Ship Fishery, to renew, support, and extend the Admirals Powers ; but no Admirals, no Captains of King's Ships, no Commodore nor Governor, should meddle in any Matters but what are purely relative to the Fishery, for preventing Obstructions thereto, for preserving the Peace, keeping good Order amongst the Fishermen, and for immediate Trial of Capital Offences; but all Matters of Disputes amongst Merchants concerning their Accounts, or Matter relative to Trade, should be heard and determined only in Britain. This will prevent People staying in the Country ; also remedy such incredible Practices of Knavery and unfair Dealings as no Trade whatever can prosper under, and which cannot otherways be remedied.

When the Fishing Admiral's lawful Authority is restored and supported, and the Country cleared of a Number of idle Men in the Winter, there will be no Want of Justices of the Peace. It is they that have put an End to the Ship Fishery, by not suffering the Fishing Admirals to act in the respective Harbours ; and such Justices being all People concerned in Trade, they use their Authority for no other Purpose but to favour Monopoly, and are guilty of the most shameful Partialities and Injustices, to the very great Prejudice of the Fishery.

p. 1866

To prevent the great Loss to the Fishery and to the Public by so many Men running from that Country to the Plantations every Year, let it be ordered that no Vessels belonging to, or bound to or arriving from any of the Plantations, shall be allowed to stay in any Part of the Government of Newfoundland after the 10th Day of October, on which Day the Fishermen are usually discharged ; nor any such Vessel be permitted at any Time to take on Board any Men Passengers without a Permit in Writing from the Governor only, on Forfeiture of such Vessels having on Board more Men than for their Navigation, at the Rate of Men per Hundred Tons. This will also prevent any People from the Colonies coming to Newfoundland to carry on the Fisheries, to the Prejudice of the British Merchants and Shipping, contrary to the Meaning of the Fishing Act.

* * * *

Notwithstanding far the greatest and best Parts of the Fishing Coast belongs exclusively to the English, and the French are limited, and to the worst Parts, whilst ours is without Bounds.

That France has a certain Yearly Increase of 2,670 Seafaring Men from their Fishery, whilst we lose One or Two thousand that run away every Year to America, and no Rule observed for increasing our Seamen, or preventing the Fishermen and Seamen running to America.

That the French Fishermen kill as much Fish per Man as our Inhabitants, notwithstanding our boasted Advantage of carrying it on by Inhabitants. It must also be noted, that in the Limits to which the French are confined between Cape Bonavista and Point Riche, they have scarce Half the Time for catching Fish that our People have to the Southward, where the Fish is equally abundant during that double Time for catching and curing.

That great Part of the Fishing Conveniencies on the prime Part of the Coast for Fishing is lost, by the Inhabitants possessing them, as Property ; few or none of them employing Half the Number of Boats and Men as Ship Fishers would on the same Places, besides the many Conveniencies that lie Waste, because of the infinite Number of disputed Claims to Places which none of them can make out a Right to, being originally Ships Rooms ; yet they exclude the Ships.

That in those Harbours to the Northward, where we have this Year had a few Fishing Ships, those Ships who brought out their own Men killed Two Thirds as much more Fish as our Inhabitant Fishers in the same Harbours : This Gain in the Quantity of Fish is, I apprehend, greater and more certain Profit to those concerned and to the Public, than what is got by peddling monopolizing Trade of supplying a few slothful miserable Wretches for the Winter's Subsistence, and in Idleness ; besides, the Employers of the Men in Ships would always likewise have the Benefit of supplying them at Home, by which the Men will get their Necessaries cheaper, consequently Wages then will fall, and they will expend no Foreign Manufactories.

p. 1867

Thus it appears the Public would be a very great Gainer, though no more Men than at present should be employed ; but if the Fishery was to be laid open and free to all His Majesty's Subjects, as by Law it ought to be, the Ship Fishers encouraged, supported, and restored to their Privileges, there would be so many more Places, so much more Time, and so many more and better Men employed, as would, without the least Doubt, cause double the Quantity of Fish to be taken ; consequently the Public Gain, and the King's Revenue, would be doubled, besides the far more important Acquisition of 30,000 Men, in constant Readiness to Man our Fleets for Security of the State ; and give us such a noble Superiority over our Enemies or Rivals, as would be a certain Means of preventing War : But whilst the French manage their Fishery so well, and we ours so ill, they will always be able to harass us with fresh Wars every Four or Five Years.

On the Fishery on the Coast of Labrador, within the Gulph of St. Lawrence only, was employed 117 Sloops and Schooners, with 1,563 Men, who killed 104 Whales, which yielded on an Average 140 Barrels of Oil, and 2,000 Weights of good Bone, all killed within a Space of 30 Leagues, and between 14th May and 10th July. The Winter Seal Fishery on the same Coast, carried on by 107 Men, yielded 500 Tons of Oil, besides Fur ; and the Furs from the Indians was very considerable ; so that the Value of the Whale, Seal, Cod, Salmon, and Furs, upon that Part of the Coast only, was at a moderate Computation £.100,000, and not One Old England Ship or Seaman employed therein, nor a Seaman raised thereby for the Service of the Fleet— Such is the Effect of letting the Newfoundland Fishery run into Monopoly, that the rest of our Merchants, if they cannot have a Monopoly likewise, will let the New England Men, or Frenchmen, or any Body run away with it.

The New England Men sell the Fish, Oil, and Bone to the French at Petit Nord : The Settlers from Canada all deal with the French at Newfoundland, St. Pierre's, and directly with France.

(Signed) HUGH PALLISER

18th Decem^r 1765.

Office of Committee of
Privy Council for Trade,
Whitehall, 11th March 1793.

A true Copy.

GEO. CHALMERS,
Ch^f C^k Com. C^l Trade.

No. 766.

1775. IMPERIAL ACT, 15 GEO. III., CAP. 31

(SIR HUGH PALLISER'S ACT).

Vide Vol. I, page 257.

[17 March, 1786.]

No. 767.

C

COPY OF THE REPORT OF THE LORDS OF THE COMMITTEE OF PRIVY COUNCIL FOR TRADE,

ON THE SUBJECT OF THE NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERY;
DATED 17 MARCH, 1786.

PAPERS RELATING TO NEWFOUNDLAND, 1718-1793.

Your Majesty having been pleased, by Your Order in Council, dated th 9th of December last, to refer unto the Committee the following Question : “Whether any of the Provisions or Regulations proposed in a Bill brought into the House of Commons, in the last Session of Parliament, for amending and rendering more effectual an Act made in the Fifteenth Year of His present Majesty, intituled, 'An Act for the Encouragement of the Fisheries carried on from Great Britain, Ireland, and the British Dominions in Europe, and for securing the Return of the Fishermen, Sailors, and others employed in the said Fisheries to the Ports thereof, at the End of the Fishing Season; and for repealing certain Provisions in the said Act relative to the said Fisheries,' will contribute to the Improvement and Encouragement of the Fisheries carried on by His Majesty's Subjects at Newfoundland?”

The Committee have taken this extensive Subject under their Considerations, and have called for such Papers as appeared to them to be necessary for their Information; they have heard the principal Merchants of Poole and Dartmouth, being the Persons chiefly concerned in the Newfoundland Fishery ; and the Committee have examined several of Your Majesty's Officers, who have either commanded or served upon the Newfoundland Station, as well as Your Majesty's Naval and revenue Officers of the said Island, and such other Persons as, in the Judgement of the Committee, were likely to give any Information upon the Subject referred to their Consideration.— And the Committee having persued and considered a Representation of the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations, made to his Majesty King George the First in 1718, which gives a very full Account of the State of the Newfoundland Fishery, previous to that Period, and of the Policy which the Government and Legislature of this Kingdom had from the First Establishment of that Fishery adopted and persued in respect to this great Object—do concur in general in the Opinions entertained by the said Lords Commissioners on the following Points :

p. 1869

FIRST. That the Newfoundland Fishery ought to be carried on as much as possible by Ships fitted out from Your Majesty's European Dominions ; that by the Yearly Return of the Sailors and Fishermen to the said Dominions, Your Majesty may have it in Your Power to avail Yourself of their Services for manning Your Royal Navy, when Occasion may require.

SECONDLY. That Your Majesty's Subjects who may from Time to Time reside in Newfoundland, ought never to be allowed to form themselves into a Colony, and with that view to possess in Fee any Landed Property there.

THIRDLY. That the Shores of Newfoundland, the Beaches, and other convenient Fishing Places, ought to be-carefully reserved for the Accommodation of Your Majesty's Subjects, resorting thither from Your Majesty's European Dominions, for the Purpose of carrying on the said Fishery.

And FOURTHLY. That Your Majesty's Subjects who so resort Annually to the said Island of Newfoundland should be induced and compelled, by every wise and proper Regulation, to return to Your Majesty's European Dominions at the End of every Fishing Season. But with respect to this last Point, the Committee think it proper to observe, that from a Change of Circumstances it may now be beneficial to the Fishery, that a certain Number of Persons shall be suffered to remain on the said Island after the Fishing Season, for the Purpose of taking Care of the Fishing Stages, Boats, and other Necessaries for the Fishery, and to make Preparations for the ensuing Season, as our Fishermen will be thereby enabled to commence their Fishery at a more early Period, and have in consequence thereof an Advantage over other Nations who are our Rivals the said Fishery ; but the Committee are of Opinion, that, in true Policy, the Number so suffered to remain should not exceed the Number absolute necessary for the above Purposes.

The Committee are, however, of Opinion, from the most satisfactory Proofs, that the Number of Persons who at present usually remain during the Winter in Newfoundland is much greater than sufficient for the useful Purposes before-mentioned, as appears by the Paper N^o 1, hereunto annexed, as 4 Car. II Cap 4.

5 Chr. . . . Cap 7.
4 &c 5 Wm. & Mary.
Cap. 17.
10 & 11 Wm. &
Mary, Cap. 25.
.Ann. . . . Cap 16.
Geo. I. . . . Cap. 26.
Geo. I. . . . Cap. 26.
Geo. II. . . . Cap. 28.
Geo. II. . . . Cap. 33.
Geo. II. . . . Cap. 28.
Geo. II. . . . Cap. 28.
Geo. II. . . . Cap. 45.
Geo. II. . . . Cap. 20.
Geo. III. . . . Cap. 22.
Geo. III. . . . Cap. 27.
Geo. III. . . . Cap. 38.
Geo. III. . . . Cap. 31.
Geo. III. . . . Cap. 47.

well as by other Information they have received ; and that if proper Measures are not taken to prevent it, they are likely to increase.

The Committee having premised these several Points, will now proceed to submit to Your Majesty their Opinion on the Clauses of the Bill proposed to Parliament in the last Session, and they will deliver their Opinion on the several Clauses, not in the Order in which they stand in the said Bill, but in such Order as best corresponds with the Principles before stated.

The SECOND, THIRD, and FOURTH CLAUSES of the proposed Bill are avowedly intended to vest Part of the Shores and Soil of Newfoundland in

p. 1870

the Present Occupiers, to be held in Fee Simple, and thereby to transfer to Individuals, for private Purposes, what ought to be reserved in common for a great National Good. The Shores and Soil of that Island would thus become subject to all the Rules of Ownership. The Proprietor might employ his Estate either in carrying on the Fishery, or in a Manner less beneficial to the Public. If very opulent, he might by Purchases engross many of the Fishing Places ; and by the Exclusion of others, obtain Advantages contrary to the general Interest of the Fishery ; or he might become insolvent, and incapable of carrying on a Fishery. The Shores so appropriated would immediately create Disputes, either about Boundaries or Titles, which would produce Law Suits, where there are no proper Judicatures for the Decision of them. The Number of Residents would be increased, and a Colony would be insensibly formed, which would by Degrees deprive Your Majesty's European Subjects of any Share in this Fishery. Upon this Question of Property, the Committee thought it right to consult Your Majesty's Law Officers, that the Committee might know how far Your Majesty's Subjects may have acquired any Right whatsoever, by Acquiescence or otherwise, in the Shores and Soil of Newfoundland ; and whether it might be safe for Your Majesty's Governor to order any Buildings or Fences that obstruct the carrying on the Fishery to be pulled down and removed; and also to order the Inhabitants of the said Island of Newfoundland to remove from any Spot which they now occupy or may claim for the Purpose of Residence, under any Pretence whatever, in case he shall be of Opinion that such Spot may be convenient for extending and carrying on the Fishery. And having received the Report of the said Law Officers upon the Questions so referred to them, the Committee have annexed the same in the Appendix, N^o 2, to which they presume humbly to refer Your Majesty ; and they advise Your Majesty to give Your Governor of Newfoundland the following Instructions on this Subject :

FIRST. That the ancient Ship Rooms and Fishing Rooms should continue under the Provisions of the Act of Parliament passed in the 10th and 11th Years of the Reign of King William, Cap. 25, for the Encouragement of new Adventurers, that they may be sure of finding proper and convenient Places for curing, salting, drying, and husbanding their Fish, whenever they resort thither.

SECONDLY. That the remaining Shores of Newfoundland should be held by such of Your Majesty's Subjects, resorting thither from Your Majesty's European Dominions, as shall first take Possession of them, for the Purpose of carrying on the Fishery, in proportion to the Number of Ships and Boats they shall employ ; and that they shall continue to hold the same for the like Purposes, and in like Manner, so long as they shall carry on their Fishery there ; but that in case they shall neglect so to carry on their Fishery there for One entire Season, such Shores, or Parts thereof, as shall be so neglected or deserted, shall be held for the like Purpose and in like Manner, by any other of Your Majesty's Subjects resorting thither from Your Majesty's European Dominions, who shall first occupy the same for the Purpose of carrying on the Fishery, and that the Governor should put and maintain such Person or Persons in Possession thereof.

p. 1871

THIRDLY. That the Governor should not suffer any Buildings to be erected (except Fishing Stages, Cook Rooms, Ship Rooms, and Flakes, or such Erections as shall be absolutely necessary for curing, salting, drying, and husbanding their Fish) within Six hundred Yards distance of High Water Mark, and that Care should be taken that no Right of Property be acknowledged in any Land or Building, even beyond that Distance.

FOURTHLY. That the Governor may suffer any Buildings, Erections Wharfs, Slips, or Fences already erected, to remain, provided they are not built or erected upon ancient Ship Rooms or Fishing Rooms, and provided they shall not in his Judgment be considered as Nuisances, and detrimental to the Interest of the Fishery in general ; and such as in his Judgment are Nuisances, and detrimental to the Interest of the Fishery in general, he shall cause to be removed, after due and reasonable Notice, and in a Manner to expose the Parties to as little Inconvenience as possible.

The SEVENTH CLAUSE of the Bill is avowedly intended to repeal those Parts of the Act, passed in the 15th Year of Your Majesty's Reign, which had wisely provided for the Return of the Fishermen at the End of every Season, by reserving the Payment of One Half of their Wages till after their Return. On this Regulation principally depends the Hope the Committee entertains of bringing back the Fishermen to Your Majesty's European Dominions at the End of each Season. If it be repealed, the Fishermen would not only lose this Inducement for their Return, but it would serve as an Encouragement to great Expence and dissolute Living during their Continuance in Newfoundland, to the manifest Detriment of the Fishery ; the Fishermen would thereby become liable to great Impositions, and might be made to pay exorbitant Prices for every Article they purchase there. In any other Trade but this, it is the Interest of the Master of a Vessel to advance to his Seamen as little during the Voyage as possible, for the better securing their Service in navigating the Vessel till her Return to Port. In that of Newfoundland, the Case is frequently the Reverse : It appears in Evidence, that in general the Half of a Fisherman's Wages is sufficient for his Expence during his Continuance at Newfoundland. It is true, however, that in the Case of Boys or Green Men, who may not receive above the sum of £ . 7 . 10s. for their Voyage, the Half may not always be sufficient for their Cloathing. The Committee are therefore of Opinion, that the said Clause of the Bill may be so far amended, as to allow a Sum not exceeding £ . 5 . 10s. to be advanced to Green Men and Boys, though it amounts to more than Half their Wages ; provided the Master continues equally bound to bring back such Green Men and Boys at the End of the Season.

The EIGHTH CLAUSE of the Bill is evidently calculated to repeal another Part of the Act of the 15th Year of Your Majesty's Reign, which makes the Whole of the Fish and Oil taken liable to the Payment of the Wages of the

p. 1872

Seamen or Fishermen by whom it is taken or made. This Regulation only puts the Seamen and Fishermen employed in the Newfoundland Fishery upon the same Footing with all other Seamen employed in the British Commerce, for the Payment of whole Wages the Vessel and Cargo are in every Instance liable. The Fisherman of Newfoundland is doubly entitled to the same Security, as by his Labour and Industry the Whole of the Property made liable for his Wages is produced. By subjecting the Whole, as the Law now does, to the Payment of Wages, no Inconvenience can arise, either to the Employer or Fisherman, for as soon as such Employer or Merchant Supplier (being solvent, and his Bills negotiable) becomes bound to pay the Fisherman's Wages in England, the Whole of the Fish and Oil are of course delivered to him, and at his Disposal ; all Parties are perfectly secure ; the Employer or Merchant Supplier has the Fish properly cured before it is shipped for a Market ; and the Fisherman has no Pretence for Neglect of Duty, having a responsible Person to pay him for his Labour ; so that the Alteration pro-posed in this Clause would be no more for the Interest of any of the Parties concerned than for the Advantage of the Public.

* * * *

The SIXTH CLAUSE of the proposed Bill is calculated to give to Oil, Blubber, and Seal Skins, made or caught by Persons residing in Newfoundland, the same Preference with respect to Duties, as is given to those Articles made or caught by Vessels owned by Subjects residing in Your Majesty's European Dominions. It has always been the Policy of the Legislature of this Kingdom, to encourage the Fisheries carried on by Policy Majesty's Subjects residing in Europe, by allowing these Articles, when made and caught by them, to be imported Duty-free, while the like Articles made and caught by Your Majesty's Subjects, residing in Your Foreign Dominions, were liable to a small Duty, and the same Articles imported from Foreign Countries paid a very high Duty, calculated to promote and encourage the Fisheryies of Your Majesty's Sugjects in general. This Policy is sufficiently proved by referring to the several Acts passed for these Purposes, and which are mentioned in the Margin. And it is still more necessary not to depart from these Distinctions with respect to Newfoundland, as it would thend to encourage Residence there, which, as before stated, it has ever been the Policy of the Government of this Kingdom to prevent. It has been suggested to the Committee, that the Oath, as it present worded, ascertaining by whom the Oil, Blubber, and Seal Skins have been taken and imported, leaves a Latitude to different Constructions, and that some Persons who take it import Oil, Blubber, and Seal Skins, taken by the Resident Inhabitants of newfoundland, Duty-free ; while others, more scrupulous, do not chuse to take the Oath as it stands, and are thereby subject to the Plantation Duty ; the Committee are therefore of Opinion that the Oath should be made sufficiently clear, to preserve the Distinctions intended by the Legislature.

* * * *

The Merchants also requested to be allowed to import Wine, Oil, Cork, and Fruit from Foreign Countries, directly to Newfoundland, Duty-free.

The Committee on this Point are of Opinion, that this Request ought not to be granted : The Inhabitants of Your Majesty's Colonies would think themselves entitled to the same Favour, and the Policy of the ancient Laws of Trade and Revenue, which oblige all Your Majesty's Subjects in America and the West Indies to import those Articles through Great Britain, would in such Case be defeated ; and the Inhabitants of Newfoundland, who cannot be deemed Colonists, and are supposed to go Yearly from Your Majesty's European Dominions, have less Reason than any others to expect such Indulgence.

The Merchants also desired, that Instructions might be given to the Governor to reduce the Number of Public Houses, and that in St. John's they should not exceed Twelve ; and that every Person keeping such Public House should give Security for their good Behaviour, and be obliged to keep One Fishing Shallop ; and that all Persons keeping Shops should also be obliged to keep one Fishing Shallop ; The Committee are of Opinion that this Request is very proper to be complied with, and that Your Majesty's Governor should be instructed accordingly.

* * * *

The Merchants also desired, that the Fishing Admirals might be allowed to name Deputies to act for them when absent and from the Shore, and to hear and determine Disputes between Masters, and Seamen, or Fishermen. The Committee do not think the ancient Custom in this Respect should be changed : Disputes that may arise should be determined in the Manner hitherto practised.

The Merchants also desired, that the Fishery on the Coast of Labrador might be under the same Regulations, and receive the same Encouragement, with that of Newfoundland. The Committee are of Opinion, that as the Coast of Labrador is included in the Commission to Your Majesty's Governor of Newfoundland, the Fishery on that Coast is in every Respect upon the same Footing with that carried on at that Island.

The Merchants further desired, that out of the Half of the Wages due to the Seamen and Fishermen to be remitted Home, they might be allowed to deduct the Monies that may be advanced to their Families during their Absence, and that the other full Half should be advanced to them at Newfoundland.

Though, from Motives which could be alledged, the Committee might be induced to think this Request not wholly improper, and wish to grant it ; yet, from a Consideration that it might tend in various Ways totally to defeat the great Object for which the Legislature thought it proper this Money should be paid at Home ; viz. that of inducing the Fishermen to return, the Committee think it would be dangerous to consent to this Request, and that any Inconvenience ought rather to be submitted to.

* * * *

The Committee also heard the Agents for the Merchants of Jersey and Guernsey, as far as relates to the Interest of Your Majesty's Subjects in those Islands carrying on the Newfoundland Fishery. The Committee are of

p. 1874

Opinion, that they ought to have every Encouragement given to Your Majesty's other European Subjects, consistent with their local Situation, and such the Committee apprehend is the Case at present ; but that in making their Outfits, and bringing back the Produce of the Fishery, it is necessary, for the Interest of the Manufactures and Commerce of Great Britain, that they should continue subject to the Restrictions which by the Laws are now imposed upon them.

In the Course of their Enquiry many Transactions were stated to the Committee, tending to shew, in a comparative View, the Advantages under which the Subjects of Great Britain and France now carry on the Newfoundland Fishery, and the Success which has hitherto attended the Policy of the two Governments in this Respect ; and certain Arrets of the French King, issued in the Course of last Year, were laid before the Committee, granting considerable Bounties, as well on Fish caught by the Subjects of France, and imported by them into the French West India Islands, as on such Fish carried to the Foreign European Markets.

It appeared in Evidence, that the only Advantage the Subjects of France have over those of Your Majesty in carrying on the Fishery, is, that they hire their Men at lower Wages, and are not obliged to feed them so well ; but on the other Hand they labour under many Disadvantages. It is agreed by all Your Majesty's Officers, that the Part of Newfoundland allotted by the late Treaty of Peace to the French for carrying on their Fishery, is not so well adapted for that Purpose as that where we fish exclusively ; and although the Cod is as large on that Part of the Island where the French are allowed to fish, the Climate is more unfavourable for drying it, particularly near the Streights of Belleisle ; the Navigation on that Part of the Coast is more dangerous, and their Fishing Boats and Craft are more exposed to the Weather. There is hardly a Year in which many of them are not lost. They have not Bait either so early or in such Plenty as we have ; there is One particular Species of Bait of which they have none. As the French are not allowed to Winter there, they arrive too late to prepare their Stages, Flakes, &c. and to get the Stuff out of the Woods for the Purpose of covering them ; so that they are obliged to cover them with Ships Sails, which is more expensive, and does not answer the Purpose so well. It is owing to this that they cure their Fish so much on the Beach, which is not so good a Method as that practised by our Fishermen.

The Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon are as well adapted to the Fishery as any Part of Newfoundland, but they have no Wood there for Stages or Flakes ; and the French in these Islands would not be able to carry on their Fishery without great Difficulty, if they were not allowed to cut and carry Wood from the Island of Newfoundland.

The Boats of the French Fishermen are by no Means so good as ours ; they are not near so large, and consequently do not stand the Sea so well ; many of them are lost when ours get safe into Port ; and it is of great Importance that they should not be allowed to build their Boats in Newfoundland. It was proved to the Committee that their Seamen and Fishermen are not so expert as the British, and that they do not take, per Boat, above half the Number of Fish.

p. 1875

* * * *

Office of Committee of
Privy Council for Trade,
Whitehall, 11th March 1793.

A true Copy.

GEO. CHALMERS,
Ch^r C^{lk} Com. C¹ Trade.

No. 768.

C

1786. IMPERIAL ACT, 26 GEO. III., CAP. 26.
AN ACT TO ENCOURAGE THE NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERIES.

Vide Vol. I, page 273.

No. 769.

C

1789. IMPERIAL ACT, 29 GEO. III., CAP. 53.
AN ACT FURTHER REGULATING THE NEWFOUNDLAND, GREENLAND AND SOUTHERN WHALE FISHERIES.

Vide Vol. I, page 286.

[10 May,
1790.]No. 770.*COPY OF A REPRESENTATION OF THE LORDS OF
THE COMMITTEE OF PRIVY COUNCIL FOR TRADE AND FOREIGN PLANTATIONS,ON THE SUBJECT OF ESTABLISHING A COURT OF CIVIL JURISDICTION IN
THE ISLAND OF NEWFOUNDLAND. DATED 10 MAY, 1790.

PAPERS RELATING TO NEWFOUNDLAND, 1718-1793.

May it please Your MAJESTY,

The Merchants and Trades of Dartmouth, Exeter, Topsham, and Teignmouth, carrying on the Fishery and Trade at Newfoundland, have presented to this Committee a Memorial, complaining that a Court was established last Season in the Island of Newfoundland, by Vice Admiral Milbanke, Your Majesty's Governor of the said Island, called a Court of Common Pleas, consisting of Four Commissioners ; and that this Court so established was kept open Daily, to the constant Interruption of the Fishery and Trade, by continually issuing Orders ; by calling away the Agents and Servants of the Memorialists and others on every frivolous Occasion, to serve on Juries ; and by listening to every trivial and vague Complaint ; by sending arbitrary and immediate Orders to attend the said Court, from any distant Part of the Island, with Threats to fine those who did not attend, without Regard to the Neglect of their Business, Personal Hazard, or any other Consideration ; all which Proceedings must necessarily be prejudicial to a Fishery which totally depends on Personal Attention and Industry : And the Memorialists further complain, that the said Court demanded exorbitant Fees.

The Lords of the Committee thought it their Duty, immediately, to send a Copy of the said Memorial to Vice Admiral Milbanke, calling upon him to inform the Committee how far the Facts stated in the said Memorial were well founded ; and in case the said Court was a new Establishment, to assign his Reasons for having formed such Establishment ; but if it was only an Alteration of a former Establishment to assign the Reasons which had induced him to make such Alterations ; and further to certify to the Committee whether any, and what Fees were taken by the Judges, or other Officers of the said Court.

Admiral Milbanke's Reasons for forming the said Court will be found at Length in his Report hereunto annexed, which he transmitted to this Committee in a Letter, dated 11th February last : And in a Letter, dated the 20th of the same Month, he justified the Proceedings of the said Court by alledging, that from the 4th September, when the Court first began to sit, to the Admiral's Departure for England on the 26th October, there were only Four Courts, neither of which lasted more than Five Hours ; whereas the Court of Session, in which such Causes are said to have been formerly tried in the said Island, never sat less than Twice a Week, seldom got through more than Three Causes in a Day, and those in such a Manner as frequently to occasion their being tried Two or Three Times over. That One Judge of the new established Court sat however every Day, in order to save Trouble to the Plaintiffs, who had thus an Opportunity at all Times to present Petitions, and make the proper Affidavits for commencing Suits, after which there was no further Trouble given than such as must have attended every Suit in the most trifling Cause in a Court of Conscience. That by comparing the Court established by him with the former Court of Session, or that of Vice Admiralty, it will be found that the new Court is formed on simple Principles, and cannot fail to distribute equal and immediate Justice to all, without Respect to Persons— That the Two former Courts herein before mentioned are without Form or Order, and if not glaringly partial, only harrass, perplex, and waste the Time of many Individuals, instead of doing their Business for them— That the Attendance upon Juries in the new Court is not greater than heretofore ; for that the Court of Session never proceeded on any Cause of Consequence without a Jury ; and that even the Vice Admiralty Court, in consequence of Complaints from the Merchants, during Vice Admiral Campbell's Government had frequently summoned Juries.— That of Twenty-eight Causes completely disposed of by the new Court, the least of them was for upwards of £5. most of them for more than £10, and some for near £200 ; and out of the Whole only Two Verdicts were given against the Plaintiffs.—That, except in One Instance, no Person was sent for to attend this Court from out of the District of St. John's ; and that, in that One Case the Defendant might have avoided the Inconvenience, which was wholly occasioned by his Obstinacy. —That the Fees taken in the new Court were considerably less than those taken in the Court of Session, and not a Quarter of the Sum charged by the Court of Vice Admiralty.— That the Court of Session has always conducted their Business in a very irregular and bad Manner, owing to the Justices being kept in continual Dread by the Merchants, who frequently threaten to prosecute them for their Decisions.— That the Court of Vice Admiralty had likewise been complained of by the Merchants as a great Grievance, and the same Merchants now wish to represent the new Court as likely to ruin the Fishery ; so that whatever Judicature may be established in the Island, it is likely to meet with Opposition from the Memorialists, who aim at sacrificing the real Interests of the Fishery to their private Views.— For further Particulars the Committee presume to refer to the before mentioned Letter of Admiral Milbanke, dated the 20th February last.

p. 1878

The Committee having maturely considered the Reasons assigned by Your Majesty's Governor for establishing the said Court of Common Pleas, and the several Facts alledged by him in Justification of the Proceedings of the said Court, thought it right to examine the said Governor, viva voce ; in which Examination he gave an Account, as will be found in the Paper hereunto annexed, marked (A) of the several Courts, Civil and Criminal, which have hitherto subsisted in the Island of Newfoundland, and of their Manner of proceeding.

After a full Consideration of what is before stated, the Committee were of Opinion, that a proper Court of Civil Jurisdiction should be established in the Island of Newfoundland, specially constituted for the Purpose of trying such Questions as are not now provided for by any Act of Parliament ; they therefore thought it right to take the Opinion of Your Majesty's Attorney and Solicitor General, upon the following Questions ; viz.

1. Whether the Court of Common Pleas, erected by Vice Admiral Milbanke last Year, in the Island of Newfoundland, is founded in any Authority legally given to the Governor of Newfoundland by Your Majesty's Commission, or can be supported or justified by Law ?

2. Whether in any Act of Parliament, or in Your Majesty's Commission, appointing the Governor of Newfoundland, there is given any Power for erecting any Court of Civil Jurisdiction in the Island of Newfoundland, or for authorizing any of the Courts of that Island to try Civil Causes there, except in the special Cases mentioned in the Acts 10 and 11 W. III. Ch. 25. Sect. 13, 14, 15 ; 15 Geo. III. Ch. 31. Sect. 18 and 34 ; 26 Geo. III. ch. 26. Sect. . And whether, in case no such Power has hitherto been given, Your Majesty may not, by a Commission under the Great Seal, erect a Court of Civil Jurisdiction in the Island of Newfoundland, specially constituted for the Purpose of trying all Questions that may arise between one Fisherman and another, or between the Fishermen and their Hirers or Employers, or between the said Fishermen and the Merchants of whom they purchase what is necessary for their Subsistence and Comfort during the Continuance of the Fishing Season ?

3. What the Nature and Constitution of a Civil Court, erected for the Purposes before mentioned, should be ?

The Committee accompanied the said Questions with the following Observations, respecting the Policy which has always been observed by the Government of this Country, in carrying on the Trade and Fishery at Newfoundland ; viz.

Mr. Attorney and Solicitor General are desired to take Notice, that the Government of this Country, having always considered the Trade of Newfoundland, merely as a Fishery, to be carried on solely by the Subjects of His Majesty's European Dominions, it has always been the Wish of Government o bring back the Fishermen at the End of every Season to the Ports of the said Dominions, and to prevent their establishing themselves as a Colony in Newfoundland. With this View no Civil Commission was given to the Governor, who goes out Annually, till about the Year , and no Court was established for trying Crimes of any Sort till about the Year , but all Criminals were to be brought Home to Great Britain, to be tried under the Authority of the Act of 10th and 11th W. III. Ch. 25. That of late Years a greater Number of His Majesty's Subjects continue to reside at Newfoundland during the Winter, after the Fishing Season is at an End, than formerly. That the Committee of Privy Council see this Circumstance with Regret, thinking it contrary to ancient Policy, and the true Interests of this Country, and wish to prevent it as much as possible. The Attorney and Solicitor General are desired also to take Notice, that much the greater Number of the Fishermen are extremely poor and ignorant, and thereby very much exposed to be defrauded by those with whom they deal.

p. 1879

In Return to which Questions Your Majesty's Attorney and Solicitor General, in their Report, which is hereunto annexed, have answered to this Effect :

That the Court of Common Pleas erected last Year by Your Majesty's Governor is not founded on any Authority legally given to the said Governor, and cannot be supported or justified by Law.

That they do not find that any Court of Judicature is established in the Island of Newfoundland, excepting in the Special Cases mentioned in the Acts of Parliament 10th and 11th W. III. Ch. 25 ; and 15th and 26th of Your Majesty, Ch. 31 and 26 : And that as Your Majesty is not precluded, by any Provision in the Acts before mentioned, nor by any other Acts with which they are acquainted, from so doing, Your Majesty may, by virtue of Your Royal Prerogative, by Commission under the Great Seal, establish a Court of Civil Judicature in Newfoundland for the Purpose of hearing and determining all Questions that may arise of the Nature hereinbefore mentioned.

And they further report, that after paying due Attention to the peculiar Policy of this Kingdom, with respect to the Territory of Newfoundland, which has always been directed to discourage the Subjects of these Kingdoms from establishing themselves in that Island, and to encourage the Return of the Fishermen and Seamen to these Kingdoms, they had, prepared, conformably to the Directions of the Committee, a general Outline of a Court of Civil Judicature, in Cases not yet provided for by any Act of Parliament ; which is as follows, viz.

That Your Majesty, by Your Royal Letters Patent, should direct and appoint, that there should be within the Island of Newfoundland a Court, to be called the Court of Civil Jurisdiction ; and that an English Barrister, of not less than Five Years standing, together with Two fit and proper Persons, to be appointed by the Governor for the Time being, should preside in such Court.

p. 1880

That such Court should have full Power and Authority to hear and determine, in a summary Way, all Pleas concerning Debts, Accounts, or other Contracts, and all other Personal Pleas whatever, excepting such as may now be heard and determined by any Jurisdiction established in the said Island by any Act or Acts of Parliament.

That such Court should have Power to grant Probates of Wills, and Letters of Administration ; and that in the Cases above mentioned, the Court should proceed by Complaint in Writing ; Summons of the Defendant in Cases where the Matter in Question is under such Value, as to Your Majesty's Wisdom may seem best adapted to the Circumstances of the Island ; and by Arrest of the Defendant, in Cases where the Sum demanded shall exceed that Amount ; such Court having Power to take Bail for the Defendant's Appearance and Performance of such Judgment, as the Court shall pronounce : And that such Court should have Power to execute the Judgment so given, and enforce the Payment of the Costs of Suit, by Warrant of Execution, by Sale of the Defendant's Goods and Chattels, rendering to him the Overplus, and to imprison the Defendant until such Judgment shall be satisfied.

That it may be proper, if the Party against whom Judgment may be given shall think himself aggrieved, that a Power should be given to such Party to appeal to Your Majesty in Your Privy Council, within a limited Time, upon giving proper Security, in Cases where the Matter in Dispute shall exceed the Value of and that the Court below should have Power to proceed in a summary Way, by Foreign Attachment of Goods, Debts, and Effects of Debtors, in the Possession of other Persons residing in the Island of Newfoundland.

That it would be most conformable to the Policy which has been observed by this Kingdom with respect to the Territory of Newfoundland, that the Court hereinbefore described should hold its Session from the 1st Day of June to the 1st Day of December in each and every Year, and should take Cognizance of no other Suits than such wherein the Cause of Action has arisen within Two Years previous to the Commencement of such Suit.

And the Committee having taken the before-mentioned Plan of a Court of Civil Judicature into Consideration, humbly offer it as their Opinion to Your Majesty, That it may be adviseable for Your Majesty, by Your Royal Letters Patent, under the Great Seal of Great Britain, to erect a Court of Civil Jurisdiction within the Island of Newfoundland, according to the Plan before mentioned, with the following Alterations and Additions :

FIRST, That the Person appointed to preside in this Court be either an English Barrister of Five Years standing, as advised by Your Majesty's Attorney and Solicitor General, or some other Person who, all Circumstances considered, may be thought equally well qualified for this Station.

SECONDLY, That in case the Judge recommended to be so appointed should die during the Fishing Season, the Governor should appoint a Person, then resident in the Island, to act in his Place during the Remainder of such Fishing Season.

THIRDLY, That the said Judge be paid a proper Salary for the Discharge of the Duties of his Office.

FOURTHLY, That he be expressly enjoined in his Commission not to take any Fee or Gratuity whatever for any Judgment given or Business done in the said Court, upon Pain of losing his Office.

FIFTHLY, That the Governor do appoint the Persons who are to be Assessors to the said Judge out of Persons who have no Concern in carrying on the said Fishery.

SIXTHLY, That every Judgment passed by such Judge should be with the Concurrence of at least One of the said Assessors.

SEVENTHLY, That no Person should be arrested for a Debt of less than Five Pounds.

EIGHTHLY, That an Appeal be allowed from the said Court to Your Majesty in Council, in any Action where the Sum recovered exceeds £100 Sterling, provided such Appeal be made within 14 Days after Sentence.

Besides the foregoing Alterations and Additions to the Plan for establishing a Court of Civil Judicature proposed by Your Majesty's Attorney and Solicitor General, the Committee take Leave humbly to recommend to Your Majesty, that the said Judge be instructed to conduct the Business of the said Court, during the Height of the Fishing Season, in such Manner as to interrupt as little as possible the carrying on of the said Fishery.

That it be recommended to Your Majesty's Governor, and the said Judge, to allow for the ensuing Season to the Assessors and Officers of the said Court such Fees only as are reasonable and moderate.

And that they prepare, and be ready, when they return from Newfoundland at the End of the present Season, to lay before Your Majesty, for Your Majesty's Approbation, a Table of such moderate Fees as they may judge proper to be established in future.

And that in order to afford Time to the said Judge to finish the Business of the Court in the Interval after the Height of the Fishing Season is over, and before the Departure of the Governor, the said Governor be instructed to continue on the Coast longer than has hitherto been practised, and as long as the Season will permit, consistent with the Safety of Your Majesty's Ships and Vessels.

No. 771.

[1793.]

EXTRACTS FROM “HISTORY OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE ISLAND OF NEWFOUNDLAND,”

BY JOHN REEVES, ESQ., CHIEF JUSTICE OF THE ISLAND [LONDON: 1793].

PREFACE.

After my return from Newfoundland, in the year 1791, I was curious to look back into what had been done, in former times, on the subject upon which I had myself been just employed. I accordingly looked over the NEWFOUNDLAND ENTRIES, and the NEWFOUNDLAND BUNDLES, among the books which belonged to the late board of trade ; and I then pursued the subject through the REGISTERS of the present committee of council for trade and plantations.

I was very much struck with the matter and reflections furnished by this research ; and I wished that the useful information, which I had derived from this retrospect, might be seen by those, who had at that time to consider the subject of Newfoundland. Hence arose the present History ; and as the same subject is now before the House of Commons, I have ventured to print it, and throw it among the other materials under examination.

If this public enquiry had not been instituted, the story here told would have been confined to the circle for which it was originally intended.

April 1793.

J. R.

INTRODUCTION.

I intend to give a short history of the Government and Constitution of the island of Newfoundland. This will comprise the struggles and vicissitudes of two contending interests.— The planters and inhabitants on the one hand, who, being settled there, needed the protection of a government and police, with the administration of justice : and the adventurers and merchants on the other ; who, originally carrying on the fishery from this country, and visiting that island only for the season, needed no such protection for themselves, and had various reasons for preventing its being afforded to the others.

This narrative will divide itself into four periods, or parts. The first will close with the passing of Stat. 10 & 11. Will. 3. c. 25. by which the adventurers and merchants were supposed to have obtained a preference, and advantage over the pretensions of the inhabitants, and planters. The second will end with the appointment of a civil governor, and of justices of the peace in 1729 ; by which some stop was put to the disorder and anarchy that had long prevailed in the island, especially during the winter seasons. This may be considered as an advantage gained by the inhabitants and planters. The third closes with Stat. 15, Geo. 3. c. 31. commonly called in the island Sir Hugh Palliser's act, which was intended for giving an advantage to the fishery carried on from the mother country ; but, as it obliges both merchants and planters to pay their servants' wages, it is equally abhorred by both parties ; and both parties have shewn great readiness to join in asserting, that the fishery has gradually decayed ever since the passing of this act. The fourth comes down to the year 1791, when a court of civil jurisdiction was established upon principles which, it was thought, would secure the impartial administration of justice to the merchant and the planter, the rich, and the poor, the master, and the fisherman.

p. 1883

* * * *

On the 31 of March 1708, the House of Commons addressed her majesty, beseeching her to give directions, that the laws relating to the trade and fishery of Newfoundland might be effectually put in execution against such commanders of her majesty's ships of war, or forts, or fortifications there, as should presume to exact, demand, or receive sums of money, or other rewards from any of the queen's subjects, in their voyages, trade, or fishery to, from, or at Newfoundland : And that such commanders and officers should be strictly forbidden to keep, use, or employ any fishing boats for their own private use or advantage : further, that the laws relating to the fishery should be duly executed. This address was occasioned by some complaints made against a Major Lloyd, who commanded the troops at St. John's ; but of this gentleman's conduct there were different accounts ; the most unfavourable seem to have prevailed with the House of Commons to come to this resolution.

This call for a due execution of the laws relating to the fishery, again drew the attention of the board of trade to the Stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3, c. 25. and the defect, so often complained of in that act, “not having any penalties specially annexed to the breach of it.” And on a question proposed by the board to Mr. Montagu, then solicitor general, he declared it to be clear, that although no particular penalty was mentioned in an act of parliament, requiring or prohibiting anything, yet any offender against such act may be fined at the discretion of the court, when found guilty on an indictment or information.

Representation 1708.

For the sea commanders to command at land.

The board then proceeded to make a representation to her majesty on the occasion of the before-mentioned address ; in which they say, that no complaint had ever come to them of exactions, or demands made by com-

p. 1884

Such commission issues.

manders of the queen's ships ; and if there were, the offender should be prosecuted on Stat. 15 Car. 2. c. 16. That the charge against Major Lloyd, for letting out the soldiers to work in the fishery, was under examination at the board. But that for preventing any misconduct of officers with relation to the fishery and trade in future, they recommended, that the commodore, during his stay there, should have the command at land, as he used to have from the first sending out of a garrison, till within the last three years, when that practice was discontinued. They thought this would contribute better to support good order and peace, in a place where no regular civil government was established ; and that it would enable him to superintend the queen's stores, and to make better returns of the state of the trade and fishery. As to the execution of the act in general, they stated the abuses and irregularity subsisting in the island ; the ignorance and partiality of the fishing admirals ; and they recommended that the commodore should be empowered to redress and punish all offences, and abuses committed at Newfoundland against Stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3, c. 25 ; as to those which he could not redress, they recommended he should inform himself whether the provisions of the act were duly complied with, and who were the offenders against them, in order that they might be proceeded against in this kingdom. They submitted whether it would not be proper to issue a royal proclamation for better observation of this law.

This representation was approved by the queen, and an order of council was made on the 20th of May 1708, directing a proclamation of the sort therein recommended, to issue ; and also a commission to be prepared annually by the Lords Commissioners for trade and plantations, for the commodore of the Newfoundland convoys, to command at land, during his stay in those parts, with such further instructions for putting in execution that act of parliament, as were set forth in the representation ; the Lords were also directed Such commission issues to prepare a letter to Major Lloyd, disapproving his proceedings, and requiring him to yield due obedience to the commodore's commission : all which was accordingly carried into execution. Instructions were delivered to the commodore for executing this commission to command at land ; and in one of those he was directed to send answers to the heads of enquiry, which had long been in use, relating to the trade and fishery, and which were always prepared by the board of trade, and afterward given in charge to the commander by the lord high Admiral.

This change in the command at Newfoundland set the lords of trade upon an enquiry after the commission (before noticed) given in 1615 to Captain Whiteburn out of the court of admiralty for impanelling juries. It seems also, that it was in agitation for the commissioners of the customs to appoint an officer for preventing illicit trade in Newfoundland. The lords of trade were informed from the custom-house, that when a court of admiralty should be erected, and a person appointed to hear and determine causes on informatios of seizures, a revenue officer should have his commission and instructions.

p. 1885

Laws and orders made at Newfoundland.

But the French had got so strong, and had so disturbed our possessions in the island, that every thing gave way to plans of immediate and necessary defence. Through the year 1710, the merchants were making representations to the board of trade, beseeching, that in any treaty of peace with the French, Newfoundland might be reserved wholly to the English. This idea was adopted by the board, and they appear to have pressed it strongly with her Majesty's ministers.

In the year 1711, I find, what is called, a record of several Laws and orders made at Newfoundland made at St. John's for the better discipline and good order of the people, and for correcting irregularities committed contrary to good laws, and acts of parliaments, all which were debated at several courts held, wherein were present the commanders of merchants' ships, merchants, and chief inhabitants ; and witnesses being examined, it was brought to the following conclusion between the 23rd day of August and 23rd day of October 1711. Then follow fifteen articles of regulation, that must have been very useful ; and it is worth considering whether such a local legislature, which the people seem in this instance to have created for themselves, might not legally be lodged somewhere, for making bye-laws and regulations, as occasion should require. The commander Captain Crowe, presided at this voluntary assembly. His successor, it seems, followed his example, and held a meeting of. the same sort. These assemblies were somewhat anomalous, a kind of legislative, judicial, and executive, all blended together ; and yet perhaps not more mixed than the proceedings of parliaments in Europe, in very early times.

At the peace of Utrecht we were put into possession of Newfoundland in a way we had not enjoyed it before, for some years. Placentia, and all the parts occupied by the French, were now ceded to the king of Great Britain, in full sovereignty ; the French retaining nothing more than a licence to come and go during the fishing season. A new prospect now opened ; and the government, not less than the merchants, turned their thoughts to that trade with a spirit that promised itself all the fruits of this new acquisition. A Captain Taverner was employed to survey the island, its harbours, and bays ; a lieutenant-governor was appointed to command the fort at Placentia ; the merchants beseeched the board of trade that the French might be strictly watched, and kept to their limits, and that a ship should go round the island, to see they left the different harbours at the close of the season.

Captain Taverner, who had great experience in that trade, and was much attended to at this time, gave in to the board some remarks on the Newfoundland fishery and trade ; and also heads of a proposed act of parliament. It appears from the observations made by this gentleman, as well as many others, that nothing was more strongly expressed by all persons, who shewed any anxiety, or experience on this subject, than the inefficiency of Stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3, and the necessity of going to parliament for new regulations.

p. 1886

It had become a doubt, whether that part of the island, lately ceded by the French, was subject to the provisions of Stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3. This point was brought forward, in consequence of the lieutenant-governor of the garrison at Placentia, and some of the French planters having, on leaving the place, disposed of their plantations for money, and, in this manner, attempted to convey a right and property, which was not recognised by the general usage of the island, as confirmed by that statute. This matter was brought before the board of trade, and their lordships were of opinion, that Stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3. extended to the ceded lands, and that all the beaches, and plantations there, ought to be left to the public use, and be disposed of, as directed by that act. Instructions to that effect were accordingly given to the lieutenant-governor of Placentia.

Among the proposals and suggestions for improving the trade of Newfoundland, some papers from Mr. Campbell, in the year 1714 are deserving of notice.

The Newfoundland trade was taken up by the government in the year 1715, as an object of important consideration. Captain Kempthorn, then on that station, was specially charged to make enquiry, and report every information he could acquire ; and I find a very long letter written by him to the secretary of the admiralty, and transmitted from thence to the board of trade. This letter is very full, and was submitted by the board to the king's government, as containing suggestions highly deserving consideration. The board were now satisfied that some new regulation ought to be made by parliament ; and preparatory thereto, they resolved to write to the towns in the west, concerned in this trade, desiring them to furnish such information as they possessed upon a subject where they had so much experience. They also laid a case before the attorney general, Sir Edward Northey, for his opinion on the defects of Stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3. and he was of opinion, that it would be necessary, in order to oblige the observance of the rules contained in that statute, for a new act to be passed, inflicting penalties for not observing the same, and directing how and where such penalties should be paid ; and he thought that a proclamation, requiring the observance of those rules (as was before proposed) would have no effect. On this occasion Mr. Taverner suggested his remarks, and gave a sketch of a bill. After the board had derived the information that was to be obtained from the different sources, where they had applied, they drew up a long representation to his majesty, dated the 2d of March 1715-6 containing their opinion upon the abuses, suggesting the remedies that would be proper to be applied, and recommending that a bill should be proposed to parliament for giving effect to the suggestions there made.

Representation 1718.

Claim of the Guipuscoans to fish.

Nothing was at that time done ; but the board continued to pursue the course they had taken for obtaining information : for in August 1718, we find a very full answer given in by Captain Passenger upon the whole of the subject of the trade and fishery ; and in December following, the board made a representation to his majesty, more elaborate, full, and comprehensive, than any performance that had yet been seen, respecting this trade and fishery ; and to this they afterwards added the heads of a bill, to be proposed to parliament for establishing the trade and fishery, and correcting the abuses to which it had been subject. This representation, and the heads of the bill, have been lately laid before the house of commons, and are now printed by their order.

Of the Lands ceded by the French.

About this time, the Guipuscoans had set up an antient right to fish at Newfoundland ; and application had been made to our court for asserting and allowing this claim. This matter was referred to the board of trade ; and that board did, on the 11th of September 1719, make a representation to the lords justices ; in which they say, that by the fifteenth article of the treaty of Utrecht, the Guipuscoans could claim no right, but such as they could make out by some prior title ; they then recapitulated the ancient history of our discovery and possession of the island ; and that by stat. 10 and 11 Will. 3. all aliens are expressly excluded from the fishery ; and they conclude, that the island and the fishery are the undoubted property of his majesty, and that the Guipuscoans had no manner of right to fish or trade there. They take this occasion to remind the lords justices of the representation they had made last year, and of the heads of a bill then suggested for better regulating the fishery.

The parts that had been surrendered by the French, occasioned in various ways great contest and discontent. We have before seen, that it was the opinion of the board, that those parts fell under all the regulations of the stat. 10 and 11 Will. 3. ; and this was confirmed by the opinion of the law officers. Another difficulty arose, in consequence of an agreement made by the Queen with the king of France, which went beyond the terms of the treaty of Utrecht. The French were by the treaty allowed to remain and enjoy their estates and settlements, provided they qualified themselves to be subjects of Great Britain—those who would not do this, had leave to go elsewhere, and take with them their moveable effects. Queen Anne, in consideration of the king of France releasing a number of protestant slaves out of the gallies, permitted the French inhabitants of Placentia, who were not willing to become her subjects, to sell their houses and lands there. It became therefore a question, whether this permission of the queen was valid, so as to dispose of lands which came to the crown by treaty. This point was submitted to Mr. West, counsel to the board of trade, for his opinion ; and it was material to settle it, because many British subjects had purchased such lands from the French inhabitants.

p. 1888

His answer was, that the queen could not by her letter dispose of lands granted to the crown by treaty ; but if she entered into any regular agreement with the court of France for that purpose, she was, by the law of nations, engaged to do every thing in her power to enable the French to have the benefit of it ; which might be done by her confirming titles to such of her subjects as should pay the French a consideration in money, or otherwise, for their lands or houses. Many such lands purchased by Governor Moody, having been used for fortifications, the board recommended compensation to be made him by the crown.

But when this question was so answered, what became of the right to ships' rooms, as established by stat. 10 and 11 Will. 3. which statute was held to apply to the French parts now ceded, as well as to the other ? Placentia being the best part for fishing, the English complained they were deprived of the benefit they had promised themselves, by this new acquisition, as they could not resort thither, without paying high rents for a plantation to cure their fish. In truth, many French still continued there, and they gave encouragement also to Biscayans, and to the people of Guipuscoa, who, we have seen, were starting a pretention to fish at Newfoundland, of right. All these together constituted a source of great discontent, and so continued for several years.

A Salmon Fishery
granted.

Another question, as to the right of property at Newfoundland, arose upon a salmon fishery, which had been carried on and improved by Mr. Skeffington, between Cape Bonavista and Cape John, in a part never frequented by any fishing ships ; he had cleared the country up the rivers for forty miles, and had built houses and stages. This person applied for an exclusive grant of this fishery for a term of years ;—the matter being referred to Mr. West, he reported, that such a grant would not be inconsistent with the Stat. 10 and 11 Will. 3. The board accordingly recommended to his majesty, that a term of 21 years, in a sole fishery for salmon, in Freshwater Bay, Ragged Harbour, Gander Bay, and Dog Creek, might very well be granted by his majesty, with liberty to cut wood and timber in the parts adjacent, provided it were at six miles distant from the shore.

In the close of the year 1728, we find the board of trade once more took up the subject of this trade and fishery, in consequence of the representations made by Lord Vere Beauclerk, the commodore on that station. In order to bring the subject under full discussion, they caused letters to be written to the chief magistrates of the different towns in the west, requesting the merchants to send their thoughts, whether any thing, and what, might be done for the further encouragement of the fishery.

p. 1889

With a view of understanding the situation and tenure by which persons held their lands in Newfoundland, the board referred, at this time, a question to Mr. Fane on the seventh clause of Stat. 10 and 11 Will 3. “Whether the possessors had an inheritance therein, or only an estate for life ?” and he was of opinion, that by the words of this clause, an estate for life only passed to the possessors, and consequently a right of alienation only for that interest, for the following reasons : — 1st. From the general rule of law, that the king's right and interest can never be bound by general words — 2dly. From the inconvenience that would ensue, if by these general words an estate of inheritance should be construed to be given ; for these houses, &c. might fall into hands improper for carrying on the fishery, or be bought by such as are in the interest of our enemies ; or such new erections, houses, &c. might be purchased by one person, or two, and so an engrossing established, against the design and intention of the act — 3dly. From the words of the clause, which seem to confine the possession to the builder ; for the act says, to HIS or THEIR use ; which implies, as he apprehended, that this is only a personal privilege ; and a privilege it was sufficient, to have an estate for life in a house, &c. probably slightly built ; and which, in all likelihood, would only last for the life of the builder — 4thly. This act was made, he apprehended, in disfavour of the Newfoundland-men ; and it could not be supposed such a favourable provision, in this instance, would be made for them, when they were discountenanced in every other clause of the act ; especially too against the right and interest of the crown, which, in all doubtful cases, must be preferred.

Representation 1728.

The letter to the mayors of the western towns produced only two answers ; one of which consisted of a complaint against Colonel Gledhill, the lieutenant governor of Placentia, for encroaching upon the fishing-rooms, engaging in the fishery, and using his power in an illegal and arbitrary manner ; the other complained of the illicit trade of the New England men. Not the least advice was given as to any mode of correcting irregularities, nor was anything said as to the want of order, and good government. The board were, therefore, left to take such course as they in their wisdom should think proper. They accordingly proceeded on such evidence as they had, and drew up a representation to his majesty, dated the 20th of December 1728. Representation 1728. In which they declare, "That the want of sufficient power in the commodore for enforcing the act of parliament, and the general contempt, into which the authority vested in the fishing admirals had fallen, had reduced the fishery to a very bad condition ; and, unless proper remedies were applied, in all probability we should entirely be deprived of the advantages derived by the nation from this trade."

They then go over the abuses and irregularities so often complained of ; the increase of bye boat-keepers, the settling of persons in the island, the enticing away of seamen, and fishermen by the New Englanders, who also carried on an illicit trade ; the disorders of the garrison at Placentia ; the clashing interests of the adventurers and the planters ; and the inefficacy of Stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3. They remind his majesty of their representations of the 2d of March 1715-16, and especially of that of the 16th of December 1718, and the heads of a bill annexed to the latter. They submit that so much of that, as may be thought proper, may be proposed to parliament immediately ; they judging that an intire remedy for the evils complained of, could not be effected, without the assistance of the legislature.

p. 1890

Recommends civil government.

However, they said, there were some irregularities, which could be corrected by the king's own authority, without the interposition of parliament ; those were, the irregularities of the garrison, and the disorders committed in the winter season. With respect to the former, they recommend, that considering the lieutenant governor of Placentia thought himself accountable to no one but the king, a nearer councroul and check over his conduct would keep him within bounds ; and therefore, that the commodore on the station should be commander in chief both by sea and land, as had formerly been the practice, which would at once put an end to the competition, and jealousy, which had so long subsisted between the land and sea forces. As to the second, they recommend, that the commodore might have power to appoint judges, and justices of the peace, to decide disputes between the inhabitants, and distribute justice amongst them during the winter season. This they thought would alleviate the misery of those unhappy people, which was great enough without additional evils from the anarchy in which they lived. They say, that heretofore much encouragement had not been given the settlers, to continue in the island, and therefore regular governors, as in other colonies, had very seldom been appointed for them ; and it. was their opinion, that these poor people, should rather be encouraged to. settle in Nova Scotia. They were about three thousand in number, with their wives and children, and might be of service there, where inhabitants were wanted.

They took into consideration the claim of property made to stages, &c. in prejudice of the fishing ships, upon which Mr. Fane's opinion had been taken ; and they thought many such titles, if enquired into, would be found to be defective ; they therefore proposed, that some person, skilled in the laws, might attend the next commodore, and assist him to enquire into them, in behalf of the crown. The same person might likewise be useful in forming regulations for the better government of the inhabitants, during the winter season, so long as they continue there. They also recommended, that the bishop of London, as ordinary of the plantations, should send a clergy-man, whose salary might be put on the establishment of the garrison at Placentia.

This representation of the lords of trade was taken into consideration at the committee of council. The committee referred to the board to consider whether, as the commission, proposed to be given to the Lord Vere Beauclerck, would vacate his seat in parliament, the service intended might not be equally well carried on by instructions to be given to the Lord Vere Beauclerck, for putting in execution all the powers entrusted, to the commodore, by Stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3. and by a commission, to be given by his majesty to a person skilled in the laws, who should, accompany the Lord Vere Beauclerck, for appointing justices of the peace, and establishing some form of civil government among the people who had settled themselves in that island, that they might not be left in a state of anarchy, upon the departure of his majesty's ships of war. If their lordships saw no objection thereto, they were desired to consider of a proper form of commission and instructions.

p. 1891

They were also desired to consider, whether it might be adviseable to separate the government of Placentia from that of Nova Scotia.

The Committee made another order the 19 of April 1729, in which they recommended to his majesty all the points proposed by the lords commissioners of trade.

In obedience to the first order of the committee of council, the lords report, that they thought a commission to some person to attend the Lord Vere Beauclerck, with proper instructions, might serve instead of a commission to his lordship. They prepared a commission and instructions accordingly, whereby such person was required to take the advice of Lord Vere Beauclerck, and to execute such matters as his lordship should propose to him in writing, for his majesty's service. Among the instructions they inserted some relative to the acts of trade and navigation ; which, however, their lordships thought would prove of small effect till his majesty should be pleased to erect a court of admiralty, or some other proper jurisdiction in Newfoundland, to take cognizance of offences against those acts.

They drew up instructions for Lord Vere Beauclerck, and made the old heads of enquiry a part of them.

They remark, that they had added an instruction, which required his lordship to send home all offenders, in robbery, murder, and felony, and likewise the witnesses, which had not always been done. This was to be practised till such time as some other method should be established for trying offenders in the country, which may, say their lordships, perhaps be thought necessary, so soon as the island shall have been put under better regulations, and some person skilled in the laws may hereafter be annually sent thither for this purpose, with his majesty's commission of oyer and terminer.

A civil governor is appointed.

They were of opinion that the government of Placentia should be separated from that of Nova Scotia.

This design for establishing some sort of government in Newfoundland ended in the appointment, not of a person skilled in the law, but of Captain Henry Osborn, commander of his majesty's ship the Squirrel.

The commission given to Captain Osborn begins by revoking so much of the commission to the governor of Nova Scotia, as related to the government of Placentia, or any other forts in Newfoundland ; and then goes on to appoint Henry Osborn governor and commander in chief in and over our said island of Newfoundland, our fort and garrison at Placentia, and all other forts and garrisons erected and to be erected in that island. It then gives him authority to administer the oaths to government, and to appoint justices of the peace, with other necessary officers and ministers for the better administration of justice, and keeping the peace and quiet of the island. But neither he nor the justices were to do anything contrary to the Stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3, nor obstruct the powers thereby given to the admirals of harbours, or captains of the ships of war. The justices were required to be aiding and assisting to the commodore, or commanders of the ships of war, and the fishing admirals, in putting in execution the said statute. The governor was to erect a court-house and prison; all officers, civil and military were to be aiding and assisting to him in executing this commission. In case of his death, the government was to devolve on the first lieutenant of the Oxford, the ship commanded by Lord Vere Beauclerk.

Such were the terms of the first commission of civil governor, granted for Newfoundland. The instructions that accompanied this commission, have nothing in them very particular. They are fourteen in number ; and the last required him to execute all such matters as Lord Vere Beauclerk should propose to him, for his majesty's service. The instructions to his lordship contained all the heads of enquiry relating to the trade and fishery, and the abuses and irregularities so long complained of, and they were fifty in number.

We are told, that on the 24th of May 1729, a box was sent to the Lord Vere Beauclerk, in which were eleven sets of Shaw's Practical Justice of the Peace, each impressed on the covers, in gold letters, with one of these titles, Placentia, St. John's, Carboneer, Bay of Bulls, St. Mary's, Trepassey, Ferryland, Bay de Verd, Trinity Bay, Bonavista, Old Parlekin IN NEWFOUNDLAND ; together with thirteen printed copies of Stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3, and a bundle containing the acts relating to the trade and navigation of this kingdom. And thus provided, his lordship and the governor set sail for Newfoundland, in the summer of the year 1729.

Having brought down this history to the period, when an attempt was made to afford some sort of civil government to Newfoundland, I shall make a short pause in the narrative ; and call the reader's attention to some few documents, that will more strongly impress upon his mind the actual state of things in that island, and the pressing necessity there was for the interposition of the parliament, or of the executive government, to correct abuses, and establish some sort of regular authority. I have before given a particular account of the enormities subsisting within three years after passing Stat. 10 & 11- Will. 3, from a letter written by a person then confided in by the government at home ; I mean Mr. Larkin. It is very plainly to be collected, from the representation made by that gentleman, that this statute was ineffective and inadequate from the very beginning. What is inapplicable in its origin, is not likely to become more useful in a course of time. It will be found, in fact, that in all the time that elapsed between passing that act, and the year 1729, disorder and anarchy increased more and more ; and nothing remained but to try another system.

p. 1893

* * * *

PART III.

Justices appointed—Opinion on raising Money by the Justices — Contest between the Justices and fishing Admiral—Opinion on the Authority of the Admirals—A Court of Oyer and Terminer proposed.—Such Commission issued—Lord Baltimore revives his Claim—The Peace of 1763—Remarks of the Board on Stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3.—Newfoundland a Plantation—Custom-house established Property in Flakes, &c., discussed—Stat. 15, Geo. 3, c. 31.

SOME home might reasonably be entertained, that the establishment of a civil government, and the appointment of justices of the peace with proper officers for executing the law, would have been received by all as a desirable improvement in the state of society in the island, and it might be expected, that such an appointment could not fail of its effect. But the cause which had always operated to prevent any sufficient authority being introduced into that place, opposed itself to this new establishment. The western merchants, who had been silent, while this measure was in agitation, were ready enough to bring complaints of its consequences, when carried into execution; and we shall soon see the struggle made to prevent any lawful authority taking root in Newfoundland.

The government soon had to regret, that they had not taken the advice of the board of trade, to bring forward a bill in parliament for correcting all the abuses, then subsisting there ; for it will be found that the opposition raised against the civil governor and his justices, was on account of their not deriving their authority from parliament, but only from the king in council. How futile soever this reason may be, it had its effects in staggering many, and contributing to bring the office, and the persons bearing it, into great question, if not contempt.

Mr. Osborn, upon his arrival, proceeded to carry into execution his commission. He divided the island into convenient districts, and appointed in each of them, out of the inhabitants and planters of the best character, such a number of justices of the peace and constables, as seemed necessary. In order for building a prison, he ordered a rate, such as the justices represented, he says, to him as of little burthen to be raised, within the districts of St. John's, and Ferryland ; and a prison was to be built in each of those places. It was not greater than half a quintal of merchantable fish per boat, and half a quintal for every boats'-room, including the ships-rooms of ships fishing on the bank, that had no boats ; with the like proportionable rate upon such persons in trade as were not concerned in the fishery ; this rate was only for one fishing season. He erected several pair of stocks, and he expressed a hope that the measures he had taken would be sufficient to suppress the great disorders that had so long prevailed.

p. 1894

But he says he most feared, that as the best of the magistrates were but mean people, and not used to be subject to any government they would be obedient to orders given them, no longer than they had a superior amongst them. He says, that he and Lord Vere had done many acts of justice to the inhabitants and planters, particularly at Placentia, where they restored several plantations that Colonel Gledhill had unjustly possessed for several years ; and many more might have been taken from that officer, had the real proprietors been on the spot to sue for them.

When Lord Vere, and Mr. Osborn, returned to England, they made a report of what they had done ; in order to be ascertained of the ground on which they acted, they wished the opinion of the law-officers might be taken on some points, and four questions were accordingly referred to the attorney-general, then Sir Philip Yorke. The main point was the levying money for building the prisons ; and the attorney-general was clearly of opinion that the justices of the peace in Newfoundland had not sufficient authority to raise money for building a prison, by laying a tax upon fish caught, or upon fishing-boats ; the rather because Stat. 10 and 11 Will. 3. directs that it shall be a free trade. The power of justices of the peace in England for building gaols depends, says he, upon Stat. 11 & 12 Will. 3, c. 19. by which they are enabled to make an assessment upon the several divisions of their respective counties, after a presentment made by the grand jury at the

Opinion on raising money by the Justices.

assizes, great sessions, or general gaol delivery. As the justices of peace were by their commissions, to act according to the law of England, he apprehended they ought to have pursued that act of parliament as nearly as the circumstances of the case would admit, and to have laid the tax, after a presentment by some grand jury ; and then it should have been laid upon the inhabitants, and not upon the fish or fishing-boats. So far as the people had submitted to this tax, there might, he said, be no occasion to call it in question ; but he could not advise the taking of rigorous methods to compel a compliance with it.

As to assaulting any of the justices or constables, or any resistance to their authority ; that, says he, might be punished by indictment, fine, and imprisonment at the quarter sessions ; and for contemptuous words spoken of the justices or their authority, such offenders could only be bound to their good behaviour. Destroying the stocks or whipping-posts were indictable offences. He was of opinion the justices could not decide differences relating to property, their power being restrained wholly to the criminal matters mentioned in their commission.

p. 1895

He thought neither Captain Osborn, nor the justices had power to raise any tax for repairing churches, or any other public work, except such works for which power was given to justices of the peace in England to levy money, by particular acts of parliament.

Mr. Fane was likewise consulted upon these points, and was of the same opinion ; however he adds, for their lordship's consideration; admitting the Stat. 11 & 12 Will. 3. had not been strictly pursued, yet as the assessment of fish was equally laid, as the people had submitted to it, as no other way could be thought of for raising the tax ; and as his majesty's commission would be intirely ineffectual, unless a gaol was built, whether any inconvenience could arise, if upon the refusal of any of the persons assessed, the method laid down by Stat. 11 & 12 Will. 3. were pursued to compel a compliance with it. Upon being again consulted, he says, he thought Captain Osborn, as he had acted with so much caution and prudence, and had taken no arbitrary step, in execution of his commission, could not be liable to a prosecution in England, in case the inhabitants should not acquiesce in the tax. He thought it absolutely necessary the tax should be levied according to the Stat. 11 & 12 Will. 3. and notwithstanding the proceeding already had was not entirely agreeable to that law, he thought Captain Osborn would be very well justified in pursuing it, as it seemed the only method whereby the design of his majesty's commission could be executed.

Such were the discussions raised on the occasion of these attempts to improve the police of the island. Mr. Osborn again went to Newfoundland : but in a letter from St. Johns' in September 1730, he gives a very bad account of the new institution. He says, he had hoped that a proper submission and respect would have been paid to the orders he had given, and to the magistrates he had appointed ; but instead thereof, the fishing admirals, and some of the rest of the masters of ships and traders in the island had ridiculed the justices' authority very much, and had used their utmost endeavours to lessen them in the eyes of the lower sort of people, and in some parts had, in a manner, wrested their power from them. The admirals had brought the powers given them by the fishing act in competition with that of the justices, and had not even scrupled to touch upon that of the governor. All this discord proceeded from a jealousy the admirals and the rest of the masters of ships had conceived, that their privileges granted them by Stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3. were invaded by these magistrates ; which power, say he, "those admirals could hardly ever be brought to make use of (without it was to serve their own purposes) before, nor till they saw these officers established ; and they are now, adds the governor, doing all they can against these men, only because they bear this commission. Indeed, says he, I find by their will, they would be sole rulers, and have nobody to controul them in their arbitrary proceedings. He expostulated with them, but it seemed to serve no other purpose than to raise their resentment against him, as the abettor of the justices. He could not charge the justices with having taken any arbitrary steps ; their fault was rather the contrary, whereas the admirals were guilty of many."

p. 1896

"The commission of the peace was in general disliked by all the masters of ships, who were the chief people that opposed most of the steps the governor had taken ; for which reason, and partly from the indifference of some of the justices, in their offices, who thought they suffered in their way of trade, and got the ill will of the people they dealt with, and partly from the incapacity of others, the commissions of the peace were but indifferently executed. However the governor, notwithstanding this opposition, proceeded to make appointments in places where he had before made none."

The prison and court house at St. Johns' were nearly finished, and people had very well complied with the rate. He agreed to a presentment for a rate to build a prison at Ferryland ; and he said, he did not doubt but the very sight of these two prisons would, in some measure, check many people in their evil courses.

Memorials were presented to the governor, by the justices of St. Johns', complaining that they were obstructed in their duty by the fishing admirals, who had taken upon them the whole power and authority of the justices, bringing under their cognizance all riots, breaches of the peace, and other offences, and had seized, fined, and whipped at their pleasure ; they had likewise appointed public-houses to sell liquor, without any licence from the justices ; the admirals told the justices, they were only winter justices, and seemed to doubt of the governor's authority for appointing ; that the authority of the admirals was by act of parliament —the governor's only from the privy council. This distinction in the authority from whence they derived their power, was thought sufficient for the admirals to presume upon ; and the comparative pretensions of them and the justices were rated accordingly in the minds of the ignorant and malicious.

The towns in the west were not backward to join in this clamour against the justices ; they complained that the governor had taken the power out of the hands of the fishing admirals, and vested it in the justices, who had proceeded in an arbitrary way to tax the servants and inhabitants ; had issued out their warrants not only against servants, but against the masters of vessels themselves, in the midst of their fishery ; to their great prejudice, and in defiance of the admirals and the act of parliament. They suggested that these justices were, some of them New England men ; and none of them ever coming to England, as the admirals did, there was no redress to be obtained against them for their illegal proceedings, They said, some of the justices supplied the fishermen and seamen with liquor at exorbitant rates, though the merchants would supply them at a moderate advance. After stating such plausible topics, which, it was well known, would always be listened to when Newfoundland was in question ; they prayed, “That such justices might have no power during the stay of the fishing ships ; but that the admirals might resume their authority, and that the commodore and captains of men of war should be ordered to be aiding and assisting to them therein.”

This competition between the fishing admirals and the justices was taken into consideration by the board of trade, who called for the opinion of Sir

Philip Yorke, then attorney-general, and he reported, that upon a view of the commission to the justices, of Stat. 10 & 11 Will. 3. and of all the complaints, it appeared to him the whole authority granted to the fishing admirals was restrained to seeing the rules and orders contained in that act, concerning the regulation of the fishery, duly put in execution ; and to the determination of differences arising between the masters of fishing boats, and the inhabitants, or any bye boat-keepers, touching the right and property of fishing-rooms, stages, flakes, &c. which was a sort of civil jurisdiction in particular cases of property ; whereas the authority of justices extended only to breaches of the peace. He was therefore of opinion, that the powers granted to the justices were not inconsistent with any of the provisions of the act, and that there was no interfering between the powers given by the act to the admirals, and those by the commission to the justices.

The struggle between the fishing admirals and the justices was still kept up ; the west country merchants, and masters of ships supporting the former, and the governor standing by the latter. This produced complaints on both sides ; and no doubt, in such a contest a just cause of complaint might often be found on both sides. But the aggressors were certainly those who set themselves against the authority of the governor and justices, and who, by their conduct on this occasion, plainly shewed they wished the inhabitants and poor planters should be deprived of all protection from legal government, and should be left wholly at their mercy.

It was given in special charge to the succeeding governor, Captain Clinton. and to his successors, to make a report of what was done towards carrying into execution the new commission of the peace. In compliance with that charge, we find the governors return such accounts of the opposition of these admirals to the civil government, as are hardly to be credited but by those who have read what went before ; and after that it would be tiresome and nauseous to detail any more upon the subject. This contest continued for some years, till it was found that no opposition could induce his majesty's ministers to withdraw this small portion of civil government, which had not been granted till it had been loudly called for by the necessities of the island. The fishing admirals then became as quiet, and useless as before, and contented themselves with minding their own business, in going backwards and forwards to the banks.

While this question of the competition between the fishing admirals, and the justices, was agitated, Mr. Fane also was consulted, respecting the distinct jurisdiction of these officers, and he agreed in opinion with the attorney-general ; he also at the same time delivered an ' opinion that is worth remembering ; namely, that all the statute laws made here, previous to his majesty's subjects settling in Newfoundland are in force there ; it being a settlement in an infidel country ; but that as to the laws passed here, subsequent to the settlement, he thought they would not extend to that country, unless it was particularly noticed. The question then will be, when

p. 1898

A commission of oyer and terminer proposed.

did this settlement take place? And it may be urged, that the policy having all along been to prevent settlement, and that persons should resort thither only for the fishing season, there is to this purpose a settlement commencing annually ; and that in truth, British subjects carry with them the laws of this country, as often as they go thither ; if so, all the law of England, as far as it is applicable to the state and circumstances of Newfoundland, is constitutionally and legally of force there. This was a question of much importance, but it has since been settled by the wording of the act of last session for establishing a court there ; which court is to determine according to the law of England, as far as the same is applicable to the island.

Nothing material appears respecting the civil government of Newfoundland, till the year 1737, when the board of trade listened to the representation that had frequently been made by the governor, of the inconvenience of sending over to England for trial, persons who had committed capital felonies. In such cases the witnesses were glad to keep out of the way ; the felon was sent to England, without any person to prove his guilt ; a great expence was incurred, justice was disappointed ; or if the fact were proved, the poor witnesses was left to get back as they could, with the expence of their voyage, and residence, and the certain loss of one season's fishing.

It had been provided by Stat. 10 and 11 Will. 3. that such capital felonies might be tried in any county in England ; and in the commission of the peace lately given, this policy was so closely adhered to, that the justices were therein restrained from proceeding in cases of doubt and difficulty, such as robberies, murders, and felonies, and all other capital offences. It appeared to the board of trade that this scruple might now be got over ; and they proposed inserting in the commission that was to be given to Captain Vanbrugh, a clause, authorising him to appoint commissioners of Oyer and Terminer ; but the board wishing to be assured that the king's prerogative was not restrained in this particular, by the above provision in Stat. 10 and 11 Will. 3. they consulted the attorney and solicitor general, who thought the king's power was not abridged by that act. The board, in their representation to his majesty, state the example of a commission being granted to the commodores with other persons, for trials of piracy, as a precedent for trusting them with this authority to issue commissions for trying felons ; and that it was no more than was given to other governors of plantations. But they inform his majesty, that as this power might be too much to be entrusted in the hands of judges and juries very little skilled in such proceedings, they had added an article, which restrained the governor from allowing more than one court of Oyer and Terminer in a year, and that only when he was resident ; and he was further instructed, not to suffer any sentence to be executed, till report thereof be made to his majesty. But when the commission went before the privy council for approbation, all that part which gave this authority was directed to be left out ; so fearful were they of trusting such authority to those in whom they had lodged the civil government of the island.

p. 1899

Such Commission issued.

So this point rested till the year 1750 ; when Captain Rodney, who was then governor, pressed the secretary of state for such a power to be granted. It was referred to the board of trade, where they recurred to what was projected in the year 1738 for Captain Vanbrugh's commission. A doubt arose with the board, whether this power might be given by instruction, or whether it must be inserted in the commission ; and Sir D. Ryder, then attorney-general, being consulted, he was of opinion, that such power could not be granted by instruction, nor any other wise than under the great seal ; but that the manner of exercising such power might be prescribed by instruction ; he thought the clause drawn for the commission of 1738 was sufficient, only that neither the power of trying, nor that of pardoning treason, should be entrusted with the governor, or any court erected by him. The commission issued accordingly, with this new power, to Captain Francis William Drake.

It may be remarked of this commission of Oyer and Terminer, issued under the new power given to the governor, that it has not been executed without some question being raised as to its legality. Persons, who were obstinately bent to believe there was no law in Newfoundland but Stat. 10 and 11 Will. 3. were disposed to doubt the power of the crown to give authority for issuing this, as well as the commission of the peace. It has been the interest and inclination of many at Newfoundland to contest everything that was not founded upon the same parliamentary authority as Stat. 10 and 11 Will. 3. But this spirit, whether of ignorance or wilfulness, has worn off, in a great measure, of late years, though it is occasionally at work even now. And it is to be lamented at this moment, that the advice given by the board of trade in the year 1718, and afterwards on the occasion of establishing the civil government in 1728, was not followed ; and an act of parliament passed for remedying all the abuses and irregularities at once, instead of resorting to the half measure that was then adopted, and which had all the difficulty we have seen to support itself.

If we are to judge from the dearth of matter in the books of the board of trade, things went on very quietly at Newfoundland for several years. We only find some scattered facts of no great importance.

* * * *

p. 1900

PART IV.

Import of live Stock, &c.—Representation on a Bill brought in by the Western Merchants—Three Acts passed — Complaints about Courts—Review of the Courts at Newfoundland—Fishing Admirals—Surrogates—The Governor holds a Court—Courts of Vice-Admiralty and Sessions—The Governors cease to hold Courts—Court of Common Pleas instituted—Complaints against it — Representation—And Act passed for a Court of Civil Jurisdiction.

Complaints about courts.

During the last five or six years that the board of trade continued in existence, there appears nothing of importance upon the books respecting this trade and fishery. That board was abolished in 1782. It was not till June 1784, that a committee of council was appointed by his majesty for matters of trade and plantations.

* * * *

A new subject of complaint had grown up in Newfoundland this was the hearing and determining of civil causes. Among all the grievances, and the expedients for remedying them, during the tract of time we have gone through, there seems to have been no solicitude or attempt to provide a court of civil jurisdiction. While this place continued merely a fishery, the causes of action between parties were simple and of less magnitude ; but of late years the population had increased, and among the persons resident there were dealings of a mercantile nature to a great extent, and of a sort to need a judicature, that would command more confidence than any of the old establishments had been thought entitled to. There arose therefore, from time to time, discontents upon this head, and these led to measures that ended in making an intire new establishment of a court. To make this subject more intelligible, we should look back to the courts that had hitherto been known at Newfoundland, the nature and jurisdiction of which were brought under consideration at this time.

Review of the Courts of Newfoundland.

The first regulation that looked at all like a court, was the authority given by Stat. 10 and 11 Will. 3. c. 25. f. 15. to the fishing admirals, to hear and determine controversies and differences between the masters of fishing ships, and the inhabitants, or any bye boat-keeper, concerning the right and property of fishing rooms, stages, flakes, or any other buildings or conveniency for fishing or curing fish ; and if either party thought himself aggrieved, he might appeal to the commander of any of the king's ships belonging to the convoy. This was a civil judicature of a limited sort—the adventurers or merchants, it should seem, were not liable to it ; it was confined also in its object ; debts still remained without any mode of recovery, as well as all other personal wrongs of a civil nature.

Another jurisdiction was given to the fishing admirals by this act : by Sect 14 they were to see the rules and orders contained in that act concerning the regulation of the fishery duly put in execution; and this was given them, as the act expresses it, to preserve peace and good government among the SEAMEN and FISHERMEN, as well in their respective harbours, as on the shore. This was a sort of police invested in them, which might be considered as partaking both of a civil and criminal authority. But this also, like the former, was limited as to the persons ; no authority was given that could be exercised over the merchants and adventurers, who seem to be considered by this act as persons who might have right done them ; but against whom it was not necessary to do any justice whatsoever—for, by the rules and orders of this act, the fishing admirals would be obliged to see they had ships-room ; and their seamen and fishermen would be kept quiet and under controul ; but if these adventurers had taken possession of any fishing rooms, stages, flakes, or other conveniency for the fishery, the admirals had no jurisdiction to call them to account, and to make restitution to the right owner, their jurisdiction in that particular being confined to the masters of fishing ships, inhabitants, and bye boat-keepers.

p. 1901

The merchants and adventurers being therefore subjected by this act to no controul or authority whatsoever, when they begun to settle, and to have mercantile dealings, to a great amount, they had nothing to do but to take the law into their own hands ; and having possessed themselves of plantations or fish, or any thing else, in payment of debts, real or pretended, there subsisted, under this act, no power whatsoever to call them to account ; and it was, no doubt, for this reason, that the merchants have so constantly adhered to the support of this act, declaring that a free fishery, conducted under the policy of this act, was all they wanted, and complaining that every regulation made since that act has invariably operated to injure the trade and fishery. It was indeed the policy of this country to support a free fishery there, for ships going from hence, and to prevent settlement. So far the views of the government and the interest of the merchants concurred ; but the application of this principle had the effect of leaving the island to the mercy of the adventurers, who found it their interest at length even to promote settlement to a certain degree ; contrary to their own declarations, and to the policy of Stat. 10 & 11. Will. 3. ; for no part of which they seem to have had any value, but the feeble judicature and police it gave the island ; in consequence of which, they saw the whole fishery abandoned to their sole will and pleasure.

These observations upon the incomplete form of this judicature and police, suggest themselves upon the bare reading of the act ; but the experience of the manner in which it was executed, shewed all this in a more aggravated appearance. It has been too often repeated in the course of this historical enquiry to need repetition here, that the admirals were the servants of the merchants, inasmuch as they were the masters of some of their ships ; that in many cases, therefore, justice was not to be expected from them ; that is, in cases where their owners were concerned. In many others, where their owners or themselves were not concerned, there was always a partiality towards the description and class of persons with which they were connected ; and a poor planter, or inhabitant, (who was considered as little better than a law-breaker in being such) had but small chance of justice, in opposition to any great west-country merchant. This bias must have been a strong impediment to the equal administration of justice in the hands of the fishing admirals. Besides this which arose from their employment and connection, there was another disqualification, that was to be corrected by no integrity or fairness whatsoever. It should seem, that persons, educated as masters of merchant ships, could not in general possess that discrimination and discernment, which was necessary for determining right and property, even in fishing stages and flakes.

Such being the judicature established by the statute of King William, and such the hands in which it was lodged, we have found, that it was executed fully as ill as could from the nature of it be expected. We find that the admirals were most of their time out on the fishery ; that, when in harbour, they were still employed about curing of their fish, and the other parts of their business ; that the commanders of the king's ships were obliged to summon, enjoin, and enforce them to hold courts ; that discovering the sluggishness of the admirals, they were under the necessity of taking liberties not given by the statute ; that, being only a court of appeal, they were obliged to erect themselves into an original court. This they did by degrees, and with a sort of deference to the provisions of the act of parliament. At first they got the admirals to sit with them ; and I have seen many judgments and proceedings to which the commander of some of the king's ships has first subscribed his name, and the admirals have added theirs. It is not to be wondered, that the commanders of the king's ships, with their superior endowments, should gradually obtain an ascendancy ; and having thus blended their appellate jurisdiction with the original one lodged in the admirals, should at length wholly dispense with their attendance of the fishing admirals (who would be glad enough to be excused), and so in time succeed to a complete original exercise of judicial authority in the place of the admirals.

So indeed it happened. But there were not wanting occasions, when the admirals awaked from their lethargy, and shewed a steadiness in asserting the dormant powers lodged in them by the statute. These were when the adventurers and merchants perceived the government at home were making any attempt to introduce a better system of law and order into Newfoundland. Accordingly, we have seen, that upon the appointment of a civil governor and justices, in the year 1729, the admirals bestirred themselves ; and, from the impulse which the competition inspired for the moment, they actually took upon them all the authority they possessed under the statute. They even went further, and claimed a criminal as well as a civil judicature ; and proceeded to issue warrants, and do acts which belong to justices of the peace. In these usurpations they were supported by the western merchants, whose language it was to represent the provisions of Stat. 10 and 11 Will. 3. as competent to the complete government of the island in all matters, both civil and criminal.

But with all this support, so limited a power, lodged in such feeble hands, could not sustain the contest; and the admirals soon fell back into the inactivity, neglect, and contempt, where they had before slumbered. As they sunk, the commanders of the king's ships rose into importance ; the statute of William grew to be looked upon as a dead letter ; and the administration of justice, in all the points there conferred on the admirals, was expected from nobody but the commanders of the king's ships, when they came to the island in the summer season.

p. 1903

Although the hearing of certain matters, by way of appeal, was given to the commanders by the statute, yet the hearing of them originally was not authorized. The possession of the former gave a colour for assuming the latter ; and crude as this may seem, it was, perhaps, as well warranted as some of the instances of jurisdiction now exercised, and from long usage allowed to the first courts in Westminster-hall. When the captains were in possession of this, they proceeded, as happens mostly in the exercise of power and authority ; they found in that place, as it is elsewhere, that all judges have the quality which is invariably supposed to belong to the best, that of enlarging the sphere of their cognizance : and we find very soon, that the captains of ships took cognizance of debts contracted ; and held courts, in which they enquired of, heard, and determined all possible causes of complaints ; and with no other lights than those furnished by the statute of William, the instructions from the governor, and the suggestions of their own good sense ; paying always a due regard to the customs and usages of the country. They did every thing, that the fishing admirals might do, and every thing the admirals had at different times pretended to have a right to do. From their situation, and the support they received from the governor, they were enabled to maintain the jurisdiction they had assumed. The governor conferred on them the title of surrogates, an idea taken from the admiralty-law ; to which, and which alone the naval governors were in the habit of looking, and under which it had long been a notion, that the fishery, as an admiralty concern, ought to be regulated. A surrogate is well known in Newfoundland, as legally deputed by the governor, to act as his deputy. Under this character the authority of the governor was exercised very beneficially. The time of surrogating was looked forward to as a season when all wrongs were to be redressed against all oppressors ; and Surrogates.

The governor holds a court.

this naval judicature was flown to by the poor inhabitants and planters, as the only refuge they had from the west country merchants, who were always their creditors, and were generally regarded as their oppressors.

While the surrogates in the different parts of the island were administering justice in this manner, the governor had also his court at St. Johns ; and, it is easy to believe, that every thing which the surrogates permitted to themselves, the governor thought himself equally entitled to do and command. Every matter, civil, and criminal, used to be heard, and determined in open court before the governor. Where no special direction was pointed out by law, a person in that situation was to be commended for striking out such course as the exigency of the situation, and the good of the place required. This desire of doing good sometimes carried the governors further than strict legal propriety could warrant. They used to preside in the sessions of justices, although

p. 1904

Courts of vice-admiralty and session.

it was from their authority that the commission of the justices issued. It would be endless and unnecessary to enter into the instances of irregularity that must follow, when judicatures were instituted in such a place as this, by persons who had nothing for their guide but the rectitude of their intentions, and a very honourable disposition.

In the year 1765, a custom-house being established at St. John's, a court of vice-admiralty, (the court of revenue in the plantations) was placed there. This court, in the absence of the governor, during the winter, had entertained complaints in other matters than those peculiarly belonging to it. In this it only followed the example of the court of sessions, where the justices had allowed the hearing of matters of debt, and other subjects of difference of a civil nature. It was in consequence of this usage, that the parliament afterwards conferred on the court of vice-admiralty, and the session, a jurisdiction of a civil nature. By Stat. 15, Geo. 3, c. 32. they have authority to determine disputes concerning the wages of seamen and fishermen, and the offences committed by their hirers and employers against that act. This jurisdiction was taken from the court of vice-admiralty, by Stat. 26, Geo. 3, c. 26, owing to the unfavourable impressions that had been made respecting the practice which had prevailed in that court.

Although the parliament took away from the vice-admiralty court the authority vested in it by law, it still continued to exercise that which no law had conferred on it ; and both that court and the sessions were resorted to in the absence of the governor and surrogates, for the administration of justice in all civil cases whatsoever. Justice administered under such circumstances could have but little of the authority and effect, which should attend upon the sentence of a court. There was no doubt in the minds of any, above the very lowest class, but the whole of this judicature was an usurpation : it was, therefore, more frequently employed as an engine of authority, to obtain that by a course of law, which could not, perhaps, be attained by open violence, than as the means of protecting the weak against the powerful. A merchant rather chose to have the assistance of the court of session or admiralty, to attach and seize the effects of his debtor, than incur the odium of taking them with force. The appearance of a legal course was preferable. But should a wealthy merchant become defendant in one of these courts, it was not so sure that he would approve the same legal course, or yield the same obedience to a sentence. He, as well as the court knew, there was no legal authority to compel ; and it was a question of prudence only, whether such a defendant would submit quietly to their order. If the court happened to have in it persons who acted with vigour, and had character and influence sufficient to cause its decrees to be duly executed ; it would, in such case, be but a bad prospect for a merchant to look for redress by an action, to be brought in England. against a man who, perhaps, never might make a visit there. Such considerations might operate with the merchants to obey these courts, even when they decided against them. Besides, a merchant might think it for his advantage to yield, in one instance, to a court, which in so many others he found useful ; he being more frequently plaintiff than defendant.

p. 1905

It was in this manner, by a sort of convention, upon views partly private, partly public, with a design sometimes selfish, often generally beneficial, but never without the concurrence and support of the majority of those most interested, was a judicature gradually conferred on these two courts, which with the governor, and the surrogates, possessed all the judicature in the island, civil as well as criminal.

But a time was coming, when a judicature, that stood on so weak a foundation, was to be shaken. Though the justices, and the judge of the admiralty court might never come to England, the governor and his surrogates necessarily did. In the time of governor Edwards, some persons, discontented with a judgement made by him in court, at St. John's, and carried into execution by the sheriff there, meant to redress themselves by bringing an action against the governor for a trespass in so depriving them of their property. This was to have been tried at Exeter, but it was made up before the case was gone through to the jury.

The governors cease to hold courts.

The governor got well quit of this business, and he proceeded, during the remainder of his time, to hear causes in person, without the least doubt or difficulty, as his predecessors had before done. But the minds of men were changed upon this subject ; and his successor Admiral Campbell, 1782, was advised not to take upon him to sit in court, as his predecessors had done, nor to determine any causes whatsoever. He substituted in the room of this, a mode which was certainly without exception ; and which, in a country like that, could not fail of having a very useful, and very extensive effect. The petitions which used to be brought to the governor in great numbers, upon all sorts of questions and subjects, were still received as before ; but instead of holding a court, and making decisions, which were to be enforced by the sheriff, he directed his secretary to hear the complainant, and if necessary, the party, against whom the complaint was made, and thereupon to write at the bottom of the petition the governor's opinion, and give such advice as if followed, would have the effect of complete justice. Advice and direction given from such authority was most usually followed ; and the administration of justice was, in a great degree, attained in this mode of application, without any course of process, as in a regular and open court.

However, in many cases, this method was not acceptable ; and many more persons began, after this time, to recur to the courts of session, and vice-admiralty ; and these two courts, as they were open all the winter, presented a more useful, and certain course of redress, than the above mode of petition. These two courts increased very much in business from the beginning of Admiral Campbell's government.

But these two courts derived this accession of business from the necessity of circumstances merely ; their authority was still as feeble as before, and the exercise of it depended upon the like precarious circumstances, for being carried into effect. As the population of St. John's increased, and as the light of later times, which spreads every where, had reached that place, it became necessary to have something more than opinion and sufferance to found a judicial

Court of common please instituted.

p. 1906

authority upon. When Admiral Milbanke was to set out to his government in the summer of 1789, he was strongly advised by his secretary, Mr. Graham, (who had been secretary to the three preceding governors) to get something of a court established, that might stand on unquestionable authority ; and the governor's commission being searched for this purpose, it was found that he had full power to appoint judges, and in cases necessary, justices of oyer and terminer, &c. It was suggested to him, that judges, contrasted as the word there seemed to be with justices of oyer and terminer, ought to be considered as meaning something different from such justices ; and that being in a popular, untechnical sense, usually applied to those who preside in the three courts in Westminster-hall, it had grown in the minds of unprofessional men to signify more especially judges in civil matters ; that it therefore seemed, the governor, by these words, had authority to institute a court of civil jurisdiction ; and he was accordingly advised to institute a court of common pleas to proceed by a jury in the manner of a court of common law in this kingdom.

Justices appointed.

Complaints against it.

This opinion upon the wording of the commission, was urged not to be a strained exposition, to obtain totidem verbis, an authority which perhaps might not have been intended to be given ; but to be a necessary one, and such alone, as could be drawn from the words. But those who have read the foregoing history, of the first granting to the governor the authority of appointing commissioners of oyer and terminer, will be satisfied, when he reads the same words in the first commission granted for that purpose, that they were designed to convey nothing more than that simple authority. One may be a little surprised how a power of appointing commissioners of oyer and terminer should be penned so as to stand judges, and in cases necessary justices of oyer and terminer. But it appears that in commissions to West India, and other governors, where it was meant to convey the power of appointing standing judges, as well as occasional justices, these words are to be found, placed in this manner ; and in the way precedents are followed, these words were copied, where it was meant to appoint only justices of oyer and terminer, and those occasionally.

The governor's authority, whatever it might be, was actually carried into effect, by an appointment of a court of common pleas, and judges, in the summer 1789. This court of common pleas transacted business during the following winter ; but the western merchants preferred very heavy complaints against the proceedings of this court ; what they alledge against it may be seen shortly stated in the representation afterwards made by the committee of trade, and now printed by order of the House of Commons. Their great objection, which they do not state, but which I will venture to do for them is this ; that they now saw a court established (as they believed) upon good authority, with which they could not trifle, as they had been used to do with the feeble judicatures before-mentioned ; those inefficient courts they preferred, because they could make use of them when they needed their assistance, and could intimidate the justices, and obstruct their proceedings, whenever they themselves were to be the objects of animadversion. They had been in the habit of seeing this species of weakness and anarchy ever since Newfoundland was frequented, from father to son ; it was favourable to their old impressions, that Newfoundland was theirs, and that all the planters and inhabitants were to be spoiled and devoured at their pleasure ; in support of this, they had opposed, as we have seen, every attempt at introducing order and government into that place. It was in this spirit, that they questioned the king's right to appoint a civil governor, to appoint justices of the peace, to appoint commissioners of oyer and terminer ; that they complained of the custom-house, and even talked of presenting it as a nuisance, because erected on ship's room ; that they treated Stat. 15, Geo. 3, as destructive to the fishery, because it compels the payment of servants' wages ; and that they brought forward a bill in 1785, in order to expose the servants once more to the will of their masters, as to the payment of their wages.

These clamours were backed with the popular representation, that the fishery should be free, and that a fishery carried on from this country, as the western merchants carried it on, was the old and true policy for Newfoundland. But their claims to a free fishery seem to be these ; namely, to be free of all inspection from government ; no justices, no courts, no custom-house. This is what they mean, when they wish all restraints to be taken off the fishery, so as they may carry it on upon the footing of Stat. 10 and 11 Will. 3.

The pretences urged by the merchants against the court were seen through by his majesty's servants ; but it appearing to the law-officers, that the governor had not authority under the words of his commission before observed upon, to institute that, or any other court, for civil causes ; and it appearing to the committee of council for trade, that a court of civil jurisdiction ought to be established there, they recommended to his majesty to appoint or to authorise the governor, by proper words, to appoint one ; and this court, they recommended, should proceed in a summary way. The opinion of the board on this matter will be better seen in the representation they made to his majesty, which was laid before the house of commons, and has been printed by their order.

An Act passed for a Court of Civil Jurisdiction.

However, no court was then established ; and the court of common pleas, instituted by the governor, continued, during the year 1790, to proceed as before. The subject was taken up by the committee of trade in the year 1791; and a bill was presented to parliament, under their direction, for instituting a court of the sort they had recommended in the representation made in 1790. This bill passed into a law ; and being intended as an experiment of a new judicature, it was to endure for one year only. The result of that experiment was to propose another bill in the sessions of 1792, for instituting a court somewhat different from that of the preceding bill. This also was only for a year.

It is now for the consideration of parliament finally to determine what courts are to be established in the island for the administration of justice in future.

April 1793.

Page	1	2	3	4	5	6
------	---	---	---	---	---	---

No. 772.

[1793.]

EXTRACTS FROM EVIDENCE OF WILLIAM KNOX

GIVEN BEFORE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO INQUIRE INTO THE STATE OF TRADE TO NEWFOUNDLAND, 1793.

SECOND REPORT FROM THE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO ENQUIRE INTO
THE STATE OF THE TRADE TO NEWFOUNDLAND. [ORDERED TO BE PRINTED 24 APRIL 1793.] Pp. 16-20.

Your Committee again called WILLIAM KNOX, Esquire, who being examined, said, That in order to give the Committee the fullest information he was able upon the Subject of their Enquiry, he should begin by stating the Objects of the Act of the 15th of His present Majesty, and the Motives which induced the then Ministers (all of whom are now dead) to adopt the several Provisions it contains, which he was the better enabled to do, as he was then One of the Under Secretaries of State in the American Department, and furnished much of the Information upon which they acted.

That the Island of Newfoundland had been considered, in all former Times, as a great English Ship moored near the Banks during the Fishing Season, for the Convenience of the English Fishermen. The Governor was considered as the Ship's Captain, and all those who were concerned in the Fishery Business, as his Crew, and subject to Naval Discipline while there, and expected to return to England when the Season was over. The English had then no Rivals in the Trade but the French, and although the French Fishery exceeded theirs, the English gradually increased, and those who carried it on were generally successful. The Treaty of Paris, by adding Canada, all Nova Scotia, and Cape Breton to the British American Dominions, deprived France of the Advantage she had from the Employment of the Inhabitants in the Fishery ; but at the same Time a new Rival was raised up to the English Traders and Fishermen in those and the other Northern British Colonies, and as the Profit the French Inhabitants had made under the French Government by the Fishery on their Coast as well as on the Coasts of Newfoundland naturally turned the Attention of the British Subjects to the same Business, many Settlers emigrated to Newfoundland for the Purpose, while others spread themselves along the Shores of Nova Scotia and Cape Breton, so that there appeared evident Danger of the Trade and Fishery being lost to England, and that instead of its being a British Fishery, as it had hitherto been, it would become a Colonial Fishery. To prevent the Increase of Inhabitants on the Island, the most positive

p. 1909

Instructions were given to the Governors not to make any Grants of the Lands, and to reduce the Number of those who were already settled there. Their Vessels, as well as those belonging to the Colonies, were to be denied any Priority of Right in occupying Stations in the Bays or Harbours for curing their Fish over the Vessels from England ; and he was instructed to withhold from them whatever might serve to encourage them to remain on the Island ; and as Lord North expressed it, whatever they loved to have roasted, he was to give them raw ; and whatever they wished to have raw, he was to give them roasted. With a View to secure the Return of all the Fishermen carried out, Half their Wages was made payable to them in Bills or Cash at the End of the Season, and their Employers were obliged to find them a Passage Home, and allowed to retain Forty Shillings of their Wages for that Purpose ; and to. give an Advantage to the Bank Fishery over the Shore Fishery, as well as to encourage the fitting out from England, without Offence to the Colonies, a Bounty was given upon the taking 20,000 Tail of Fish by Bankers from England that carried out Two Green Men, or Youngsters that had never before been at Sea. The Effect of every One of these Regulations has been the very contrary of what was intended ; and the Witness's own Experience as an Adventurer in the Fishery these Five Years past enables him to correct his Judgment as a Politician, and to point out their pernicious Tendency, as well as to suggest the Remedy.

That soon after the Act of the 15th of His present Majesty was passed, he perceived, from comparing the Governor's Returns with the preceding Ones, that the young Lads left in the Island were greatly increased, instead of being lessened, as was expected ; and upon conversing with Persons who had been there, and were concerned in the Fishery, he learned that Half the Wages a Youngster was entitled to was not sufficient to pay the Expence of fitting him out the First Year ; and besides, they often wanted to have something for Mothers who they had assisted to support. The Traders therefore hired them for Two Years, and left them the Winter in the Island, employing them in the Salmon Fishery, or cutting Timber, or other Work, as well to save the Expence of their Passage Home as to avoid paying them Half their Wages, which would have left their Employers out of Pocket. This he experienced to be the Case with the Youngsters he took out and brought Home ; and upon that Account, as well as upon another which he shall mention, he had given up fitting out for the Bounty, as he finds many others have done, and consequently fewer Youngsters will be taken out, and fewer Seamen made . . . but he shall now proceed to the more agreeable Task of suggesting Remedies for the Evils he has pointed out, and such Regulations and Encouragements as he conceives will restore and increase the British Fishery : And the First he would recommend, is to recur to the old Idea of the Island of Newfoundland being considered as a great British ship, and to invest the Governor and his Surrogates by Law with the Authorities and Powers he and they formerly exercised without Law ; but, instead of their coming away, in Times of Peace, the 15th or 20th of October, before the Fishing Business is ended, or the Disputes between Parties can be brought before them, or settled,

p. 1910

they should be ordered to remain until the 1st of December ; they would then be able to oblige the Fishermen brought out to return, and if they were not permitted to remain in the Island, there would be no occasion to oblige their Employers to find them a Passage, as they would make their Agreement accordingly before they went out, and their Employer, being sure of their Return with him, would provide for their Conveyance ; as however the Preparation for the Fishery requires a certain Number of Persons to be left at every Station during the Winter, it would be proper to oblige none to return but such as had been left the former Year, or had resided there Two Years so that all who chose to stay might remain One or Two Winters in the Island ; this would encourage the carrying out of Green Men, or Youngsters, as they might be left throughout the Winter, and employed in such Business as were fit for, and acquire sufficient Knowledge to be useful the next Season

No. 773.

EXTRACTS FROM EVIDENCE OF CHIEF JUSTICE REEVES

[1793.]

GIVEN BEFORE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO INQUIRE INTO THE STATE OF TRADE TO NEWFOUNDLAND, 1793.

THIRD REPORT FROM THE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO ENQUIRE INTO
THE STATE OF THE TRADE TO NEWFOUNDLAND. [ORDERED TO BE PRINTED 17 JUNE 1793.] Pages 107-176.

JOHN REEVES, Esquire, Chief Justice of the Island of Newfoundland, being called in, was asked, If he had any Information to give to the Committee respecting the Government, and the Administration of Justice, of the Island of Newfoundland ? He desired to be permitted to deliver in the following Paper of Remarks, viz.

* * * *

With respect to other Courts, I entirely differ from Mr. Newman and Mr. Ougier, who wish that the Justices of the Peace should have no Authority in Civil Matters ; and that when the Governor, Chief Justice, and the Surrogates are gone, there should be no Means whatsoever for recovering Debts. It is true, that the Consequence of the Two Judicature Acts of 1791 and 1792 has been, that no Causes whatsoever have been heard, when the Governor, Chief Justice, and Surrogates were gone ; but this has been found extremely inconvenient, and hurtful to many Persons, whatever Reasons those Gentlemen may have for wishing the Administration of Justice to be still suspended. The Merchants of Harbour Grace, when I was there, delivered me a Paper, in which they state how much they were aggrieved by their old Courts being suspended, and pray they may, as heretofore, have a permanent Court of Session. They add these Words, to which I beg the Committee to attend. "It falls particularly hard upon us, who have never made the least Complaint, or troubled Government in any shape whatever, that we should be deprived of that Court, which we were (but are more so by fatal Experience) convinced was a salutary one, and answered the desired Effect." I now deliver in this Petition (which is hereunto annexed, vide Appendix No. 15), and I again caution the Committee how they suffer that, which comes only from these two Gentlemen, to be received as the Language of the whole Trade, and of the whole Island.

These Gentlemen have indeed (as the Merchants of Harbour Grace truly say) complained and troubled Government, and have heretofore been too much listened to.

p. 1912

Conformably with the Requisition of the above Paper, and with the Wishes and the Necessities of the People resident at St. John's and Harbour Grace, I should recommend, that in the Absence of the Chief Justice and Surrogates, there should be some Court for the Recovery of Debts to any Amount, and for determining Causes of any Sort or Kind ; and that there should be an Appeal from such Court to the Supreme Court at St. John's. Some of the Persons to fit in those Courts can, from the Nature of Things, be no other than the very Persons who sat Things, in the Court of Common Pleas, and who have been so misrepresented. I know all the Clamours made against those Gentlemen to be ill-founded ; I know them to be the most fit to be put in the same Station they were then in ; and they ought to be placed there, not only for the Advancement of the public Service, but as a Testimony that their Conduct is approved, and that the Servants of Government will always be supported when they deserve it.

Such permanent Courts are necessary, because it is impossible, within the Compass of Time while the Governor, Chief Justice, and Surrogates are there, to hear all the Matters that it would be convenient to the Parties to bring to a Hearing in the Season. The Surrogates leave their Stations about the 20th or 21st of October ; the Governor and Chief Justice depart from St. John's by the last Day of October at farthest. The Merchants do not wind up their Accounts the middle till of December, and some of them not till the First Week in January ; though there may be a very good Reason why the King's Ships should not be hazarded on that Coast, at so late a Season, there seems to be no good Reason why, upon their Departure, the Business left undone should not be taken up by some Resident Court. It would also be extremely convenient to have some such Court to resort to, if necessary, during the Winter, and at the Opening of the Spring, before the Governor, Chief Justice, and Surrogates arrive : such Courts might prepare Matters, which they did not choose to determine, for the Determination of the Chief Justice and Surrogates, when they arrived ; in the mean Time the Country would have all the Benefit which is derived from Courts in other Causes, and some of it even in those. At any Rate, the Stay of the Chief Justice, more especially of the Surrogates, is too short for beginning and ending all the judicial Business of the Island : these may be made extremely useful, as a subsidiary Aid to such permanent Courts, but ought not to be relied upon, in my Opinion, as the only Tribunals for deciding Differences.

The Committee have already been detained too long with what I have said upon the Judicature. I shall endeavour to be very short in the few Observations I have to make on Two or Three Points that have been spoken to by some of the Gentlemen.

Something has been said on the Nature of Property in Newfoundland, and I will lay before the Committee my Opinion upon this Question.

The different Titles under which, it appears, Land may be holden, seems to be reducible to these : by Grant ; by Occupancy ; and by Act of Parliament. It is very rare that a Title can be traced up to an original Grant ; but where there are any such, it is a Grant either from a Governor or One of his

p. 1913

Surrogates. These were made sometimes generally ; sometimes to the Grantee for Life ; and sometimes to him and his Heirs ; they have of late Years been considered as nothing more than Grants during Pleasure, or at most, during the Time the Place granted was used for the Fishery ; and Grants of late have been commonly expressed to be during the King's Pleasure, and for the Use of the Fishery. Much, however, of the Ground so granted, is so situated as to be of no Use in the Fishery, and is actually used for growing Hay, and other farming or domestic Purposes. The Grants, whether ancient or modern, contain no Reservation of Rent, or any Acknowledgment or Consideration whatsoever ; nor is it believed that any was ever paid for such Grants. Some indeed are to be excepted ; namely, where a Piece of Land has been granted in Consideration of another that had been taken from the Grantee for building Forts, or some other public Service ; there are several such Grants, and they are considered as the best Titles in the Island, on Account of this consideration being expressed in them.

Titles by Occupancy I call such where there is no Grant, or any Thing to shew for the original Possession of the Ground as exclusive and private Property ; this makes Three Fourths of the Ground that is used and possessed in the Island, more especially in the Out Ports ; where being removed from the Eye of the Government, they make Inclosures, and carve for themselves almost as they please.

Besides these Modes of possessing Land, there is another which is authorized by the Acts of Parliament relating to Newfoundland ; and the before mentioned Tenures by Grant and by Occupancy may possibly be often sanctioned by the Fishery Acts, as far as such Tenures can be brought within the limited Sort of Property conferred by those Acts. The Titles that may stand upon the Authority of Parliament, are such as are within the 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, and 8th Sections of Stat. 15th Geo. III. c. 31, compared together. On considering these Regulations, the Meaning of which is not very obvious or plain, it should seem that the Parliament meant to establish Two Sorts of Titles : First, they intended to ratify the Titles to all Land which the Inhabitants had converted into private Property before the Year 1685. Having made the Inhabitants easy in that Point, they required them to yield up all that had been appropriated between that Time and the Passing of Stat. 10th and 11th William III. and that none should be appropriated by them in future in Prejudice of Ships coming from Europe ; but that Ships coming from Europe, and equipped conformably with the Fishery Acts, should have a Place for curing their Fish for the Season ; but that at a subsequent Season the Spot so taken should be open for any other Ship to take, and might thus change its Master every Year. Hence arose what are called Ships Rooms, whether they are such as have long been so denominated, or whether they are any vacant or void Spaces, under Stat. 15th Geo. III. which may be taken by any such Ship, the same as reputed Ships Rooms.

These Two Parliamentary Titles, namely, that of Property before the Year 1685, and that of Ships Rooms, though they are in the Letter of them the most defined and sure, yet they are in their Consequences of Less Value to Individuals than of the former.

p. 1914

In the First Place, I do not believe that any Owner of Land can shew a Possession and Property in any Person under whom he Claims subsisting prior to the Year 1685. And although there must be many such, yet not being able to shew their original Title, they can Claim by nothing better than the Occupancy of themselves and their Predecessors, and must be reckoned therefore in that Class of Landholders.

With regard to Ships Rooms, it is easy to see, in the short Mention I have just made of them, that they are quite the Opposite to private Property, and therefore hardly come within the Description of Titles which we are now seeking—Ships Rooms and all vacant and void Spaces, which may be turned into Ships Rooms by those who chuse so to occupy them, are in common for the first Taker, who may possess One for the Season, at the End of which he must leave it, with all the Improvements he has made (which he is expressly prohibited by the Statute from removing) for some other Person to enjoy the next Season. The Consequence is, that this commonable Part of the Shore is of very little Value, and in some Places of none at all. In those Harbours where a clean Sea-beach is thrown up in great Quantities (as at Ferryland) and they are in the Practice of drying their Fish upon the Beach, a Ship's Room of that Kind is of Use ; but in Harbours where there is no Beach, as at St. John's, and Fish cannot be dried on a Ship's Room, without the Expence of building a Flake, there a Ship's Room is not worth taking ; and we see in consequence of it, some of the choicest Spots in the Harbour of St. John's lie vacant ; no one thinking it worth his while to lay out Money on Ground which belongs to the Public.

However, it must be confessed that since commonable Ground has sunk in Value, there has been less Conscience or Scruple in making Encroachments on it ; and it is owing to this that Ships Rooms have been gradually giving way to the Inclosures that are continually streightening them on all sides. Many were interested in conniving at this ; and most People, for the above Reasons, thought it more beneficial to the Public that it should be so appropriated. These Innovations were made long ago, and are now of so long standing that nobody thinks of contesting the Point, unless it is some litigious Man, who seeks only to vex his Neighbour, and then the Claim meets with no Encouragement from a Court.

However, this Change in the State of commonable Ground on the Shore caused Alarm in some Persons who were solicitous to preserve the old System ; finding so little remaining unoccupied of what used to be Ships Rooms, they thought the best Method of recovering the System, without disturbing private Rights, by exciting dormant and forgotten Claims, was to create a new Quantity of commonable Ground ; and it was accordingly declared by Stat. 15 Geo. III. that all vacant and void Spaces whatsoever should be considered as Ships Rooms.

From this Account of Ships Rooms, and the Change they have undergone, it is easy to see, that a great Part of the Ground, which might have been held for the Season under this Parliamentary Title, has passed into the Class of Land holden by Occupancy, and some of it, though less likely, into that of Land given by Grants from Governors.

p. 1915

Upon the Whole, the Title to an exclusive private Property in Ground must either be by Grant from some Governor or his Surrogate, by Possession before the Year 1685, or by Occupancy ; and as Titles of the Second Sort cannot, I believe, be made out, all Titles may be reduced to Grants and Occupancy, the Title to Ships Rooms being rather a Right of Common than a Title to Land.

Whatever may be the original Title to Land, and the Security in it as against the Crown, the Owners as against One another remain undisturbed, and they sell, lease, and mortgage the same as in any other Part of the King's Dominions. Some of these Places, where Storehouses and Dwellings are built, let for very high Rents. Many Persons have such Estates, that bring in from One hundred to Three or Four hundred Pounds per Annum. Some of these live in the Island, some reside in England, and have the Rents remitted to them. There are Instances, where Persons resident in the United States, and become Citizens there, have received Rents from Newfoundland. It is upon Consideration of all these Facts that I thought, and still think the Crown should receive some Acknowledgement, by Ways of Quit Rent, for Ground which is so valuable to the Possessors.

* * * *

The Population of Newfoundland has certainly (by the best Accounts) increased considerably of late Years : I take the Beginning of this great Increase to have been at the Time the War with the Colonies broke out ; and it has increased, for similar Reasons, still more since the Peace. We find, all through the History of this Government ; that Newfoundland was resorted to by the New Englanders, as a Place for procuring Fishermen, Seamen, and Artificers ; that Bounties were given for that Purpose by their Government ; and that various Means were practised for seducing away our People to that Colony ; they have been carried to the Number of Three or Four hundred in a Season. This Drain was always a Subject of Jealousy to the Mother Country, and it always made a Part of the Consideration, when the Probability of Newfoundland becoming populous was debated. Since this Intercourse has been stopped, every Person who does not return to the Mother Country stays in the Island ; this of itself must add greatly to the Numbers of the lower Class of People. The Merchants are also increased, at St. John's at least, by Persons who come from the revolted Colonies ; but these are few in Number compared with those who have engaged in the Trade of late Years from other Parts of the British Dominions.

That Revolution has made an Alteration in the Value and Importance of Newfoundland, which seems to me never to have been sufficiently considered. It appears to me, that since the Peace 1783, Newfoundland has been more completely our own ; that it has been a more genuine British Fishery, and of more Value to the Mother Country, than it ever was before. It is become a Sort of Cul de Sac ; what does not stay there must come to Great Britain and Ireland ; there is no longer the Competition and Interloping Trade of the New Englanders so much complained of heretofore by the Merchants. I cannot help thinking also, that since Newfoundland is so severed from New England, some of the Topics respecting the Population of the Island, and the Fears about Colonization, deserve less Regard. Notwithstanding the Increase of Inhabitants, Newfoundland is still nothing but a great Ship, dependent upon the Mother Country for every Thing they eat, drink, and wear, or for the Funds to procure them ; the Number of Inhabitants seems to me rather to increase this Dependence, inasmuch as their Necessities are thereby increased. They all look to the Sea alone for Support ; Nine tenths of the People procure from the Soil nothing but Potatoes ; and those who carry Cultivation furthest reap no Produce but what can be furnished by a Garden. In some few Places Hay is cut, but Corn is never thought of ; neither the Soil, or the Climate having encouraged the few Attempts that have been made to grow it. The Population, though said to be great, is scattered as thinly as the Products of the Earth. Distant Harbours and Coves, not easily accessible but by Sea, are the Places chosen for Residence, the People of which have little Knowledge, or Connection with one another, to unite them.

The Island is little-known and the Accounts given of the Population are not to be depended on ; it is stated from Twenty to Fifty thousand Persons, who have no other Home. Be it as large as the highest of these Statements, I do not myself think it an Object to be apprehended. If any think the Collection of People in the Island has Mischievous Tendency, I hope the above Considerations may contribute to ease them a little on this Head. At. any Rate, it is a Matter where we are to hope rather for Consolation than Cure ; for I do not see how such a Population is to be rooted out, or indeed thinned, so as to make any considerable Diminution. There have been Projects, on former Occasions, when the Island was thought to be overrun with Inhabitants, for sending People to Nova Scotia, and other Places, where Inhabitants were wanted, but I do not remember that these were ever carried into effect.

I cannot help saying, that the grand Means employed to prevent the Increase of Inhabitants has, in my Opinion, contributed to their Increase. It has all along been the Inclination to say, that there should be no Resident Government, because, if there was, Newfoundland would become a Colony. None have been more strenuous than the Western Merchants in keeping up the Cry against a Governor ; they have constantly alledged the above Reason, and that Reason has always passed for a good one.

I take the Liberty of doubting whether this Reason was a good one. I never can be brought to think, but that placing a Governor there, whose Business it should be to prevent People settling, would have been a more probable Method of preventing it than continuing the present floating Government, which has no regular Authority to send Persons Home, and which departs from the Island just at the Time when the Seamen and Fishermen are hesitating whether they shall stay the Winter or not, and might be easily turned in their Resolution by the Apprehension of any Interposition from Authority. The Consequence has been, that Newfoundland has been peopled behind your Back ; you have abandoned it to be inhabited by any one who chooses, because you thought appointing a Governor would constitute a Colony and encourage Population. The Western Merchants, who found out the Reason that “a Governor would make a Colony,” knew perfectly well what they were about in urging it ; they knew that the Presence of a Governor would interfere with their Plan, which was to go on without Inspection or Controul ; they over reached those who heard them, and succeeded in the only Object they proposed to themselves : For in the mean time they, among the rest, proceeded to make all the Advantage they could, by adding to the Number of Residents every Year.

p. 1917

However it may have originated, the Population of the Island is such, as now to need the Controul and the Protection of Magistracy and Officers, like the rest of the King's Dominions. That Magistracy should be raised and strengthened, instead of being exposed to be disregarded and contemned, as has been attempted by some late Proceedings ; and in my Opinion, it will never be placed in a Situation to discharge its Functions properly, till there is something more of a resident Government.

The present floating Government seems to me so constituted, as to confer the least possible Advantage of a Government. The Governor's Appointment continues for Three Years, the Term of his Station ; the Captains of the Squadron, who are his Surrogates, are often changed during the Station. It happens, therefore, that the Governor has One Year to see and learn, another to execute his Authority with some Knowledge, and a Third Year with some little more.

If the Governor, who is changed every Three Years, has little Time to learn the Peculiarities of the Trade and Fishery, what is to be said of the Captains of Ships, who are often changed before the Station is out? And if you add to this that they all come to the Business of hearing Causes for the first Time in their Lives (unless by some Chance a Captain has been on the Station before) it seems altogether the most singularly contrived System, and most unsatisfactory to everybody concerned in it. It is therefore not to be wondered, that the Governors who succeeded Admiral Edwards, finding they could not determine Causes so easily as he says he did, and less liking than himself to pay a Sum of Money to compromise any Action that might possibly be brought against them for what they did, ceased to hold Courts, and endeavoured to enforce an Observance of the Law, more by their advice than their Authority. I think their Country owes them great Obligations for undergoing the Trouble and Anxiety so long as they did ; and I think the same Thanks are due to the Surrogates, who have to the present Moment, continued to perform the same unpleasant Task in their several Stations. The stepping thus out of their professional Line, can never be submitted to from any other Consideration, than an implicit Obedience to all Commands imposed on them by their superior Officer. I was extremely glad, the last Season, to lend my Assistance in taking off some of this Load from the Surrogates. This I did in Part, during my Visit to Trinity Harbour and Harbour

p. 1918

Grace ; and I after did the Whole of the Surrogate's Business at Ferryland, which, however, broke in too much on the Time I ought to have spent at St. John's.

It is to be wished, that the Captains of Ships should still continue to lend their Assistance as Surrogates in the Out Harbours. The Communication from Harbour to Harbour is only by Sea ; and the Force of a Ship of War, may sometimes be wanted to enforce Obedience to Justice. In the Out Ports, too, the Questions are of a more simple Nature, usually about Wages or Charges in an Account, either between Master and Servant, or Merchant and Boat-keeper, to which Gentlemen of the Navy may easily give their Attention ; but at St. John's there are many Questions which arise upon complicated mercantile Dealings, which have led to a Length of Enquiry that would not be very agreeable to the Governor, or any of his Surrogates. Indeed all this was experienced before the Governors gave up the vexatious Employment of hearing Causes, and it has very much increased of late Years, since the Town of St. John's has increased in Population, and there has grown to be so much Trade and Traffic, which give Rise to mercantile Questions of various Sorts.

In Truth, the Surrogates are not able to get through the Business they are employed upon, without the Assistance of the Justices who reside on the Spot. I am sure I should not have been able to proceed without the continued Assistance of Gentlemen acquainted with the Place ; during the first Year I was principally assisted by Mr. Graham, who had been Secretary to the Governors for several Years, and by Mr. Coke the Comptroller ; these Two Gentlemen were Assessors in the Court of Civil Jurisdiction. The last Year Mr. Graham was no longer in Office, and the Court had no Assessors, so that I had nothing to depend on, but the voluntary Assistance of Mr. Coke, which he gave me very readily. So long as the present Triennial Government continues, there must be some Person or Persons kept in Office, who from long Habit and Experience may be able to keep alive the Knowledge that is necessary for, conducting Affairs with Propriety. There should be a permanent Governor a permanent Lieutenant Governor, or a permanent Chief Justice ; whether any such Person should reside there, or go and return as at present, is a Question of a different Sort.

* * * *

Mr. REEVES being asked, How many Days was he at Newfoudland? he said. in 1791 we arrived the 10th of September, and departed the 1st of November. In 1792 we arrived the 3rd of September, and departed the 30th of October.

* * * *

No. 774.EXTRACTS FROM EVIDENCE OF AARON GRAHAM

[1793.]

GIVEN BEFORE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO ENQUIRE INTO THE STATE OF THE TRADE TO NEWFOUNDLAND. 1793.

THIRD REPORT FROM THE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO ENQUIRE INTO
THE STATE OF THE TRADE TO NEWFOUNDLAND. [ORDERED TO BE PRINTED 17 JUNE 1793.] pp. 1-11, 83-84.

Have made a further Progress in the Matters to them referred, and have examined several other Witnesses, the Substance of whose Evidence is as follows :

AARON GRAHAM, Esquire, being examined, was asked, Whether he had ever been in Newfoundland ? he said, Yes, he was Thirteen Years Secretary to the Governors of the Island ;
he was there from the Year 1779 to the End of the Year 1791. .
. . And being asked, What were the Complaints which lie heard of respecting the Mode of administering Justice ? he said, He meant, to confine himself in that Observation, more particularly to the Servants than to the Merchants ; until the Year 1791, he does not recollect to have heard many Complaints from the Merchants, but many on the Part of the Fishermen, from the Difficulty which they always found in getting their Complaints attended to at all ; he believes that all the Merchants concerned in the Trade of Newfoundland will allow, that from the Beginning of the Establishment of a Fishery upon that Island, there have been Courts for the Trial of Civil Actions ; at St. John's, it was held by the Governor ; at the Out Ports, by the Captains of the Ships of War, who were called the Governor's Surrogates ; neither the Governor's nor the Surrogates Powers were doubted, until about the Year 1780, when Governor Edwards had an Action commenced against him, which was tried at Exeter (for a Decision of his made at Saint John's). That the Witness attended the Trial, and the Matter by the Recommendation of the Judge was left to Arbitration ; from that Time he frequently heard, both in Newfoundland and in England, the Powers of the Governor and his Surrogates spoken of as illegally assumed by them ;
Admiral Campbell, who was Admiral Edwards's Successor, would not sit as a Judge ; but the Practice continued by the Surrogates at the Out Ports, until the Year 1788 ; when Captain Pellew, One of the Surrogates, had an Action commenced against him by Mr. Hutchins of Dartmouth, for a Decision of sent the Attorney's Letter to him (the Witness) desiring to know what was to be done in the Business ; the Governor (Admiral Elliot) was then in Scotland, and Admiral Milbanke, who was nominated as his Successor. (but not appointed) being in Town, the Witness took the Liberty of calling upon him, and requested of him, officially, to state the Matter to the Admiralty, and to request, at the same Time, for his own Sake, that the Solicitor of that Board might (the Governor) and the Captains of the Ships of War for the future ; the Case was referred to the Law Officers of the Crown, who gave it as their Opinion, that neither the Governor nor his Surrogates, were authorized to sit as Judges in such Cases as that which had been the Ground of Action against Captain Pellew ; the Witness should have said, that not only Admiral Campbell, but his Successor also (Admiral Elliot) refused to sit as a Judge for the Trial of Civil Actions ; the Consequence was, that the Causes which had been usually tried by the Governor at St. John's, such as Disputes with respect to Accounts Current, &c. were then carried to the Court of Session, and to the Court of Vice Admiralty, for the Merchants found it absolutely necessary that they should be carried somewhere, otherwise they could not proceed with their Business ; and it may not be amiss to remark that the Court of Vice Admiralty, even in the Time when the Governors sat as Judges, took Cognizance of such Cases. That although the Court of Session took up this Business for the Convenience of the Trade, yet the Justices knew they had as little or rather less Power to determine in such Cases than the Governor himself had, they therefore did it negligently, rather consulting the Inclination of the Parties, and proceeding as Arbitrators, not as Judges, in such Causes as they undertook to try ; the Consequences was, that the Boatkeepers and Fishermen found it very difficult to get attended to at all. The Governors would not tell them that they had not Authority to hear them, but desired them to go to the Magistrates ; the Magistrates, if it was not perfectly convenient to them, or if the Complaint was against a Person whom they thought could or would resist this assumed Authority of theirs, desired them to go to the Court of Vice Admiralty, and that Court did or did not attend to it, just as suited the Will of the Judge ; and the Witness has known Instances of Boat-keepers being banded backwards and forwards for a whole Season, and not able to get their Business settled at last.

That upon Admiral Milbanke sailing for Newfoundland, he was, on the Day of His Departure from Spithead, furnished by the Board of Admiralty with the Opinion before alluded to. The News of the Prosecution of Captain Pellew had reached the Island before the Admiral ; and none of the Surrogates had taken upon them to act as Judges upon their respective Stations. The Court of Session also at St. John's had ceased to act at that Place ; and the Court of Vice Admiralty waited the Admiral's Arrival, to know whether it had a Right to proceed in the old Way ; the Admiral would not give them an Opinion upon the Subject, of Course there was a total Stop to the Trial of Civil Actions throughout the Island, which was a very great Prejudice to the Merchants, as the Want of a Court could not fail to injure them very materially. The Admiral having never been in the Island before, asked the Witness's Opinion and Advice, of what was best to be done, knowing there was a Clause in his Commission which authorized him to appoint Judges, and an Article in his Instructions which directed him to take Order in any Matter for the Safety of the Island, which the Witness thought was never in greater Danger than at that Time ; he advised him to avail himself of the Clause in his Commission which authorized him to appoint Judges, and an Article in his Instructions which directed him to take Order in any Matter for the Safety of the Island, which the Witness thought was never in greater Danger than at that Time ; he advised him to avail himself of the Clause in his Commission, and appoint a Court under the Denomination of a Court of Common Pleas ; he did so ; and, that as little Alteration as possible might be made from the old Mode of Proceeding, he appointed the Captains of the Ships of War to be Judges at the Out Ports on their respective Stations, so that they only changed the Name of Surrogate for that of Judge, and continued to do the Business exactly or nearly in the same Manner as they had before been used to do it ; the principal Alteration was in the Appointment of the Court at St. John's, where, instead of sitting as a Judge himself, he appointed Three Gentlemen to sit as Judges. The Mode of Proceeding in that Court was by a Jury, to which the Witness never heard any Complaint upon the Spot, beyond that of its being sometimes inconvenient for those who were summoned upon the Jury to give their Attendance ; and he believes, and is firmly persuaded, that the violent Memorials transmitted to the Lords of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade, by the Merchants of Dartmouth, Poole, and a Number of other trading Towns of this Kingdom, against that Court, would never have been thought of, if the Gentlemen who signed them had been upon the Spot to have seen the good Effects of the Court ; . . .

p. 1921

Then the Witness further informed your Committee, That Admiral Milbanke, on his Return to England in the Year 1789, reported to His Majesty's Ministers the Steps he had taken in erecting the Court of Common Pleas. That he sailed again the next Year, without receiving any Instructions respecting that Court ; it therefore continued to act for the Year 1790 in nearly the same Manner it had acted in the Year 1789. That there was One Alteration made, which was, that as the Court, in the First Year of its Proceeding, had in all Cases summoned Juries, in the Second, finding it would be more convenient for the Gentlemen of the Trade to be allowed to make their Election of having their Causes tried with or without a Jury, the Judges consented thereto ; and Things went on in a very easy Manner, and much to the Satisfaction of every Body in the Island. Previous to the Admiral's sailing again in 1791, an Act of Parliament passed, for establishing a Court of Civil Jurisdiction in the Island, which was to be held at St. John's only. This very properly alarmed the Merchants, as the Difficulty of coming from the Out Ports to that Place, was in the First Place very great ; and before they could possibly obtain a Writ for attaching the Fish and Oil of a Boatkeeper, who might be considerably in their Debt for Supplies for carrying on the Fishery, the latter might, and he knows, in very many Instances did, take the Advantage, and dispose of their Property contrary to the usual Practice of the Fishery, and thereby defrauded their Suppliers (the Merchants) to the Amount of many Thousand Pounds. If there ever was a real Cause of Complaint on their (the Merchants) Parts, it was in that of confining the Court to St. John's alone ; and he hesitates not to say, if it had been continued, that it would have been impossible for them to have carried on their Trade in any other Part of the Island ; and this leads him to say, he is very sorry they were so hasty in making their Representations to the Board of Trade, in all of which they declared they wanted no Court ; therefore, the giving them only One, was coming as nearly to their Wishes as it was possible to do, without actually complying with them ; and to themselves alone, therefore, they are indebted for the Inconvenience and Losses they experienced from a Want of the usual Courts at the Out Ports.

p. 1922

Upon the Whole, the Witness thinks, an Establishment nearly similar to the old one, under the Governor and his Surrogates and which that made by Admiral Milbanke really was, is the best that could be adopted ; his principal Aim was, to legalize what had been so long done from Necessity ; he neither wished, nor did he make any considerable Alteration.

And being desired to explain more particularly the Sort of Court which he thinks should be established in Newfoundland ? he said, Every Body must allow, that there has grown out of the Fishery a very extensive Trade, which makes the Business of a Court at St. John's, particularly, much more intricate and troublesome than it was formerly ; he is therefore of Opinion, that the Governor should not sit as a Judge, but that a Court should be established there as the Supreme Court of the Island, in which should preside a Gentleman appointed from England. If all Trials are to be determined in it by Juries, there should be no Assessors ; but if the Trials are to be without Juries, he thinks that the Governor should have an Authority to appoint two Assessors to assist the Judge. That the Governor should have Power also to appoint the Captains of the Ships of War Judges upon their respective Stations at the Out Ports, who should proceed in the Manner they had been used to do before, under the Denomination of Surrogates, which Experience shews to have been a very good System. From the Surrogates Courts there should be an Appeal to the Supreme Court at St. John's for Sums above £. 30, and from that Court to England for Sums of £. 100 And being asked, Of what Use does he think the Custom House at Newfoundland ? he said, Within these few Days he has heard that it was asked for by some of the Merchants, and by the Request being complied with by Government, he took it for granted they saw the Reasonableness of it.—And being asked, Whether he knew any other Reason for it ? he said, No ; for if there is any Part of His Majesty's Dominions where a Custom House is perfectly unnecessary, it is Newfoundland.—.....

* * * *

Mr. GRAHAM being again called in, he continued his last Examination, and said, Not to obstruct the Fishermen in taking away such Stuff as they wanted, under Pretence of the Land being inclosed, but to open their Fences, and to let those People pass and repass in whatever Direction they might think most convenient and proper for them to go. Admiral Elliot, ever attentive to the Interests of the Fishery, continued those Regulations ; and in consequence of Directions from the Government of this Country, made no other Grant during the Time he was Governor of Newfoundland, than such as was thought for the Encouragement of the Fishery, and which he was authorised to do by his Instructions.

p. 1923

The Form of which Grant the Witness delivered in to your Committee, and is hereunto annexed. Vide Appendix, No. 10.

And he further said, That Admiral Milbanke improved upon the Plan thus laid down by Admiral Campbell, and followed by Admiral Elliot, and extended it for the Prevention of an Increase of the Residents in the Manner he has already stated. In Addition to which, he begged leave to lay before the Committee a Copy of a Letter from the Governor to One of the Inhabitants, in order to shew the Manner in which his Proclamations were enforced ; also another Paper, which will serve to shew the very great Caution observed by the Governor in giving Permission for the Erection of Houses for the Use even of the Inhabitants, who were born and had always lived in the Island, which your Committee have hereunto annexed. Vide Appendix, No. 11 (a) and (b).—And being further examined, he was asked, Have these Inclosures been made by Residents, or by Persons going to and from Europe Annually ? he said, The principal Part of them have been made in consequence of Grants to the Officers of the respective Military Corps doing Duty in the Island, who on their Departure, on being relieved, generally sold it. Admiral Campbell observing the Extent to which this Evil had increased, gave a small Spot of Ground, surveyed and particularly described by the Engineer, to each of the Corps doing Duty at St. John's, directing that the Description of it should be constantly hung up in the Barracks, and the Ground to be delivered over to the succeeding Corps upon every Relief of Troops taking Place ; and strictly forbad the Officers and Soldiers to sell the Whole or any Part of it as private Property, or to make any other Claim upon their Successors than a fair Demand for the Value of the Seeds in the Ground. Grants have also been made to Officers in the different Civil Departments and likewise sold by them as private Property ; but if the Regulations already made upon that Head are attended to by succeeding Governors, the Evil cannot possibly increase. The Proclamation issued by Admiral Milbanke, which the Witness has delivered in to the Committee, reduced the Winter Inhabitants of St. John's alone upwards of Eight hundred the First Year.

[8 Oct.,
1788.]*[Enclosure 1 (Appendix No. 10) in No. 774.]No. 774.*ANQUETIL AND CO.'S GRANT.

THIRD REPORT FROM THE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO ENQUIRE INTO
THE STATE OF THE TRADE TO NEWFOUNDLAND. [ORDERED TO BE PRINTED 17 JUNE 1793.] p. 206.

By His Excellency John Elliott, Esquire, Governor and Commander in Chief in and over the Island of Newfoundland,
&c.

Mr. Thomas Anquetil, Master of the Fishing Ship Elizabeth, of Jersey, having presented a Petition in Behalf of himself and Co. to Captain Pellew, of His Majesty's Ship Winchelsea, my Surrogate for the District of Ferryland, setting forth that they have been at the Expence of clearing away an unoccupied Spot of Ground on the North Side of the Harbour of Aquafort, situated between Great Flat Rock, and Little Flat Rock, extending One hundred and Fifty Yards S.E. along Shore, from the S.E. Point of Little Flat Rock Cove, and Two hundred Yards back into the Woods ; having also produced a Certificate under the Hands of Messrs. Nicholas Audley, James Keates, and William Hunt, Three very ancient Inhabitants of the said District, testifying that the said Spot of Ground has never in their Remembrance been occupied for the Use of the Fishery ; upon which the said Thomas Anquetil and Co. therefore request I would allow them to erect Fishing Conveniences, and secure them in the quiet and peaceable Enjoyment of the same ; and Captain Pellew having certified to me "That the said Spot is vacant and unoccupied, and not considered as Ships Room," I do hereby grant Permission to the said Thomas Anquetil and Co. to take Possession of and build Fishing Conveniences upon the said vacant Spot in Aquafort Harbour, and strictly forbid their being interrupted in the quiet and peaceable Enjoyment thereof, so long as they shall continue to occupy the same, for the Purposes (only) of curing, salting, drying, and husbanding of Fish, agreeable to an Act of Parliament passed in the 10th and 11th Years of the Reign of King William the Third, intituled, "An Act to Encourage the Trade to Newfoundland ;" but if the said Thomas Anquetil and Co. should desert, and suffer the said Fishing Room to go to Decay, or neglect to make Fish thereon, for One entire Season, then and in that Case it may be occupied by any other of His Majesty's Subjects first arriving from Great Britain, or One of the

p. 1925

British Dominions in Europe, who shall take and keep Possession in like Manner, and for the like Purposes (and for no other whatsoever) of carrying on the Fishery agreeable to the afore-mentioned Act of Parliament.

Given under my Hand and Seal, at St. John's, in the Island Newfoundland, this 8th of October, 1788.

J. ELLIOTT.

By Command of the Governor.

A. GRAHAM.

No. 776.

[Enclosure 2 (Appendix No. 11) in No. 774.]

LETTER FROM GOVERNOR MILBANKE TO GEORGE HUTCHINGS.

DATED 15 OCTOBER, 1790.

THIRD REPORT FROM THE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO ENQUIRE INTO
THE STATE OF THE TRADE TO NEWFOUNDLAND. [ORDERED TO BE PRINTED 17 JUNE 1793.] p. 207.

SIR,

I Have considered your Request respecting the Alteration which you wish to make in your Storehouse, near the Water Side ; and as it appears that the Alteration will not be any Ways injurious to the Fishery, you have hereby Permission to make it. As to Alexander Long's House, which has been built contrary to His Majesty's express Commands, made known to the Inhabitants of this Place by my Proclamation of the 13th of last October, it must and shall come down. The Pretence now set up, of its being intended for a Craft House, serves rather to aggravate than extenuate the Offence ; for by the Confession of your Tenant to the Magistrate, who forbad him to go on with the Work after it was begun, as well as to me, when I viewed the House on Saturday last, no such Use was to be made of it, as he said it was intended only as a Covering to his Potatoe Cellar, though there is a compleat Chimney, if not Two in it, and Lodgings for at least Six or Eight Dieters. I shall embrace this Opportunity of warning you against making an improper Use of any other Part of (what you are pleased to call) your Ground ; for you may rest assured, that every House or other Building erected upon it hereafter, without the Permission (in Writing) of the Governor for the Time being (except such Buildings and Erections as shall be actually on Purpose for the curing, salting, drying, and husbanding of Fish, which the Fishermen from any Part of His Majesty's European Dominions, qualified agreeable to the Act of the 10th and 11th of William the Third, and the 15th of George the Third, have a Right to erect, without asking Permission) must unavoidably be taken down and removed, in Obedience to His Majesty's said Commands. And it may not be amiss, at the same Time, to inform you, I am also directed not to allow any Possession, as private Property, to be taken of, or any Right of Property whatever to be acknowledged in, any Land whatever, which is not actually employed in the Fishery, in Terms of the aforementioned Acts,

p. 1927

whether possessed by pretended Grants from former Governors, or from any other (no Matter what) unwarrantable Pretences; therefore it behoves you, with all possible Dispatch, to employ the Whole of the Ground which you now lay Claim to in the Fishery, lest others should profit by your Neglect, and make that Use which the Lslature of Great Britain intended should be made of all the Land in this Country, and wt which no One has a Right to claim it as his own.

The Sheriff will have Directions about the Removal of the House above mentioned, which you will no Doubt assist him in executing.

I am, &c.

To George Hutchings, Esq.

No. 777.

C

EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM DUKE OF PORTLAND TO SIR JAMES WALLACE, GOVERNOR OF NEWFOUNDLAND,

[9 May., 1795.]

DATED WHITEHALL, 9 MAY, 1795.

RECORD BOOK, ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND, VOLUME 14, p. 211.

The bad consequences which you state to result from the People employed in the Fishery having contrived to remain in the Country instead of coming home as the Act directs, now become a considerable Grievance, and therefore it is the more necessary that you should take such measures as you shall judge most effectual for enforcing the Act in this Particular.

* * * *

No. 778.

[14 May,
1796.]EXTRACT OF A LETTER FROM DUKE OF
PORTLAND TO SIR JAMES WALLACE, GOVERNOR OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

RECORD BOOK, ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND, VOLUME 14, p. 229.

Whitehall, 14th May, 1796.

SIR,

I take this opportunity previous to your returning to your station at Newfoundland, to signify to you His Majesty's Pleasure upon some points which require your immediate attention. The most important of these is what you mention in your last Report upon the state of your Government, namely that the same spirit amongst the Merchants still continues of evading the Act of Parliament by staying behind themselves, and encouraging the Men they employ to do the same, to the injury of His Majesty's Service, by preventing their becoming Seamen and returning to serve in the Navy. To prevent as much as possible the further progress of this growing Evil, I am to direct you to exert your utmost vigilance and authority in enforcing the Provisions of the Act of Parliament in this behalf, and to take such other means as you shall, upon the spot, judge to be most effectual for discouraging a practice so detrimental to the Navigation of this Country.

* * * *

I am, &c. &c.

PORTLAND.

Sir James Wallace.

No. 779.[16 Dec.,
1797.]EXTRACT OF A DESPATCH FROM GOVERNOR
WALDEGRAVE TO RT. HON. HENRY DUNDAS.

RECORD BOOK, ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND, VOLUME 14, p. 101.

Earl of Cardigan's,
Upper Grosvenor Street,
16th December, 1797.

SIR,

The enclosed is an extract from a book (I believe) of acknowledged authority, being written by Mr. Stokes, a Barrister, and late Chief Justice of Georgia. Although the arguments therein set forth may be admissible with respect to the Continent of North America, yet they can certainly have no weight with regard to the Island of Newfoundland, which in fact is a sort of amphibious government, totally unlike any other, consequently should be dependant only on the Mother Country.

* * * *

I have the honour to be,
Sir, &c. &c.,
WM. WALDEGRAVE.Right Hon.,
Henry Dundas,
&c. &c.[10 Jan.,
1798.]No. 780.*10th Jan., 1798—CAPTAIN AMBROSE CROFTON'S REPORT TO GOVERNOR WALDEGRAVE.

Vide Vol. 3, p. 1189.

No. 781.DUKE OF PORTLAND TO GOVERNOR
WALDEGRAVE.[16 May,
1798.]

RECORD BOOK, ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND, VOLUME 14, p. 205.

SIR,

Notwithstanding the directions given to your Predecessor on the Station, to enforce the Laws respecting our Fisheries and to compel the persons concerned in them to return home at the time appointed, I am sorry to observe that the Policy of these Laws has been completely defeated, and that the population of Newfoundland has in consequence increased to a degree, which in your opinion renders some further Establishments necessary for the due administration of Justice, within the Island.

* * * *

Should the holders of the Land required for enlarging the Burial Place at Newfoundland persist in their unreasonable demands for the same, His Majesty's Servants will no doubt think themselves warranted in applying to the Legislature for the purpose of obliging them to sell the same at a reasonable price, when this circumstance is clearly understood by the individuals concerned, I doubt not but they will be disposed to accomodate the Public Service upon fair and reasonable Terms.

* * * *

In consequence of the serious evils you have stated to arise in His Majesty's Service in Newfoundland, from the circumstance of its being included in the Military Commission of the Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Forces in North America, particularly that it disables you from holding Courts Martial within your Government upon Military offences committed there, as the offenders must be sent to Nova Scotia to be tried and that the delay thereby occasioned, and frequently the absences of some of the few Officers on the settlements, which such Proceedings require, is often an evil equally possible to that of letting the offenders go unpunished ; His Majesty, in order to guard against circumstances so prejudicial to His Service has thought proper by a new Commission to Lieut. General Prescott to appoint him Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Forces within his North American Provinces, exclusive of Newfoundland, and His Majesty's Pleasure has at the same time been received for granting to you the necessary authority for holding General Courts Martial in Newfoundland.

I am, Sir,

Your most obedient humble servant,

(Signed) PORTLAND.

Vice Admiral Waldegrave.

No. 782.

[18 Nov.,
1808.]EXTRACT OF A REPORT BY GOVERNOR
HOLLOWAY TO VISCOUNT CASTLEREAGH.

C.O. 194. VOL. 47.

Isis at Spithead, 18th Novem^r 1808.

MY LORD,

I have the honor to acquaint your Lordship with my Return from Newfoundland in His Majesty's Ship Isis, which anchored here this Day after a passage of twenty two days from St. Johns Harbour. The heavy gales we have experienced since we sailed, have separated the whole of the Convoy, consisting of Twenty five sail of Vessels.

His Majesty's Ship Vestal also sailed from St. Johns on the same day, (the 27th Ultimo) having Nine more Merchant Vessels under her Protection, bound for the Coast of Portugal, Cadiz and the Mediterranean, which the Merchants have ventured to send, in hopes of meeting in some of those Ports, a favourable market for their Fish ; but this speculation (as I did myself the honor of writing your Lordship by His Majesty's Ship Medusa) continues to be greatly checked, for want of Official Information, to ascertain what Ports of Portugal and Spain are open.

* * * *

Having this Year had more Time to examine and reflect on the Observations made by my two Predecessors, together with the pointed Remarks made by the Lords of Privy Council on the Subject of the State of Newfoundland, which were communicated to me on my Appointment to that Government, I cannot but lament, that it was ever recommended to His Majesty's Ministers by my Predecessors, to grant Leases of Land on that Island ; it was striking at the Root of the Law, which had for so many Years regulated this Fishery as a Nursery for Seamen, and meant to discountenance Residency ; the great and improper increase of which, tends to Colonization : it likewise gives the Inhabitants a kind of Sanction to claim from Occupancy, Lands that are no longer used for the Fishery, for which Purpose alone they received their Grants from the different Governors agreeably to His Majesty's Instructions ; consequently can have no legal Right for to sell, mortgage, lease and transfer, as is now become a daily practice.

This Subject requires most serious Consideration and I shall be happy to meet their Lordships on it whenever it may suit their Conveniency. This Island is utterly incapable of raising sufficient Food for its own Consumption, and the Inhabitants will most probably look where they ought not, for Supplies. I have read with great Attention the Remarks made on my Predecessor's Observations, by the Lords of Council for Trade and Foreign Plantations, and am fully convinced that they are perfectly correct in their opinion whenever the ancient System is departed from, and Colonization encouraged.

* * * *

I have the honour to be,

My Lord,

Your Lordships

Most Obedient

humble Servant,

J. HOLLOWAY.

L.S.

The Right Hon^{ble} Viscount Castlereagh,
One of His Majesty's Principal
Secretaries of State, &c^a, &c^a, &c^a.

[1809.]

No. 783.

C

IMPERIAL ACT, 49 GEO. III., CHAP. 27.
30 MARCH, 1809.

An Act for establishing courts of judicature in the Island of Newfoundland and the Islands adjacent ; and for re-annexing part of the Coast of Labrador and the Islands lying on the said coast to the Government of Newfoundland.

Vide Vol. I, page 190.

No. 784.GOVERNOR DUCKWORTH TO EARL BATHURST[2 Nov., 1812.]

ON QUESTIONS OF COLONISATION, 2 November, 1812.

RECORD BOOK, ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND. Volume 24, page 168.

No. 6.

Antelope at Sea November 2nd 1812.

MY LORD,

In conformity with the directions contained in your Lordship's letter No 1 of the 13th of June, I have consulted with those on whose judgment, temper and information I could most rely, with a view to the formation of a Report upon the Laws by which Newfoundland is at present governed.

I am conscious of being little qualified for the discussion of a subject of this nature, yet it has occupied my most anxious attention, and I proceed to submit to Your Lordship my sentiments upon it in the fullest confidence that they will be received with candour and indulgence.

I beg leave however to remark that the result of the labour with which I have collected the opinions of experienced and sensible men upon this important subject has been to convince me that it is regarded differently by them all.

There is a general concurrence in one respect only ; that the Fisheries of Newfoundland are now decidedly sedentary, and that the War has been protracted so long as to make it very uncertain whether any change of system would be produced by the return of Peace.

The considerations upon which this opinion is founded are these.—that the resident population of the Island has now become so extensive that every attempt to lessen it, or even to check the rapidity of its increase must be completely vain ; that this population must be subsisted, and that it has no other resource than in the Fishery, and that therefore the quantity of Fish caught by the resident Inhabitants must be so great as to leave but little opening for adventurers who might fit out Ships from His Majesty's Dominions in Europe, if they should be disposed to make the trial.

The professed object has hitherto been to afford every encouragement to the Fishery Ships so fitted out and therefore to discourage the Sedentary Fishery.

As long as there existed a competition between the two interests such was undoubtedly the wisest policy to pursue, but it is no longer a question of preference between two systems.—that which was justly the favourite is now no more, and it remains only to consider whether that which has survived be worth preserving and if so by what means it can be best improved.

I am anxious that my opinion should not be misunderstood, and therefore beg leave to repeat that any efforts of His Majesty's Government, or of the Legislature, to bring back the ancient system of Fishery would now be vain ; and would probably fail to produce any material effect even if they were seconded by the favourable circumstances which a return of Peace ould naturally create.

With these sentiments I am certainly desirous that a revision of the laws should take place, nor am I aware that any advantage is likely to arise from its being delayed.

The wisest object of such revision would seem to be to remove from the Sedentary Fishery all unnecessary impediments, and at the same time to refrain from opposing new difficulties against the partial re-establishment of the Fishing Ships which may yet be possible. Neither will it be less important to adhere to the principle which has been hitherto observed of preventing His Majesty's Subjects in Newfoundland from forming themselves into a Colony.

The Chief impediments at present existing in the way of the sedentary Fishery are the Provisions in the Laws by which all unoccupied places in Newfoundland are accounted Fishing Ships Rooms ; and the restrictions on cultivating the Lands. And these under the present circumstances are in my opinion, unnecessary—Because very few of the unoccupied places are suited to the purposes of the Fishing Ships, and the rest might therefore be given up to the Inhabitants. And because if the Prohibition against cultivating the Land be continued, the population will nevertheless continue to increase, but the difficulty of providing for its support will be the greater.

With respect to the vacant Shores of Newfoundland whether Ships Rooms or otherwise, I am very strongly inclined to wish that the Law should now be so framed as to permit the Governor to grant them to Individuals for the purposes of the Fishery to be held by such Individuals during His Majesty's pleasure, or as long as they complied with the terms upon which the Grants should be specifically given.

Every grant should be founded on a written application, describing the means of the Applicant for occupying usefully the space applied for, and engaging to keep so many Boats upon it, actually to be employed in catching fish, and the Governor should be instructed not to give Grants of Beaches naturally suited to the purposes of Fishing Ships, but on the contrary to preserve all such Beaches vacant for the use of those ships whenever they might arrive to claim them.

On the subject of Cultivation I beg leave to submit that the resident Population having grown to its present extent, and there being no prospect of its diminishing, but rather a certainty of its rapid increase, it becomes a question of deep anxiety by what means this population is to be subsisted, and whether it would not be better to cultivate the soil in the hope of lessening

p. 1935

the difficulty than to abstain from doing so in the fear of adding still more rapidly to the number of Inhabitants.

The Soil and Climate of Newfoundland are little favourable to the business of Agriculture, nor is there a probability that it would be pursued (or to a very trifling extent) except for the cultivation of Potatoes and some other Vegetables. There is not in my opinion any sufficient reason for adhering to the policy of preventing the cultivation of the Land when it is found necessary to relinquish that of discouraging the Sedentary Fishery, because the principal use that would be made of the privilege of Cultivation, if it were now granted, would be by the Fishermen, who would prepare the Ground in the Winter Months, and make it productive of Food for their Families support.

The Question of Colonization still remains.—Of the policy of preventing the measure there is but one opinion, but with respect to the means there are many. For my part I am not able to discover that there is at present any considerable tendency towards Colonization.

The Merchants of St. John's have formed themselves into a Society, and are making continual efforts for the acquisition of a power which ought not, in my opinion, to be vested in them. Yet the Town has become so extensive, and its Inhabitants so numerous, that it does indeed appear necessary that a Provision should be made for the better regulation by creating some local authority.

Such Authority might perhaps be given with the greater propriety to the Grand Jury, and any Regulations made by that Body approved by the Court of Sessions, and finally accepted by the Governor should be binding upon the District.

An arrangement being made upon this principle and the Magistracy being placed upon that respectable establishment which should render it above the control of any improper influence, would remove all idea of the formation of a Colony, and answer every good purpose of a local legislature, unaccompanied by any of its evil consequences.

I have the honour to be,

My Lord,

Your Lorship's most obedient humble servant,

J. T. DUCKWORTH.

To the Earl Bathurst,

One of His Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, &c., &c., &c.

No. 785.

GOVERNOR DUCKWORTH TO EARL BATHURST[3 Nov., 1812.]

RECORD BOOK, ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND. Volume 24, page 76.

No. 7.

Antelope at Sea November, 3rd, 1812.

MY LORD,

I am anxious to bring before Your Lordship a subject which has excited much unpleasant altercation at Newfoundland, and which cannot fail to be an embarrassing one to the Governor until his instructions upon it are revised.

It appears that instructions have from time to time been given to prevent the erection of any buildings, except such as shall be absolutely necessary for curing, drying, and husbanding of Fish, within two hundred yards distance from High Water Mark, and that with respect to St. John's (for reasons which have been submitted) those Instructions have not for a considerable time been enforced.

Yet no person has until this year openly and in defiance attempted to erect a building of any description (unless by the Water side for the purposes of the Fishery) without leave from the Governor in writing previously obtained.

The High Sheriff is directed to prevent any buildings from being erected except those which are authorized by Law, and the meaning attached to that expression is considered to be those which are evidently for the Fishery, or those which the Governor has sanctioned.

A Merchant has this year thought proper to dispense with the Governor's leave, and violently attempted to build a House which he avowed his intention (by a letter to the Sheriff) of letting on lease as a Dwelling House. The Sheriff considered this proceeding as illegal, and in opposition to the Governor's Proclamation (a copy of which in the Spirit of those issued by my Predecessors I have the honor of enclosing) and accordingly prevented it.

This attempt was not that of an individual, but was instigated and supported by the Merchants in general, who have created a fund, the real object of which is to oppose the measures of Government and to establish the right of Property upon a quiet possession of Twenty years.

I beg leave to transmit to Your Lordship a Copy of the correspondence which took place between the projector of the building (whose name is Crawford) and myself.

The argument urged on his side was that the ground was immediately adjoining one of the Ships Rooms which had been let on building leases in pursuance of the late Act of Parliament, and that being similarly circumstanced, his right of building was the same as that of Government.

It is necessary to acknowledge that the Act which I have alluded to in taking away the Public use of certain Ships Rooms has declared the space comprised between the most Eastern and the most Western of those so taken away to be no longer suitable to the purposes of the Fishery, because the whole of that space is occupied equally by the Town of St. John's, and it is in every circumstance the same.

There cannot therefore it is presumed be any sufficient cause for retaining the prohibition against building within two hundred yards of high water marks, so far as regards the space which I have described ; and Your Lordship will not perhaps see any objection to the Governor being authorized to grant permission for the building of Houses in that situation, taking care that the width of the Public Streets be preserved, and that no building be allowed which might be a nuisance to the Town.

Yet I should earnestly hope that no person whatever might be suffered to build on any other terms than those of having obtained the Governor's permission, unless it were for the direct and unequivocal purposes of the Fishery : for the waving of a negative in this instance on the part of Government, would be an acknowledgment of Property which is certainly unnecessary. Within the limit of two hundred yards from High Water Mark, in situations adapted for the Fishery, no building should be allowed except for its immediate purposes, but beyond that distance, and if the parties are in possession of the ground either by Grant or other title which Government would unwillingly question, there appears to be a doubt of the propriety, or of the legality of the Governor's interference, which it is particularly desirable to remove.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's most obedient humble servt.

J. T. DUCKWORTH.

To The Earl Bathurst, &c., &c., &c.

No. 786.

[24 April,
1817.]EXTRACT FROM A LETTER FROM BOARD OF TRADE TO HENRY GOULBURN.COL. COR., NEWFOUNDL^D. VOL. 37. R 26.Office of Committee of Privy for TradeWhitehall, 24 Ap^l 1817.
Council

SIR,

* * * *

2^{dly}. The proposed disposal, by Emigration, of some of the Surplus population of Newfoundland.

Upon this The Lords of this Committee have only to observe, that if such of the Inhabitants of Newfoundland as may be disposed to emigrate, should come within the rules which are applied to Emigrants from the United Kingdom to His Majesty's Foreign Possessions, their Lordships see no reason why similar facilities should not be given to the former : altho' it may certainly be doubted whether considering the distress which is stated to prevail in Canada, the present is a favourable opportunity for suddenly and extensively adding to the Settlers of that province.

3^{dly}. As to the Cultivation of the Soil in Newfoundland.

It cannot be denied that an extension of Cultivation in Newfoundland will be a complete departure from the principles which have hitherto (at least till very recently) governed the administration of that Island. The whole System was founded upon the supposition that the Fishery was to be carried on from hence, and any permanent Settlement on the Island was discouraged as much as possible. But the great length of the late War, and the Encreasing prosperity of the Fisheries, gradually, and almost insensibly, overturned that System, and the resident population of the Island is become extremely numerous, amounting to not less perhaps than 40,000 or 50,000 persons.

To displace these persons would be impracticable, even if it were advisable, & if they were to depend for their Subsistence entirely upon Supplies from other Quarters, circumstances may easily be Conceived, in which the people might be exposed to imminent peril, a proof of which is to be found in the present distressed Condition of the Settlement. This view of the Case was felt so strongly by His Majesty's Government, that the Governor was a few years since authorized to make small grants of Lands reserving a trifling quit rent, and my Lords see no reason why this plan should not be acted upon to a greater extent. It would undoubtedly add in no inconsiderable degree to the resources and Comforts of the Colony, and at the same time contribute to improve its revenue, particularly if the grants were Sufficiently extensive to admit of the Land being applied to the purpose of pasture, instead of being confined, as they now are, to small plots of ground for gardens ; and My Lords think that in making these grants the Governor should lay out of his consideration the particular occupation or calling of the Individual who may apply for a grant, the object of the change proposed, being to encrease the amount of Subsistence to be procured in the Colony, for the people at large, and not to promote the Interests of particular classes.

4. The adoption of a new System of Government.

This being a Matter of a political nature, can scarcely be considered as coming within this Department ; but My Lords are of Opinion, that whatever may be though adviseable to adopt upon this Subject, ought not to be deter-mined upon without the most mature Deliberation.

I am, Sir,
Your most obedient Humble Servant,

THOMAS LACK.

Henry Goulburn Esq.
&c. &c. &c.

No. 787.

C

EXTRACT FROM "HISTORY OF NEWFOUNDLAND,"

BY D. W. PROWSE, Q. C. [LONDON, 1895.] Pp. 406-407.

The Governor, Sir Francis Pickmore, had been ordered to remain through the winter in Newfoundland. Dr. Carson's pamphlet had shown up the absurdity of Governors coming out for two or three months in the year. Henceforth all their Excellencies were perennials, not fleeting annuals. Admiral Pickmore was a firm, courageous old man, but the toil, exposure, and anxiety of the last terrible winter told on his enfeebled constitution, and on the 24th of February he died.

No. 788.

EXTRACT FROM "HISTORICAL GEOGRAPHY OF THE BRITISH COLONIES."

"NEWFOUNDLAND." BY J. D. RODGERS, VOL. V, pp. 155-157.

In October 1816 the Governor became "resident" Governor, and being "resident" his salary was raised ; and as a sign that he was now a land-mammal he was allowed a horse. In consequence of the change in his position he began to reside in the island both winter and summer, but postponed his first winter sojourn until 1817-18. In the winter of 1816-17 crime and incendiarism were rife. Captain Buchan, R.N., of H.M.S. Pike, who was present, alleviated some of the distress and controlled some of the disorder. The winter of 1817-18 was still colder than that of 1816-17, and was nick-named "the winter of the Rals" or rowdies. It began in November with the burning of three hundred houses in St. John's, probably by an incendiary, and by a frost which lasted until spring. Famine as well as frost and fire was abroad ; half the population lived on the other half, and in January, when every harbour was sealed by frost and men's hearts failed them for fear, a Boston ship came crunching through the ice laden with provisions as a present from our late foes. A kinder act was never done. The winter of the Rals was of political as well as sentimental significance, as it was the first winter in which the Governor resided in his government in order to cope with this sea of troubles. The saddest, darkest, and most dangerous winter, which Newfoundland ever experienced, was the first occasion on which the Governor was converted from a fleeting into a permanent institution, and the revolving light became a fixed light.

* * * *

Now that a Governor was permanently established in the island the last pretence for insinuating that it was not a colony was torn to shreds. Views might differ as to the date at which the birth act was complete ; some might say 1583, others 1610, or 1637, or 1675, or 1729, or 1792 ; others again regarded Governor Pickmore's presence during the winter of the Rals as the first conclusive proof that the colony was in being. If so, "The hour was darkest before the dawn, When the pain was sorest the babe was born," and the historian is tempted to turn once more from politics to personality and sentiment, for Governor Pickmore was also the first Governor who died in the colony. The mid-winter of the Rals killed him. His residence meant death to him and life to the colony, and he died that it might live.

No. 789.

OBERSVATIONS OF SIR CHARLES HAMILTON[2 Feby., 1824.]

ON PROPOSED ACT, 2 FEBRUARY, 1824.

RECORD BOOK, ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND, VOLUME 34, p. 27.

* * * *

My opinion that alterations were required on several points in the laws relating to Newfoundland has been at different times communicated to the Earl of Bathurst, but more particularly at the commencement of the year 1822, and I had been led to that conclusion by observing that, so far from the return of a state of Peace having realized the once general expectation of a return of the ancient system of the carrying on the fishery in qualified fishing Ships from England, the number of such ships had annually decreased from 48 which was the number in the year 1817 to 15 the number that arrived last year, whereas in the year 1792 there were no less than 276 fishing ships employed of which 187 were Bankers. The protracted warfare in which this Country was in the interim engaged, rendered this system greatly hazardous to the interest of those concerned, by the frequent losses they were liable to sustain from the Enemy while the already increased population of the Island was every year augmenting and gradually establishing a fishery in boats along shore, or at inconsiderable distance from the Island. This being also favoured by a Winter and Spring Seal Fishery which employed considerable numbers before the Season for Cod Fishery commenced. Thus the Ship fishery has diminished to little more than a name, the result of the two systems being last year the production of 750,000 qtls of fish from the boat or Island fishery, while that of the Ships made only 34,000 qqtls. It was evident therefore that Laws created as well for the encouragement of a Ship fishery from England as with a view to discountenance settlement and a resident fishery were become nearly a dead letter, and that some provisions on the other hand were wanting for the latter. The subject having been brought into the Bill now before Parliament for consolidating the Laws relating to Newfoundland this Article would appear to be no longer necessary. I have therefore only to remark on the several heads which it embraces, and on which enquiry is sought.

First : As to confirming the Titles of Persons to Ship Rooms and Buildings, that Bill proposes that the Governor shall lease out all the Ship Rooms in order to do which it will become necessary to abate encroachments on them when the question of right from long possession will be legally determined.

p. 1942

Secondly : The Jurisdiction of the Fishing Admirals is abolished by the establishment of regular Courts of Judicature, therefore obsolete.

Thirdly : Nearly all the rising population being brought up to the use of Boats it would become a measure next to impossibility to compel an Inhabitant to employ Green Men in compliance with the provisions of the 10th & 11th Wm. 3, and the rejection of that measure is an object of the new Bill.

Fourthly : With regard to the provisions of the 15 Geo. 3 respecting the retaining of 40/- to pay the fishermen passage home I conceive in the present increased state of the resident population, and the before mentioned change in the fishing system, it is impracticable to compel the return of the Fishermen annually, and this provision is omitted in the new Bill. Indeed the Native or resident population is considered in itself almost sufficient to answer the call for hands in the fishery. With regard to the mode of paying the fishermen, the Bill proposes that in lieu of only one half, three fourths (but I should recommend two thirds) of a Man's Wages should be allowed to be advanced, the remainder would be applicable either to finding him a passage out of the Country if he were desirous of it, or to his provision for the winter if he remained.

Fifthly : This restriction would appear to be obsolete on two principles, first as regards the privilege of His Majesty's Subjects to take possession of any vacant part of the Coast for the purposes of the fishery, and secondly as respects the small grants of land which the Governor has been authorised to make for the purposes of cultivation with both which it is at variance. And with regard to the Ship Rooms it has already been proposed to leave them out since the few Bankers that annually fit out for the fishery cure their voyage at this day (with one or two exceptions) upon their own Rooms, for no prudent man would spend his money in expensive buildings to which he had no exclusive claim beyond the current Season.

C. HAMILTON.

No. 790.

1824. IMPERIAL ACT, 5 GEO. IV., CAP. 51.

See Vol. I, page 300.

No. 791.

C

EXTRACT FROM LETTER OF EARL OF BATHURST TO THE ATTORNEY AND SOLICITOR-GENERAL

[4 March,
1825.]

REQUESTING OPINION AS TO ACTS OF PARLIAMENT IN FORCE IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

C.O. 43, VOL. 65, p. 235.

Downing Street,
4th March 1825.

The Att & Solr. Genl.

GENTLEMEN

* * * *

You are aware that the Island of Newfoundland was long regarded merely as a Fishing Station, and that in order to prevent Colonization there, various provisions were made by Parliament to insure the Return of the Fishermen to England at the close of the Fishing season. In consequence of this Policy, the Island was for a great number of years destitute of all these civil Institutions which have been generally established in the other Colonial possessions of the Crown. There has never been any internal Legislature, nor, until a comparative recent period, was there even a Court of Civil Justice. Indeed the peculiar system of Maritime Government, and Maritime Jurisdiction, which was so long maintained in Newfoundland, cannot be said to have been abolished before the Enactment of the Acts of the last Session of Parliament, 5 Geo. 4th C. 51, and 67.

* * * *

I have &c.
BATHURST.

No. 792.[14 April,
1831.]DESPATCH FROM SIR THOMAS COCHRANE TO SECRETARY OF STATE FOR THE COLONIES,ON THE SUBJECT OF GRANTING REPRESENTATIVE GOVERNMENT TO NEWFOUNDLAND, WITH ATTACHED CENSUS RETURN FOR 1827-28.

DUPLICATE DESPACHES, ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND, 1828-1832.

*Secret and Confidential.*St. John's, Newfoundland, 14th April, 1831.

MY LORD,

I have had the honour to receive your Lordship's dispatch of the 1st January transmitting a copy of a memorial addressed by a portion of the Inhabitants of this Island to His Majesty praying that a Local Legislature may be established in the Island and desiring that I will communicate to your Lordship my sentiments thereon.

The duty your Lordship has been pleased to lay upon me is a very important and to me painful one.

The length of period I have been honoured with the direction of this Colony and the unremitting pains I have taken to inform myself as to its situation in every part its condition and wants will most likely induce your Lordship to place a degree of importance on my opinions corresponding to it, and the sentiments I shall be compelled conscientiously to express will I much fear bring me into conflict with a people with whom since my first assumption of this Government, I have lived upon invariably amicable terms, but as my opinions on a question so momentous to them will be accompanied by the grounds on which they have been formed Your Lordship will be able to judge how far my conclusions are justly drawn.

There are already so many communications in the Colonial Office from me upon the internal state of this Island that a perusal of them would convey to your Lordship a tolerable idea of its present condition but to save your Lordship unnecessary references and to bring the whole subject into one general view I will first lay before your Lordship a short statement of the Island and its Inhabitants as at present existing.

It will be unnecessary for me to observe to your Lordship that this Colony has sprung up not by encouragement on the part of the Mother Country but in spite of opposing laws—that the fishermen have from time to time established themselves upon these Shores finding it more convenient to do so than return annually to their native country till at last they have accumulated to the number by the Census taken in 1827 of about 60,000. The inhabited part of this Island extends from Cape John to St. Georges Bay being a distance of 620 miles The population of the town of St. John's is about 11,000 Inhabitants. That of Harbour Grace, 3,000, Carbonear 2,500. The numbers in the other and distant settlements varying from time to time and being much influenced by the state of the fishery on those shores, and in most cases each settlement is unconnected with any other as the accompanying table will more fully explain. The whole of the population is established on the Coast.

Until I made three or four miles of road in the neighbourhood, a Carriage could not go a mile from the town.

St. John's is inhabited first by a few Principals or Partners of Houses in England and Scotland and a much larger proportion of agents to other houses.

Secondly small shopkeepers, some of whom are natives, others transitory, and others who intend to make the Island their home ; and a few, but very few, Merchants, who have the same intention. The proportion annually observed between these different classes is influenced by the circumstances of Trade and other considerations. The interest of the first named class in the Island is confined to their stores—where they are not hired—and their goods their only inducement to remain, being confined to Trade.

The various outports are inhabited by fishermen and at the principal or most convenient of them reside Agents to Houses in Great Britain the numbers in general bearing a proportion to the importance of the place, and with the exception of Carbonear and Harbour Grace they do not exceed four but commonly two, and some one—these Agents are here for the express purpose of supplying the fishermen with provisions and clothing, Fishing Craft &c. and taking their Fish and Oil in lieu ; they have no other occupation and if the House fails, the parties immediately remove and have no other concern with the Island.

With reference to the property in soil possessed in the Island, it is of the most trifling description. St. John's is bounded for one diameter of a circle by the sea—and the whole of the ground in cultivation of the other does not (with the exception of some Grants which I have recently given) exceed Three thousand acres. In other parts cultivation is entirely limited to the small fields and Potatoe Gardens which each fisherman finds it necessary to bring to the aid of his fishery and without which he could not support his family.

Of roads of communication between one place and another there are none except the one from hence to Portugal Cove a distance of ten miles but only at present available to horses—the whole of the communication is kept up by water until the approach of winter and its gales when one place is as much severed from another as if they were in different hemispheres—and one of the sources of anxiety to a Governor on the approach of winter and the apprehension of distress in any settlement in consequence of a bad fishery is how to regulate his conduct between sending supplies which may be uncalled for, and the risk of the people perishing for want before relief could be furnished in the Spring.

p. 1946

I will lastly add in completing the description of the Colony—that with the exception of this town and a very indifferent Magistracy in Harbour Grace I cannot find sufficient Individuals of Independence and Respectability in the other parts of the Island from whom to form a bench of Magistrates and to prevent the serious consequences that might result from the total absence of the Civil Power. I have had to select the most respectable from each Settlement as Conservators of the Peace, with Power simply to confine or take Bails until the Circuit Court arrives, and so seriously does this evil press upon the people almost to a denial of Law and Justice ; that a mode to remedy it, will form one of the principal suggestions I shall have the honour to submit to your Lordship when a new Judicatory act becomes the subject of discussion. I have now had the honour to lay before Your Lordship in as compressed a form as it will admit of, a faithful description of this Colony, and the elements out of which it is proposed a local Legislature shall be formed.

Since the subject of a local Government has been agitated here, I have in vain tried to ascertain the plans upon which its projectors propose it shall be conducted ; and I am inclined to believe that that which should have been their first subject of consideration has not as yet been adverted to at all. It is therefore impossible for me either to acquiesce in or object to the Basis upon which they are proceeding ; but assuming it is to be founded upon the Custom in other Colonies, I am quite ready to admit that the town of St. John's is in a condition to furnish a sufficient portion of well informed persons from whom to select Individuals to represent them in a House of Assembly, notwithstanding that the mass of wealth of the town has no interest beyond its boundary, and no connection with the soil ; and so fully was I inclined to admit the competency of the town to govern itself, that on my first arrival here, I approved of and encouraged the Idea of their availing themselves of the powers vested in His Majesty to give them a Charter of Corporation—to solicit from His Majesty such corporate rights, as would invest them with the regulation and improvement of their town, and my Despatch to Earl Bathurst of 27th May 1826, will inform your Lordship of the failure of that plan.

The small town of Harbour Grace and Carbonear in conception Bay might find a sufficient number of intelligent persons to represent the Interests of their fellow townsmen, although not a sufficient number of such persons to admit of a fair variety of choice.

With these settlements I believe I must close my enumeration of places from whence Representatives could be obtained. Of the whole of the remaining inhabited parts I really do not know one where such persons could be found. The next in consequence is the Harbour of Trinity and its respectability is composed of one Partner and one Agent of Houses in the West of England, a Surgeon, and the Missionary. Other places are similarly provided for with the exception of the two latter Gentlemen, and the more distant parts have but one Supply Merchant.

I might expatiate to your Lordship upon the anomaly that would arise in sending the only two Individuals in the Community fit for it, to represent the whole neighbouring population, and they not settlers, but Agents of Houses in England, but I am saved the necessity of doing so by the conviction that not one of these Individuals would accept of such a Service. Nor would their employers permit them to do so. They have a great charge upon them. Magazines filled with stores for the use of their Dealers which must not only require their constant attendance, but the depredations their property would be liable to from a Winter's absence would alone deter them from such an undertaking, for your Lordship will have gathered from the description I have already given of this Island that those who resort to St. John's in the Autumn have no power of returning home until late in the ensuing Spring.

p. 1947

If these persons would be disinclined to a Winter's absence they would be still more averse to quitting their homes in Summer when the whole machinery of the fishery is in motion, and when one weeks neglect of their business would be of more consequence to them than an age of internal Legislation.

Then my Lord what is to be done for the great mass of population distributed about the Island ? How are they to be represented and who to attend to their interests ? Some have, I am told, ventured to suggest as a remedy for this defect, that all the Members for these places should be chosen from the People of St. John's. I merely state this to Your Lordship as a specimen of the crude Ideas on the Subject of Legislation of some of those most sanguine for the proposed measure.

The applicants for a local Legislature take as a ground on which to found heir claims to one, the example set them in the case of Nova Scotia at a period when neither her Population nor Commerce equalled that of Newfoundland ; but the situation of the two countries with reference to that period is altogether dissimilar. Newfoundland as I have already observed, became settled because the fishermen found it more convenient to establish themselves on her shores for the purposes of fishing, but as to anything further, the whole Island with the exception of the spots they occupied, might have disappeared and not affect them. The cultivation in it and that of the most miserable description being confined to Potatoes not exceeding, as appears by a return made to the Colonial Office in 1825, about 8,000 acres, and the Commerce depending solely upon the success of the Fishery and the return of food for those engaged in it.

Nova Scotia on the other hand commenced as a Colony long before it came into our possession. It was peopled by a very different description of persons to those who resorted here ; and I find on reference to the Statistics of that Province that when the Acadians were expelled in 1755 they were possessed of upwards of 60,000 Head of horned Cattle, had 100,000 acres of land in Grain and 100,000 more in Grass, orchards, Gardens, &c. It must therefore be quite unnecessary for me to carry the contrast further, for the purpose of impressing Your Lordship with the conviction that there is no parallel between the situation of the two Countries from which the Crown can refer to the steps pursued with respect to the one as a Guide for its conduct towards the other.

p. 1948

I am given to understand that Commander Pearl of the Navy who has recently established here and is now in England has made representations to Your Lordship with respect to this Colony calculated to mislead your Lordship as to its situation, and which his short residence here, and that confined to the town of St. John's by no means justified him in doing. I am ignorant of the precise points on which that Gentleman conferred with your Lordship except in one case, when it appears by his own admission he stated to Your Lordship that no less than three thousand persons had applied for and were waiting for Grants of Land. I have little doubt Your Lordship has been led from such a statement to believe that probably a million, or not less than five hundred thousand acres are partitioned off. Your Lordship will be no less astonished than I was on hearing of this assertion, when I inform you that on the perusal of the above statement, having called on the Surveyor for a return of all the ground petitioned for and in the course of being granted ; I find it does not amount to fifteen thousand acres, a considerable portion of which has been long in cultivation and for which the parties only require a confirmatory title.

How Commander Pearl could lend himself to such misstatements I am at a loss to understand, and which is the more inexcusable on his part, as from being the brother in law to the Chief Surveyor, he had the power, had he wished to avail himself of it, fully and accurately to inform himself on the subject.

With reference to the extent to which the wishes of the people generally are involved, in the request that has been preferred for a legislative Government, it is necessary I should make a few observations. I learn that your Lordship has been told by the parties who had the honour of a personal interview with you on the subject that the wish of the Island was unanimous on the occasion, and that certain queries I had sent to the Outports on the subject of the expiring Judicatory Act were answered by requests for a local Legislature. That the majority of the principal Inhabitants of St. John's have been within these two years brought round, by those who had influence over them, to think a local Legislature desirable ; I believe to be the case—but I am no less aware, that with reference to the signatures of the lower orders attached to the petition—all those means were resorted to, to induce them to place their names to it, which are practiced in England on similar occasions, and I conceive it receives its full share of importance if it is taken as the expression of the wish of those only who signed it.

The petition from Harbour Grace and Carbonear which I understand was either numerously signed, or stated to be the voice of the people, was the result, as I am informed, of the deliberations of twenty five Individuals—as to the petitions from a few other unimportant places I can say nothing—but perhaps the measure before referred to, and which the advocates for a local Government attempted to turn in their favour ; will afford a pretty good test of the feeling of the Inhabitants farther removed from the seat of Government, for having on my inspection of the different localities of the Island received various complaints as to the effect of the Judicatory Act upon them—and being anxious to learn with precision the view they severally took of its advantages, or defects, to enable me to come to a more correct conclusion as to the remedy to be applied in passing a new one—I directed in the course of the Autumn, circular letters to be addressed to the principal people in each settlement, calling upon them for the information required. It so happened that about the same time the people here held the meeting which led to the Petition—a copy of which your Lordship has transmitted to me—and those most anxious in its fate gave out that the object of my Circulars was to defeat their plans, and urged the distant parts to reply in the manner before alluded to ; but notwithstanding such influence, out of Seventeen places to which these letters were addressed, only five alluded to a Legislature.

After a very long and dispassionate consideration of the question your Lordship has submitted to me Whether I look to the nature of the Society of which the Colony is composed—their several interests—their Intelligence and local wants—or turn to the topography of the Island, its Climate, Cultivation or internal Communication ; I confess he concluded I cannot discern any of those elements essential to the composition and conduct of a local Government—I readily admit that St. John's, although a very large portion of its principal Inhabitants are by no means permanently interested in its welfare, is capable of managing its own concerns ; and that a Corporation, if desired, might under proper restrictions be given them—anything beyond this I consider at present wholly impracticable ; nor can I understand under what Plea they can wish to control the general mass of the people dwelling in those distant parts, from whom for a large portion of the year they are excluded to a much greater degree than from Great Britain. I have no reason to believe that those people wish for that description of Government, nor do I consider they are in any manner capable of forming an opinion on the subject. If the happiness of the people of St. John's were alone involved in the decision His Majesty's Government may come to on the prayer of their petition, I might have been disposed to allow them to bear the responsibility and the risk of a measure of their own seeking, but it is impossible to deal with the great mass of the people in the same manner—they are in all respects, other than in their own calling, only Children of a larger growth, of whom, I consider His Majesty's Government to be the natural Guardian and Protector and in whose keeping must for many years be their interest and prosperity.

In coming to the conclusion I have done upon a measure of vast Importance to the Colony, and a wrong decision on which might involve it in years of misfortune, I can assure your Lordship I have had no other object before me but the prosperity and happiness of a people in whose welfare I take a very lively interest. It is a source of great pain to me to feel that my opinions must conflict with the wishes of some very respectable persons—every inducement operates as far as I am personally concerned to lead me to accede to their views—and to oppose them, I am fully aware, puts to hazard my popularity and the good feeling that has subsisted between the Colonists and myself since my first arrival among them—but I should consider myself unworthy the Confidence His Majesty's Government may be disposed to place in me, did I permit any personal feeling to influence me, where the peace and happiness of so large a Population is at stake—and it is consolatory to me to know that as with my opinions you will receive the ground on which they are formed, your Lordship will not invest them with more importance than what they may really deserve.

p. 1950

As the most conscientious person is liable to be warped in the view he takes of any measure by his general feeling on similar subjects—and your Lordship may doubt how far such may influence my opinions on the present occasion ; it is but right to add, before closing the observations I have the honour to submit to your Lordship, that they are decidedly in favour of the establishment of a legislative Government in every Colony where existing Circumstances are not opposed to it—I have visited the greater part of His Majesty's foreign possessions, and however the detail of the Institutions in many of them, may be objectionable, I am persuaded the Mother Country, even if inclined to assume the Burthen, could never as efficiently administer to their wants and regulate their internal Economy as they can themselves and I should be one of the first to encourage similar Institutions here whenever the situation of the Country became such that any practical good result from them—I would apologise to your Lordship for trespassing so much on your attention did I not feel persuaded the importance of the subject, and my anxiety that every opinion expressed, shall have a corresponding reason to support it—will offer a sufficient excuse.

I have endeavoured to advert to those points on which it is probable Your Lordship may wish for Information—at the same time I am aware many may remain on which if circumstances had admitted of a personal interview your Lordship might have desired further explanations, and it would have afforded me much satisfaction could I in the present instance anticipate them.

I have the honour to be, My Lord,
Your Lordship's most obedient humble servant,

No. 793.

[Enclosure in No. 792.]

POPULATION OF THE ISLAND OF NEWFOUNDLAND WITH THE DISTANCE FROM ST. JOHN'S IN MILES. COASTWAYS OF EACH SETTLEMENT AND TO WHICH, WITH THE EXCEPTION OF PORTUGAL COVE, THERE IS NO ROAD. TAKEN FROM THE RETURNS IN THE YEAR 1827-8.

—	No. of Inhabitants.	About miles distance from St. John's
District of St. John's
St. John's & Quidi Vidi	11903
Torbay & Flat Rock, North	741	} 15
Pouch Cove and Biskin Cove	237
Portugal Cove & S. Shore	1188	} 10 to 18
Bell Isle & Lance Cove	553
Petty Harbour, South	543	9
District of Bay Bulls, South.
Bay of Bulls	443	20
Witless Bay	355
Mobile	192	} 25 to 36
Toads Cove	62
Baleen	39
Burn Cove	39
Caplin Cove	19
District of Ferryland, South.
Ferryland	520
Renewse	450
Fermeuse	392
Caplin Bay	179	} 36 to 110
Cape Broyle	181
Aquafort	94
Brigus	160
District of Trepassey & St. Mary's,

South.

St. Mary's & Vicinity	610
Trepassey & Briskey Bay	237

p. 1952

—	No. of Inhabitants.	About miles distance from St. John's
Placentia, S.
Great Placentia & Vicinity	584	140 to 190
Little Placentia	869
Paradise	191
Presque, Olivers Cove, &c.	240
Merasheen	184
Isle Valen, Burgeo, &c.	247
Western Cove & Barren Island	184
Woody & Sound Islands	198
North Harbour & White Isle	105
Burin S.
Burin	928	190 to 250
Mortier	639
St. Lawrence	553
Fortune Bay S.
Fortune	191	250 to 320
Grand Bank	261
Grand Beach & Garnish	111
Pt. Emagee to Harbour Millie	152
Bottom of Fortune Bay	70
Hare Harbour	575
St. Jeques and Little Bay
Jersey Harbour & Harbour Bretton	268
Sagona, Hermitage Cove	951
Great Jervis to Red Isle
Burgeo Island to Cape Ray	227
Conception Bay, North.
Harbour Grace	3004	27 From Harbour Grace
Mosquito to Croker Cove	1083

Holyrood to Bull Cove	1876	15
Carbonear	2527	5
Brigus	1216	10
Cupids	644	11
Port de Grave	2004	10
Bay Roberts & Spaniards Bay	1289	8
Bread & Cheese Cove to Malleys	1240
Broad Cove to Bradleys Cove	789	30
Western Bay	675
Ochre Pit Cove to Bay Verde	1512

p. 1953

—	No. of Inhabitants.	About miles distance from St. John's
Trinity Bay North.
Trinity	928	60 to 100
Catalina to Ship Cove	904
Cuckolds Cover [sic] to Tickle Harbour	919
New Harbour to Heart's Desire	432
Heart's Content	314
New Perlican	186
Turks Cove to Seal Cove	553
Old Perlican	548
Daniels Cove and Grates Cove	369
Bonavista Bay, North.
Bonavista	1470	80 to 120
King's Cove	308
Broad Cove & Keels	401
Tickle Cove	171
Red Cliff Island	53
Open Hall	97
Barrow Harbour & Broom Close	53
Salvage & Gooseberry Island	231
Vene Island	73
Greens Pond	1617
Pilchards Island	120
Cape Freels & Cobblers Island	77
Twillingate & Fogo, North.
Fogo Islands	1122	160
Change Islands	166
Herring Neck	293
Twillingate Islands	977
Tizzards Harbour	102
Mortons Harbour	221

Exploits Burnt Island	240) 200 to 240
Fortune Harbour	124
Round Harbours Shoe Cove	142
Salmon Catchers (scattered)	50
Nippers Harbour	110
	<hr/>
Total of Inhabitants	60,000
Deduct Children	23,725
	<hr/>
Total Adults, Male & Female	36,275

No. 794.[27 July,
1832.]DESPATCH, LORD GODERICH TO SIR THOMAS COCHRANE,

TRANSMITTING TO HIM HIS COMMISSION AND INSTRUCTIONS AS GOVERNOR AND COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF IN AND OVER THE ISLAND OF NEWFOUNDLAND AND THE TERRITORIES DEPENDING THEREON. ¹

Downing-street, 27 July 1832.

SIR,

I have the honour herewith to transmit to you His Majesty's Commission under the Great Seal, appointing you Governor of the Island of Newfoundland together with your General Instructions under the Royal Sign Manual, referred to in that Commission.

As this is the first occasion on which provision has been made for convening a Legislative Assembly for the island of Newfoundland, the importance of that measure requires that I should not limit myself to the merely formal duty of placing you in possession of these instruments, but that I should shortly explain the grounds and the nature of the policy by which His Majesty's Councils on this subject have been directed.

It were superfluous at the present day to inquire into the wisdom of that system which was pursued for so many years towards the ancient colony under your government, the fundamental principle of which was to prevent the colonization of the island, and to render this kingdom the domicile of all persons engaged in the Newfoundland fisheries. The common interest or convenience of those persons virtually defeated the restrictions of the various statutes respecting them, long before Parliament admitted the necessity of repealing those laws. A colony gradually settled itself along the shores of the island, and has of late years assumed a rank of no inconsiderable importance amongst the foreign possessions of the British Crown ; but notwithstanding the growing population and the wealth of Newfoundland, no plan has hitherto been adopted for regulating such of the internal affairs of the colonists as demanded the enactment of laws specially adapted to their peculiar situation. Parliament, indeed, contemplated the erection of corporate towns, with the power of making bye-laws, for remedying this inconvenience ; but on attempting to carry this design into effect, unforeseen obstacles were encountered. It was found altogether impracticable to reconcile the contradictory wishes and recommendations of the parties who would have been more immediately affected by the measure ; and it became evident that the boon which it was proposed to confer would be received by a great body of the inhabitants, not as an act of grace, but as an infringement of their rights, into whatever form the intended charters might have been thrown. The consequence was, that His Majesty became practically unable to execute the trust which Parliament had confided to him.

¹ Reprinted from Com. Pap. No. 704, printed 7th August, 1832.

The necessity of some provision for regulating the internal concerns of Newfoundland by enactments adapted to the peculiarities of their local position became however daily more and more evident. Carrying with them from this kingdom the law of England, as the only code by which the rights and duties of the people in their relations to each other, and in their relation to the State, could be ascertained, it was obvious, as soon as the colony began to assume a settled form, that the adaptation of that code to the various exigencies of the local society was a task demanding the exercise of much reflection and caution ; that many of its provisions were entirely inapplicable to the wants of a population so peculiarly situated ; and that many more could be applied only by a distant and uncertain approach to the original standard. Hence it occurred that, in the administration of the law, the judges virtually assumed to themselves functions rather legislative than judicial ; and undertook to determine not so much what the law actually was, as what, in the condition of Newfoundland, it ought to be. For this assumption of power no censure attaches to those learned persons ; without any positive rule of decision, nothing remained for them but to engage in such an inquiry ; yet the practical inconvenience was not the less urgent, nor the anomaly the less glaring.

It was not, however, merely in the absence of rules, which this latitude of judicial interpretation might supply, that the public detriment was sustained. There were still wanting other regulations, which no judge could either invent or enforce. Especially in whatever related to police and internal improvements demanding the co-operation of different persons, nothing could be carried into effect, which any individual found an adequate reason for opposing, or which he opposed from mere caprice. I find that in a matter so trifling in appearance, and yet affecting the comforts of so many, as the prevention of domestic animals wandering at large through the country, an earnest application was made to His Majesty's Government to obtain an Act of Parliament for the redress of the grievance endured by the colonists. Although it was thought improper to encumber the British statute-book with such provisions, yet it was fully admitted that they could be supplied by no other authority ; and the application itself forcibly illustrated the inconvenience of so remote a society being destitute of any local Legislature.

It may seem, however, superfluous to accumulate reasons in proof of the propriety of establishing in Newfoundland that form of constitution which generally prevails throughout the British Transatlantic colonies ; the difficulty would consist rather in finding valid arguments for withholding it. The reasonable presumption seems to be, that a system of colonial government which has been attended with so many advantages in British North America, would produce similar benefits at Newfoundland, if transferred to that settlement. I do not indeed mean to deny that some considerable inconvenience has occasionally resulted from the adoption, in those dependencies of Great Britain, of constitutions modelled into a miniature resemblance of our own ; but I know not what is the system of which the same might not be truly asserted. It is sufficient to say of the scheme of internal polity in force in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, that in all the colonies to which it has been extended, it has invariably secured the attachment of the people, by giving them a large share in the management of their own affairs ; by affording an open field for the free exercise of talents and public spirit ; by providing honourable ambition with a legitimate object and reward ; by insuring immediate and careful attention to the various exigencies of society and by promoting a frugal and judicious administration of public affairs. With the single exception of those colonies in which the people are separated from each other by distinctions analogous to those of caste, representative Assemblies are not only recommended by abstract considerations drawn from the genius and principles of our own Government, but by a long course of experiments pursued under a great variety of circumstances, but still leading to the same general result.

p. 1956

In advising His Majesty to convene an Assembly from among the inhabitants of Newfoundland, I have therefore not yielded myself to the guidance of any improved theory, but have simply extended to another of the colonial possessions of the Crown principles which have been elsewhere brought to the test of repeated and successful experiment. Yet I do not conceal from myself, nor wish to deny, that the duty which you will have to perform will be attended with some difficulty, and that you will have large scope for the exercise of circumspection and industry. In the first execution of such a design, many questions will probably arise which it were impossible to anticipate distinctly. From the novelty of the duties cast upon them, and from their inexperience in civil business of that nature, I can foresee that the returning officers, the voters, and the members of Assembly, may all in some instances misapprehend the functions which they will have to discharge, or the proper mode of proceeding for the methodical and accurate discharge of them. Cautiously abstaining from the appearance of usurping any undue authority over matters properly falling within the cognizance of the Assembly, you will yet be prompt to afford to all parties whatever counsel or assistance you can render them, to obviate difficulties of this nature. It cannot be made too apparent that the boon which has been granted is seconded by the cordial good will and co-operation of the Executive Government, and that the House of Assembly is regarded, not as a rival power, but as a body destined to co-operate with yourself in advancing the prosperity of the settlement.

For your own guidance it may be right to observe, that colonial assemblies, as they derive their general form from the model of the British House of Commons, so they have drawn their rules and system of procedure from the same source. The distinctions are of course both numerous and important, and grow out of the dissimilarity of the circumstances of the representative bodies of a small colony and of an extensive kingdom ; but in general the analogy is maintained, and therefore the laws and rules of Parliament, as modified by the exigencies of the case, may be taken as the safest guide for the conduct of the Council and Assembly, and for your own proceedings towards them.

p. 1957

As soon as conveniently may be after your arrival in Newfoundland, you will convene the Council, according to your general instructions, and arrange with them the whole course of proceedings to be adopted for giving effect to so much of those instructions as relate to the convoking the Assembly. Especially you will consider the proper forms of the writs to be addressed to the returning officers, the proper places for holding elections, the most convenient times at which they can take place, the necessary arrangements for the reception and accommodation of the legislative body at the town of St. John's, the most convenient method of opening the first session of the General Assembly with appropriate and decorous solemnities ; and, above all, the topics to which their attention should in the first instance be directed.

In conformity with the precedents in use on similar occasions, a proclamation has been approved declaratory of the future system of government to be observed in the colony. This proclamation you will cause to be circulated in the most public manner as soon as conveniently may be after our arrival.

It has for the present divided the country into electoral districts, and has determined the number of members who are to be returned for each. These, however, are topics on which it is very probable that the information I have been able to acquire in this kingdom may be erroneous or defective. Any other division of the country which may be more generally convenient, and any other arrangement of the number of representatives for different districts, which the Council and Assembly may deem more advantageous, will be the fit subject of legislative enactment. No change in the constitution of the House, or in the total number of members, can however be effected, except with His Majesty's previous approbation, and in the manner indicated in your general instructions.

In accordance with the uniform course of precedents, your Commission constitutes a Council which will participate with the Assembly in the enactment of laws. It is not, however, to be denied that this part of the established system of colonial legislation has been practically found to be attended with some serious difficulties. The members of Council, deriving their authority from the Royal Commission, have not seldom been regarded with jealousy and distrust by the great body of the people. Their elevation in rank and authority has but too often failed to induce a corresponding degree of public respect. Even the most judicious exercise of their powers has occasionally worn the semblance of harshness when opposed to the unanimous, or the predominant opinions of those to whom the colonists looked with confidence as their representatives. The Councils, it must be confessed, have not uniformly exerted themselves to repel, or to abate, this prejudice. The acrimony engendered by such disputes has sometimes given occasion to an eager assertion of extreme rights on the part of the Council, and to a no less determined denial of their necessary and constitutional privileges on the part of the Assembly. The

p. 1958

Councils have also been employed as instruments for relieving Governors from the responsibility they ought to have borne for their rejection of measures which have been proposed by the other branch of the Legislature ; and have not seldom involved them in dissensions which it would have been more judicious to decline. Some of the principal inhabitants of the colony, as well as the chief officers of the local Government, being usually members of the Council, are removed from the prospect of obtaining seats in the House of Assembly. Even in colonies in which there is a larger society, and a greater number of proper persons to become members of the Legislature than in Newfoundland, considerable inconvenience has been found to result from raising to the rank of councillors the leading members of the Assembly, and thereby losing their services in that body. The want of any member competent to explain or vindicate the course pursued, by the executive authorities has been still more severely felt : measures have not unfrequently been misunderstood, and it has happened that a trifling misconception, which a few words of timely explanation would have removed, has grown into a serious and embarrassing controversy. The effect of the institution, therefore, is too often to induce a collision between the different branches of the Legislature, to exempt the Governor from a due sense of responsibility, and to deprive the representative body of some of its most useful members. Yet the compensation which might atone for these evils is not obtained, and the Council does not assume in the colony a position, or an influence analagous to that of the House of Peers, because entirely destitute of that hold on public opinion which the property and independence of its members, as well as the antiquity of the institution itself, confers upon the peerage of this country.

Adverting to these considerations, and to the legislative history of the British North American and West Indian colonies ; I should regard with satisfaction any arrangement which should consolidate the Council and the Assembly into a single House, in which the representatives of the people would be met by the official servants of the Crown. An example of this form of government exists in British Guiana, and is found to possess in practice many of the advantages which it promises in theory, by casting upon the Governor an undivided responsibility as often as he adopts or rejects the proposals of the legislative body, and by securing to them all the information and assistance which can be rendered by members officially conversant with the various subjects brought under their consideration. This, however, is a system which prevailed in Guiana before the conquest of that settlement by Great Britain, and which, I apprehend, His Majesty could not establish by the exercise of his prerogative in Newfoundland. If, however, the Council and Assembly as established by your Commission and instructions should concur in the view which I have taken of this subject, and should be disposed to pass a Bill for uniting the two Houses, with a clause suspending the operation of the law, for the signification of His Majesty's pleasure, you will, on His Majesty's behalf, assent to any such Bill. Should the design be entertained, I think that the Colonial Secretary, the Attorney-general and the chief officer of customs would be the most proper persons to hold seats in the Assembly, by virtue of their official situations : they would be enabled to explain the views of the Executive Government upon the principal points which could be brought under the consideration of the Legislature ; and the introduction of so small a number as three gentlemen nominated by the Crown could not be supposed in any degree to control its deliberations. Upon this point it is only necessary to add, that the bill should be so framed, as, in depriving the Council of its legislative functions, to allow of its continuance as a body to which the Governor might resort for advice during the intervals between the session of the Legislature, and upon other occasions when it might be convenient to him to do so ; for this purpose, however, a numerous body is not required, and I have therefore at present only recommended to His Majesty one gentleman, not holding any official situation, for a seat in the Council. The gentleman whom I have selected is Colonel Haly, who has been strongly recommended by yourself, and to whom a dormant commission will be granted, authorizing him to assume the government of the colony in the event of your absence, in order that the regular discharge of the duties of the subordinate officers may not be interrupted by their being called upon to assume the temporary administration of the government.

In contemplation of the change which has been effected in the internal government of the colony, it was resolved to apply to Parliament to continue in force the Acts by which the celebration of marriages, the administration of justice, and the conduct of the fisheries are regulated. Bills are now pending for that purpose, and will, I trust, be shortly passed into law. The Marriage and the Administration of Justice Acts, being matters exclusively of local concern, will remain in force until the local Legislature shall see fit to repeal or to alter them. If the Council and Assembly should think that any change is requisite on either of these topics, the remedy will therefore be in their own hands. The Newfoundland Fisheries Act affects interests partly local, and partly co-extensive with the trade and navigation of the empire at large. It will therefore be continued in force for two years. Before the expiration of that time it will be fit that the local Legislature should be invited to consider the subject in all its bearings. So much of that statute as relates to the navigation and commerce of this kingdom may then be revised by Parliament, with the benefit of the assistance to be anticipated from the labours of the Council and Assembly ; so much, on the other hand, of the statute as refers to interests properly local may then also be remitted to the local Legislature for their decision.

By one of the two bills to which I have referred, provision is made for transferring to the Governor, Council and Assembly of Newfoundland the appropriation to the public service of the island of all money levied there under any Parliamentary authority. From his existing revenues His Majesty has reserved nothing for his own unqualified disposal, but has placed the whole under the control of the local Legislature, with the exception of a sum which must be applied for the support of the Governor, the Judges, the Colonial Secretary and the Attorney-General. This arrangement will, I trust, effectually obviate the difficulties which have been so sensibly felt in other colonies, and satisfy the inhabitants of His Majesty's fixed purpose and earnest solicitude to promote to the utmost of his power a wise economy in the expenditure of the public revenue, and to respect the constitutional rights of the popular branch of the local Legislature.

p. 1960

You will observe that the expense of collecting this branch of the revenue is to be deducted from its gross proceeds, and that these arrangements do not embrace any part of that revenue which accrues to the Crown in virtue of His Majesty's prerogatives. Such, for example, are the rents or the proceeds of the sales of Crown lands, escheats, fines and forfeitures. His Majesty is, however, graciously pleased to authorize you to assure the Council and Assembly that whatever money may accrue to the Crown in the island will always be applied towards the expense of the civil or military government, or towards objects strictly and exclusively local.

I hope shortly to convey to you the authority of the Lords Commissioners of the Treasury for the apportionment of that part of the Parliamentary duties which will be applicable to the support of the public officers already enumerated.

I have, &c.

(signed) GODERICH.

Governor Sir Thomas Cochrane,
&c. &c. &c.

No. 795.

C

1832. IMPERIAL ACT, 2-3 WM. IV., CAP. 78.

See Vol. I, page 321.

No. 796.

C

1842. IMPERIAL ACT, 5-6 VICT., CAP. 120.

See Vol. I, page 323.

Page	1	2
------	---	---

DOCUMENTS ADDED BY NEWFOUNDLAND.

No. 797.

SKEFFINGTON'S SALMON FISHERY.

C.O. 194, VOL. 6, f. 332.

To George King of Great Britain in Counsel.

The Humble Petition of George Skeffington Inhabitant of Indian Bay in Newfoundland, Humbly Sheweth

*sic.

That your Petitioner hath for about Twelve Years past Improved the Salmon Fishery in two or three Rivers or Brooks to the Northward of Cape Bonavista ; and hath at very great Expence and Labour near fferty miles up the Country cleared Lands of the wood, and the said Rivers or Brooks of rocks and stones and other obstructions ; built houses, Stages, ffatts, Works and other Conveniences for catching and Curing Salmon, which said Brooks or Rivers were never before Employed frequented or occupied by any person whatsoever, and far distant from any place where any ffishing Ship hath used to fish.—

[23 Feb.,
1719/20.]

Your Petitioner therefore most humbly prays, that he may be encouraged and protected in carrying on the said Fishery according to the Intention of the Act made in the 10 & 11th of King William the Third for Incouring* the Fishery of Newfoundland, That he may use occupy and enjoy all such houses, Stages and other works made by him for taking and Curing of Salmon without molestation or hindrance from any persons who may by fraud or force disturb him in the quiet possession thereof ; and that he may hold and possess all those Conveniences he may hereafter make or build for taking and Curing Salmon in such Brooks or Rivers as have never before been used by any other person in such manner as to your Majesty in your great Wisdom shall seem meet.

And your Petitioner shall pray, &c.

GEO. SKEFFINGTON.

D.S.

At the Court at S^t James's 23^d : February 1719/20.

Endorsed.

His Majesty having been moved upon this Petition is graciously pleased to refer the same to the Right Hon^{ble} the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations to consider thereof, and report their Opinion what his Majesty may fitly do therein, whereupon his Majesty will declare his further Pleasure.

J. CRAGGS.

D.S.

p. 1962

NEWFOUNDLAND.

Reference from Mr. Secretary Craggs of the 23^d Feb^{ry} 1719–20 upⁿ y^e Petition of Mr. Geo. Skeffington to his Majesty praying to be protected in y^e Improvement he has made (with great Expence) in the Salmon Fishery at Newfoundland.

Rec^d from M^r Joshua Gee.

[2 March,
1719/20.]

Rec^d Feb^{ry} 24th
Read Do. 25th } 1719/20.

M. 97.

Ref. to Board of Trade.

C.O. 194, VOL. 6, f. 334.

To the Right Honorable the Lords
Commissioners for Trade and Plantations.

MY LORDS,

In Obedience to your Lordships Commands, I have perus'd and consider'd the Annex'd Petition of George Skeffington, and humbly certify to your Lordships, that I am of Opinion that the prayer of it is not Inconsistent with the Act made in the Tenth and Eleventh year of King William, for encouraging the trade to Newfoundland.

I am, My Lords,

Your Lordships

Most Obedient and

Most humble servant,

RICHD. WEST.

L.S.

March 2^d. 7 ¹⁰/₃₀.

Copy of Petition of Geo. Skeffington. (Copied on f. 332.)

Endorsed.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

Mr. West's Report upon Mr. Geo. Skeffington's Petition relating to a Salmon Fishery at Newfoundland.

Dated March 2^d 1719.

Rec^d March 2^d Read D^o 10th 1719/20.
M. 98.

Report on Mr. George Skeffington's Petition. Dat 2^d Mar 7, ¹⁹/₃₀

R.W.

p. 1963

N

[8 April, 1720.]

Newfoundland.

1720.

April the th

L^r to M^r Secy
Craggs upon the Petition of

M^r George Skeffing-ton, relating to a Salmon Fishery at Newfoundland.

No. 798.

[Enclosure in No. 796.]

C.O. 195, VOL. 7, p. 36.

To the R^t Hon^{ble} Mr. Secy Craggs.

SIR,

In Obedience to His Maj^{ty}'s Comands signify'd to Us by your Reference of 23^d Febr^y. last, We have consider'd the Petition of George Skeffington, an Inhabitant of Newfoundland setting forth, that he has for about 12 Years past apply'd himself to, and improv'd the Salmon Fishery in two or three Rivers or Brooks to the Northward of Cape Bonavista in that Island, and has at very great Expen^{ce} and Labour clear'd the Lands of the Wood about forty Miles up some of those Rivers, and the Rivers, & Brooks, Rocks, Stones and other Obstructions to that Fishery. That he has built Houses, Stages, Fats and other Conveniencies for taking and curing of Salmon, that the Places where he has begun this Work were never before employ'd or occupied by any Person whatsoever ; And therefore he humbly prays that his Maj^{ty} would be graciously pleas'd to permit him to enjoy the Houses, Stages and other Works made by him, for this Fishery without Molestation or Hindrance from any other Persons, who may attempt to disturb him therein, And that he may possess such Conveniences as he shall make hereafter in such Brooks or Rivers as have never before been used by any other Person.

We have upon this Occasion discours'd with the Petitioner and others who have appear'd in his behalf, and take Leave to observe y^t the Places where he has begun this Fishery are between Bonavista and Cape John in the North East Part of Newfoundland, which Places have never been frequented by any Fishing Ships from this Kingdom. And as the Petitioner is the first who has attempted to sett up a Salmon Fishery there, and as y^e Prayer of his Petition is no ways inconsistent with the Act for encouraging the Trade to Newfoundland, We humbly offer that His Majesty be graciously pleas'd to grant the Petitioner for the Term of 21 Years or such other time as His Majesty shall think fit the Sole Fishery for Salmon in the Places call'd Fresh Water Bay, Ragged Harbour, Gander Bay & Dog Creek between Cape Bonavista & Cape John, where he has already built Houses and other Conveniences for that Purpose, And that he have Liberty to cut Boards and Timber for his own Use in the Parts adjacent to those Rivers Brooks or Creeks for the said Fishery only, provided it be at Six Miles distant from the Sea Shoar.

We are Sir

Your most Obedient & most humble

Servants

*sic.

WESTMORLAND
C. COOKE
P. DOCMINIQUE
J. MOLESWORTH
T. PELHAM
M. BLADEN.

Copy.

Whitehall,
April 8th, 1723.*

[Sept., 1768.]

No. 799.SURROGATE'S COMMISSION AND INSTRUCTIONS BY GOVERNOR PALLISER.

RECORD BOOK, ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND. VOLUME 4, p. 114.
(Seal)

By His Excellency Hugh Palliser,
&c. &c.

By Virtue of the power and authority to me given by His Majesty's Letters made Patent, bearing date at Westminster, the Ninth day of April, in the eighth year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Third, by the Grace of God of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King Defender of the Faith, &c. I hereby constitute and appoint you to be my Deputy or Surrogate with full Power and Authority to assemble Courts within the District to enquire into all such complaints as may be brought before you (except such as are excepted in the Instructions annexed) and to hear and determine the same to all intents and purposes, as I myself might or would do, By Virtue of the owner and authority vested in me. You have likewise power and authority to seize and detain in order to proceed to Condemnation, all uncustomed, prohibited or Run goods, that may be found within the aforesaid Limits or Posts adjacent, And I do give and grant unto you full power and authority to administer the several Oaths, to any Person or Persons you shall think fit agreeable to the several Acts of Parliament made in that behalf, And I do strictly enjoin all Admirals of Harbours, all Justices of the Peace, all Officers, Civil and Military, and all other His Majesty's Leige Subjects, to be aiding and assisting unto you the said and to obey and put into execution all such Lawfull Orders as you shall give unto them, as I myself might or would do by Virtue of the Power and Authority vested in me.

Given under my hand and Seal, this day of Sept. 1768.

By order of His Excellency,
JNO. HORSNAILL.

You are hereby strictly enjoined not to do anything by Virtue of the within Commission, contrary or repugnant to the Act for encouraging the Fishery and Trade of Newfoundland, passed in the 10th & 11th years of William 3rd nor obstruct the powers thereby given and granted to the Admirals of Harbours, but you are to the utmost of your power, to support, assist, and encourage the Fishing Admirals in their respective Harbours, for carrying into execution the several good Rules and Orders ordained by the said Act, and in all cases of appeal from the determinations of such Admirals to you, as the Commander of one of ye King's Ships, you are to determine such cases according to the Rules and Orders ordained by the said Act, observing that all Ships are to be deem'd British Fishing Ships, and intitled to the privileges of being Admirals of Harbours, that arrive directly from Britain with Fishing Certificates and men actually employ'd in ye Fishery and that occupieth a publick Ships Room, and not one that is held & possess'd as private property.

In such cases as may be brought before you, and that are not provided for in the said Act, you are to take to your assistance the Justices of the Peace where there are any, and determine them according to the establish'd regulations, customs and usages of the Fishery, and as shall to you appear equitable and just but in all cases of dispute relating to any exclusive right to, or property in any Fishing Works, Rooms or Lands, or concerning Rents, Leases, Mortgages or Sales of such Fishing Works or places are to be referr'd to me, and all disputes concerning Merchants accounts and transactions in Trade, are to be left to be try'd by the proper Courts at St. John's or in England.

The Inhabitant Boatkeepers Servants Wages, are always to be paid according to their Shipping Papers, and in preference to Debts and all other claims, and in case of any doubt of the Masters being able to draw good Bills for payment thereof, the Produce of the voyage must make good the Servants Wages in preference to all Debts or Demands whatever, and according to ancient Custom, the Servants of Inhabitant Boatkeepers are justified in detaining on the Room the whole Produce of the Voyage, till the ballance of their Wages shall be secured to them.

In case any Person within your District should be charged with Murder, or any other Capital offence, you are on proper application being made to you, to apprehend such offenders, and send them to St. John's, or bring them with you when you join me, in order to their being tryed at the General Assizes.

You are to transmit to me a copy of all the causes that may be brought before you, with your Decrees thereon.

You are by every means in your power to encourage and oblige the Fishermen to return home, observing that all Masters are to send their men home at the expiration of their respective times of service, for no men must be discarded in this desolate country, and none to stay but such as are covenanted for the Winter ; no Debts contracted by serving Men are to be paid except to their Masters, and that by Law is not to exceed one moiety of their Wages.

With the assistance of the Admirals, the Justices and the Naval officers, you are to fill up the Fishing Schemes herewith deliver'd you as exact as possible.

In case the Justices and principal people at any Port within your District, present to you any Persons that are useless People to the Fishery, who entertain Rogues and Thieves, and live mostly by spoil and Plunder, and by entertaining the Fishermen and Seamen in Debaucheries, Idleness and Wickedness to the great detriment of the Fishery, you are to seize on so much of the Effects of such People to pay for them and their Families passage home, and ship them off for their respective homes accordingly, with a Vagrant's Warrant signed by you, certifying that their passages are Paid.

Delivered to Capt. Richd. Braithwaite of His Maj's. Ship Liverpool, within the District from Cape Ray to Cape Race inclusive 6th Sept., 1768.

Delivered to Jno. Cartwright Esq., within the District of Trinity and Conception Bays 16th Sept., 1768.

No. 800.

LIMITED COMMISSION OF THE PEACE, BY GOVERNOR SHULDHAM.[26 June, 1772.]

RECORD BOOK, ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. VOL. 5, p. 79.

By His EXCELLENCY MOLINEUX SHULDHAM, Esq., Governor
&c.

By virtue of the power and authority to me given by His Majesty's Letters made Patent, bearing date at Westminster the Sixteenth day of March, in the Twelfth year of the reign of Our Sovereign Lord George the Third, of Great Britain, France and Ireland, King Defender of the Faith &c. to constitute and appoint Justices of the Peace with other Officers and Ministers for the better administration of Justice and keeping the peace in the Island of Newfoundland in America. I do constitute and appoint you Edward White, Edward Langman, Charles Garland (4th August) Rob Grey, Nicholas Gill and 28 September James Brooks... ..Esquires His Majesty's Justices to keep the Peace in the District of Saint John's, Newfoundland, and to keep and cause to be kept all ordinances and statutes, made for the good of the Peace and for the conservation of the same ; and for the quiet rule and Government of the people in all and every the articles thereof in the said District (as well within liberties as without) according to the Force Form and effect of the same ; and to chastise and punish all persons offending against the Form of those ordinances and statutes, as shall be fit to be done, and to cause to come before you all those persons, who shall threaten any of the people in their persons, or in the burning of their houses, to find sufficient security for their Peace or for their good behavior towards His Majesty and the people, and if they shall refuse to find such security then to cause them to be kept safe in prison until they find such security. I have also appointed you or either of you the said Edward White, Edward Langman, Charles Garland, Robt. Grey, Nicholas Gill and James Brooks... ..Esquires His Majesty's Justices to enquire by the oath of good and lawful men of the District aforesaid, by whom the truth may be better known, of all and all manner of felonies, trespasses, forestallings, regratings, engrossings, and extortions whatsoever, and of all and singular other misdeeds and offences, of which Justices of the Peace may and ought lawfully to enquire by whomsoever or howsoever done and perpetrated, which hereafter shall happen howsoever to be done or attempted in the District aforesaid, who have either gone or riddn or shall hereafter presume to go or ride in companies with armed force against the Peace and to the disturbance of the people, and also those who have lain in wait or shall hereafter presume to lay in wait to maim and kill His Majesty's people or the native savages of the said Island of Newfoundland. And also of all Inholders and of all and singular other persons who have offended or attempted or shall hereafter presume to offend and attempt in the abuse of Weights and Measures, or in the sale of Victuals against the form of the ordinances and statutes, or any of them in that behalf made for the common good of England and the people thereof in the District aforesaid ; also of all Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Stewards, Constables, Gaolers, and other Officers whatsoever, who in the execution of their Offices about the premisses, or any of them have unlawfully demeaned themselves or hereafter shall presume unlawfully to demean themselves, or have been, or hereafter shall be careless, remiss or negligent in the District aforesaid, and of all and singular articles and circumstances and all other things whatsoever by whomsoever or howsoever done or perpetrated in the District, aforesaid or which hereafter shall happen howsoever to be attempted or done, in any wise more fully concerning the truth of the premisses or any of them and to inspect all indictments whatsoever so before you, or either of you taken or made, or taken before others late Justices of the Peace in the District aforesaid and not yet determined, and to make and constitute the process thereupon against all and singular persons so indicted or which hereafter shall happen to be indicted before you, until they be apprehended, or render themselves or be outlaws ; and to hear and determine all and singular the felonies, trespassings, forestallings, regratings, engrossings, extortions, unlawful assembles indictment aforesaid, and all and singular other premisses according to the laws and statutes of England, as in the like cases hath been used or ought to be done, and to chastise and punish the said persons offending and every of them for their offences by fines, ransoms, amercements, forfeitures or otherwise, as ought and hath been used to be done according to the laws and custom of England or the ordinances and statutes aforesaid. Provided always that if a cause of difficulty upon the determination of any of the premisses shall happen to arise before you, or either of you, or any Capital offences be brought before you, such as robberies, murders, and felonies, then you nor either of you do proceed to give judgment therein, but take care all persons guilty of such Offences be sent to the County Prison at St. John's, in order to take their Trials at the Asizes yearly to be held there. And therefore you and every of you are hereby required, that you diligently Intend keeping the Peace, Ordinances and Statutes and all and singular other the Premises, and at certain days and places, which you or either of you as is aforesaid shall in that behalf appoint that you hold a Quarter Sessions of the Peace and that you hear and determine all and singular the premisses, and perform and fulfill the same in Form aforesaid, doing therein that which to Justice appertaineth, according to the Laws and Customs of England, saving to His Majesty the ameracements and all other things to him thereof belonging, and by Virtue of these Presents at certain days and places, which you or either of you, as aforesaid, shall make known to them, you are required to cause to come before you, or either of you, as aforesaid such and as many good and lawful men of the District by whom the Truth of the Premises may be better known and Enquired of. And FURTHERMORE you are hereby required and directed, to appoint at certain Times and Places as aforesaid of such of the Inhabitants and Planters, residing and abiding in the Winter in the District aforesaid a Proper number of Constables and other Ministers of Justice, as is necessary towards preserving the Peace and Quiet of His Majesty's Subjects.

p. 1968

p. 1969

Provided always that you nor any such Person or Persons or other Officer or Minister so by you appointed, do presume or be suffered to act in such Offices untill he or they have taken the Oaths mentioned in the Act passed in the First Year of the Reign of King George the First Intituled an Act for the further security of the Crown in the Heirs of the late Princess Sophia, being Protestants, and for extinguishing the Hopes of the Pretended Prince of Wales and His open and secret Abettors, and also to make and subscribe the Declaration mentioned in an Act of Parliament made in the Twenty fifth Year of the Reign of King Charles the second Intituled an Act for preventing Dangers which may happen from Popish Recusants ; and also have taken such proper Oath or Oaths as are usually taken in the Kingdom of Great Britain by Persons Executing such Offices and Trusts ; which Oaths and Declaration you are jointly hereby Authorized and Impowered to Administer and give to all and every Person and Persons that ought to take the same, according to the Laws and Customs of the Kingdom of Great Britain. And that you nor either of you do any thing by Virtue of these Presents contrary or Repugnant to the Act for Encouraging the Trade to Newfoundland, passed in the Tenth and Eleventh Years of the Reign of King William the Third, nor in any manner abstract the Power thereby Granted and Given to the Admirals of the Harbours or Captains of the ships of War, or any other matter or thing either prescribed by the said Act or by such Instructions as you shall receive from me : But that you or either of you and your Inferior Officers and Ministers, whom you shall appoint amongst the Planters or Inhabitants residing and abiding in the District aforesaid, be strictly required and enjoined in all Cases and Times wheresoever necessary, to be aiding and assisting to the utmost of their Power to the Commodore or Commander of His Majesty's Ships of War, and to the several Admirals in the respective Harbours, in putting in Execution the several good Rules and Orders prescribed by the said Act for Encouraging the Trade to Newfoundland. And I do strictly require all and singular the Planters and Inhabitants, of the District aforesaid, to be observant, aiding and assisting unto you and every one of you, and the Officers so by you appointed, in preserving the Peace and Executing the Power and Authority herein contained, as they will answer the contrary. Finally I have appointed you Edward White Esquire Keeper of the Rolls of the Peace, in the said District, and therefore you shall cause to be brought before yourself and your said Fellows, at the said Days and Places, the Writs, Precepts, Processes and Indictments aforesaid that the same may be Inspected and by a due course determined as aforesaid. In Witness whereof I have hereunto affixed my Hand & Seal, at Saint John's this 26th day of June 1772.

M. SHULDHAM.

By His Excellency's Command,
EDWD. BRAGG.

No. 801.

[1793.]

FURTHER EXTRACTS FROM EVIDENCE BEFORE COMMITTEE APPOINTED TO ENQUIRE INTO THE STATE OF TRADE TO NEWFOUNDLAND (1793).

Mr. Thomas Street being then examined, said, He is a Merchant, resident at Poole, trading to Newfoundland, and has been so many Years.—And being asked, Whether he thinks the Establishment of a Custom House at Newfoundland an Injury to the Trade and Fishery of that Island ? he said, So far from its being an Injury, he thinks it has been of great Advantage to the fair and lawful Trader.

* * * *

Richard Routh, Esquire, Collector of the Island of Newfoundland, being called in, said, During the Time of his late confinement by Illness, he had made some Observations on the state of the Trade and Fishery of Newfoundland, which he begged to deliver in to your Committee, and the same are as follow :

* * * *

The Evidence, Mr. Ougier, has thought proper to inform the Honourable Committee, that the Trade was in a flourishing State till the passing the Act of the 15th of the King. I will venture to say, that whatever Utility and Importance the Act of the 10th and 11th of King William the Third may have been in the Infancy of the Fishery, when there were only in each Harbour in Newfoundland a very few Adventurers or Families, perhaps Two or Three at the End of the Fishery residing there, it cannot be deemed sufficient, or in any Way competent to the Regulation of the Trade and Fishery at this Time, or for the internal Regulation of an Island, when there are now hundreds of Inhabitants in every Situation, and some thousands in many ; I submit therefore, if an illiterate Man, without Knowledge or Information, for such the Fishing Admirals must and ever have been, is competent to hold Courts and decide between meum and tuum. Many of that Class can scarce read or write, and some I have seen that could only make their Marks. Another Remark I have to make ; that admit they were equal to all these Points, they are at Sea, on the Banks of Newfoundland, Seven-eighths of their Time, and cannot attend to the Duties of such their Situation ; add to it, they depend too much upon their Employer to be able to decide so disinterestedly as would be necessary ; and for these Reasons, I conceive, the Act has been rendered useless and obsolete for many Years.

Privy Council Documents

Volume IV Contents

No. 802.

[19 March, 1813.]

19th March, 1813— INSTRUCTIONS TO GOVERNOR KEATS.

—
Vide Vol. II, p. 677.

[7 April, 1813.]

No. 803.

EXTRACTS FROM DESPACHES FROM EARL BATHURST, SECRETARY OF STATE, TO GOVERNOR KEATS, ETC. (Re GRANTING OF LANDS).

Downing Street,
7th April, 1813.

.....
.....
.....

ON THE SUBJECT OF Provisions for the Inhabitants, I am to acquaint you that such measures will, from time to time be taken by His Majesty's Government to prevent a scarcity, as may be deemed advisable under the existing circumstances of the War with the United States. I cannot however avoid drawing your attention to the propriety which has arisen out of that War of authorising the Cultivation of those Lands of the Colony which may be applicable to that purpose. You will therefore consider yourself authorised to grant Leases of small Portions of Land to industrious individuals for the purpose of cultivation upon the same terms as such Grants of Land have hitherto been made, taking care however to reserve an annual Quit Rent either nominal or real, according to the circumstances of each Individual Case.

I have the honor to be,
Sir,

Your most obedient humble servant,
(Signed) BATHURST.

To Sir R. G. Keats, K.B., etc., etc.
October 1812 to October 1813.
Pages 171 and 172.

No. 804.PROCLAMATION OF GOVERNOR KEATS AS TO GRANT OF LANDS.[17 June, 1813.]

By His Excellency Sir Richard
Goodwin Keats, Knight of the Bath, Vice-Admiral of the Blue,
Governor and Commander-in-Chief in and over the Island of Newfoundland, &c., &c.

A PROCLAMATION.

WHEREAS I am authorised to grant Lands in small portions to Industrious Individuals for the purpose of Cultivation. And it being expedient to carry this measure into effect with as little delay as circumstances will permit, and to portion the Disposable Lands in the vicinity of the Town of St. John's in the first place, and being desirous of obviating impediment to the immediate appropriation of such Lands in this Neighbourhood ; I do therefore call upon all persons claiming or possessing Lands (or their Agents) which are situated without the Town of Saint John's, and

To the Northward of the Road from Quidi Vidi to Fort Townshend passing over the King's Bridge.

To the Northward and Westward of the Road which leaves Best's Farm on the left, from Fort Townshend to Monday's Pond.

To the Northward, Westward, or Southward within four miles of the Riverhead; also

On the South Side of the Harbour and Riverhead more than Two Hundred yards from the water side to make returns of such property or possession to the Office of the Secretary to the Governor, Philip Cateret Le Geyt, Esquire, on or before the first day of August next ensuing, specifying particulars agreeable to a form which may be had at the Secretary's Office. And it is desirable where it can be effected, that a plan or sketch, descriptive of the property, should accompany the return.

Given under my Hand at Fort Townshed,
Sain John's, this 17th day of June, 1813.
(Signed) R. G. KEATS.

By Command of His Excellency,
P. C. Le Geyt.
October 1812 to October 1813.
Pages 282 and 283.

No. 805.

DAVID TASKER TO THOMAS COOTE.

[30 July,
1813.]

COLONIAL RECORDS, 1813.

St. John's,
30th July, 1813.

SIR,

The Grand Jury has taken into consideration His Excellency the Governors letter of the 28th instant addressed to you relating to giving grants of land in small portions to industrious individuals for the purpose of cultivation, and requiring their suggestions as to regulations to be adopted with respect to making and preserving of Roads and Bridges Rules respecting Fencing and to what degree it might be advisable and advantageous to impose conditions calculated to enforce an easy but gradual cultivation of the Lands so granted.

The Grand Jury are of opinion that the main or principal roads should at least be left eighty feet wide this will enable individuals to lay wood on the sides if found necessary, without inconvenience to the public, and that the cross roads should be left thirty feet wide.

As to means of raising funds for making and preserving Roads and Bridges, the Grand Jury wish further time for consideration particularly as a plan of these Lands to be granted is promised by you to be submitted for their inspection in a few days.

The Grand Jury are of opinion that picketed Fences at least five feet high should be put up to divide private properties and that the proprietors should constitute equally to pay the expense of such Fences, and keep the same in good repair and along the roads they may be allowed to have either Pickets or longer fences as may be most convenient.

The Grand Jury are also of opinion the proprietors of these Lands should be obliged to cultivate at least half an acre each Year, until the whole is cultivated, supposing these grants about four acres each and in the like proportion for larger grants.

I am, etc.,
(Sgd.) DAVID TASKER, Foreman.

THOMAS COOTE, Esq.,

Chief Magistrate,
&c. &c.

No. 806.

DISPATCH FROM EARL BATHURST TO GOVERNOR KEATS.

[1 April, 1814.]

Downing Street,
1st April, 1814.

SIR,

I have received and laid before the Prince Regent your Dispatches to No. 18 inclusive and as the period is now approaching at which your presence will be required in Newfoundland, I have to signify to you the Commands of His Royal Highness on the various points which you have submitted for consideration.

The Grants of Land which have been made by you under the authority conveyed to you in my despatch of the last year have received the necessary confirmation. I approve entirely of the conditions which you have affixed to them, and of the moderate fine which you state to be the condition of their renewals. I have only further to impress upon you the necessity of regularly collecting once a year, previous to your departure from the Colony, the Quit Rents which you have thought it necessary to impose lest in a Society constituted like that of Newfoundland, any delay in claiming this payment should be construed into an Intention to abandon it.

It is not the wish of His Majesty's Government to adopt any harsh Measures with respect to those who have occupied lands by encroachment but it is at the same time impossible to admit the right of such occupiers to retain what has in the first instance been unjustly possessed, without some acknowledgment of His Majesty's rights. I am therefore to instruct you to resume all tracts of land of this description, and to grant them again to their present occupiers upon their expressing their willingness to accept them under the same terms under which you have been authorised to make grant to others.

.....
.....

I have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your most obedient humble servant,
(Signed) BATHURST.

To Sir R. G. Keats, K.B., etc., etc.
October 1813 to October 1814.
pages 205, 206, 207, 208-12.

No. 807.

HIGH SHERIFF BLAND TO GOVERNOR KEATS.[12 Nov., 1815.]

RECORD BOOK, ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND. Volume 27, page 78.

Saint John's, 12 November, 1815.

SIR,

In the usual course of this Government we can hardly hope for Your Excellency's return to Newfoundland, but I believe you feel no less a wish to contribute to the interests of this very important branch of our Commerce.

I am very far from adopting the notions of many of our Speculatists as regards an expected change in the system of this Government, Idle and inexperienced Adventurers, indulging in speculations excited by their peculiar situations, dream of local Legislation and Houses of Assembly.

Nothing can be clearer than that the great desideratum for Newfoundland, is to catch fish upon such terms as will enable the Merchant to meet his competitors upon fair ground in the foreign market. Houses of Assembly, mere burlesques upon the dignity of Legislation, can nothing contribute to this desirable end. They may promote the views of needy and contentious spirits, and thereby defeat the very object they are meant to serve. In my humble opinion the Parliament of Great Britain is the best and fitted legislature for the prosperity of Newfoundland. There, the few Laws necessary for this Island can be enacted, amended, or repealed, at the suggestion of men of observation and experience in its Trade. Nor can this be matter of great urgency since such of the existing Laws as do not suit the progressive change of the Country's circumstances have gradually fallen into neglect, the common Fate of all Laws not adapted to the wants of the People.

The return of the French to Newfoundland concerns us nearer than any changes in the existing Laws. They possess advantages over us in this fishery. Their People are paid and fed at a much cheaper rate than ours. The North Coast of the Island ceded to them, generally abounds more in fish than the other parts, and the contiguity and safety of its numerous harbours, afford facilities to the Fish Catchers, which we too generally want. It is, besides, undeniable that their local situation furnishes opportunities for illicit traffic. Their fishing posts are directly in the passage between the more Southern Parts of the Island, occupied by us and the Coast of Labrador ; and there can be little doubt that such facility of communication will hardly be neglected by those, who can make their advantage of it with little or no risk. It was therefore, greatly to be desired that at the return of Peace,

p. 1976

the French would have been confined to St. Pierre and Miquelon, and we left in the exclusive possession of that part of the Coast, from which during a long War, we had reaped such an abundant harvest. The only advantage on our side, under the returning state of things, is that the French have only a Summer's residence, and by their annual removal, must want the conveniences which a perpetual residence affords us.

The Ship Fishery, as it is called, is confined to the South, and is peculiarly adapted to the Genius and habits of the fishermen from the West of England, but the shore fishery, by far the most extensive is generally prosecuted by the People called Residents, and unless this description of Fish catchers can kill Fish upon terms that will enable them to afford it at a reasonable rate to the exporter, this branch of our Fishery must decrease, and our navigation of course decline. The Ships Fishery in former times has been fostered by Bounties, a measure that we can hardly expect will be resorted to in aid of our general fishery.

It appears, therefore, to be necessary to our prosperity in Newfoundland, that every facility be afforded us, to obtain upon the best terms the primary Articles of want, Salt, Provisions, Fishing gear, pitch, tar and cordage, are essentials and their Importation into this Island ought to be free from Burden and restraint, except in as far as a very important national object may be endangered.

The Government appears ever to have viewed with a jealous eye, agricultural schemes in Newfoundland. There is in truth no just ground of apprehension on this Score. The soil and climate are unfriendly to cultivation, and even admitting the reverse to be the case, I can discover no danger to the Fishery unless the Sea should refuse us that abundant supply of Fish which it has hitherto afforded. A happier climate and a more fertile soil would, indeed add to the population, but hardly contribute to reduce the Fishery. In parts of Newfoundland best adapted to agricultural pursuits, I have seen the attention of the residents diverted from the original object. Cultivation has invariably been made subservient to the Fishery, and without a certain degree of cultivation, the fish catcher would not be able to afford the produce of his labour at a price suitable to the Exporter. The Fish catcher raises his Vegetables and his fresh stock free of expence, dedicating the Days not convenient for the catching and curing of fish to the cultivation of his fields and gardens. Nor is it reasonable to apprehend that a profitable avocation will be resigned, or neglected for one of far less moment, unless we can suppose that the principal object of all men be not their private Interest.

Surely it will never be contended that Newfoundland can retrograde and return to its first Establishment, and its Inhabitants can be removed and its fishery brought back to the point from whence it has long departed. Could such a thing be practicable, then Government is excusable. But it is impossible for an enlightened mind to entertain so chimerical a scheme. The fact Sir, is that Newfoundland is arrived at a condition that requires another Policy, and a just government will give it all the consideration which its Importance demands.

p. 1977

If Newfoundland be not a Colony by Law, it is so in fact. It has progressively obtained all that a Colony can require. We have our Courts of Justice, our religious and charitable Institutions, a Navy to protect our trade and navigation, and a respectable Military Establishment. An immense Property is constantly retained in this Island which requires the security afforded by Laws, and shall it, after all, be asserted that we are but Itinerant, without any permanent residence ?

The Inhabitants of Saint John's, copying the benevolent example of the Mother Country have instituted various Charities, among which common justice must allow a preference to the Hospital, the first stone of which was laid by Your Excellency. The relief dispensed by this Asylum in a time of unprecedented distress, to the unfortunate afflicted is an evidence of the superior utility of this Institution. Other Charities in this Country indeed, afford relief to indigence, but the Hospital recently established has actually snatched a considerable number from premature death. The fund created by the Fees of our Law Courts, has, under Your Excellency's sanction, highly contributed to succour the afflicted, received into this Asylum, yet till the present terms of admission can be reduced this excellent Institution will in a great measure fail of its intended object, the efforts of its benevolent promoters require further aid.

I remember that about twelve years ago I suggested to the Governor the propriety of a Tax upon all Spirits imported into this Island, but I confess with a view only of making some provision for the growing wants of this Island. The objections at that time made to that Tax amounted to no more than A temporary inconvenience to the importer, for it is evident that the money comes out of the pocket of the lower order of the people who feel indifferent whether they pay two shillings or one for a Quart of Rum. I have reason to believe that there would now be no objection to an extension of this Tax, provided the produce was applied to the relief of our local wants.

The duty upon Spirits for the current year as I am informed will amount to about Sixteen Thousand Pounds. A further duty of three pence in the gallon upon all Spirits imported into Newfoundland, would produce from Four to Six Thousand Pounds, making a liberal allowance for a change of circumstances and a consequent reduction of the quantity consumed.

This sum placed at the disposal of the Governor, with the advice of the Committee, would establish the Hospital on a foundation of extension & Permanent utility, improve the streets of the town and the Public Roads. The measure of making a larger provision for the wants of the Hospital becomes every day more urgent, as cases multiply that call for the aid of this excellent charity. The scheme to raise an efficient sum of Money by deducting one penny in the Pound from the Wages of those whom it is meant to benefit is not obligatory, and experience shows will never answer the end proposed. The Tax proposed will principally be paid by this identical description of people, and the collection made without expense.

As it is very probable I may never find another occasion of communicating with your Excellency, I will not pass over a subject that considerably agitated

p. 1978

the public mind. It is the continuance of that system of restraint on Building so long pursued in the town and neighbourhood of St. John's. As Government never Acts without a reason, the only one that can be assigned for such restraint is the prevention of population, and of a permanent settlement, its necessary consequence. But it is answered that the Government having itself broken down this system by leasing ground for building dwelling Houses upon, to a considerable extent, without any conditions as to their uses, it becomes impossible to defend this restraining system on the broad principle of equity and consistency, as it respects the liberty of Individuals. It is unnecessary to urge this argument at length. I shall observe, that the Governor must, under such circumstances feel a repugnance to enforce a measure confessedly in itself useless, and in its operation obnoxious. Besides, in asserting this system, who is it to be known for what purpose a house is erecting ? A man exposed to suffer loss and inconvenience from the Caprice, or from the Construction which an Executive Officer may put upon his intentions, will often resort to untruth, nor can he be detected until the application of his Building is manifest. The spirit of the Laws requires that nothing shall be presumed, but that all shall be proved.

The Government, always intentionally just, and now happily released from the more important considerations which have so long engrossed its attention, can require no more than a fair view of this subject, as I conceive, to abolish a system that has not one Advocate in this Country, and from which it can never be shewn that any national utility can result.

Since Your Excellency's departure, our number of Writs had been increased to 320, among which are Eighty Cases that admits of appeal. Only one appeal however has been made, and that more from Caprice than from any rational hope of a reversal. I mention this circumstance merely to show that the opinion I gave upon this subject, when Your Excellency required it of me, previous to the departure of the Chief Justice, was not unfounded.

Whether Your Excellency returns to this Government or retires from the Labours of Public Life, I sincerely wish you Health and Happiness.

I have the honour to be with respect and esteem, Sir,
Your Excellency's most obedient, humble servant,
(Signed) JOHN BLAND, High Sheriff.

His Excellency, Sir Richard Goodwin Keats, &c., &c., &c.
A Copy. P. C. LeGeyt.

No. 808.[3 Feb.
1821.]GOVERNOR HAMILTON TO EARL BATHURST:
WITH PETITION OF SOME INHABITANTS OF ST.
JOHN'S.

RECORD BOOK, ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND. Volume 31, page 363.
No. 68.

Fort Townshend, St. John's,
Newfoundland, 3rd Feby, 1821.

MY LORD,

have been requested by a large but not a general Meeting of the Inhabitants of St. John's to transmit the accompanying Petition which as it is their wish it should be presented to His Majesty through the proper channel, I have considered it my duty to forward to your Lordship, though I can neither approve the statements, or coincide in the conclusions ; I have therefore enclosed a copy of the Petition with such notes as may perhaps facilitate your Lordships reference to those documents on which you will form an opinion and with such observations of my own as appear to be sanctioned by them, and the experience which my residence here has enabled me to obtain.

I have the honor to be with great respect, My Lord,
Your Lordship's Most obedient humble servant,
C. HAMILTON.

The Right Honble. The Earl Bathurst K.G., &c., &c., &c.

To the King's most excellent Majesty,

The humble Petition of the Inhabitants of St. John's in the Island of Newfoundland,

SHEWETH :

That we your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects humbly beg leave to lay our many and great grievances at the foot of your august throne in the full conviction of that paternal solicitude with which your Majesty watches over the interest and happenings of all your people, even in the remotest parts of your extensive empire, and we humbly conceive ourselves

p. 1980

entitled to your Majesty's peculiar protection from the circumstance of our having no Colonial Legislative Government. In thus appealing to your Majesty with a claim to especial consideration we are naturally reminded that we labour under the want of that representative organ of expression which is the boast of the British constitution, and which has been conceded to the least considerable of the other English Colonies, but, for reasons that have never been explained to us, has been withheld from us, alone ; We are satisfied that your Majesty will not interpret any expression of regret for the singularity of our situation, into a want of confidence in your Majesty's anxiety for our welfare, or in the wisdom of Parliament. Placed as we are at the distance of two thousand miles from your august throne, and without any constituted body whatever, to sympathize in our wants, and represent our wishes, it is hardly possible that our Petitions or complaints should reach your Royal Ear with that Zeal and fidelity in the report which are at all times necessary to gain attention and indispensable to obtain adequate relief ; as a proof of what we advance we would only beg to recall to your Majesty's recollection, events which from their magnitude and misfortune could not have entirely escaped it—we allude to the great and destructive fires which in the short interval of a fortnight visited the Capital of the Island and laid one half of its buildings in ashes. The town of St. John's is the principal depository for the supplies, and productions of the fisheries of Newfoundland, and it was necessary to rebuild it immediately. But as prudence suggested the propriety of widening the streets in order to prevent the spreading of any further fire, and as a large portion of the ground required was the private property of individuals, it became necessary to obtain the sanction of the Legislature. At the recommendation of the Inhabitants a Bill was prepared in Newfoundland, and sent to England for the purpose of being submitted to your Majesty's Government and passed into a law, but such was the delay attending the measure in England, that although no alteration of any movement was made in the Bill, it did not reach this Island in the form of a Law until near three years after the town of St. John's had been destroyed. In the meantime a third fire had visited and consumed the remainder of the old town, and the whole was rebuilt in the best manner that circumstances would admit, but not exactly conformable to the projected Bill as there was no legal means of compelling its observance. When therefore the long expected bill did arrive, it came with all the inconvenience of an ex-post-facto law, and placed a considerable number of the most costly and valuable buildings in the town in the predicament of standing contrary to the Act of Parliament. We have stated this fact without any feeling of discontent, but merely to prove to your Majesty the neglected condition to which we are exposed from having no superintending Legislature in the Island.

But may it please your Majesty it is not the want of a local Legislature of which we have principally to complain, it is the state of such Laws as have been made for us, and still more of the administration of those Laws. It is the happiness of all who bear the honourable title of British Subjects to unite in one common feeling of loyalty and affection for the pure and impartial manner in which Justice is administered to them, it is in this particular that we stand alone and distinguish from every other portion of your Majesty's people. In the neighbouring Colonies in North America, and in all the British West Indies, the Judgment Seat is filled by gentlemen of professional education and previous distinction at the bar. In the British possessions in the east, the persons who preside in the Courts are selected from the upright and cultivated ranks of Westminster Hall, and are only second to the Judges in England. But in Newfoundland composed as it is of natives of Great Britain and Ireland or their immediate descendants, and more clearly connected with the parent state by proximity of situation & frequency of inter-course than any other Colony, the administration of Justice is confided to Captains, Lieutenants and even Masters of the Navy. The Act of Parliament for establishing Courts of Judicature in Newfoundland authorizes the Governor for the time being to institute Surrogate Courts in different parts of the Island with full power to hear all suits and complaints of a civil nature arising within the Island and to determine them according to the law of England. In exercise of this important power, the Commanders of such of Your Majesty's Ships as happen to be stationed in Newfoundland are invested with Surrogate Commissions immediately on their arrival, and sent on Maritime Circuits to expound the laws of England in the character of Judges. We humbly represent to Your Majesty that it is hardly possible for an Officer in Your Majesty's Navy, if he has been attentive to his own profession, to acquire so competent a knowledge of the abstruse and difficult science of the law, as to enable him to dispense Justice among his fellow men, and that he can barely take the Judge's oath of office with a correct sense of its seriousness and importance. We beg to be understood to speak with every sentiment of respect for the Navy as a profession, we feel a pride in the gallantry of its heroes, and gratitude for the security they afford us. But we cannot but know that the gentlemen of the Navy are educated from their youth in a system of their own, apart from all the Civil Institutions of the Country, and necessarily less conversant with those institutions than any other class of your Majesty's Subjects. Yet to such men in the dispensation of Justice entrusted in Newfoundland and Justice according to the law of England !

p. 1981

We are unwilling to trespass unnecessarily on Your Majesty's time, but that we may not be supposed to advance, what we are not prepared to prove, we will beg Your Majesty's patience while we state a few examples which we have selected merely as being more easy of access to Your Majesty.

In the year 1816 Messrs. Crawford & Co. a Mercantile firm in this Island were declared insolvent in the Surrogate Court of St. John's, and their estate vested in trustees, and sold for the purpose of distribution between their Creditors amongst whom were claimants from Scotland to the amount of £111,000. The Surrogates rejected the Scotch Claims and the case went to the King in Council upon a nice point of conflicting Bankrupt law. At the hearing however it was found that the Surrogates had forgotten the first essential step of citing and examining the Insolvents before they proceeded to a Declaration of their Insolvency, and consequently all their proceedings were null and void from the beginning. In the meantime the Insolvents had left the Country, and the proceeds of their Estate had been sent to Scotland, where they were attached by the Court of Sessions, and the Newfoundland Claimants having no longer any control over the persons or the property of the Insolvents, were compelled by a palpable mistake of their Judges, either to compromise their rights, or to re-engage in endless litigation.

p. 1982

In the course of the last Summer certain differences had arisen at Sandwich Bay on the Coast of Labrador respecting the rights of the parties to a Salmon Fishery, and a Surrogate Court was held there for the purpose of deciding them, but instead of hearing the proofs of the case & determining according to Law, the Surrogate decided without a trial or any enquiry into its merits, and thus was the unfortunate party ruined without redress, because the Surrogate acting as a Judge is not responsible by law for his errors.

Your Majesty is informed that a duty of sixpence per month is laid by Act of Parliament upon the wages of Seamen and other persons employed in Ships and vessels for the support of Greenwich Hospital, and that all persons employed in open boats on the Sea Coast are exempted from the payment of the duty, probably as being generally poor themselves, and not falling within the benefit of the charity or the policy of the tax. By a strange construction of the Act all open Boats however small their dimensions have been subjected to the duty in this Island, although it is well known that it is not levied upon open boats in any other place in Your Majesty's Dominions. But the reason of this extraordinary construction may perhaps be explained by the fact that the Surrogates who so construed the law were the Collectors of the duty, and as a compensation for their trouble received a premium of Twelve & half per cent. upon all the monies which they collected.

But it is not of the ignorant or wilful misconstruction of the law as it may affect our properties of which we complain to Your Majesty so much as it is of the flagrant and unlawful violation of our persons.

* * * *

An opinion is gone abroad and it is not without its abettors in this Island, that Newfoundland is regarded by the parent country, merely as a Nursery of Seamen, and with this view that it is the policy of Government to discourage all settlement in the Island. Supposing this to be the case it may be sufficient to explain how it has happened that this Island, the oldest of the British Settlements in America, placed in the same latitude as England, & possessed of a great staple which is peculiarly its own should remain in the same state as when it was originally discovered, without cultivation, and without roads, the first requisite of civilized society. But we humbly conceive that such is not the policy of Great Britain. Before the statute of King William the 3rd, a number of persons were settled in Newfoundland, and it was one of the professed objects of that Statute to regulate the respective rights of the transient and sedentary fisheries. In the treaties between Your Majesty and foreign powers, the right of settling those parts of the Island where strangers are permitted to fish is expressly reserved to Your Majesty's Subjects, and the right of settlement is the only check upon foreign competition in the fisheries. It is well known that Newfoundland contains about 100,000 Inhabitants, that its exports have in prosperous years exceeded Two Million Sterling per annum, and its Imports chiefly consisting of British manufacture and productions have been more than half that amount, its trade is entirely carried on in British Shipping and employs more Seamen in Navigation than were even employed in fishing during the best years of the transient fishery, upwards of 460 vessels having entered the port of St. John's alone during the present year. We must therefore look to other causes for our neglected condition that the intentional policy of the parent state, and we are induced to believe that it has been owing solely to the exigencies of the late War, and the more pressing demands of the Empire upon the attention of Your Majesty's Government.

p. 1983

But we humbly conceive that the time is at length arrived when the state of this Island will be taken into consideration, and some system adopted which may be more in unison with the altered condition of these extensive, populous & valuable possessions of Your Majesty's Crown.

Your Petitioners therefore most humbly pray that Your Majesty will take their case into your most gracious consideration, and endow Newfoundland with all the rights and privileges of your Majesty's other transatlantic possessions, and especially to cause the Courts of Justice to be reformed, so that the laws may be administered to them by competent Judges.

And your Majesty's Petitioners as in duty bound will ever pray, &c., &c.

C. HAMILTON.

Copy.

No. 809.

N

20th August, 1825—COMMISSION APPOINTING SIR THOMAS COCHRANE GOVERNOR OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

[30 Aug.,
1825.]

Vide Vol. II, p. 718.

[2 March,
1832.]

No. 810.

N

2nd March, 1823—COMMISSION APPOINTING SIR
THOMAS COCHRANE GOVERNOR OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

[26 July,
1832.]

Vide Vol. II, p. 723.

No. 811.

N

26th July, 1832—INSTRUCTIONS TO SIR THOMAS COCHRANE AS GOVERNOR OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

Vide Vol. II, p. 731.

[21 Feb.,
1854]

No. 812.
DESPATCH FROM THE DUKE OF NEWCASTLE TO GOVERNOR HAMILTON.

Copies of Extracts of Correspondence between the Secretary of State and the Governor of Newfoundland, on the recent Changes in the Constitution of that Colony.

Ordered by the House of Commons to be printed 25 May, 1855.

Downing-street, 21 February 1854.

Sir,

I have to acknowledge your despatch No. 41, of the 28th June last, transmitting an Address from the House of Assembly, announcing the appointment by that body of three of its Members to represent to Her Majesty's Government the state of the colony of Newfoundland, and operation of its present system of government, and on the establishment of reciprocal free trade with the United States of America.

2. Both during and since the visit of the gentlemen in question to England, I have given to the first of these subjects my fullest consideration, and have not failed to give due weight to the circumstance that the same expressions of opinions and wishes have proceeded from successive bodies of representatives elected by the people, with full knowledge that this important question was at issue.

3. Her Majesty's Government have come to the conclusion that they ought not to withhold from Newfoundland those institutions, and that system of civil administration which, under the popular name of responsible government, have now been adopted in all Her Majesty's neighbouring possessions in North America.

4. They are prepared to concede the immediate application of this system, as soon as certain necessary preliminary conditions have been acceded to on the part of the Legislature.

5. The first of these is the same which has been agreed to, and put in practice when the recent change of the same description took place in Nova Scotia and in Prince Edward Island, namely, the indemnification of present holders of those offices which, by the change in question, will be rendered liable to be vacated at the will of the majority of the Legislature. The provision in question should be made either in the form of pension, or of a round sum by way of indemnity ; but as to the number of officers who must be regarded as thus liable to removal, and entitled to protection, and the amount and character of the compensation so to be given, I must rely on your judgment, with the advice of your Council, and of those whom you may think fit to consult with on this occasion ; and you are authorised to submit any question which cannot be thus arranged, to myself for final decision.

p. 1986

6. The following are the remaining conditions which I consider indispensable, and which have been suggested to me by the consideration of circumstances peculiar to Newfoundland.

7. (1.)—A considerable increase of the members of the House of Assembly, I would suggest that the increase should be from the present number to 30, and that it should be effected, not by giving additional members to existing constituencies, but by subdividing, as equally as geographical positions would admit, the districts now returning members ; which appear to be, in most instances, too large for the convenient exercise of the franchise.

8. (2.)—In reference to my despatch on the financial condition of the colony, lately directed to be laid before the Assembly, it appears to me necessary that the law should be assimilated to that of Nova Scotia (Revised Statutes, c. 7, s. 44) with regard to the expenses of elections, which should no longer be paid from the Colonial Treasury, but be defrayed (under proper conditions as to amount) by the members.

9. (3.)—Payment of the members for their expenses and attendance to be no longer made by the Colonial Treasury, but by local assessment, levied in each electoral district.

10. These measures having been taken by the Legislature, Her Majesty's Government will proceed to separate the Executive from the Legislative Council, and to provide, by instructions from Her Majesty, that the latter shall consist of not less than 10 nor more than 15 members, nominated by the Crown.

11. With regard to the stipulations respecting the grant of a Civil List to Her Majesty, which have usually accompanied the grant of responsible government, it appears to me sufficient to refer you to the arrangements already made under the Act of Parliament 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 78, and the Acts of the Newfoundland Legislature, 7 Vict., c. 1, & 8 Vict., c. 6, leaving it to yourself to consider whether any modification of these provisions is now required.

12. These are conditions some of which, I am persuaded, are essential to justice, and others highly important to the satisfactory working of the new system ; and I trust that, with these additions, the adoption of the system in question will not merely satisfy the long-expressed desire of the majority of the people of Newfoundland for freer institutions, but will also prove favourable to practical improvements in the government of the colony.

13. As regards the portion of the Address which relates to free trade with the United States, you will inform the Assembly that Her Majesty's Government are still in negotiation with that of the United States, and that in the conduct of that negotiation every attention will be paid to their expressed wishes, and those of their constituents.

I have, &c.

(signed) NEWCASTLE.

PART X.

[1868]

MISCELLANEOUS EXTRACTS, DOCUMENTS, DECISIONS AND REPORTS EXHIBITING CONTEMPORANEOUS INTERPRETATIONS OF IMPERIAL ACT 10-11 WM. III., CHAP. 25, IN RELATION TO THE FISHERY AT NEWFOUNDLAND AND ON THE COAST OF LABRADOR.

“Fish” in Newfoundland and on the coast of labrador means “Codfish.”

No. 813.

EXTRACT FROM REPORT OF CAPTAIN JOHN PARISH

“ON THE 1ST CRUISE OF H.M.S. SPHINX, BETWEEN 5 JUNE AND 22 AUGUST, 1868.”¹

“What is fish ? the common acceptation of the word fish in Newfoundland parlance meaning cod.”

¹ Journal of the House of Assembly, Newfoundland 1869, App. p. 510.

No. 814.

[1871.]

EXTRACT FROM “REPORT ON THE NEWFOUNDLAND AND LABRADOR FISHERIES,”

BY RUSSELL S. PASLEY, COMMANDER AND SENIOR NAVAL OFFICER ON THE FISHERIES, 1871.¹

[1871.]

“ The usual questions as to how far the French had a right to fish on the coast, and whether they were permitted to take salmon and herring, were frequently met with, it being difficult to persuade the Newfoundlanders that the term ‘fish’ in French means all fish, they considering ‘cod’ only as fish.”

¹ Ibid., 1871, p. 676.

No. 815.

EXTRACT FROM “COMMENTS ON FISHERY TREATIES AND THEIR INTERPRETATIONS”

BY CAPT. & SENIOR OFFICER, D. MILLER, H.M.S. “SIRIUS,” 1876.²

“ The Newfoundland fishermen to this day by Fish understand only Codfish, all other kinds of fish are designated by their particular names.”

² Ibid., 1874, p. 814.

No. 816.

[8 May, 1871.]

EXTRACT FROM CLOSING ARGUMENT OF RICHARD H. DANA, JR.,

ON BEHALF OF THE UNITED STATES, BEFORE THE HALIFAX FISHERY COMMISSION, APPOINTED UNDER THE TREATY OF WASHINGTON, 8
MAY, 1871.¹

“ Your Honours will also observe that, until 1830, the mackerel fisheries were unknown. There was no fishery but the cod-fishery. The cod-fisheries were all the parties had in mind in making the Treaty of 1818, and to this day, as you have observed from some of the witnesses, 'fishing,' by the common speech of Gloucester fishing, means, ex vi termini, cod-fishing. Fishing is one thing, and 'mackereling' is another. In Mr. Adams' pamphlet, on the 23rd page, he speaks of 'fishery,' as synonymous with cod-fishery.”

¹ Copied from Record of Proceedings of the Halifax Fishery Commission, 1877, p. 263.

[1877.]

No. 817.

C

EXTRACT FROM “NOTES ON THE NORTHERN LABRADOR FISHING GROUNDS,”

BY PROFESSOR H. Y. HIND.²

“ During my visit to the Labrador last summer I was rather surprised to find that the Newfoundland fishermen appeared to place entire reliance upon four kinds of bait for cod, namely, the caplin, the squid, the herring and the launce. I gathered from conversation with many of them, that the opinion prevailed that the cod were nourished almost exclusively upon this food, and that where there were no caplin, &c., there would be no 'fish,' as the cod is popularly termed.”

² Ibid., 1877, p. 754J.

No. 818.

[1897.]

EXTRACT FROM STANFORD'S "COMPENDIUM OF GEOGRAPHY, NORTH AMERICA," VOL. I.

BY S. E. DAWSON, LITT.D., F.R.S.C. (LONDON, 1897), p. 680.

NEWFOUNDLAND.

* * * *

[1895.]

The prosperity of the colony has always been so bound up with the cod fishery that in the language of Newfoundland the word "fish" means only cod. There are indeed "salmon" and "herring" and "haddock," but the cod are always called "fish." Upon the early maps, which are Portuguese, Spanish, or Italian, the country is called "baccalaos," the general name for codfish in the languages of Southern Europe.

No. 819.EXTRACT FROM "VIKINGS OF TO-DAY,"

BY DR. WILFRED T. GRENFELL (LONDON, 1895), p. 76.

"Cod alone is fish in Labrador diction. Cod is the coin of the realm. Money is scarcely known, and no other medium of exchange is used by the people whose raison d'etre almost is cod. All live on goods advanced on credit, to be paid for by their catch of cod. This truck system is the next of kin to the old feudal system, and has long been extinct in most civilized countries."

No. 820.

[1908.]

EXTRACT FROM “ALONG THE LABRADOR COAST,”BY CHARLES WENDELL TOWNSEND, M.D. (LONDON, 1908), pp.
119–120.

“ The ancient conundrum anent a door might be paraphrased on the Labrador coast as follows: When is a fish not a fish ? When it is a salmon or a halibut or a caplin, or in fact any finny monster except a cod. Here the cod is king. He alone is fish! I was introduced to this somewhat anomalous use of the English language by overhearing the following conversation : ‘ And what did you get in your net the day, Sandy b’y ? ’ ‘ Only two fish, sorrh, and four salmon.’ ”

No. 821.

[1911.]

EXTRACT FROM " A HISTORICAL GEOGRAPHY OF THE BRITISH COLONIES," VOL. V.—PART IV. " NEWFOUNDLAND,"

BY J. D. RODGERS (OXFORD, MDCCCCXI.), pp. 192–193.

FISH.

Newfoundlanders are men of one idea, and that idea is fish.

Their lives are devoted to the sea and its produce, and their language mirrors their lives ; thus the chief streets in their chief towns are named Water Street, guides are called pilots, and visits cruises. Conversely, land-words have sea meanings, and “ a planter,” which meant in the eighteenth century a fishing settler as opposed to a fishing visitor, meant in the nineteenth century—when fishing visitors ceased to come from England—a shipowner or skipper. The very animals catch the infection, and dogs, cows, and bears eat fish. Fish manures the fields. Fish, too, is the mainspring of the history of Newfoundland, and split and dried fish, or what was called in the fifteenth century stock-fish, has always been its staple. And in Newfoundland fish means cod.

Newfoundland is as rich in coves, where cod-ships or boats may shelter, as it is poor in beaches where cod can be split and dried, and their place is supplied by “ stages,” or small wooden piers on wooden piles and with wooden roofs. The cod-fish are brought by boats to the piers, and are split and temporarily cured under the roofs upon the piers ; as may be seen on the fiords of Norway. The final process of drying cod in the sun takes place in wooden erections called flakes, which resemble the pergole of southern Europe, but on whose roof instead of roses the hardly less odorous dead and split cod basks. A few years before this period began, most streets were flakes, beneath whose shadows young men and women walked,

Whispering murmurs of love at even.

Sir Richard Keats purged the north shore of St. John’s Harbour, but sixty years ago the south shore of St. John’s was still decorated with flakes, and even to-day flakes still lend their peculiar poetry and fragrance to Quidi Vidi and the smaller out-ports. Cod-fish, alive or dead, wet or dry, have exercised an all-pervading influence over the destiny of Newfoundland.

No. 822.

[1920.]

EXTRACT FROM “LABRADOR,”

BY WILLIAM B. CABOT (BOSTON, 1920), p. 81.

“ The Spracklins had fish ; namely, cod. Nothing is fish to a Newfoundlander but cod—cod alone. Salmon are salmon, trout are trout, the same with herring, caplin, and the rest ; but to him cod only is Fish. He may go fishing for any of these, for almost anything that swims, for to him life is fishing, but he would hardly use the word unqualified of anything but cod.”

No. 823.

[1922.]

EXTRACT FROM “LABRADOR,”

BY WILFRED T. GRENFELL AND OTHERS, NEW ED.(NEW YORK, 1922), p. 282.

“ Nearly three hundred years ago it was known that this fish was plentiful on the southern coast of the peninsula, and ever since the cod-fishery has been more or less vigorously pursued on the Labrador. In former times the herring, and always the salmon, has furnished minor parts in the harvest from the coastal waters, but it is remarkable that, in Newfoundland and Labrador, ‘fish’ is a synonym merely for cod ; a local law has stated that salmon is not fish. Other members of the Gadidæ family, as the hake, tusk, haddock, whiting, coalfish, pollack, ling, and whiting-pout, are absent or present in negligible quantities. A flounder is the only noteworthy representative of the flatfish family. The halibut is found only in deep water, far from shore.”

No. 824.

[28 Oct.,
1922.]EXTRACT FROM AN ARTICLE ENTITLED “KING
COD,”BY GEORGE ALLAN ENGLAND, PUBLISHED IN The Saturday Evening Post (PHILADELPHIA, OCTOBER 28, 1922), p. 6.

“C-o-d” is the proper abbreviation for “Newfoundland.” Cod is the life of the island. You don't need a chart or compass to find Newfoundland. All you need is a good nose. I could enlarge considerably on this topic, especially where cod-liver oil is made ; but let it pass. Newfoundland lives and moves and has its being in cod. It's of the fish, fishy.

Its manners, customs, lore, traditions, laws, language all revolve about cod. The Land of Cod, Fog and Dogs, it has been called. To-day the Newfoundland dog is in abeyance, for the introduction of sheep has largely banished him, as he's too fond of mutton. Fog isn't a commercial proposition, even though some Newfoundlanders claim they can quarry their kind of fog and build with it. So cod is left as the mainstay of the island. George V. is nominally monarch, but the real ruler is King Cod.

You'll never know just what cod can be till you visit the Newfoundland outports. Since I got back from there I haven't rightly dared look a codfish in the face. But the people themselves never talk about cod. They always call it fish. In an outport boarding house I once heard an old sea dog exclaim : “ If ye ain't got fish, gal, gi' us halibut.”

No. 825.

[June, 1848.]

NEWMAN v. ROW. ¹

1848, June. BRADY, C. J.; DESBARRES AND SIMMS, J. J.

Marine Insurance—Meaning of word “fish” in Newfoundland trade.

The word “fish” without further addition means in the Newfoundland trade cod-fish.

THIS was an action upon a policy of insurance brought by the plaintiff to recover from the defendant the sum of thirteen shillings, being his proportionate share of a sum alleged to be due in respect of a policy of insurance effected upon some pickled salmon which had been shipped on board a vessel called the Mahone Bay Packet, in the month of November, 1844, and which subsequently ran on shore upon Green Island. By the terms of the policy the underwriters guaranteed “that they would allow average when the loss, exceeding ten per cent. on the value of the property, happened on a foreign voyage, and did not arise from jettison or from injury or damage to corn, fish, salt, bread, flour, seed, sugar, tobacco, hemp, flax, hides or skins.” The point in dispute was therefore whether pickled salmon came within the article excepted in the policy, or whether the word fish according to the usage and custom of the trade of Newfoundland is simple confined to dried cod-fish.

Mr. Robinson, Q.C., for the plaintiff, called Mr. Boyd, who deposed—that as agent to the defendant, one of the underwriters, he had signed the policy of insurance. Witness had been connected with mercantile transactions in St. John’s for 42 years. If asked what was the price of FISH, he should say the question referred to dried cod-fish alone. If he sold a quantity of flour to be paid for in FISH, he would understand that cod-fish was meant thereby. If asked what a fish-store was, he should reply a store for the reception of dried cod-fish.

The general and popular meaning of the term fish, in Newfoundland, is dried cod-fish.

Cross-examined by Mr. Row, Q.C., for the defendant.—Upon the wharves and in the stores the word fish means cod-fish ; in cases of total loss pickled fish is included in the term fish. The insurance was effected at the risk of Charles Fox Bennett, who is one of the underwriters ; if asked to insure fish, I would understand every description of fish. A question was then put to the witness, whether the words in the margin of the policy excepting specified articles, were not also found in Lloyd’s policies, but the Court refused to allow it to be answered, upon the ground that it was sought thereby to give

Re-examined.—C. F. Bennett is a subscriber to the policy, the manuscript part is in witness's handwriting. The merchant's clerk generally hands in the proposal for insurance, and his employer may not know about it. I have no hesitation in affirming what I stated upon my direct examination, that the general meaning of the word fish in Newfoundland is dried cod-fish.

To a Juror.—Suppose an insurance for the sum of £1000 was effected upon fish in your office, and that the insured had not the required quantity of cod-fish, would you admit salmon and herring to complete the specified quantity ?

Witness.—We have done so.

The Court thereupon observed—We will admit evidence of the general usage of trade, not the usual practice of a particular office.

Mr. Charles Warren examined.—Has been for a period of ten years connected with the trade of Newfoundland. Every person here, be he rich or poor, when the word “ fish ” is used, understands that cod-fish alone is meant. If anything is sold to be paid for in fish I should understand it to be intended. Fish store means store for cod-fish. Popularly speaking, the word fish, means cod-fish, and none other.

To the Court.—If I wanted to effect an insurance upon the articles : cod-fish, salmon, and herrings, I should enumerate each item specifically, in my proposal to the Insurance office.

Mr. M'William.—Has been connected with the trade for upwards of 20 years. In mercantile transactions the term fish is always understood to mean cod-fish.

Mr. T. Smith.—Has been a clerk in the house of Messrs. C. F. Bennett & Co., and connected with business in Newfoundland for 16 years. Fish generally means, amongst the trade, cod-fish. If asked the price of fish would understand codfish to be thereby intended, and none other. Flour sold payable in fish means payable in cod-fish and none other.

Cross-examined.—Thinks he has given an order to insure, using the words “ fish, salmon and herrings.” Nine times out of ten in writing the term fish I should not pen the word cod-fish.

No witnesses were produced on behalf of the defendant.

The Chief Justice in charging the Jury thus expressed himself—This is a question entirely for you to decide, and your duty is simply to ascertain what is the precise meaning of the word fish. The underwriters agree to allow average when the loss does not exceed ten per cent., except in certain excepted articles. Does the pickled salmon fall within the items enumerated in the exception ? A very eminent writer on the law of insurance (Parke on Marine Insurance) says there are certain excepted articles, for partial loss of which the underwriters will not hold themselves liable, but only for general average. Is pickled salmon included or excluded from the exception ? because if salmon be not contained, according to the usage here, in the generic term fish, your verdict ought to be for the plaintiff. The same question, namely the peculiar meaning of certain words in particular localities has frequently arisen in England. As for instance, rice has been decided not to be corn within the meaning of the usual memorandum of a Policy of Insurance. On the other hand corn was declared to include peas and beans. According to the doctrine laid down in another case malt is corn. And the question whether the word “ month ” is to be considered calendar or lunar, has been mooted—so then in this case what did both parties understand by the word fish when they used it in their contract ? If the evidence of the invariable meaning of the word fish satisfies you, you cannot have a doubt as to your verdict. The news-papers on every occasion that my attention has been called to them, always advertise for sale so many quintals fish, never cod-fish. 'Tis for you to decide if that invariable usage was carried into the contract between the plaintiff and defendant.

p. 1998

Verdict for the plaintiff—Thirteen shillings sterling.

No. 826.

[Jany., 1861.]

McGRATH v. KAVANAGH.¹

1861, January. BRADY, C. J. ; LITTLE, J. ; ROBINSON, J.

Insolvency—Receiver of voyage—Insolvency Act 19th Vic., cap. 14—Servant of supplier of bait, how far a privileged creditor—Insolvency of master —Meaning of the word “fish.”

Under the provisions of the Insolvency Act 19 Victoria, cap. 14, the servant of the bait supplier is not entitled to a preferable security for his wages. The bait master himself is only protected because he is expressly named in the statute. Bait happening to be fish does not therefore come under the general term "fish" as used in the Act.

HON. SIR. F. BRADY :

It was not my intention to have done anything more in this case than express my concurrence in the judgment pronounced by Judge Robinson and in the grounds upon which he rested the conclusion at which he arrived, and also to express my regret that I should differ from the opinion of my brother, Judge Little, because I thought, in a meritorious point of view, the servants of the bait-master might be just as well entitled to such preferential claim against an insolvent estate as is given to all servants engaged “ in the catching, curing or making of fish or oil.” I own I thought the language which we had to interpret was so plain, and I repeat, with the gravest sincerity, that I think so still, that no doubt could arise upon the true construction of it, but when we remember that my brother, Judge Little, was a party to the framing of this enactment, and how difficult it is to divest ourselves of pre-conceived impressions, and bring our minds to that even and unprejudiced temper which enables one to judge calmly and dispassionately as to the true import and effect of the language employed, we may well feel, and I say this with great respect, that such impressions may in this case have caused the difference of opinion which exists among the judges. The language of an Act of Parliament is, in general, to be read by this Court as we read the language of every private deed, in its plain and ordinary meaning, and it is our duty to discover from it, and from it alone, because outside either document we cannot go, the intention of the legislature in the one instance, and of the parties in the other. Nor can we, if we believe their intention was to do something which the language they have used does not extend to, by interpretation extend that language to what was omitted or overlooked, because we would be, in doing so, exceeding our legal position, as mere expounders of the law, and usurping the authority of our law makers, the Governor, Legislative Council and House of Assembly. The language we have to interpret or construe in this case is contained in the first section of the 19th Victoria, cap. 14, and is as follows : “ When it shall be made to appear that the hirer or employer of any seaman, fisherman, or other servant, is insolvent, and unable to pay his creditors twenty shillings in the pound, such seaman, fisherman, or other servant, actually employed in the catching, curing or making of fish or oil, and such person as shall have supplied bait to the hirer or employer aforesaid, and who shall be creditors for wages, share or bait, for the current season, shall upon all such fish and oil taken, cured or made by the hirer or employer aforesaid or out of the produce or value thereof if the same be in the possession of the hirer or employer, or any other person aware of or privy to the hiring or employing of any such seaman, fisherman or other servant, or having notice of the claim of such seaman, fisherman or other servant, whether the same be accruing or due, at or before the time of such other person receiving such fish or oil, or the produce or value thereof, or before paying the hirer or employer for the same, be considered privileged creditors and shall first be paid twenty shillings in the pound, so far as such fish and oil or the produce or value thereof shall go.” The bait-master in this case became insolvent, and his servants now claim to have a right, under this section, to be paid their wages in full out of the money he earned as bait-master before any other creditor of his could make any claim to this portion of his property. It is now an universal rule, that in case of insolvency, all the creditors of the insolvent rank in equal degree on the property of the insolvent, unless those who are mortgagees or those who claim a legal priority by reason of some other like specified lien, upon all or some portion of the insolvent’s property as entitles them to a prior payment as against the general creditors. When therefore a class claim an extraordinary privilege, as in this case, to be paid in full their claims out of the property of the insolvent in preference and priority to the shares which the general body of the insolvent’s creditors claim out of the deficient estate, it is not too much to say, that before a Court of Justice establishes the validity of such a claim or other privilege, their right to it should be shewn to be clear and unquestionable. In my judgment the language of this section not only does not include the servants employed by the bait-master, but in truth it amounts to an express exclusion of them from the benefit of this enactment. If I wanted evidence of that fact I would not go farther than the elaborate judgment of my brother judge. Can it be said that the bait-master is a person “ actually employed in the catching, curing or making of fish or oil,” if even the Legislature thought so why did they add to these words “ or such person as shall have supplied bait to, &c.” And if the bait-master would not be entitled to this preferential claim, were it not for the express language used in reference to him, how can his servants sustain a claim for such a preference where they are not named, but are in effect expressly excluded from this enactment.

¹ Newfoundland Reports, 1854–1864, pp. 565-575.

The very language of the Act, when it speaks of the person who shall supply bait, distinguished him and those employed under him from the servants engaged in the “ catching, curing, or making fish or oil,” and when it expressly extends the privilege and preferential right to the bait-master, it thereby excludes his servants on the well known rule of construing documents expressio

p. 2001

unius est exclusio alterius. I really should not have labored this question, but from all I heard upon the subject of an equitable construction of statutes, as bearing upon this case from my brother judge, and I will merely observe that as a general principle, I hold that that doctrine ought to be cautiously resorted to by Courts of Justice, because when countenanced or adopted it tends to substitute for the law of the Legislature the worst of all law, &§220; judge-made law.” I will merely cite a paragraph or two from the treatise of Mr. Dwarris, upon whose authority my learned brother has so largely rested his opinion in this case. Thus in Dwarris on statutes, 703, that able writer says : “ The fittest course in all cases where the intention of the Legislature is brought into question, is to adhere to the words of the statute, construing them according to their nature and import, in the order in which they stand in the Act of Parliament. The most enlightened and experienced judges have for some time lamented the too frequent departure from the plain and obvious meaning of the words of the Act of Parliament by which the case is governed, and themselves hold it much the safer course to adhere to the words of the statute construed in their ordinary import than to any inquiry as to the supposed intention of the parties who framed the Act. They are not (as the most learned members of a learned body best know) to presume the intention of the Legislature, but to collect them from the words of the Act of Parliament ; and they have nothing to do with the policy of the law. This is the true sense in which it is so often impressively repeated, that judges are not to be encouraged to direct their conduct by the crooked cord of discretion but by the golden metwand of the law, i.e., not to construe statutes by equity, but to collect the sense of the legislature by a sound interpretation of its language, according to reason and grammatical correctness.”

Upon these grounds, I am of opinion that judgment should be given for the defendant. Judgment accordingly.

HON. MR. JUSTICE LITTLE :

This is a summary action, brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for £8 17s., being the balance of wages due to the plaintiff as a supplied servant, at the fishery last summer, of one William Thorne, a planter of the defendants, and which sum is claimed from the defendant as the receiver of Thorne's voyage, the latter being insolvent and unable to pay the wages.

It appears that the plaintiff was shipped to Thorne in the defendant's office, in the usual way ; that he served as a hand in Thorne's bait skiff for the time agreed upon ; that Thorne's fishery, in which the plaintiff was engaged, was the catching and supplying of bait, that is to say, herring and caplin, to various planters of the defendant and others ; that a portion of the proceeds of this voyage, the money realized by the sale and supply of the herring and caplin, amounting to about £90, was paid to the defendant, and received by him with a full knowledge of the plaintiff's claim for wages ; and Thorne being insolvent, the plaintiff claims to be paid his balance by the defendant under the local Act for the amendment of the Insolvency Law, 19 Victoria, cap. 14.

p. 2002

To settle the various questions raised on this important subject, fishing servants' right to follow the voyage for their wages, the 19 Victoria, cap. 14, was passed by the Legislature.

It has relation not only to seamen and fishermen but also to clerks and servants of every description ; and while it secures to the fishing class of servants and sharemen the right to follow the voyage, or any part of it, or the produce or value thereof, into the hands of the receiver for the payment of their wages or shares, in the event of the insolvency of their hirers, such receiver having notice of their claim, it like wise secures to the general servants a prior claim on the insolvent estates of their employers for their last year's wages. In fact, its provisions extend to all kinds of claims upon insolvent hirers and insolvent estates, defining their order of priority, and affording summary means of enforcing such demands as the present.

By the first section it is enacted that when it shall be made to appear that " the hirer or employer of any seaman, fisherman or other servant actually employed in the catching, curing, or making of fish or oil, is insolvent, such seaman, fisherman or other servant, and such person as shall have supplied bait to the hirer employer, and who shall be creditors for wages, shares, or bait for the current season, shall, upon such fish and oil taken, cured or made by the hirer or employer, or out of the produce or value thereof, in the hands of any person aware of or privy to the hiring, or having notice of the claim, whether the same be accruing or due at or before the receipt of the fish or oil, or the produce or value thereof, or before paying for the same, be considered privileged creditors, and shall first be paid twenty shillings in the pound, so far as such fish and oil or the produce or value thereof shall go."

The third section then prescribes the mode of proceeding by the servant or supplier of bait, before any court or justice of the peace, against the receiver, without any formal declaration of the insolvency of the hirer or employer. The fourth section enables the receiver to make any defence to the claim which would be available to the hirer if the action had been taken against him ; and provides that he shall not be liable unless it be proven on the trial that the receiver was aware of or privy to the hiring, or had notice of the claim for wages, shares, or bait money at any time before or at the time of receiving “ the fish and oil or a part thereof, or the proceeds of the same,” or before payment therefor, and states that then he should only be liable to the extent of the voyage, or part, or produce, or value thereof received by him.”

Now, it appears to me that the simple question we have to determine in this case is this : Was the plaintiff “ a seaman, fisherman or other servant employed in catching, curing or making fish or oil ? ” In other words, was he a servant engaged in the fishery ? I think there can be no doubt about that. In my judgment he was as much a fishery servant, and as actually engaged in catching fish while employed in his hirers bait skiff catching herring or caplin, as if he had been catching cod-fish. The Act make no distinction as to the kinds of fish which the servant may be employed in catching. The general term “ fish ” comprises all kinds of fish. As to any usage with local insurance companies, confining the term “ fish ” to dry cod-fish, when

p. 2003.

mentioned under certain circumstances in policy of insurance, we have no evidence of any usage in this case ; and even if we had, that would not affect the clear terms of an Act of the Legislature, which must be interpreted according to the true intent and meaning of the language used ; and the well known and established acceptation of the general term “ fish,” as understood in the English language, is that by which we should be governed in reading this Act.

In Dwarris on Statutes, page 573, it is said that the words of a statute are to be taken in their ordinary and familiar signification and import, and regard is to be had to their general and popular use ; for jus et norma loquendi is governed by usage, and the meaning of words spoken or written ought to be allowed as it has constantly been taken—loquendum est vulgus. But if the usage have been to construe the words of a statute contrary to their obvious meaning, by the vulgar tongue and the common acceptation of terms, such usage is not to be regarded, it being, say the books, an oppression of those concerned (to force upon them a conventional meaning) than a construction of the statute ; and though where the words of the statute are doubtful, general usage may be called in to explain them, for optimus legem interpres est consuetudo—usages that can control an Act of Parliament must be universal and not the usage of any particular place. —1 S.R. 728. And Chief Justice Best says that the intent of the Legislature is not to be collected from any particular expression, but from a general view of the whole Act of Parliament.—4 Bing, 196.

In construing this Act, it is right to refer to previous Acts in any way relating to the same subject, for it is an established rule that all acts in pari materia are to be taken together as if they were one law, and they are directed to be compared in the construction of statutes, because they are considered as framed upon one system and having one object in view.—Dwarris, 569 ; 4 S.R. 447. We who have read the old returns made to the Imperial Government of the trade of this colony, which were published by order of Parliament, know that the fisheries of this colony were not confined exclusively to codfish, but that salmon also to a large extent, and herring also, formed considerable items in the exports of the colony. The 15 Geo. III., cap. 31, was an act for the encouragement of the fisheries, and how can it be said that the term “ fish ” used in the sixteenth section, and in other old fishery Acts, as well as in the 25th section of the Judicature Act, is confined to codfish ?

In 1841 the local Legislature passed an Act “ to regulate the packing and inspection of pickled fish for exportation from this colony,” some sections of which detail the mode of sorting, weighing, salting and packing fish in barrels. It surely could not be contended that this refers to codfish, for the Act in other sections specifies different kinds of fish, such particularly as herring and salmon, and in an amendment to this Act passed in 1845, a duty of three shillings per cwt. is imposed on the exportation of fresh and salted or pickled herring and caplin in bulk.

It must be evident that the supply of bait is of the first moment in the prosecution of the fisheries. Without it, what security would the merchant have for his supplies ? Without the employment of servants in the bait-skiff, there would be no use in employing servants in the hook-and-line cod-fishery. The 8th section of the Act under consideration gives to the supplying merchant a preference for supplies furnished for the fishery in the distribution of insolvent estate of planters or persons engaged in the fishery, subject to the prior claims of the servants. Can it be contended that the merchant who supplies a bait-skiff owner like Thorne, would not have a prior claim on his insolvent estate for such supplies in the terms of this section ? Then, if the supplier be protected in this way, as I think he undoubtedly is, it would seem very unreasonable that the servant should be excluded from the benefit of the act, which is remedial in its operation, and should, therefore, as urged in argument, be construed liberally. In Dwarris, 641, it is said, “ A remedial act should be so construed as most effectually to meet the end in view and to prevent a failure of the remedy. As a general rule a remedial statute ought to be construed liberally. Thus a statute may be extended by construction to other cases within the same mischief and occasion of the act, though not expressly with their words.” The statute 9 Richard 2nd, C. 3, gives writ of error to him in reversion. It was resolved in Winchester's case, 3 Rep. 4, that although the statute speaks only of reversions, yet remainders are also taken to be within the purview thereof. Again, in Dwarris, page 617, “ A remedial statute will be extended by equity to other persons besides those expressly named.”—Porter's case, 1 Rep. 25 ; upon which doctrine the following observations were made in Platt's case, Plow, 36 : It is not unusual in Acts of Parliament, especially in the more ancient ones, to comprehend by construction a generality where express mention is made only of a particular, the particular instances being taken only as examples of all that want redress in the kind whereof the mention is made. Thus the Act 1 Richard 2, c. 12, orders that the wardens of the Fleet shall not permit prisoners in execution to go out of the prison by bail or baston, “ yet it has been adjudged that this Act extends to all gaolers.”—in page 557. A thing which is within the object, spirit and meaning of a statute, is as much within the statute as if it were within the letter.—Plow, 336, Rep. 101.

While the Insolvency Act in question includes all “seamen, fishermen and other servants engaged in catching and curing fish,” surely under these authorities it would not be going too far, if it were necessary, to resort to an equitable construction of its provisions, in such a case as the present, to admit that a fisherman or servant engaged in fishing for bait is within the object, spirit and meaning of the statute, and being within the mischief sought to be corrected is therefore within the remedy provided. In Boutin's insolvency we have held in this court that a servant, who was a store-keeper and occasionally employed about fish—herring and cod-fish,—was a privileged creditor upon the produce thereof for his wages. In Rennie's insolvency the produce thereof for his wages. In Rennie's insolvency Mr. Archibald states in his note to the provisions of the Judicature Act relating to menial or domestic servants, that " the Courts have given the section a liberal construction where it has appeared that the party performed menial or domestic service, although generally employed in another capacity, and that rent of a fishing room was allowed to rank as supplies for the fishery as a prior claim. I think, however, that a fair and common sense interpretation of the present act will comprise the plaintiff's claim, without reference to that equitable and liberal construction contended for, and usually given to such acts, according to the authorities cited.

p. 2005

It seems that the provision securing to the person who shall have supplied bait an equal right with the fishing servant to follow the voyage of each person to whom he supplies bait, on the proceeds in the hands of the receiver for the payment of his bait money, has created in the minds of my brother judges an impression that while the bait-skiff owner is included, his servants are excluded from the benefit of the Act. Now, I should regard his claim, without this special provision, in precisely the same light as that of a planter, who sells a quantity of fish to A.B., and is left to the common law remedy, the same as any other vendor, in fact, for the recovery of the price. The planter, in such a case, has no prior claim over any person, in the event of the insolvency of the purchaser. The bait supplier, however, is so important a person in carrying on the fishery, that it was deemed expedient by the Legislature to place his claim for bait supplied for the prosecution of the fishery upon the same footing as that of the fisherman's wages. He is enabled to follow the voyage caught by the persons to whom he supplied bait, for the price thereof ; but his servants, who are not less important than himself, if not more so, in the prosecution of the voyage, are only able to follow their voyage or any part of it, or the proceeds, produce, or value thereof ; that is, in this case, the money received by the defendant for the herring and caplin caught by them and their employer and supplied by him to the defendant's planters. If that money be not the " proceeds, value or produce " of the fish caught by the plaintiff and his brother servants, I should be at a loss to know what else it is, according to the first and fourth sections, which latter section is somewhat more comprehensive in its language than the other, for the receiver is thereby made liable for the servant's wages, to the extent of the voyage, or part, or produce, or value thereof received by him.

I have thought it proper, differing as I do from the conclusion formed by my brother judges, to be thus particular in the expression of my opinion upon this matter ; for although the amount at stake in this case is small, yet the principle, viewed in a practical light, involved in the decision, is of considerable importance to those engaged in the fisheries of the colony.

I can only say that I have given the Act in question much consideration, not only on this but on previous occasions. Perhaps, unknown to myself, I take a view yet based somewhat on preconceived opinions, as to the operation of its provisions. But I have endeavored to weigh the subject strictly and impartially, as I feel I have done, according to the best of my judgment apart from any such opinions ; and in concluding that the plaintiff has a legal right to recover, I have been guided by the language of the Act as I interpret it, and not simply by the policy it indicates, with a single desire that I am sure influences each member of this court to administer justice according to law.

p. 2006

HON. MR. JUSTICE ROBINSON :

The plaintiff was a servant during the past summer to one Thorne, who was a supplier of bait, and the defendant received some money due to Thorne for such bait, which he placed to the credit of his own account with Thorne. By virtue of such receipt the plaintiff claims the right of holding the defendant liable for plaintiff's wages. Between the plaintiff and the defendant there is no privity of contract, and the liability of the defendant to pay Thorne's debt can only arise, if at all, under the provisions of the Insolvent Act, 19 Victoria, cap. 14.

The first section enacts that when it shall be made to appear that the hirer or employer of any seaman, fisherman or other servant actually employed in the catching, curing or making of fish or oil, and such person as shall have supplied bait to such hirer or employer shall upon all such fish or oil taken, cured or made by such hirer or employer, or out of the produce or value thereof, be considered privileged creditors and be paid twenty shillings in the pound, so far as such fish and oil or the produce or value thereof shall go.

The second section provides the course which parties may pursue in their actions against the " receiver of such fish or the produce or value thereof." The other parts of the Act are subordinate to the above enactments.

Giving as liberal construction to the Act as its language will fairly admit, I do not think the servant of the man who supplied the necessary article of bait is entitled to a preferable security for his wages, any more than the servant of the man who supplies boats, provisions or other necessaries for the voyage. The baitmaster is protected only because he is expressly named, and if the Legislature intended to extend the protection to his servant, I suppose they would have said so.

The plaintiff cannot claim under the general word "servant," unless he was actually employed in the catching, curing or making of any fish or oil that went into the merchant's hands, which is negatived.

I cannot think that because bait happened to be fish, it therefore comes within the general term " fish " as used in this Act. The Act itself draws the distinction between "bait and fish,” and shews that the fish on which a lien is given is a different article from the bait supplied to catch it ; the former is intended to be made and cured, and could be followed, the latter is taken for the purpose of being used at once.

If the servant in a bait-skiff is a casus omissus from this Act, the Legislature is at hand to remedy the defect, if desirable ; but we have to administer the law as we find it, and under it I am of opinion the plaintiff can establish no preferable claim, and has no right of action against the defendant.

Plaintiff must therefore be non-suit.

Mr. John Little for plaintiff.

The Attorney General for defendant.

[Table (Exhibit 829) follows as page 2006A. [sic]

[Below is a partial image of the table. Click on image to view the full table in html format.]

p. 2006A

No. 827

A STATE OF THE NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERY

IN 1699 TO 1792 ; TAKEN FROM THE RETURNS OF THE ADMIRALS WHO COMMANDED ON THAT STATION.*

9	480	48,950	4,422	4,617	2,258	637,955	622,108	2,974	2,364	15,253
1790,
1, 2

Office of the Committee of Privy Council for Trade, Whitehall, 19th March, 1793.

A true Copy, taken from the Admirals Returns in this Office
Geo. Chalmers,
Chf. Ck. Com C¹ Trade,
&c.

No. 827

A STATE OF THE NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERY

IN 1699 TO 1792. TAKEN FROM THE RETURNS OF THE ADMIRALS WHO COMMANDED ON THAT STATION.*

[Please note: The layout of the table has been altered slightly for viewing on the web. In the original table the years are located at the top of the page only. In the html version the visitor will notice they appear periodically as he or she scrolls down the table.]

		1699	1700	1701	1714	1715	1716	1719	1750	1751	1764	1765	1766	1767	1768	1769	1770	1771	1772	1773	1774	1784	1785	1786	1787	1788	1789	1790	1791	1792
Number of	British Fishing Ships of which are British Sack Ships Trading Ships from the Colonies	236	220	121	150	188	147	271	283	312	344	397	391	465	503	591	629	638	623	590	480	578	346	435	487	507	567	542	471	476	494
		236	220	121	150	188	147	271	283	312	344	397	391	465	503	591	629	638	623	590	480	578	346	435	487	507	567	542	471	476	494
		236	220	121	150	188	147	271	283	312	344	397	391	465	503	591	629	638	623	590	480	578	346	435	487	507	567	542	471	476	494
Burthen of	British Fishing Ships of which are British Sack Ships Trading Ships from the Colonies	7,991	8,000	11,255	8,070	10,200	14,819	14,819	14,819	14,819	14,819	17,248	20,518	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419
		7,991	8,000	11,255	8,070	10,200	14,819	14,819	14,819	14,819	14,819	17,248	20,518	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419
		7,991	8,000	11,255	8,070	10,200	14,819	14,819	14,819	14,819	14,819	17,248	20,518	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419	21,419
Number of Men belonging to	British Fishing Ships of which are British Sack Ships Trading Ships from the Colonies	5,120	4,960	2,000	1,700	3,056	1,601	1,809	1,630	1,042	1,039	1,252	1,044	888	963	1,332	1,298	1,118	1,344	786	547	866	1,426	1,487	1,423	1,464	1,496	1,332	1,319	1,319	1,319	1,319
		5,120	4,960	2,000	1,700	3,056	1,601	1,809	1,630	1,042	1,039	1,252	1,044	888	963	1,332	1,298	1,118	1,344	786	547	866	1,426	1,487	1,423	1,464	1,496	1,332	1,319	1,319	1,319	1,319
		5,120	4,960	2,000	1,700	3,056	1,601	1,809	1,630	1,042	1,039	1,252	1,044	888	963	1,332	1,298	1,118	1,344	786	547	866	1,426	1,487	1,423	1,464	1,496	1,332	1,319	1,319	1,319	1,319
Number of Passengers brought out to the British Ships from	England, Ireland, Jersey	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
		—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
		—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
N ^o of Boats kept by	British Fishing Ships of which are British Sack Ships Trading Ships from the Colonies	805	800	338	300	376	319	349	405	542	2	300	4	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
		805	800	338	300	376	319	349	405	542	2	300	4	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
		805	800	338	300	376	319	349	405	542	2	300	4	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—	—
N ^o of Bye Boatsmen	Mothers, Servants	520	396	77	180	283	286	421	545	554	281	319	254	216	295	314	365	643	96	384	555	289	463	583	412	290	4,799 in Ships, 7,323 in Boats, 6,152 on Shore	5,817 in Ships, 6,759 in Boats, 5,543 on Shore	4,148 in Ships, 7,138 in Boats, 4,465 on Shore	2,838 in Ships, 7,138 in Boats, 4,465 on Shore	1,148	1,397
		520	396	77	180	283	286	421	545	554	281	319	254	216	295	314	365	643	96	384	555	289	463	583	412	290	4,799 in Ships, 7,323 in Boats, 6,152 on Shore	5,817 in Ships, 6,759 in Boats, 5,543 on Shore	4,148 in Ships, 7,138 in Boats, 4,465 on Shore	2,838 in Ships, 7,138 in Boats, 4,465 on Shore	1,148	1,397
		520	396	77	180	283	286	421	545	554	281	319	254	216	295	314	365	643	96	384	555	289	463	583	412	290	4,799 in Ships, 7,323 in Boats, 6,152 on Shore	5,817 in Ships, 6,759 in Boats, 5,543 on Shore	4,148 in Ships, 7,138 in Boats, 4,465 on Shore	2,838 in Ships, 7,138 in Boats, 4,465 on Shore	1,148	1,397
Quintals of Fish made by	British Fishing Ships of which are British Sack Ships Trading Ships from the Colonies	11,300	55,600	104,640	116,570	136,840	206,676	208,570	216,795	221,340	252,910	236,000	385,391	262,925	274,640	131,650	170,372	212,415	276,215	412,580	97,815	106,610	71,090	16,910	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450
		11,300	55,600	104,640	116,570	136,840	206,676	208,570	216,795	221,340	252,910	236,000	385,391	262,925	274,640	131,650	170,372	212,415	276,215	412,580	97,815	106,610	71,090	16,910	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450
		11,300	55,600	104,640	116,570	136,840	206,676	208,570	216,795	221,340	252,910	236,000	385,391	262,925	274,640	131,650	170,372	212,415	276,215	412,580	97,815	106,610	71,090	16,910	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450	19,450
Carried to Foreign Markets	Quintals of Fish, Trenches of Salmon sold to us by the French	154,570	129,000	89,622	88,469	463,070	553,620	493,554	523,636	542,960	544,718	610,910	649,240	481,347	499,665	516,558	497,884	606,756	885,897	732,216	774,480	782,791	452,656	532,730	452,656	532,730	452,656	532,730	452,656	532,730	452,656	532,730
		154,570	129,000	89,622	88,469	463,070	553,620	493,554	523,636	542,960	544,718	610,910	649,240	481,347	499,665	516,558	497,884	606,756	885,897	732,216	774,480	782,791	452,656	532,730	452,656	532,730	452,656	532,730	452,656	532,730	452,656	532,730
		154,570	129,000	89,622	88,469	463,070	553,620	493,554	523,636	542,960	544,718	610,910	649,240	481,347	499,665	516,558	497,884	606,756	885,897	732,216	774,480	782,791	452,656	532,730	452,656	532,730	452,656	532,730	452,656	532,730	452,656	532,730
Tons of Train Oil made by	British Fishing Ships of which are British Sack Ships Trading Ships from the Colonies	10 th	10 th	10 th	10 th	10 th	10 th
		10 th	10 th	10 th	10 th	10 th	10 th	10 th
		10 th	10 th	10 th	10 th	10 th	10 th	10 th
Prices of	Fish per Quintal, Sea Cow Oil, Train Oil per Ton	12 s. 13	12	13 s. 13	12	13 s. 13	12	13 s. 13	12	13 s. 13
		12 s. 13	12	13 s. 13	12	13 s. 13	12	13 s. 13	12	13 s. 13
		12 s. 13	12	13 s. 13	12	13 s. 13	12	13 s. 13	12	13 s. 13
Value of	Seal Oil made, Sea Cow Oil, Train Oil, Fun taken by the Inhabitants, Truck with the Seavages	£1,016	£1,382	£3,139	£3,304	£5,109	£3,587	£4,832	£12,264	£3,267	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299
		£1,016	£1,382	£3,139	£3,304	£5,109	£3,587	£4,832	£12,264	£3,267	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299	£1,299
		£1,016	£1,382	£3,139	£3,304	£5,109	£3,587	£4,832	£12,264	£3,267	£1,299	£1,299	£1,2

No. 828.

SKEFFINGTON'S SALMON FISHERY. REFERRED TO LORDS OF TRADE, 23 FEBRUARY, 1720.

C.O. 194, VOL. 6, f. 332.

To George King of Great Britain in Counsel.

The Humble Petition of George Skeffington Inhabitant of Indian Bay in Newfoundland, Humbly Sheweth

*sic.

That your Petitioner hath for about Twelve Years past Improved the Salmon Fishery in two or three Rivers or Brooks to the Northward of Cape Bonavista ; and hath at very great Expence and Labour near fferty miles up the Country cleared Lands of the wood, and the said Rivers or Brooks of rocks and stones and other obstructions ; built houses, Stages, ffatts, Works and other Conveniences for catching and Curing Salmon, which said Brooks or Rivers were never before Employed frequented or occupied by any person whatsoever, and far distant from any place where any ffishing Ship hath used to fish.—

Your Petitioner therefore most humbly prays, that he may be encouraged and protected in carrying on the said Fishery according to the Intention of the Act made in the 10 & 11th of King William the Third for Incouring* the Fishery of Newfoundland, That he may use occupy and enjoy all such houses, Stages and other works made by him for taking and Curing of Salmon without molestation or hindrance from any persons who may by fraud or force disturb him in the quiet possession thereof ; and that he may hold and possess all those Conveniences he may hereafter make or build for taking and Curing Salmon in Such Brooks or Rivers as have never before been used by any other person in such manner as to your Majesty in your great Wisdom shall seem meet.

[23 Feby.,
1720.]

And your Petition shall pray, &c.

GEO. SKEFFINGTON.
D.S.

At the Court at S^t. James's 23^d : February 1719/20.

His Maj^{ty} having been moved upon this Petition is graciously pleased to refer the same to the Right Hon^{ble} the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations to consider thereof, and report their Opinion what his Maj^{ty} may fitly do therein, whereupon his Maj^{ty} will declare his further Pleasure.

Endorsed.

J. CRAGGS.
D.S.

p. 2009

NEWFOUNDLAND.

Reference from Mr. Secretary Craggs of the 23^d Feb^{ry} 1719–20 upⁿ y^e Petition of Mr. Geo. Skeffington to his Majesty praying to be protected in y^e Improvement he has made (with great Expence) in the Salmon Fishery at Newfoundland.

Rec^d from M^d Joshua Gee.

[2 March,
1720.]

Rec^d Feb^{ry} 24th } 1719/20.
Read Do. 25th }

M. 97.
Ref. to Board of Trade.

C.O. 194, VOL. 6, f. 334.

To the Right Honorable the Lords
Commissioners for Trade and Plantations.

MY LORDS,

In Obedience to your Lordships Commands, I have perus'd and consider'd the Annex'd Petition of George Skeffington, and humbly certify to your Lordships, that I am of Opinion that the prayer of it is not Inconsistent with the Act made in the Tenth and Eleventh year of King William, for encouraging the trade to Newfoundland.

I am, My Lords,

Your Lordships
Most Obedient and
Most humble servant,
RICHD. WEST.
L.S.

Endorsed.

March 2^d. 7 ¹⁰/₂₀.

Copy of Petition of Geo. Skeffington. (Copied on f. 332.)

NEWFOUNDLAND.

Mr. West's Report upon Mr. Geo. Skeffington's Petition relating to a Salmon Fishery at Newfoundland.

Dated March 2^d 1719.

Rec^d March 2^d Read D^o 10th 1719/20.

M. 98.

Report on Mr. George Skeffington's Petition. Dat 2^d Mar 7, $\frac{18}{20}$
R.W.

[8 April, 1720.]

Newfoundland.

L^r to M^r Secry Craggs upon the Petition of

M^r George Skeffington, relating to a Salmon Fishery
at Newfoundland.

[Enclosure in No. 828.]

C.O. 195, VOL. 7, p. 36.

To the R^t Hon^{ble} Mr. Secry Craggs.

SIR,

In Obedience to His Maj^{ty}'s Comands signify'd to Us by your Reference of 23^d Febry. last, We have consider'd the Petition of George Skeffington, an Inhabitant of Newfoundland setting forth, that he has for about 12 Years past apply'd himself to, and improv'd the Salmon Fishery in two or three Rivers or Brooks to the Northward of Cape Bonavista in that Island, and has at very great Expencc and Labour clear'd the Lands of the Wood about forty Miles up some of those Rivers, and the Rivers, & Brooks, Rocks, Stones and other Obstructions to that Fishery. That he has built Houses, Stages, Fats and other Conveniencies for taking and curing of Salmon, that the Places where he has begun this Work were never before imploy'd or occupied by any Person whatsoever ; And therefore he humbly prays that his Maj^{ty} would be graciously pleas'd to permit him to enjoy the Houses, Stages and other Works made by him, for this Fishery without Molestation or Hindrance from any other Persons, who may attempt to disturb him therein, And that he may possess such Conveniences as he shall make hereafter in such Brooks or Rivers as have never before been used by any other Person.

We have upon this Occasion discours'd with the Petitioner and others who have appear'd in his behalf, and take Leave to observe y^t the Places where he has begun this Fishery are between Bonavista and Cape John in the North East Part of Newfoundland, which Places have never been frequented by any Fishing Ships from this Kingdom. And as the Petitioner is the first who has attempted to sett up a Salmon Fishery there, and as y^e Prayer of his Petition is no ways inconsistent with the Act for encouraging the Trade to Newfoundland. We humbly offer that His Majesty be graciously pleas'd to grant the Petitioner for the Term of 21 Years or such other time as His Majesty shall think fit the Sole Fishery for Salmon in the Places call'd Fresh Water Bay, Ragged Harbour, Gander Bay & Dog Creek between Cape Bonavista & Cape John, where he has already built Houses and other Conveniences for that Purpose, And that he have Liberty to cut Boards and Timber for his own Use in the Parts adjacent to those Rivers Brooks or Creeks for the said Fishery only, provided it be at Six Miles distant from the Sea Shoar.

*sic.

We are Sir

Your most Obedient & most humble
Servants

WESTMORLAND

C. COOKE
P. DOCMINIQUE
J. MOLESWORTH
T. PELHAM
M. BLADEN.

Copy.

Whitehall,
April 8th, 1723.*

No 830.

[1764.]

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL SCHEME OF THE FISHERY AND INHABITANTS OF NEWFOUNDLAND
FOR THE YEAR 1764.

B.T. NEWFOUNDLAND. VOL. 18. T. 37. 1764

—	York Harbour and Coast of Labradore without the Gulph.
Endorsed : In the Gov ^r 's Letter 23 Janry 1765. Read April 12. T. 37.	One Vessel only Employed this Year at York Harbour Included with those in the Column for St. Juliens the Fishery along that Coast not yet Est- ablished.

No. 831.

C

8th April, 1765—RULES, ORDERS AND REGULATIONS TO BE OBSERVED ON THE COAST OF LABRADOR, ETC.

See PART VII, page 937.

No. 832.

C

28th August, 1765—RULES, ORDERS AND REGULATIONS ESTABLISHING BRITISH FISHERY ON LABRADOR COAST.

See PART VII, page 944.

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL SCHEME OF THE FISHERY AND INHABITANTS OF NEWFOUNDLAND
FOR THE YEAR 1765.

[1773.]

B.T. NEWFOUNDLAND. VOL. 18. T. 64. 1765.

	Chateau in Labradore.	On the Coast of Labradore within the Streights of Belle Isle.
Endorsed : In Gov^r Pallisseys Letter of 5 Nov. 1765. Read March 4, 1766. T. 65 Quintals of Fish made by British Fishing Ships Inhabitants Carried to Foreign Markets Quintals of Fish Tons of Train Oil made by British Fishing Ships Inhabitants Price of Train Oil p^r Ton Value of Seal oil made last year	6,000 4,996 10,900 15½ 11½ £17 Whale Bone truck'd £1,000 for with the savages	Some Boats and Small Vessels came here after the Fishery was over in Newfoundland. The Quantity of Fish taken by them was as follows. — There was Fishing there both for Cod and Seal, also Considerable Trade with the Indian Inhabitants the Whole Carry'd on by People from Canada for farther Particulars see the Note at the Lower part of the Sheet.

On the Fishery on the Coast of Labradore within ye Gulph of St. Lawrence only, was Emp^d 117 Sloops & Schooners with 1,563 men who killed 104 Whales which Yielded on an Average 140 Barrells of Oil & 2,000 W^t of good Bone all kill'd within a space of 30 Leagues and between the 14th May & 10th July. The Winter Seal Fishery on the same Coast Carryd on by 107 men Yielded 500 Tons of Oil besides Fur, and the Furs from the Indians was very considerable, so that the Value of the Whale, Seal, Cod, Salmon, and Furs upon that part of the coast only, was at a moderate computation £100,000 and not one Old England Ship or Seaman Empl^d therein, nor a Seaman raised thereby for the service of the Fleet. such is y^e Effect of letting y^e Newfoundland Fishery run into Monopolie, That y^e rest of our Merchants if they can't have a Monopolie likewise, will let y^e New England Men or Frenchmen, or any Body Run away with it.

Privy Council Documents

p. 2013

C

Volume IV Contents

[1 Aug. 1766.]

No. 834.

PROCLAMATION ADMITTING VESSELS FORM PLANTATIONS TO FISHERY ON COAST OF LABRADOR, ETC. 1st August, 1766.

Vide Vol. III, page 986.

[10 Aug. 1767.]

No. 835.

C

REGULATIONS FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF BRITISH SHIP FISHERY ON COAST OF LABRADOR. 10th August, 1767.

Vide Vol. III, page 1010.

No. 836.

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL SCHEME OF THE FISHERY AND INHABITANTS OF NEWFOUNDLAND FOR THE YEAR 1767.

B.T. NEWFOUNDLAND. VOL. 20, p. 27.

[1767.]

		Coast of Labrador
		Chateaux		Red Bay and St. Modest	Isle Bois Fouteaux and Bradore	St. Augustine Macatine & Adjacent Ports		Migan &c.	Total
			Ships From Newfoundland.
Number of British	Fishing Ships	6	9	2	Total	9	Total	1	Total
	Sack Ships	1
Burthen of British	Fishing Ships	465	895	200		1150		110
	Sack Ships	60
N ^o of Men belong ^g to British	Fishing Ships	194	432	40		237		10
	Sack Ships	7
N ^o of Passengers in British Fishing Ships From Jesery		1
N ^o of Boats kept by British Fishing Ships		25	68	10		27		2
Quintals of Fish made by British Fishing Ships		6700	7540	2500		7950
Carried to Foreign Markets	Quintals of Fish	6700	7540	2500		7950
	Teirces of Salmon	45
Tons of Train Oil made by British Ships		18	21	6½		20

Prices of Train Oil p Tun	£15		£15		£15		£15
Value of { Seal Oil made last Winter Furs taken by the Inhabitants	1562 Seals £885 & 3 Tons of Whalebone from y ^e Savages £15		953 Seals £360 £45		1783 Seals £677 £36		8838 Seals £3315 Not known		Included in y ^e last Column Not known
Number of { Stages Train fats	9	3	3		3
	4	3	3
N ^o of Inhabitants distinguishing { Masters Men Servants	4		3		3		Not known
	43		33		27
N ^o of Roman Catholics, distinguishing { Men	30		25		15

No. 837.

[1768.]

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL SCHEME OF THE
FISHERY AND INHABITANTS OF
NEWFOUNDLAND FOR THE YEAR 1768.

B.T. NEWFOUNDLAND. VOL. 20, p. 81. 1768.

_____	Coast of Labrador.
		Total.
Number of British Fishing Ships	6 and 17 from Newfoundland recond there.
Burthen of British Fishing Ships	750
N ^o . of Men belonging to British Fishing Ships	172
N ^o . of Boats kept by British Fishing Ships	24 and 130 from Newfoundland Recond there.
Quintals of Fish made by British Fishing Ships	5,300 & 12,000 by Vessels from Newfoundland Recond there.
Carried to Foreign Markets. Quintals of Fish	5,300 & 12,000 to Newfoundland Recond there.
Tons of Train Oil made by British Fishing Ships	25
Value of	{ Seal Oil made last Winter	£4,920
	{ Furs taken by the Inhabitants	£46
Number of Stages		13
N ^o . of People that remain ^d last Winter distinguish ^g	{ Masters	12
	{ Men Servants	120
	{ Mistresses	1

[1770.]

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL SCHEME OF THE
FISHERY AND INHABITANTS OF
NEWFOUNDLAND FOR THE YEAR 1770.

COL. COR. NEWFOUNDLAND. VOL. 5. 1770.

	Coast of Labrador including Chateaux, St. Augustine, Brador, Isle Bois, Cape Charles and S ^t Modest.
N ^o of British Fishing Ships	8
Burthen of British Fishing Ships	740
N ^o of Men belonging to British Fishing Ships	71
N ^o of Passengers bro ^t out in British Ships from England	177
N ^o . of Boats kept by { British Fishing Ships	60
{ Inhabitants	1
Quintals of Fish { British Fishing Ships	6,090
made by { Inhabitants	70
Carried to Foreign Markets. Quintals of Fish	5,940
Tons of Train Oil { British Fishing Ships	13
made by { Inhabitants	277
Prices of the { Fish p. Quintal	10/-
{ Train Oil p. Ton	15 to 14 £
Value of the { Seal Oil made last Winter	£3,825
{ Seal Cow Oil	£799
N ^o of { Stages	9
{ Train fats	5
N ^o of Families. In Private Houses	3
N ^o of Acres of Land Improved	1
N ^o of People that remained { Masters	6
last Winter distinguishing { Men Servants	55
Since the departure of the last Convoy. Dead	2
Inhabitants Roman Catholicks. Men	43
J. Byron.
Endorsed : General Scheme of the British Fishery &c ^a at Newfoundland &c ^a in 1770. In Governor Byrons of the 31st December.

[1771.]

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL SCHEME OF THE
FISHERY AND INHABITANTS OF
NEWFOUNDLAND FOR THE YEAR 1771.

COL. COR. NEWFOUNDLAND. VOL. 5. 1771.

		Coast of Labrador including Chateaux, Brador, Isle Bois & St. Modest.
N ^o of	{ British Fishing Ships	8
	{ Trad ^g Ships from America	1
Burthen of	{ British Fishing Ships	565
	{ Trad ^g Ships from America	25
N ^o of Men belonging to	{ British Fishing Ships	61
	{ Trad ^g Ships from America	7
N ^o of Passengers bro ^t out in the British Ships from	{ England	40
	{ Ireland	55
N ^o of Boats kept by	{ British Fishing Ships	47
	{ Bye Boat Men	4
N ^o of Byeboatmen	{ Masters	1
	{ Servants	127
Quintals of Fish made by	{ British Fishing Ships	8260
	{ Bye Boatmen	730
Carried to Foreign Marketts, Quintals of Fish		7400
Tons of Train Oil made by	{ British Fishing Ships	14
	{ Bye Boatmen	2
Prices of the	{ Fish p. Quintal	13—6
	{ Train Oil p. Ton	12 to 18£
Value of the Seal Oil made last Winter		£1243
N ^o of	{ Stages	9
	{ Trainfats	6
N ^o of People that remained last Winter, distinguishing	{ Masters	2
	{ Men Servants	21
Inhabitants, Roman Catholicks, Men		3

J. Byron.

Endorsed : Scheme of the Newfoundland Fishery 1771.
In Gov^r Byrons of the 5th Feb^{ry} 1772.

No. 840.

[24 June,
1772.]

REPRESENTATION OF LORDS OF TRADE TO THE KING,

RECOMMENDING ANNEXATION TO PROVINCE OF QUEBEC OF LABRADOR COAST BETWEEN RIVER ST. JOHN'S AND STREIGHTS OF BELLE ISLE, WITH ADJACENT ISLANDS. 24th June, 1772.

Vide Vol. III, page 1055.

[1772.]

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL SCHEME OF THE
FISHERY AND INHABITANTS OF
NEWFOUNDLAND FOR THE YEAR 1772.

COL. COR. NEWFOUNDLAND. VOL. 5. 1772.

		Coast of Labrador including Chateaux, Brador, Isle Bois & S ^t Modest.
Number of British	{ Fishing Ships	3
	{ Sack Ships	2
Burthen of British	{ Fishing Ships	305
	{ Sack Ships	250
Number of Men	{ Fishing Ships	46
belonging to British	{ Sack Ships	20
N ^o of Boats kept by	{ British Fishing Ships	54
	{ Bye Boat Men	6
	{ Inhabitants	1
Number of	{ Masters	5
Byeboatmen	{ Servants	24
Quintals of Fish	{ British Fishing Ships	9,920
made by	{ Bye Boat Men	105
Carried to Foreign	{ Quintals of Fish	6,500
Markets	{ Tierces of Salmon	140
Tons of Train Oil made by.	British Fishing Ships	57
Prices of the	{ Fish p. Quintal	13 ⁸ / ₆ ^d
	{ Train Oil p. Ton	£17/-
Value of	{ Seal Oil made last Winter	£9,760
	{ Furs taken by the Inhabitants	£25
	{ Truck with the Savages	Hhd. £100 and 36 Furs
Number of	{ Stages	9
	{ Trainfats	2
Number of Families, In Private Houses		14
Number of People	{ Masters	14
that remained last	{ Men Servants	156
Winter disting-	{ Mistresses	1
uishing	{ Children	2
Since the Departure of the last Convoy.	Dead	1
Inhabitants of Roman Catholicks.	Men	116
Of the Winterers	{ Boat Building	22
how many were	{ Sealing	152
Employed in	{ Furring	4
M. Shuldham.
Endorsed : Newfoundland, Scheme of the English Fishery for the year 1772.
Delivered by Governor Shuldham 9 Dec ^r 1772.

No. 842.

[2 March,
1773.]

REPRESENTATION OF LORDS OF TRADE TO THE KING UPON MEMORIALS PRESENTED BY GEO.
CARTWRIGHT AND NOBLE AND PINSON. 2
March, 1773.

Vide Vol. III, page 1069.

[2 March,
1773.]

No. 843.

C

REPRESENTATION OF LORDS OF TRADE TO COMMITTEE OF PRIVY COUNCIL,
RE CONSIDERATION OF THEIR REPRESENTATION OF 24 JUNE, 1772–
2 March, 1773.

Vide Vol. III, page 1072.

[9 March,
1773.]

No. 844.

C

DISPATCH FROM DARTMOUTH TO SHULDHAM.
9 March, 1773.

Vide Vol. III, page 1074.

No. 845.

[1773.]

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL SCHEME OF THE
FISHERY AND INHABITANTS OF
NEWFOUNDLAND FOR THE YEAR 1773.

COL. COR. NEWFOUNDLAND 1773. VOL. 6, p. 183.

	Coast of Labrador including Chateaux, Brador, Isle Bois and St. Modest.
Number of British Fishing Ships	8
Burthen of British Fishing Ships	910
N ^o of Men belonging to British Fishing Ships	71
N ^o . of Passengers bro ^t out in the British Ships from	<table border="0"> <tr> <td style="font-size: 2em; vertical-align: middle;">{</td> <td>England</td> <td style="text-align: right;">31</td> </tr> <tr> <td></td> <td>Ireland</td> <td style="text-align: right;">67</td> </tr> <tr> <td></td> <td>Jersey</td> <td style="text-align: right;">15</td> </tr> </table>	{	England	31		Ireland	67		Jersey	15
{	England	31
	Ireland	67
	Jersey	15
N ^o of Boats kept by British Fishing Ships	33
Quintals of Fish m ^a by British Fishing Ships	10,000
Carried to Foreign Markets	<table border="0"> <tr> <td style="font-size: 2em; vertical-align: middle;">{</td> <td>Quintals of Fish</td> <td style="text-align: right;">6,100</td> </tr> <tr> <td></td> <td>Tierces of Salmon</td> <td style="text-align: right;">265</td> </tr> </table>	{	Quintals of Fish	6,100		Tierces of Salmon	265
{	Quintals of Fish	6,100
	Tierces of Salmon	265
Tons of Train Oil m ^a by British Fishing Ships	200
Value of	<table border="0"> <tr> <td style="font-size: 2em; vertical-align: middle;">{</td> <td>Seal Oil made last Winter</td> <td style="text-align: right;">£23,023</td> </tr> <tr> <td></td> <td>Of Truck from the Savages</td> <td style="text-align: right;">12 Hhds Furs &ca.</td> </tr> </table>	{	Seal Oil made last Winter	£23,023		Of Truck from the Savages	12 Hhds Furs &ca.
{	Seal Oil made last Winter	£23,023
	Of Truck from the Savages	12 Hhds Furs &ca.
Number of	<table border="0"> <tr> <td style="font-size: 2em; vertical-align: middle;">{</td> <td>Stages</td> <td style="text-align: right;">6</td> </tr> <tr> <td></td> <td>Trainfats</td> <td style="text-align: right;">29</td> </tr> </table>	{	Stages	6		Trainfats	29
{	Stages	6
	Trainfats	29
Number of Families in Private Houses	17
N ^o of People that remained last Winter, disting ^g	<table border="0"> <tr> <td style="font-size: 2em; vertical-align: middle;">{</td> <td>Masters</td> <td style="text-align: right;">19</td> </tr> <tr> <td></td> <td>Men Servants</td> <td style="text-align: right;">264</td> </tr> <tr> <td></td> <td>Children</td> <td style="text-align: right;">Boys 4</td> </tr> </table>	{	Masters	19		Men Servants	264		Children	Boys 4
{	Masters	19
	Men Servants	264
	Children	Boys 4
Inhabitants Roman Catholicks	Men 126
Of the Winterers how many were employed in	<table border="0"> <tr> <td style="font-size: 2em; vertical-align: middle;">{</td> <td>Boat Building</td> <td style="text-align: right;">2</td> </tr> <tr> <td></td> <td>Sealing</td> <td style="text-align: right;">227</td> </tr> </table>	{	Boat Building	2		Sealing	227
{	Boat Building	2
	Sealing	227
M. Shuldham.
Endorsed : In Gov ^r Shuldham's of 5 th Nov ^r 1773.

[1774.]

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL SCHEME OF THE
FISHERY AND INHABITANTS OF
NEWFOUNDLAND FOR THE YEAR 1774.

COL. COR. NEWFOUNDLAND. VOL. 7. 1774.

Endorsed: In Governor Shuldham's of the 23^d November

		Coast of Labrador by Adventurers from Great Britain and Jersey.	Coast of Labrador by Canadians.
Number of British	{ Fishing Ships	11	2
	{ Stack Ships	...	1
Burthen of British	{ Fishing Ships	2,034	260
	{ Stack Ships	...	40
N ^o of Men belonging to British	{ Fishing Ships	426	13
	{ Stack Ships	...	4
N ^o of Passengers bro ^t out in the British Ships from	{ England	5	...
	{ Ireland	119	...
N ^o of Boats kept by British Fishing Ships		43	1
Quintals of Fish made by British Fishing Ships		12,086	20
Carried to foreign Markets	{ Quintals of Fish	12,436	...
	{ Tierces of Salmon	865	...
Tons of Train Oil made by British Fishing Ships		29	...
Value of	{ Seal Oil made last Winter	£2,565	£12,717
	{ Furs taken by Inhabitants	£46	£68
	{ Of Truck with the Savages	£30	...
N ^o of	{ Stages	7	...
	{ Train fats	9	...
N ^o of Families in private Houses		5	19
N ^o of Acres of Land improved		1	...
N ^o of People that remained last Winter (distinguishing)	{ Masters	1	...
	{ Men Servents	145	179
	{ Mistresses	2	...
	{ Women Servents	4	...
	{ Children	6	...
Since y ^e depart ^{re} of the last Convoy	Dead	1	...
Inhabitants Roman Cathlicks	Men	83	179
Of the Winterers how many are Employ'd in	{ Boat Building	14	...
	{ Sealing	127	179
	{ Furring	4	...
	M. Shuldham.
Right Hon ^{ble} Earl of Dartmouth.

No. 847.

[1775.]

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL SCHEME OF THE
FISHERY AND INHABITANTS OF
NEWFOUNDLAND FOR THE YEAR 1775.

COL. COR. NEWFOUNDLAND. VOL. 7. 1775.

	Coast of Labrador by Adventurers from Great Britain and Jersey.	Coast of Labrador by Canadians.
Number of British Fishing Ships	12	..
Burthen of British Fishing Ships	1,190	..
Number of Men belonging to British Fishing Ships	483	..
N ^o . of Boats kept by British Fishing Ships	42	..
Quintals of Fish made by British Fishing Ships	11,950	..
Carried to Foreign Markets	{ Quintals of Fish Tierces of Salmon	{
Tons of Train Oil made by British Fishing Ships	43	..
Prices of the	{ Fish ^q Quintal Salmon ^q Tierce Train Oil ^q Ton	{
Value of	{ Seal Oil made last Winter Furs taken by Inhabitants Truck from the Savages	{ £2,952 £582 £150
Number of	{ Stages Trainfats	{
Number of Families In private houses	7	1
Number of people that remained last Winter distinguishing	{ Masters Men Servents Mistresses Women Servents Children	{ 166 1 7 9 ..
Since the Departure of the last Convoy	{ Born Dead	{

Of the Winterers how many Employed in Sealing	166	143
Endorsed: In Gov ^r Duff's of 14 Nov ^r 1775. Robert Duff

No. 848.

[1775-1839.]

INSTRUCTIONS OF GOVERNORS OF PROVINCE OF QUEBEC (AND LOWER CANADA).

ARTICLES 33–36, INCLUSIVE. 1775–1839.

Vide Vol. II, pp. 833, 856, 879, 882.

[1775.]

No. 849.

IMPERIAL ACT 15 GEO. III., C. 31 (SIR HUGH PALLISER'S ACT).

SECTION 4. 1775.

Vide Vol. I, page 257.

No. 850.

[1776.]

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL SCHEME OF THE
FISHERY AND INHABITANTS OF
NEWFOUNDLAND FOR THE YEAR 1776.

COL. COR. NEWFOUNDLAND. VOL. 8. 1776.

Endorsed: In Vice Adm^r Montagu's of 12th November 1776.
(3)

		Coast of Labrador by Adventurers from Great Britain and Jersey.	Coast of Labrador by Canadians.
Number of British	{ Fishing Ships	10	..
	{ Of which are Bankers	1	..
	{ Sack Ships	1	..
Number of Trading Ships from America		1	..
Burthen of British	{ Fishing Ships	960	..
	{ Sack Ships	70	..
Burthen of Trading Ships from America		160	..
Number of Men belonging to British	{ Fishing Ships	167	..
	{ Sack Ships	8	..
Number of Men belonging to Trading Ships from America		11	..
Number of Passengers brought out in the British Ships from	{ England	55	..
	{ Ireland	10	..
Number of Boats kept by	{ British Fishing Ships	29	..
	{ Inhabitants	1	..
Quintals of Fish made by	{ British Fishing Ships	9,000	..
	{ Inhabitants	320	..
Carried to foreign Markets	{ Quintals of Fish	9,000	..
	{ Tierces of Salmon	1,032	..
Tons of Train Oil made by	{ British Fishing Ships	29	..
	{ Inhabitants	1	..
Prices of the	{ Fish per Quintal	11 ⁸ /	..
	{ Salmon per Tierce	£2	..
	{ Train Oil per Ton	£20	..
Value of	{ Seal Oil made last Winter	£1,450	2,840
	{ Furs taken by Inhabitants	£110	£500
Number of	{ Stages	6	..
	{ Trainfats	6	..
Number of Families in Private Houses		2	..
Number of People that remained last Winter distinguishin ^g	{ Masters	3	9
	{ Men Servents	107	170
	{ Mistresses	2	..
	{ Wom ⁿ Servents	3	..
Since the Departure of last Convoy	{ Born	1	..
	{ Dead	1	..
Of the Winterers how many	{ Boat Building	12	..
	{ Sealing	108	170

Employed in { Furring

4
J. Montagu.

..

No. 851.

[1779.]

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL SCHEME OF THE
FISHERY AND INHABITANTS OF
NEWFOUNDLAND FOR THE YEAR 1779.

COL. COR. NEWFOUNDLAND. VOL. 9. 1779.

		Labrador.
		Fox Harbour Battle Harbour Cape Charles Charles Harbour		Lewis Bay Spear Harbour Mackeys Harb ^f		Murray Harb ^f Chatteau Forto
Number of British	{ Fishing Ships	3	..	1	..
	{ Sack Ships	3	4	5
Burthen of British	{ Fishing Ships	420	..	50	..
	{ Sack Ships	420	300	350
Number of Men belonging to British	{ Fishing Ships	32	..	8	..
	{ Sack Ships	32	136	144
Number of Passengers in the British Fishing Ships		30	..
Number of Boats kept by	{ Fishing Ships	14	..	9	..
	{ Bye Boatmen	6	2	..
	{ Inhabitants	..	6	..	14	..	11
Quintils of Fish made by	{ Fishing Ships	2500	..	4000	..
	{ Bye Boatmen	1640	600	..
	{ Inhabitants	..	1640	..	2500	..	4600
Carried to Foreign Markets	{ Quintils of Fish	1500	..	900
	{ Tierces of Salmon	300	..	212	..	250	..
Tons of Train Oil made by	{ Fishing Ships	3	..	2	..
	{ Bye Boatmen	2½	½	..
	{ Inhabitants	..	2½	..	3	½	3
Price of	{ Fish p ^f Quintil	0 10 6	..	0 10 6	..	0 10 6	..
	{ Salmon p ^f Tierce	2 0 0	..	2 0 0	..	2 0 0	..
	{ Train Oil p ^f Ton	17 0 C	..	17 0 0	..	17 0 0	..
Value of	{ Seal Oil made last Winter	£590	..	£2350	..	£1090	..
	{ Furs taken by Inhabitants	£20	..	£650	..	£100	..
Number of	{ Stages	4	..	4	..	4	..
	{ Train Fatts	5	..	4	..	11	..
Number of Families in	{ Private Houses	7	..	11	..	4	..
	{ Public Houses	..	7	..	11	..	4
Number of Inhabitants Distinguished Which remain'd in the Country last Winter	{ Masters	3	..	3	..
	{ Mistresses	1	..	2	..
	{ Men Servants	15	..	54	..	52	..
	{ Woman Servants	2	..	1	..	3	..
	{ Children	..	17	2	61	3	63
Since the last Convey sailed	{ Born	1	..	1	..	2	..
	{ Dead	1	..
N ^o of Rom ⁿ Catholick Inhabitants	{ Men	100
	{ Women	1
	{ Children	101

Endorsed. In Gov^r Edwards of 9th Dec^r 1779. —(4)

[1785.]

EXTRACT FROM GENERAL RETURN OF THE NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERY FOR THE YEAR 1785.
VICE ADMIRAL JOHN CAMPBELL GOVERNOR.

COL. COR. NEWFOUNDLAND. VOL. 11. 1785.

[sic]

	Labrador Coast.
		Total.
Number of British fishing Ships	8	8
Burthen of British fishing Ships	1130	1130
N ^o of Men belonging to British fishing Ships	93	93
Passengers from
{ Ireland	92	..
{ Jersey	50	142
Number of Boats kept by
{ British fishing Ships	45	..
{ Bye Boat Men	4	49
Number of Bye Boatmen
{ Masters	2	..
{ Servants	20	22
Quintils of Fish made by
{ British fishing Ships	12300	..
{ Bye Boatmen	1200	13500
Carried to foreign Markets
{ Quintilsof Fish	..	13500
{ Tierces of Salmon	..	696
Tons of Oil made by
{ British fishing Ships	56	..
{ Bye Boatmen	5	61
Prices of
{ Fish th Quintil	..	12/
{ Salmon th Tierce	..	40/
{ Train Oil th Ton	..	£17
Value of
{ Seal Oil made last Winter	..	£1572
{ Furrs taken	..	£110
{ Truck with the Indians	..	£20
Number of
{ Stages	12	..
{ Train fatts	18	30
N ^o of Families in Private Houses	6	6
No of Inhabitants disting
{ Masters	2	..
{ Men Servants	257	..
{ Mistresses	4	..
{ Woman Servants	1	..
{ Children	12	276
Of which remained in the Country last Winter
{ Masters	2	..
{ Men Servants	134	..
{ Mistresses	4	..
{ Woman Servants	1	..
{ Children	12	153
Since departure of the last Convoy
{ Born	..	1
{ Dead	..	2

Saint Johns, Newfoundland, 28 October 1785
Jn^o Campbell
Gov : and Com : in Chief
Endorsed : In Voce Adm^l Campbell's of 16 Nov.
1785. (No. 7)

No. 853.

[1789.]

IMPERIAL ACT 29 GEO. III., CAP. 53. 1789.

PREAMBLE.

—

Vide Vol. I, page 286.

No. 854

[10 March 1820.]

MARTHA ROWE, ADMINISTRATIX, AGAINST THE HEIRS OF THOMAS STREET. ¹

The whole of the sea-coast of this island is dedicated to the fishery, by the 10 and 11 William III, c. 25 ; and, therefore, the Governor cannot grant any part thereof.

Action to recover possession of a fishing-room at Trinity ; and also to recover the sum of £50, being for five years' rent, at £10 per annum, from the year 1813 to 1817.

Per Curiam. This case is very defective of evidence. It is stated that the late Thos. Street, deceased, obtained a grant of the fishing-room in question for James Rowe, who, in consideration of this service, allowed him to retain the use of the room during his life. All this is very unlikely, insomuch that I should have suspected there were other causes for this arrangement if they had not partly been stated and admitted at the hearing.

It now turns out that Rowe, becoming involved with his creditors in England, by way of securing his plantation from being taken in satisfaction of his debts, obtained a grant through the intercession of Street. As against the creditors, this grant was void, because it has been repeatedly held that the governor cannot grant any part of the island adapted to the fishery. The whole of the sea-coast is already granted away by the statute of William. As between the parties, however, to the arrangement, I must take as my guide the intentions which probably governed them.

It is stated by Adams, in an affidavit taken de bene esse, that he received a letter from Street, for whom he acted as agent in this island, in the year 1805, in which he acknowledged that he held the plantation in question by permission from Rowe, during such time as he thought fit to use it. This is corroborated by the fact that the property has actually since been given up (subject to a subsisting lease) to Rowe's representatives. On the one hand, this is considered as a voluntary act, proceeding, ex mero motu, of Street's widow ; while, on the other, it is regarded as an admission of the right of Rowe's representatives. With the latter view of the case, under all circumstances, I agree ; and, therefore, I hold them entitled to the surplus rents received by Street's representatives, together with the reversionary interest in the lease itself. Beyond this, however, I cannot go.—The property was leased to Macbraire, and under-leased by him, after a length of possession, and with every appearance of right, sufficient to warrant a title in the lessor. If the Rowes have fallen asleep over their better claim, it is their fault, and should not prejudice innocent parties.

¹ Newfoundland Select Cases, 1817–1828, pp. 240–242.

HUNTERS & CO., APPELLANTS, AND TRUSTEES OF JOHN LANGDON, RESPONDENTS.¹

[12 May, 1823.]

The Surrogate Court decided, that the law of current-supply does not extend to a general trader; and that the 49th Geo. III., c. 27, is not applicable to the seal-fishery.

The appellants had furnished John Langdon with supplies for the fisheries, to the amount of £27 15s. 0d., which Langdon had made over to the owner of a schooner fitted out by him for the seal-fishery; and the appellants had brought their action in the Court below against the trustees of Langdon for this sum, upon the ground that they were entitled, in the settlement of Langdon's estate, to a preference as current suppliers. Judgment had, however, been given against them, and reasons are assigned by the Surrogate in support of his decision: First, that Langdon was a general trader, and that credit had been given to him by Hunters & Co. as a general merchant. Secondly, that the 49th Geo. III., c. 27, is not applicable to the seal-fishery, but is entirely confined to the cod-fishery. In appealing, therefore, against this judgment, Simms, on behalf of the appellants, contended, that both the ground upon which it was founded were bad in law, and referred to Le Messurier's, Kelly's, Graham's, and Dolly's cases, in support of his objection. On the other side, Hayward insisted that the judgment below was right in whatever light it may be viewed; and contended, as in the former case, that the Supreme Court had not power to review it.

The Court deferred judgment to a future day; and afterwards dismissed the appeal, on the grounds stated in the judgment on the foregoing case.

¹ Newfoundland Select Cases, 1817–1828, pp. 335–336.

No. 856.

THE KING v. CUDDIHY.¹

TUCKER, C.J., DESBARRES AND BRENTON, J.J.

Crown lands—"Ship's-rooms"—History and basis of title to land in Newfoundland—Various classes of land—Title as against the Crown—Effort of Statutes in relation to "Ships-room."

A proceeding by the Crown to recover possession of certain lands comprised in what was known as "Ships-room." History and basis of title to land in Newfoundland reviewed.

In this case the following information was filed ex officio by the Attorney General:—

St. John's (to wit): Be it remembered that James Simms, Esq., Attorney General of our Sovereign Lord the now King who for our said Sovereign Lord the King prosecutes in this behalf in his proper person comes here into the Court of our said Lord the King before the King himself, at St. John's, in the Island of Newfoundland, in this same term and for our said Lord the King gives the Court here to understand and be informed that in and by a certain Act of the Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, passed in the 51st year of his late Majesty King George the 3rd,* intituled "An Act for taking away the Public Use of certain Ships-rooms in the town of St. John's, in the Island of Newfoundland, and for instituting Surrogate Courts on the coast of Labrador and certain Islands adjacent thereto," it is enacted that from and after the passing of the said Act, certain ships-rooms in the said Act mentioned and enumerated, situate in the town of St. John's, as the same are laid down distinguished and named in a plan of the town and harbour of St. John's in Newfoundland, dated October, 1804, and deposited in the Government House there, shall no longer be deemed and taken to be ships rooms and occupied during the fishing season as such ; but it shall be lawful for the same to be granted, let, possessed, as private property in like manner as any other portions of land in Newfoundland may be. Yet one John Cuddihy, late of St. John's aforesaid, not having regard for the laws and statutes of this realm, since the passing of the said in part recited Act of Parliament, to wit, on the 1st of June, in the first year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, and on divers other days and times between that day and the day of exhibiting this information, with force and arms at St. John's aforesaid into and upon a certain ships-room, called the "Lady's Ships-room, No. 2," situated in the town of St. John, being a ships-room in the said Act of Parliament mentioned and enumerated, and as the same is laid down distinguished and named in the aforementioned plan of the town and harbour of St. John's aforesaid, subject to the purposes and provisions aforesaid and in the said Act contained, did break and intrude, and then and there did unlawfully enclose and fence in with posts and rails a certain plot or parcel of the said “ Lady’s Ship-room,” bounded on the west by Queen Street, and being 24 feet thereby, and running across the said room on the south of the said plot 91 feet, and on the east boundary of the said plot running 50 feet, and did unlawfully continue in and hold the same plot or parcel of the said “ Lady’s Ships-room,” thence and until the day of exhibiting this information, unto the use of him the said John Cuddihy in contempt of his said late Majesty King George the Fourth and his rights, and also in contempt of our said Lord the now King and his rights, and against the form of the Statute in such case made and provided : Wherefore the said Attorney General, for our said Lord the now King prosecutes in this behalf, prays the consideration of the Court, here in the premises, and that due process of law may be awarded against the said John Cuddihy in this behalf to make him answer to our said Lord the King touching and concerning the premises aforesaid.”

¹ Newfoundland Reports, 1829-45, pp. 8-26. Cap. 45.

To which the defendant pleaded not guilty.

The Attorney General laid before the jury an outline of the facts of his case ; and in support thereof called as witness.

GEORGE HOLEBROOK.—Is Surveyor General of this Island, and knows the spot of ground formerly called “ Lady’s Ships-room.” The plan of St. John’s now produced by witness is the original and true plan thereof referred to by the Legislature in 51st George III., c. 45, sec. 1. The defendant is in possession of a part of the ground laid down in this plan as “ Lady’s Ships-room.” Witness surveyed the part so occupied by the defendant, and has traced the extent thereof in the plan which he now produces. The encroachment actually includes 24 feet on the south-west boundary ; fifty feet on the north-east ; and 91 feet on the north and south extremities. The part comprised in these limits witness feels assured is a portion of what is laid down in the parliamentary plan of the town as “ Lady’s Ships-room” and the survey by which this encroachment on that ships-room was ascertained, was made about five years ago by witness, who gave notice thereof to the defendant by driving wooden stakes to designate the limits of the encroachment.

Cross-examined.—Has been Surveyor General nine or ten years. The plan referred to in the Act of Parliament was formed in October, 1804, at which time several parts of the ships-room included in that plan were in possession of private individuals. “ Lady’s Ships-room,” in particular, was composed of two parts : one occupied by residents in the town, and the other unoccupied.

Upon this testimony the Attorney General rested his case ; and to answer it Mr. Lilly, after having addressed the jury at considerable length, and with much feeling on the harshness of a proceeding under which the Crown now attempted to seize into its hands a spot of ground which he was prepared to prove had been in possession of the defendant, and those underwhom he claimed, for sixty years, recalled as a witness :

p. 2033

GEORGE HOLEBROOK.—The manuscript-book now produced by witness is brought from the Government office, and is numbered Vol. 3 of the early acts and proceedings of the Government. Witness turns to a page of the said book in which there is an entry of authority, under date of 26th October, 1759, from Admiral Edwards (then Governor of the Island) to one Joseph Nowell to occupy and possess a spot of ground in St. John's agreeably to the metes and boundaries therein described. He also produces a lease from Governor Sir John Duckworth, dated 23rd October, 1811, to Stabb, Preston & Co., of all "Lady's Ships-room," extending 250 feet on Queen Street and 64 feet on Water Street, and bounded on the north by premises in the occupation of Martin Fitzgerald, and on the east by premises leased to Stephen Knight. The piece of ground which forms the subject of the present suit is not a part of the ground comprised within the lease to Stabb, Preston & Co., according to the boundaries set forth in that lease, although it does, in general terms, profess to be a conveyance of all "Lady's Ships-room."

Cross-examined.—Cannot say positively that the lease to Stabb, Preston & Co. has been surrendered by them, though he believes that it has. On the side of Queen Street, opposite to that which forms the boundary of Stabb, Preston and Co.'s lease, there is ground which also belongs to "Lady's Ships-room," according to the parliamentary chart or plan of it.

(The counsel for the defendant here contended, that under the lease to Stabb, Preston & Co., all the Crown's interest in "Lady's Ships-room," east of Queen Street passed to the lessees; and consequently, that if there was more of "Lady's Ships-room" to the east than was comprised within the boundaries expressed in the lease, the lessees were still entitled to that excess, and the Crown accordingly estopped from claiming it, unless it could prove—what it had here failed to do—the surrender of that lease.

The Court considered there was but little force in this objection; as, under a general rule of law, the grant must be construed most favourably for the King, so as to prevent anything from passing under the term "all" beyond what was contained within the boundaries particularly set forth in the lease. To give to the defendant, however, every advantage to which he might possibly be entitled, the point was reserved for future consideration, in the event of a verdict being obtained by the Crown.

The defendant's counsel next called 2nd Witness—CORNELIUS WINTON. Is a subscribing witness to the deed now produced: and saw Thomas Nowell duly sign and execute the same. [The deed, which was from Thomas Nowell, the descendant of that Joseph Nowell to whom a license of occupation of the ground in question was granted by Governor Edwards, in 1759, was then read by the Clerk of the Court. It was dated 8th December, 1820; and under it

p. 2034

Thomas Nowell conveyed to the defendant, in fee-simple, for a valuable consideration, the ground now in dispute, together with some other land at present in defendant's possession.]

3rd Witness—JAMES HONAN.—Arrived in St. John's more than 60 years ago (i.e. in the spring of 1770) and has resided here ever since, with the exception of three years spent at Trepassey, and five or six years at Bay Bulls. On his first arrival witness served Mr. Boden, who had a fishing establishment close to the ground in dispute, which was then in the occupation of Joseph Nowell, whose house was within eight or ten feet of the fence enclosing the property now occupied by the defendant. It was even at that time an ancient house ; and must have actually stood on a part of the ground now claimed by Government. Witness himself lived at one period on the premises, as tenant to one Undry, who was the lessee of Nowell ; and never knew any part of the ground now in defendant's occupation to be used, or claimed, by the public as a ship's room. On the contrary, there was a path-way between defendant's property and the neighbouring fishing-room : and the fence is now very nearly in the same situation in which it stood when witness first knew it.

(This witness, who is a man of 80 years of age, then proceeded to enumerate all the occupiers of the ground in dispute, in continuous succession, from Joseph Nowell, whom he found in possession in 1770, down to the present defendant.)

4th Witness—NICHOLAS BROWN.&$8212;The fire of 1824 burnt down some houses belonging to defendant. Witness knew them well, having a short time before repaired them. They came within 10 feet of the fence as it now stands, and this fence, which was erected after the destruction of the former one by the fire, follows the line of the old one very nearly ; the only difference arising from the defendant's having given up to the public a small space which was contained within the former enclosure, in order to preserve a perpendicular or right line with the street. The houses destroyed by the fire of 1824 were ancient buildings. One of them, in particular, looked like an old house when witness first saw it about 18 years ago.

The defence here closed ; and the Attorney General having urged, in his reply, every argument by which his claim to a verdict could be supported, Chief Justice TUCKER delivered the case to the jury in a charge, the substance of which is as follows :

The verdict ought to be governed by the opinion which the jury might form upon one, or both, of two great questions into which the case resolved itself ; viz :

1st.—Was the piece of ground which the Crown now sought to recover from the defendant a part of any ground which, since the year 1685, had been used by fishing ships ; and included, as such, in the 51st Geo. III.,
c.
45, s. 1, under the description of “ Lady's Ships-room ? ”

p. 1915

2nd.—Admitting the ground in dispute to have been part of “ Lady's Ships-room ” can the claim which the Crown
now prefers to it be defeated by the proof which
the defendant has adduced of the possession of it by himself, and those under whom he claims, for sixty years ?

The first is altogether a question of fact ; and must accordingly be decided entirely by the evidence.

By the 51st Geo. III., c. 45, s. 1, a plan of the town of St. John's is referred to as descriptive of the several " Ships-rooms " mentioned in that section ; and it seems, therefore, that such plan must be considered conclusive evidence of their respective limits : so that if the jury fairly believe that the ground in dispute is laid down in that plan as part of " Lady's Ships-room " they must find that it did actually belong to that ships-room, since no evidence could be admissible to controvert that point.

But there certainly is nothing in the Act of Parliament to prevent the jury from deciding whether or not this ground is really a part of that ground which is so laid down in the parliamentary plan as " Lady's Ships-room ; " and in the investigation of this subject they ought to weigh the evidence on both sides with fairness and strict impartiality.

On the part of the Crown they have the testimony of the present Surveyor General, who tells them that from a survey, and careful comparison of that survey with the plan of 1804, he is convinced that the disputed ground is part of the lot laid down in that plan as " Lady's Ships-room."

To rebut this strong presumptive evidence against him, the defendant has produced, (in addition to the parol testimony of the venerable witness Honan who proves that the ground which forms the subject-matter of the present suit has not been used as part of " Lady's Ships-room. " within the last sixty years), 1st—A license from Governor Duckworth, dated in 1759, to Joseph Nowell, to occupy this identical spot of ground ; and 2ndly, a lease from Governor Duckworth, made under the powers conferred on him by the 51st Geo. III., c. 45, which professes to convey all " Lady's Ships-room " to the lessees, and yet, as has been clearly shown in evidence, does not comprise the ground in dispute. And his counsel contends that these documents lead irresistibly to the inference, that the disputed ground was at no time a part, and, consequently, could not have been laid down as such in the plan of 1804, of " Lady's Ships-room : " because if it ever were a part of a ships-room, Governor Edwards' license to Nowell to occupy it was a violent infraction of the law, which the jury are bound to suppose he would not wantonly have been guilty of ; and 2ndly, because Governor Duckworth, with all the means of ascertaining, by the report of a Surveyor General, the true boundaries of " Lady's Ships-room " under the description of it given in the plan of 1804, with the temptation of selling at the highest price which has ever been given for land in this country every inch that he could legally part with, and with a dispotion to improve to the utmost every opportunity of increasing the public revenue, would not have failed to sell this ground as part of “ Lady’s Ships-room ” if he had not been thoroughly convinced, upon evidence equally strong with that upon which the jury are now called on to decide in favour of the Crown, that it really did not belong to it.

Between this conflicting testimony, then, it is the peculiar province of the jury to determine to which side the greatest weight and credit ought to attach.—The evidence of Mr. Holbrook certainly carries with it much force ; not only as coming from an individual whose well known integrity places beyond the suspicion of wilfully misrepresenting facts, but whose professional knowledge must also render it improbable that he can be mistaken in the opinion he has offered upon them. Still, however, it is possible that he may so : and unquestionably the omission on the part of a keen and vigilant Governor, like Sir John Duckworth, who seized with avidity every occasion of adding to the Public Revenue, to dispose of this spot of ground at a time when a most exorbitant rent might have been obtained for it, can only be accounted for by supposing, either that he had ascertained by actual measurement, that it was not a part of “ Lady’s Ships-room,” as laid down in the parliamentary plan ; or, if it were indeed a part of it, that he did not consider himself authorised, under a just construction of the statute, to grant or let those parts of “ ships-rooms ” which, before the passing of the Act, had been “ possessed ” and occupied by private persons. If his non-interference with the ground now in dispute was influenced by the last of these motives, it can have no tendency whatever to invalidate Mr. Holbrook’s testimony ; and the jury ought, consequently, to be very cautious in admitting inferential deductions to counterbalance positive statements. Should they, however, upon a fair and careful examination of the evidence, truly and conscientiously believe that the disputed premises are not a part or portion, of “ Lady’s Ships-room,” as laid down in the parliamentary plan, they must, of course, give a verdict for the defendant ; but should they arrive at an opposite conclusion on this point, the far more difficult question will arise ; viz. Whether the Crown is entitled to recover the ground it now lays claim to, even if it does form a part of “ Lady’s Ships-room ? ”

As this is entirely a legal problem, the jury have a right to look to the Bench for information and instruction upon it : and the Court will not attempt to conceal that it enters upon the discharge of this duty with intensely painful feelings of anxiety and apprehension. Not, however, with feelings of any apprehension lest it should incur the disapprobation of the Government, by advancing doctrines contrary to its views and supposed interests ; nor, on the other hand, lest public censure and obloquy should attend a fair assertion of the legal rights of the Crown—for against the influence of such unworthy fears, even if a foundation for them should at any time exist, the Judges confidently trust they will ever be strongly fortified by a determination conscientiously to discharge their sacred functions without the least regard to any consequences which may result to themselves from a faithful and independent performance of their duty—but with feelings of apprehension originating in a real diffidence and distrust in their capacity and ability to handle a subject which has puzzled some of the most distinguished lawyers in England, and on which even the great Lord Hardwicke seems to have been averse from offering an opinion. The question, of what is a good title to land in this colony is, indeed, accompanied with such circumstances of doubt and difficulty that there is probably not a single individual, however confident he may feel in his professional talents and attainments, who could not decline a gratuitous discussion to it : and certainly nothing short of the coercive force of public duty could induce the Judges on this Bench to enter on a task which they have such reason to consider greatly beyond the measure of any strength and power they can bring to the execution of it. Compelled, however, as they have been by the present suit, and others of a similar nature which are also pending in the Court, to endeavour to form a settled and determined opinion upon this knotty question, they have investigated it in all its bearings with as much attention as the very small share of leisure they are permitted to enjoy would allow them to bestow upon it ; and they are, accordingly, now prepared to deliver their unanimous sentiments respecting it, not with dogmatical arrogance, as positively asserting that their opinion is right, but with an hope that it may prove to be correct, and with an honest confidence in the belief that it is so.

To exhibit the foundation upon which this opinion rests, it will be necessary to advert to the early history of this Island ; and to take a comprehensive view of all the Acts of Parliament which affect the right of the inhabitants of Newfoundland to hold land in it.

For many years after its discovery Newfoundland was nothing more than a station for carrying on a transitory fishery ; and everything in it was exclusively dedicated to the use of the vessels which annually repaired hither for the purpose of catching fish on the banks and coasts of the Island. It was probably a long time ere any attempt was made to form a permanent establishment on the shore ; and the first step towards it was perhaps made by a few persons who were left here during the winter by the masters of the fishing ships to take care of some articles of property, which, from motives of convenience, they are occasionally induced to leave behind them. In spite, however, of the severity and rigour of the climate, a resident population gradually grew up in the Island ; and with it arose a sedentary fishery, which was always considered to be most prejudicial to the success of the transitory fishery. The hostility which grew out of these conflicting interests, attended as it was by many acts of annoyance committed by the persons engaged in the transitory fishery, who were numerically, and still more in political influence, the stronger side, against the residents in the Island must, of course, have impeded the progress of population, but was yet so unable to suppress the growth of it that it became, towards the close of the 17th century, an object which was deemed worthy of some attention by the English Parliament : and, accordingly, though the professed object of the 10th and 11th Will. III., c. 25, was to encourage and promote the transitory fishery, it notwithstanding confers some important privileges upon the resident inhabitants. That Act, then, being the corner-stone or first foundation of all statutable claim to land in this country, the following table of the several sorts of title which could exist under it (framed upon a careful examination of its various enactments) seems to form a proper introduction to the subject to the present enquiry.

With reference, therefore, to the 10th and 11th Will. III., c. 25, all the land in this Island may be comprised in these five classes, and the nature of the property or interest which might be acquired or enjoyed in it, under the enactments of that statute, is shortly explained under each of those divisions :

No. I.

Land (whether “ Ship’s-rooms ” or not) seized and exclusively occupied by the resident inhabitants before the year 1685.

Of this class of occupiers (if there were any such) the Acts take no notice whatever ; and since the land in their possession is not in the least affected by any of its provisions, it seem that an uninterrupted possession of it for sixty years would confer a good title to it, even as against the Crown itself, under the general rule of English law.

No. II.

“ Ships-rooms ” which have been seized and occupied by the resident inhabitants in the period between the years 1685 and 1698.

The persons who had so seized on these “ Ships-rooms ” are directed and commanded to resign and relinquish them, to the perpetual use of the fishing-ships, on or before the 25th March, 1700.

No. III.

“ Ships-rooms ” existing as such, free from any interference with them on the part of the inhabitants, at the passing of Act in 1698.

Such “ Ships-rooms ” are specially set apart and exclusively dedicated to the use of fishing-ships for ever.

No. IV.

Land seized and occupied by the inhabitants between the years 1685 and 1698, which had not within that period been used as “ ships-rooms. ”

A quiet and peaceable possession and enjoyment of this land (as far, at least, as the purposes of the fishery are concerned) is secured to the actual occupiers thereof. The opinion of an eminent lawyer, however, is that the title

p. 2039

conferred on them by the Act did not extend beyond a life interest in the land so occupied by them.—(Reeves' History of Newfoundland, p. 63.)

No. V.

Such land (not before used as "Ships-rooms") as may hereafter be seized and occupied by any of the resident inhabitants.

The future occupation of such land, for the purposes of the fishery is permitted and sanctioned by the Act.

Thus all those parts of the country which had at any time been used as "Ships-rooms" since the year 1685, were for ever appropriated to the use of the fishing-ships : but a permission to occupy and possess all the sea-coast, not included in any of these ships-rooms, was distinctly conceded to the resident inhabitants. They were not, however, long left in the quiet enjoyment of this indulgence ; for the 15th Geo. III., c. 31, which was evidently designed to give further encouragement to the transitory fishery, and to check the strong tendency, which had then begun to manifest itself, to form a permanent settlement in the Island, seems, by its 2nd section, to have converted all the land* not then in the actual occupation of a resident inhabitant, into "Ships-rooms ;" and, consequently, to have taken away that privilege with respect to future occupation which the Statute of William had conferred on the inhabitants.

That portion, therefore, of the land which was not clothed with the character of "Ships-rooms," either under the Acts of William or of George the Third, must have been, comparatively, very small indeed : and accordingly, the far greater part of what is now in the occupation of individuals must be liable to be wrested from them by the Crown, if the statutes† which have since taken away the use of "Ships-rooms" do not confer any title on those persons who had previously taken possession of them. A field of litigation between the government and the people would thus be opened, of the extent of which some idea may be formed from the following passages, selected from those extracts which Mr. Reeves has inserted in his History of Newfoundland,‡ from the reports of Commanding Officers of the navy on this station to the Board of Trade.

"It is common that what is done one year, in relation to fishing-rooms, is contradicted the next ; so that the fishing-rooms are not settled to this very day." And another writes :
"I have given out several orders for the admirals and the oldest masters and planters to survey the stages and cook-rooms, etc., to know what belong to ships-rooms and what was boat-rooms ;

That is, all the margin of the shore, together with the land contiguous thereto, which would comprise all the land cultivated in the Island until within a very recent period.

and their report to me was, that they had not been surveyed so long, that there was none, either admirals, masters, or inhabitants, knew one from another.”

But if such difficulty existed in distinguishing “ Ships-rooms ” within twenty* years after the passing of the 10th and 11th William the Third, what may that difficulty be supposed to amount to after the lapse of more than a century ? And if it is the fact, that the use of a spot of ground by a fishing-ship at any time posterior to the year 1685, would be sufficient to defeat a claim to it, founded on undisturbed possession for upwards of a hundred years, what occupier of lands in this country could enjoy any reasonable assurance that his title to them might not now, or at any time hereafter, be brought into question ? It is certain that under such a construction of the law, the field of litigation would be co-extensive with the whole occupation and cultivation of land in this Island, on the borders of the sea, down to the year 1824. But it is next to impossible to suppose that the Legislature could have intended to place the government and the people in such an unfriendly relation towards each other : and as it is the duty of courts to construe and give effect to all laws, according to their true intention, this argument respecting intention, deduced from the consequences which must result from a particular construction of the 51st Geo. III., c. 45, ought certainly to have great weight if its expressions are otherwise obscure, and its meaning consequently ambiguous.

To determine, then, how far this argumentum ab inconvenienti† should influence the construction of the 51 Geo. III. c. 45, it will be desirable to take a review of the circumstances under which it was to be applied.

By the 10th and 11th Will. III., c. 25, and 15 Geo. III., c. 31, the principal part of the sea-coast, and of the land contiguous thereto was, as has been already shewn, set apart for the use of fishing-ships ; and the persons belonging to those ships were strictly entitled to what, in legal phraseology, is stiled an easement ; i.e., a right to use and occupy those lands for certain purposes, without having any property whatever in them. In order, too, to secure to them the full and undisturbed enjoyment of this easement, the statute of William strongly enjoins ‡ the resident inhabitants not to interfere in any

* The last of the letters here quoted was dated October, 1817 ; being just twenty years after the passing of the statute of William.

† In a note to Co. Litt., p. 66, a Mr. Hargrave has said : Arguments from inconvenience certainly deserve the greatest attention ; and where the weight of other reasoning is nearly on an equipoise, ought to turn the scale. And in the important case of Le Caux vs. Eden, 2 Doug. 609, Judge Buller resorted to this argument in support of his opinion : “ But,” observed his Lordship, “ if there had been no such authorities, and the question had been now to be decided for the first time, there can be no case in which that maxim, quod inconveniens est non licitum est, which is so often reiterated by Lord Coke, would deserve more attention. It is a very useful and wise maxim, when applied to new or undecided points ; and in this case the inconvenience would be intolerable, the convenience none, if such an action were sustained.” Great, however, as the inconvenience there alluded to by that learned judge certainly was, it still fell short of that which must result from such a construction of an Act of Parliament as would furnish occasion for universal litigation and contention between the Government and the people.

‡ In the 6th section.

manner with the ship's-room " before the arrival of the fishing ships out of England, Wales and Berwick ; and until all such ships shall be provided with stages, etc.,"* necessary for their business and pursuit. In spite, however, of this enactment, possession of " Ships-rooms " was taken, from time to time, by the resident inhabitants, and continued from year to year, so that it became difficult to ascertain within a very short period after the passing of the Act, what were " Ships-rooms," and what were not. Now it is obvious that the design of the Legislature was only to exclude the inhabitants from the use of the " Ships-rooms " so far as their occupation of them might be practically injurious to the interests of the fishing-ships. If, then, an occupation or possession of a " Ships-room," or of any part thereof, which must have inferred to have been not injurious to any of the fishing-ships because it had not been disturbed by them, had been enjoyed by a resident inhabitant from a remote period down to the very time when the Legislature should be induced, under an altered state of the fishery, to take away the public use of such " Ships-room," it is probable that the framers of the law would adopt the principle "cessante causa cessabit effectus : " and, since the interests of the transitory fishery, to which alone the interests of the sedentary fishery had been postponed, no longer required that the resident inhabitant should be debarred from the permanent possession of such " Ships-rooms " it might reasonably be expected that the Legislature, in removing the former restraints upon possession, would be anxious to cut off all sources of litigation springing out of those restraints by confirming every title founded upon actual possession.† If, therefore, in an Act passed for the purpose of taking away the public use of certain " Ships-rooms," the Legislature, with a full knowledge of these " Ships-rooms " were, and for a long time past had been, in the actual possession of private persons, should declare, that the said " Ships-rooms " " should be no longer deemed and taken to be " Ships-rooms," but should be possessed as private property, in like manner as any other portions of land in Newfoundland," there can be little doubt but that such a clause, standing by itself, would be sufficient to legalize a possession of those rooms obtained prior to the passing of the Act. Nor is the argument in favor of ancient possession materially weakened by a power being vested in the Governor, under the same clause‡ in which the before-recited passage occurs, to grant and let the same " Ships-rooms : " for as it had been proved, that at the time of passing the 51 Geo. III., c. 45, the " Ships-rooms " included in it were partly vacant, and partly in the occupation of resident inhabitants, the words " granted " and " possessed " may possibly admit of a distinct and separate application to these two divisions ; so as, "reddendo singula singulis," to confer on the Governor a power of granting

* It is evident from this clause that the Legislature intended that a resident inhabitant might even have the use of a " Ships-room " after the fishing-ships were supplied with as many as they wanted.

† It seems clearly warrantable to endeavour to ascertain the meaning of an ambiguous expression in an Act of Parliament by reasoning, a priori, upon what the intention of the Legislature was likely be in respect to the subject matter of it.

‡ Viz : 51 Geo. III., c. 45, s. 1.

the vacant parts, and to confirm to private individuals the possession they already had of the other parts. Admitting, however, that the accuracy of this construction might be open to question, if there was nothing to support it beyond the words employed in the 51 Geo. III., c. 45, it is certainly warrantable to seek for a confirmation of it in other statutes in eadem materia. Looking, then, with this view to the 5 Geo. IV., c. 51, which by its 14th section empowers the Governor to dispose of all the remaining “Ships-rooms,” it appears that this power is granted under a guarded and strongly expressed proviso, “That nothing contained in that section shall extend, or be construed to the prejudice of any private right of any person whatever.” In the consideration of which proviso these points naturally suggest themselves :

1st.—What right could any person acquire in a “Ships-rooms,” whilst it is continued such, that does not owe its existence to possession ?

2nd.—Is not, therefore, a private right to a “Ships-rooms,” growing out of the previous possession of it, expressly recognized and solemnly confirmed by the 5th Geo. IV., c. 51 ?

But if this right of possession of a “Ship’s-rooms” is, as every one must see that it is, respected and protected by the 5th Geo. IV., c. 51, it is, at the least, in the highest degree probable, that the same motives which induced the Parliament to respect it in 1824 must also have had a similar influence upon the Legislature in 1811 : and since the words employed in the 51st Geo. III., c. 45, are susceptible of an interpretation analogous to the obvious meaning of the 5th Geo. IV., ch. 51, without much departure from the sense in which they might otherwise be taken, this Court feels bound to put the same construction upon the two statutes ; and to hold that the Crown is not entitled under them to claim a piece of ground, which had heretofore been a “Ships-rooms,” against such a possession as would be a bar to the claim of the Crown if the land in dispute had never been clothed with the character of “Ships-rooms.”

The jury retired to their chambers for about ten minutes, and the returned into court with a general verdict, “not guilty.”

[This case, and the following case of “The King v. Luke Ryan,” were taken by the Crown to the Privy Council.]

[February,
1831]No. 857.*THE KING v. LUKE RYAN.¹

TUCKER, C. J.

Title to land in Newfoundland—“ Ships-rooms ”—Title to these obtainable by residents under certain circumstances—Other lands obtainable by permission confirmed by the 5 Geo. IV. c. 51.

The title to land in this Colony held in peaceable possession at the passing of the original Act 5 Geo. IV., c. 51, is confirmed by that Act ; and it is for the Crown, desiring ejection, to show that it was not so held.

Policy of the Crown in regard to Newfoundland reviewed.

This case was brought before the Court by an ex officio information, filed by the Attorney General. There were two counts : the first charging the defendant with having intruded and entered on fifteen acres of forest-land near Logy Bay : and the second with having made and kindled, on the 10th May 1829, certain fires upon the ground so unlawfully occupied, whereby a large quantity of wood was burnt and consumed to the damage of our Sovereign Lord the King of £100.

To both counts the defendant pleaded “ not guilty.”

After laying before the jury a clear and distinct statement of the circumstances which had given rise to the present proceeding, and of the rules of law which he considered applicable to it, the Attorney General proceeded to call, in support of the facts of his case, four witnesses, who were sworn and examined in the following order :

1st—GEORGE HOLBROOK.—Is Surveyor General of this Island, and knows that defendant has inclosed some pieces of land about a mile and a half from Logy Bay, on the road to St. John’s. Witness has surveyed the ground so inclosed by the defendant ; and now exhibits a plan thereof, shewing the inclosure of about 14 acres at a distance of a little more than three quarters of a mile from Logy Bay. The defendant had preferred a petition for a grant of land in that quarter, to which no written answer had yet been given : but witness verbally directed defendant not to occupy ground on both sides of the road : he being then in the actual possession of land on both sides of it. A written notice to that effect was also given in the course of the preceding summer.

There was a fire in the woods near Logy Bay, in the summer of 1829, ¹ Newfoundland Reports, 1829-45, pp. 47-56. See also, the King vs. Cuddihy, p. 2031.

p. 2044

which consumed the wood upon about 100 acres of uninclosed land. The effect of this fire had undoubtedly been to diminish the value of the land which had been a prey to it ; as a good deal of the wood burnt by it was useful for the fishery.

Cross-examined.—The land was covered with brush-wood, principally useful for covering flakes and for dunnage ; and some of it was fit for firewood.

It was the practice for all persons having possession of land, and wishing to perfect a title thereto, to apply for a grant.

2nd Witness—RICHARD COMERFORD.—Witness lived at Logy Bay, as servant to defendant, in May 1829 ; and about that time lighted some fires in the ground which defendant was then clearing on the south side of the land occupied by him. It was on Saturday that these fires were kindled by defendant's order ; and on the following day a storm arose which caused the flames to spread considerably whilst defendant's family were absent from the premises : and before their return the fire had attained to such a height that all the efforts of the defendant and his people to extinguish the flames were totally ineffectual. The best exertions of 100 men could not then have arrested the progress of the fire. The fire had been kindled in 12, or 14, little heaps of peat, for the purpose of manuring the ground. On the next morning (Monday) the blaze was out ; but there was still some fire burning.

Cross-examined.—The defendant used the common precautions to prevent the spreading of the fire in the first instance ; and for that purpose, a son of his was employed to watch it, together with witness. They accordingly saw it just before dinner-time on Sunday ; and thinking all safe went to their dinner, which they had scarcely eaten when a sudden and violent increase of wind occasioned such a blaze as they could not afterwards extinguish.

3rd Witness—JOHN HATCHETT.—Witness lived at Logy Bay during the summer season, and remembers a fire which occurred near to it in May 1829. It commenced at “ Darnley's Ridge,” where defendant has some land enclosed. The fire broke out early on a Sunday morning, and extended a mile or more. There was plenty of wood for fire and for fishery purposes ; of which a great deal was destroyed. Is sure it was in the forenoon of Sunday, and thinks not later than 10 or 11 o'clock, that he observed the fires defendant had kindled. Did not see any one watching them ; and must have done so if any person had been there attending to them on the spot. Saw the flames spreading from those fires about 11 or 12 o'clock ; and noticed the defendant coming from St. John's with a part of his family, and riding very fast, when the wood was half-consumed ; but did not see anything of the last witness.

Cross-examined.—Was about a quarter of a mile from defendant's house when he first noticed the fires. “ Darnley's Ridge ” is occupied, and partly inclosed by defendant. There was at the same time another fire on the other side, by which witness's own premises were considerably endangered.

p. 2045

4th Witness.—JAMES HANDLIN.—Remembers a fire in the woods near Logy Bay in the summer of 1829 ; and just before it broke out with violence, witness observed some small fires kindled on defendant's ground. It was between one and two o'clock p.m. on Sunday that witness, at a distance of about a quarter of a mile from the spot, first perceived the fire, which had then consumed a considerable part of the wood.

Cross-examined.—Saw the peat fires burning on Saturday evening.

The Attorney General here closed his case : and Mr. Row, who addressed the jury on behalf of the defendant, having declined calling any witness, the right to reply was waived by Mr. Simms.

TUCKER, C. J., charging the jury, said in substance :—That no man, let his title to property be ever so clear and absolute, has a right to do any act in relation to it which has a direct and necessary tendency to endanger the security, or, by lessening the sum of its wealth, to injure the interests of the public ; for that society itself, with all its attendant privileges and blessings, depends altogether upon the strict and inviolable observance of the principle, Sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas ;—Use what belongs to you in such a way as not to annoy another person ;— and, therefore, that if the defendant, by kindling small fires of peat on the ground occupied by him, had done that which, notwithstanding every precaution that could have been adopted by him to prevent the spread of the flames, must, under ordinary circumstances, have been fraught with danger to the life, or property, of any one ; or even if he had, by the omission of due care, rendered an act not otherwise wrong, injurious to the interests of the community, he was unquestionably liable to be punished severely for such conduct on conviction, upon an information or indictment for a nuisance. But that the present proceeding against him, though instituted by the Crown, was not of a criminal, but of a civil character : having for its object the recovery of a certain parcel of land which the defendant is charged with having taken a tortious possession of, together with a compensation in pecuniary damages for an act of trespass alleged to have been committed by him on that land whilst he was in the lawful occupation of it ; and, consequently, that the question to which the jury must first exclusively direct their attention was, whether the Crown was entitled, under the evidence that had been laid before them, to evict the defendant ; as it certainly could not obtain damages for any thing done by him on that land, unless it had satisfactorily established its claim to dispossess him of it. That the question here raised was one of great difficulty, and still greater importance ; and, therefore, that it would be proper in attempting to unfold to the jury what the Court deems to be a correct view of the law of the case, to describe the real nature and extent of the interest which an inhabitant could enjoy in land in this island before the passing of the 5th George IV., c. 51 ; and afterwards to show, by a careful examination of some clauses in that chapter, in what degree they are capable of confirming a title, based upon a previous naked possession, and also to point out the qualifications and restrictions under which a power is conferred by them on His Majesty to grant land in this Colony.

p. 2046

By the joint operation of the 10th and 11th Wm. III., ch. 25, and 15th Geo. III., ch. 31, the principal part—indeed very nearly the whole—of the land on the sea coast of this island is converted into “ ships-rooms ” ; and under that designation set apart for the use of the fishing-ships, in such a manner that a resident might at any time be removed from the possession of one, provided it was really wanted by a fishing-ship. Of course no permanent right of possession to a “ ships-room ” could possibly exist under these Statutes : but, as that temporary occupation, in subservience to the preferable claims of the fishing-ships which the law permitted had been allowed, in many instances, by the non-exercise of the right of interference on the part of any fishing-ship, to be enjoyed by a man and his posterity for a long series of years, the Legislature, in taking away the public use of “ ships-rooms.”—(first partially, in the town of St. John’s by 51st Geo. III., ch. 45 s. 1, and afterwards generally throughout the island by 5th Geo. IV., ch. 51, s. 14),—seem to have thought that a possession, which was only prohibited so far as it might interfere with the pursuits of the fishing-ships, and which had been continued for a great length of time, because, in point of fact, it did not contravene the policy of the law, ought not to be disturbed after the only motive for doing so—viz., the protection of the privileges of the fishing-ships—had ceased to operate : and accordingly they appear, under the influence of a pure spirit of liberal justice, as much as from a desire to prevent the evils which must always result from leaving open a wide field of litigation between the government and the people, to have made, by the last-mentioned Acts, a previous occupancy and possession of a “ ships-room,” of such a duration and character as would sustain a title to any other land, an equally strong and valid title to it. Such, at least, is the view which the Court takes of the law respecting “ ships-rooms ” : but as a good deal of land in the interior, which does not fall within that description has (of late years particularly) been seized on by the in-habitants for the purpose of cultivation, it is highly important to ascertain in what light the Legislature have regarded this class of occupiers, and to define the privileges which have been conferred upon them. Now without entering into the discussion of the much agitated question as to the extent of cultivation of which, from the nature of the soil and climate, this island is susceptible, it may safely be asserted that, up to the present hour, Newfoundland is considered by the Imperial Parliament as deriving her chief value from being the seat of the first fishing-establishment in the universe ; and consequently, that, whatever disposition the Legislature may have shewn to promote and encourage agriculture, they never can have intended to advance its growth at the expense of the interests of the fishery. In short, if there be one object connected with this island, to which all other considerations must yield and give place, the fishery must undoubtedly be that precise object : and hence it may be positively inferred that a right which the Legislature have supported, even where it may, by possibility, be prejudicial to the fishery, must have been looked upon as far too sacred to be violated upon any account whatever. But the 5th Geo. IV., ch. 51, sec. 3, which confers on His Majesty’s subjects who do not reside here the privilege of a free-fishery, with a power of occupying land and cutting wood for the prosecution of it does yet pay such regard to a possession already acquired, that it strictly confines those adventurers who may thenceforward repair to this island to fish to the use of “ vacant ” and “ unoccupied ” places. Having, then, thus upheld the right of possession, even in a case where it might possibly conflict with the interests of the fishery : and having afterwards, in the 15th section of the same chapter, in the most strict accordance with the same principle of regard to the right of possession, restricted the future grants of the Crown to “ waste and unoccupied lands,”* there seems to be not much room to doubt, but that the 5th Geo. IV., c. 51, ought to be considered as a Parliamentary title-deed, under which every one who was in the quiet and peaceable possession of land before, and at, the passing of that Act, is entitled to hold and retain the same for ever. Upon the best consideration, indeed, which we have been able to give to the enactments of the 5th Geo. IV., c. 51, we conceive, that it was the intention of the Legislature, that the unoccupied parts of the sea-coast, with an adequate portion of land for the ordinary purposes of the fishery, should be entirely dedicated to that object : and, consequently, that His Majesty is bound under the 3rd and 15th clauses of the 5th Geo. IV., c. 51, to limit his grants to those “ waste and unoccupied lands ” which were not at the time of passing the Act, nor are likely hereafter to become, necessary to the fishery.† But if this be a correct view, and true exposition of the

p. 2047

See the grounds of this opinion stated more in detail in the foregoing Case of the King vs. John Cuddihy :—

* One object and perhaps the principal one, of the 15th section of the 5th Geo. IV., ch. 51, certainly was, to silence, and for ever put an end to such claims to large tracts of land in this Island as had lately been brought forward, under the color of an old patent, by a person styling himself the representative of Lord Baltimore : but admitting this to have been the main design of that clause, it seems also to have been intended to support the actual possession of land in every instance, upon whatever sort of title such possession (provided it were peaceable) might previously have rested : for otherwise it most probably would have empowered His Majesty to grant all lands not already holden under a title acquired by grant from him or his predecessors, or by an uninterrupted occupation and possession of more than sixty years. Instead of which it limits his power of granting to lands not already granted, and to “ waste and unoccupied ” lands.

† This opinion embraces two distinct and independent propositions : 1st. That the actual possession, and peaceable enjoyment, of land, before the passing of the 5, Geo. IV., ch. 51, conferred a good title to it : 2nd. That even of the “ waste and uncultivated lands ” the Crown is restricted from granting such portions as are absolutely necessary for the fishery. The former of these portions rests, principally, upon the 15th section of the 5, Geo. IV., ch. 51, and seems scarcely to admit any reason to doubt its accuracy : but the later appears not to stand upon quite an equally firm foundation.

It certainly would be strange if the Legislature has granted to a class of persons a privilege to use “ unoccupied ” lands for the purposes of the fishery without making some provision that there shall be “ unoccupied ” lands for their use. On the other hand the power which is given to the Governor, by the 14th clause of the 5, Geo. IV., ch. 51, to dispose of the “ Ships-rooms,” does, by implication, furnish a pretty strong argument against the notion of any part of the Island’s being exclusively dedicated to the fishery. Upon the whole, the true interpretation of the Act may possibly be, that its 3rd section does not positively restrain the Crown from granting any waste and unoccupied ground on account of its being essential to the fishery, though it does impose on the Government meaning of the 5th Geo. IV., c. 51, it still remains to be decided, whether the burden of proof lies upon the Crown to shew, that the defendant's possession of the land commenced since the passing of the Statute ; or whether the defendant ought to shew a possession anterior to that event ; and even this point, secondary and vastly inferior as it is to the principal question of title, is by no means free from doubt and difficulty.

On the one hand it may be insisted on as a prerogative of the King, that every thing ought to be presumed in his favor, and that he should accordingly be considered to have a good title to all the land he claims until the contrary has been clearly proved by the defendant : whilst on the other side it may be urged, that, as the present proceeding is of the nature of an ejectment, the rule, "Probat is qui non possidet ; qui si in probando deficiat, possessor vincit."* ought to be enforced even in a Suit to which the King is a party. And, admitting that there is some weight in each of these arguments, we incline to think, that the latter ought to prevail. We conceive, too, that there may possibly be a difference in this respect where the action is instituted by a grantee of the Crown ; for however paradoxical the position may at first appear, that the King may by his grant confer a privilege which he cannot exercise himself, it will perhaps be found on an attentive investigation of the subject, that the enquiry into title which always precedes the issue of a grant, and the caution with which it must be supposed to have been executed, might reasonably justify a presumption in support of it which could not properly be entertained before the passing of it. But without pretending absolutely to decide that point at present, we are all of opinion that, as the defendant has proved to be in actual possession, and as no proof has been given that such possession commenced since the passing of the 5th Geo. IV., ch. 51, the Crown is not entitled, under the evidence which has now been adduced, to a verdict on either of the counts.

After hearing this charge the Jury almost immediately brought in a general verdict, "Not Guilty."

an obligation, or duty, to leave as much land unoccupied as that sort of fishery which is countenanced by the 3rd section is likely to require. It may be proper, too, to state here, that, though a grant may not be necessary to give a title to land where a peaceable possession was obtained before the passing of the 5th Geo. IV., ch. 51, yet that a grant must always prove a satisfactory confirmation to the title by possession, and must be particularly useful in putting an end to all disputes respecting the quantity of land actually held in possession.

* This rule of the Civil Law, (as well as the similar one, "Probandum autem in Vindicatione dominium per Actorem, quo deficiente in probatione, possessor absolvendus est.") is, in spirit, precisely the same as our maxim, that in ejectment the plaintiff must recover upon the strength of his own title : and both of them seem to be of universal application, as founded on a principle of universal reason and justice.

No. 858.

[1836]

ON APPEAL FROM THE SUPREME COURT OF THE ISLAND OF NEWFOUNDLAND.¹

JAMES SIMMS, ESQ., ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE ISLAND OF NEWFOUNDLAND, Appellant,

AND

JOHN CUDDIHY, Respondent.

PRIVY COUNCIL. 1836.²

Under the statutes for regulating the fishery of Newfoundland, and taking away the public use of certain ships' rooms in the town of St. John's in that island, the Crown is not entitled to claim a piece of ground formerly used as a ships' room, against such a possession as would have been a bar to the claim of the Crown if the land had not been clothed with that character.

Semble. No objection can be taken on the appeal that the title of the defendant was not pleaded specially to an information for intrusion, in the Court below.

THIS was an appeal from a judgment of the above Court upon a verdict, in an information filed by his Majesty's Attorney General of the island, against the respondent, for intrusion upon a certain quantity of land at St. John's in Newfoundland, belonging to his Majesty, called a ship's room, which the respondent had enclosed. The respondent pleaded "Not guilty;" and upon the trial of the cause in the Supreme Court of the island, before the Chief Justice and the other judges on the 18th of February, 1831, the respondent was acquitted by the jury.

By the 15 Geo. III., c. 31, sec. 2, it is enacted, "That for the better accommodation of the persons belonging to vessels employed in the Newfoundland fishery, it shall and may be lawful for the masters and crews belonging to any vessels fitted out and employed in that fishery, in pursuance of this or any other Act, to occupy and use, for the purpose of curing, salting, drying and husbanding their fish, any vacant or void space whatever, on any part of Newfoundland which was not then occupied and used for the said fishery, without any let, disturbance or hindrance from any person or persons whatsoever, although such unoccupied place may not before have been reported ship's rooms; and all such unoccupied places shall from thenceforth be deemed and taken to be ships' rooms, any custom or usage to the contrary notwithstanding.”

¹ Appendix to Newfoundland Reports, 1829–45, pp. iii.–vii.

² Reported in : 1 Moore, P. C. 82, 12 Eng. Repts., 742.

p. 2050

By the 51 Geo. III., c. 45, s. 1, after reciting that certain spaces of ground in the town of St. John’s, in the island of Newfoundland, called ships’ rooms, were liable, according to the ancient custom there used, and conformably with the provisions of an Act passed in the 10th and 11th years of his Majesty King William III., intituled “ An Act to encourage the trade of Newfoundland,” to be claimed by the masters of fishing ships for the use of their ships and boats, during the current fishing season, which said spaces of ground had not of late been employed for the purposes of the fishery ; and that it would be more beneficial to the general interests of the trade and fishery, if the said spaces of ground were wholly exempted from such claim, and were let out for building dwelling-houses and store-houses, and for other uses necessary to the trade and fishery ; and that it had been proved, upon the survey of persons resident in the town of St. John’s, and well skilled in the affairs of the fishery, that there was land at the western extremity of the harbour, better suited for drying, curing, and husbanding of fish, than any of the ships’ rooms above mentioned ; it was enacted that from and after the passing of that Act, certain ships’ rooms therein specified, including the ships’ rooms No. 2, called the Lady’s ship room (which was the land in question), as the same were laid down, distinguished and named in a plan of the town and harbour of St. John’s in Newfoundland, dated October, 1804, and deposited in the Government House there, should no longer be deemed and taken to be ships’ rooms, and occupied during the fishing season as such ; but it should be lawful for the same to be granted, let and possessed as private property, in like manner as any other portions of land in Newfoundland might be, anything in the said Act, or the said ancient custom to the contrary notwithstanding.

By the 5 Geo. IV., cap. 51, sec. 14, after reciting the last-mentioned Act, and that it was expedient that all other fishing ships’ rooms in Newfoundland should be disposed of in like manner, it is enacted, “ that the Governor of Newfoundland for the time being should have power, and he is thereby authorized to sell, lease or dispose of all such places within the said island of Newfoundland, commonly called ships’ rooms, as might not be then already disposed of under and by virtue of the said last-mentioned Act ; to be held in the same manner as other property in Newfoundland, provided however that nothing therein contained should extend or be construed to extend to the prejudice of any private right of any person whatsoever.”

The land in question claimed by the town, as part of that mentioned in the 51 Geo. III., cap. 45, sec. 1, by the name of “ Lady’s ship room.”

On the trial it was stated in evidence, by the Surveyor-general on the part of the Crown, that the land which the defendant had enclosed was part of the land laid down in the plan (made in 1804, and referred to in the last-mentioned Act of Parliament) as “Lady’s ships’ room.”

On the part of the defendant, evidence was given to show that in 1759 one Joseph Nowell was in possession of the land in question, by virtue of a license from the then Governor of the island, and that it remained in his possession, and that of those claiming under him, till 1820, when it was conveyed to the respondent for valuable consideration by Thomas Nowell, who claimed through Joseph Nowell, and that it was in respondent's possession down to the time of trial. Evidence was also given on the part of the defendant to show that in a lease of the “Lady’s ships’ room,” granted on the 23rd of October in the year 1811, by Sir John Duckworth, then Governor of the island, the land in question was not included in the boundaries set out in the lease.

p. 2051

Upon this evidence the learned Chief Justice left it to the jury to say whether the locus in quo was part of the ships’ room laid down in the said plan as “Lady’s ship room,” and that if they found it was not, then that they should find a verdict of “Not guilty ;” but that even if they were of opinion that it did form a part of the Lady’s ships’ room, the learned judge expressed his opinion that the defendant should be acquitted, because he said the Crown was not entitled, under the before-mentioned statutes, to claim a piece of ground which had formerly been a ship’s room against such a possession as would have been a bar to the claim of the Crown, had they not been clothed with the character of ships’ rooms. Whereupon the jury returned a verdict of Not guilty, and the Court gave judgment for the defendant.

From this judgment the Crown appealed, and the respondent not appearing, the case was heard ex parte.

The Solicitor-General (Sir R. M. Rolfe), and Mr. Wightman, for the Appellant.

The evidence given on behalf of the Crown that the land in question was by survey found to be included within the Lady’s ships’ rooms, as they appear upon the plan referred to in the 51 Geo. III., cap. 45, was not rebutted or disproved by any sufficient evidence on the part of the defendant. It is admitted that the land originally belonged to the Crown, and was held by license ; this, if not a grant, was revocable, and could not give a title ; it proves also that the claim was through the Crown, and in that case the license ought to have been specially pleaded. 21 Jac. I., cap. 14.* Where a party claims wholly adversely to the Crown, and remains in possession, on an action for intrusion, he need not plead his title ; but if he claims through the Crown, but adversely to it, he ought under that statute to plead his title. An adverse possession cannot avail against the terms of the Acts of Parliament referred to, and the opinion of the Chief Justice was erroneous on that point : he ought not to have charged the jury to acquit the defendant. The position relied on by the Chief Justice as an answer to the claim of the Crown, does not sufficiently appear to have been adverse.

MR. BARON PARKE :

In this case there has been a possession of the land in question under license from the Crown from the year 1759 to 1820, when it was conveyed

* See 4 Inst. 116 Dyer, 238.
p. 2052

to the respondent for valuable consideration. The objection that the defendant ought at the trial to have pleaded this specially, if entitled to any weight, comes too late ; it was not made in the Court below, and it would be too hard to allow it to be taken now. With respect to the construction of the various statutes affecting this question, we think the Chief Justice of the Court below has stated it correctly, and that the judgment must be affirmed.

[1672, 1908]

No. 859.DENYS' DESCRIPTION OF THE COD FISHERY AT NEWFOUNDLAND,AS PRACTISED IN FORMER TIMES AND DURING THE OPERATION OF
THE ACT 10–11 WM. III., CAP. 25.¹

[Extracts from “ The Description and Natural History of the Coasts of North America,” by Nicolas Denys. (Paris : 1672, Champlain Society’s reprint and translation, 1908), Vol. II, pp. 269–336.]

CHAPTER III.

The method of fishing the Cod called Merluche (Stockfish or dry Cod), of dressing it, of salting it, and of drying it, and of all the tools necessary therefor.

Let us speak now of the fishery for the dry fish, which is only, as I have said in the preceding chapter, the same Cod under the name of Merluche. It is smaller than the green Cod, which makes it easier to preserve, the salt penetrating it sooner than it does the green, which is much larger and in consequence thicker, and which would be eaten by maggots before it was dry, because of its thickness. This does not happen to the smaller one, which keeps, and serves for provision for the longest voyages and in the warmest climates. It is not that they do not catch large ones near the land, and even larger than on the Bank, but they are not dried ; they are put down green, that is to say, are salted, as is done upon the Bank.

Among all those who are accustomed to make this kind of fishery, the Basques are the most skilled. Those of La Rochelle have the first rank after them, and the Islanders* who are in the vicinity, then the Bourdelois (men of Bordeaux) and then the Bretons. From all those places there may go a hundred, a hundred and twenty, and a hundred and fifty vessels every year, if there is no hindrance through a need for sailors who are retained for the vessels of the King.

* * * *

[77]

CHAPTER IV

Concerning that which is customary when the ships are approaching the place where the fishery is to be made ; the manner of obtaining a position, that

Whilst all these preparations for the fishery are being made on the vessel, she does not fail to advance upon her way. When nearing the land and the position where they expect to go to make their fishery, they sometimes meet two or three vessels together which have the intention of going all to the same [78] harbour, and each captain designs to be Admiral there. In order to obtain this Admiralty, when they are eight, ten, or twelve leagues from land, they lower at night a boat with their best oarsmen, furnished with good oars. If they have a good wind which carries them faster than the oars, they make use of the sail. If during the day they perceive that the others are doing the same, they have no fear of capsizing, but vie with one another in carrying sail, in order to gain the lead. Sometimes the water passes over the gunwale of the boat. Nobody stirs for fear of losing the wind, excepting only the one who bails out the water. There are few persons who would wish to be in their company. If there is no [79] wind it is necessary to row. It is then indeed that they stretch their arms. There are no galley-slaves who pull so hard at the oars as they. No one speaks of eating or drinking for fear of causing delay. There is always some one who arrives some little time ahead of the others. The first who leaps on shore acquires the right of Admiral for his captain. It is for him to take the place he prefers, both for building his staging and for locating his vessel. If he finds on the shore wood from stagings which have been broken down during the winter, and which the sea has cast up there, he takes it, and anything else he finds there, as it suits him and by [right of] preference [over all others].*

¹ The footnotes on this and succeeding pages are notes by the translator of the Champlain Society's edition.

* That is of the Isle de Ré and Isle d'Oléron.

The ship having arrived there, they all change their occupation except the [80] captain, and each one takes up that duty to which he has been assigned according to his engagement made before his departure. Thus it results that one who was only a sailor during the voyage becomes a boat-master when he has arrived at the place of the fishery. At the same time the captain sends all the carpenters ashore to prepare quickly his boats, if he has any of them on land. But they rarely go to a place where they have not some, or else they carry some with them. If they are lacking one, and find any on the coast, they take it, as having first right, provided always that the boats have no owner, and that there is no fisherman who claims them, either as proprietor or through [81] proxy from the owners, [and not if] the marks of the boats are plain. This right of Admiralty does not hold for the boats of another, but only for those which are found as waifs, of which he has the first right to make use. After he has a sufficiency of these things, the ships which have arrived in the same harbour have after him the same right in succession, according to the order of their arrival. An exception is Plaisance,† which is a harbour in the Island of Newfoundland, where a number of ships go to make their fishery ; there, when the Admiral has provided himself sufficiently with boats, he gives

* The right of Admiral was even more valued than our author implies. Among the English fishermen of Newfoundland this right became so highly developed that the fishing admirals not only ruled over the other fishermen in the same harbour, but even over the residents ashore. The subject is well discussed by Prowse in his History of Newfoundland.

† The French took possession of Plaisance in Newfoundland in 1662 and held it until 1713, when they gave it up to England by the Treaty of Utrecht. By the same treaty the French were given the right to dry fish on the west coast of Newfoundland, a privilege which has led to much trouble in our own times. This right they relinquished in 1904.

p. 2055

the balance to whomsoever he thinks best among those who have need of them, excepting always those of proprietors or the bearers of proxies.

[82] The carpenters being on shore, the captain busies himself in placing his ship the best that he can, and to get her well moored. Then he leaves the mate with seven or eight men to strip her, in just the same way as if she were in harbour in France to pass the winter. There is no cordage left except the shrouds which serve to hold the masts upright. These orders being given all the crew goes on shore.

Arrived on shore, some of them set to work at the lodging for the fishermen, which is like a hall covered with a ship's sail. The sides at the bottom all around are lined with branches of Fir, interlaced into pickets or stakes of four to five feet in height driven into the ground ; and the sail completes [83] the two sides. With respect to the two ends, which are, as it were, the two gables of this edifice, Fir poles are placed distant a foot from one another ; these are also interlaced with branches of Fir, which are compacted together as closely as possible, so that the wind can hardly pass through them. In the middle of the interior are placed large poles from end to end, distant the length of a man from one another, and these support the ridge. Other poles are placed from one to the other and are nailed at each interval, the whole so arranged that it does not shake. They make of them two stories, one above the other, where they put up their beds and sleep two by two. The bottoms of their beds are [84] of ropes, which they interweave like a racket, but with openings much larger. At each breadth of bed is placed a pole which keeps the two men apart, and prevents them from annoying one another at night by their weight, which otherwise would make them fall one on another if the cords which compose the bottom were not stretched tight by this pole in the middle. Their bed is a mattress of dry grass ; their covering is that which it may please them to bring with them ; whence many have for this purpose nothing but their cloaks. As for their chests, they place them along the walls and their beds. Such is the lodging of the fishermen.

With respect to the size of this lodging it depends [85] as a rule upon that of the mainsail of the ship which covers it.

Whilst some are working upon this lodging, others are constructing that of the captain, which is built in the same fashion. But there is in the middle a partition of poles set one against the other ; in this is made a door, which is locked.

One side is used for storing the provisions, and the other contains his table and his bed, [the latter] on one side or above, made of rope like the others. Sometimes it is bottomed with boards. He has a mattress and quilt.

In another place the steward with some of the boys at work to build the kitchen, which is covered with large turfs arranged like tiles one upon another, [86] so that the rain cannot enter it. And from the roof downwards, there are Fir branches all around, interlaced like the others. These the boys bring from the woods, as well for this as for all the rest of the lodgings. It is usually the doctor whose duty it is to make them go to the woods. All this is being done at once, and is finished in two or three days, even though it is necessary to go and get all the branches and poles in the woods, to carry them back, and to smooth them, for fear they might pierce and injure the sails.

p. 2056

Whilst all this is under way, the beach-master and the pilot, who have ten or twelve men with them, are in the woods to cut down Firs as large as the thigh, of twelve, fifteen, [87] sixteen to twenty feet in length, to make their stagings and the lodgings. Everybody is at work. It is necessary to carry them all the way to the shore of the sea, some seven to eight hundred paces, and sometimes a thousand or twelve hundred. For every year they are being cut away, and the nearest are always the first taken. There are places where so many have been cut away that no more are left, [and] it is necessary to go after them three, four, five, and six leagues away, and sometimes farther. There are scarcely any places left where it is not necessary to go fetch them from a distance. They go there with boats of three men each, who go and come day and night, but are unable to carry more than fifty to sixty each. When once [90, i.e. 88] the work has been commenced, it is almost useless to speak of sleeping, eating or drinking unless by stealth, except for the supper. Whilst some are transporting all the logs, others are at work preparing the stagings.

[91, i.e. 89]

CHAPTER V

On the method of constructing the staging for the dressing of the Cod, and of the work which it is to build it.

The staging [échaffaut] being so indispensable as it is in this fishery, it will not be inappropriate if I describe it here, in order to make its use better understood.* It is necessary to know at the outset that all the wood of which it is made up is obtained in the same country where it is built. It may be forty, fifty, or sixty paces long, according to the size of the vessels, to which we assume [90] always that the number of men is in proportion. Its breadth is nearly a third of its length, and its end which is not covered is also about a

* The description of the shore fishery for cod in the following pages is, I believe, by far the most detailed that has come down to us, and is in fact well-nigh monographic. No doubt other French writers have given some account of the subject, though the only early writer on Acadia who describes it appears to be Lescaurbot (Histoire de la Nouvelle France, ed. 1612, 824), who has a very brief but excellent comment upon it. There is a brief but good account of the Newfoundland and Acadian fisheries in the Gentleman's Magazine for 1755 (Vol. XXV. 217), and abstracts of other early accounts are contained in Prowse's History of Newfoundland. Of later works the best I have found is in M'Gregor's British America (London, 1832), Vol. I. 227. There is matter of interest also in M. H. Perley's Report on the Fisheries of New Brunswick (Fredericton, N.B., 1852), 7, and appendix ; in T. F. Knight's Shore and Deep Sea Fisheries of Nova Scotia (Halifax, N.S., 1867), 24 ; and in Pierre Fortin's Reports of Fisheries in the Gulf of Saint Lawrence, a work I know only from the citations in Knight's pamphlet. A brief description of the fishery as practised by the Acadian fishermen of Bay Chaleur is given by Bishop Plessis in his journal of his voyage of 1811–1812 (in Le Foyer Canadien, 1865, 99, 123, 135). A little pamphlet, Inventory of Articles in the French Fishing Stations on the Coasts of Newfoundland, 1905, gives the modern French names of many articles used in the fishery. For most of the information about the terminology of the Newfoundland and Nova Scotian fisheries of the present day I am indebted to the very kind aid of Archbishop Howley of St. Johns, Newfoundland, and to Mr. C. H. Whitman of Canso, N.S., both of whom have answered very fully my many inquiries.

p. 2057

quarter of its length ; it ends sometimes in a point and sometimes square, and extends into the sea, so that the boats can always come alongside.*

To begin the construction of the staging, there is placed at fifteen, twenty, or twenty-five feet out in the water a huge stake of eighteen to twenty feet in height. For this purpose, three or four men place themselves in the water, when the tide is low, as far out as they can. The stake being set upright, there are put in place three or four buttresses, the ends of which are at the bottom of the sea, while the [91] other ends are against the stake as high as a man can reach to nail them, [which he does] with a nail as large as the finger. This stake being well fastened upright, another of the same kind is planted on the land, and exactly opposite that [is placed] a second, so that these two last determine the breadth of the staging. This forms a triangle when the end of the staging, or its stage-head, ends in a point.

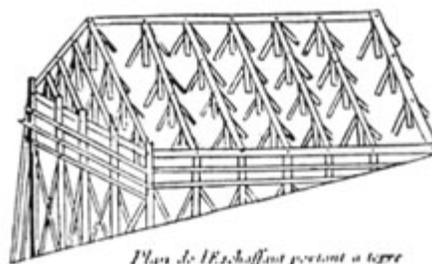

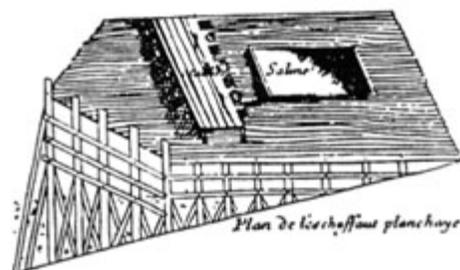

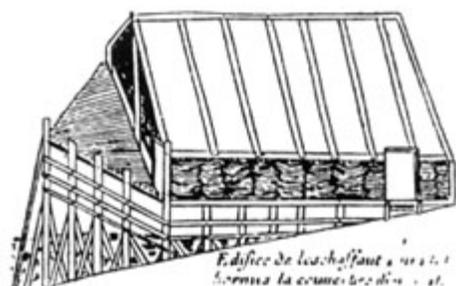

Between these two last-mentioned stakes and that which is in the sea, there are also planted other stakes a fathom apart along the two sides, so that the whole forms a triangle of which the point is in the sea. All of those stakes being set upright, with the buttresses well nailed on, there are nailed to each one of them three and four of those large [92] poles from the bottom to the top, equally spaced, in such manner that they serve as a ladder for mounting upon the staging.† To strengthen this point, there are placed also under all the extent of this triangle a number of upright stakes well shored up. After this a quantity of large poles is placed crossing from one to the other, with others which run from top to bottom diagonally. Thus this point is so well provided with beams, and is so solid and well nailed, that it is able to resist the roughest waves, as well as the impact of the boats which land there continually when they come from the fishing. The pile-work of this point being thus set up, there are placed across it large pieces [93] of wood at the height of eighteen to twenty feet from the bottom, beginning with this first stake which forms the point. These cross-pieces are properly the beams which support the flooring ; this, at high water, is elevated five feet or thereabouts above the surface of the water at the point of the staging. This being done, the staging is continued of the breadth of those two stakes which are on the land and which also determine the breadth of this point ; and this breadth is continued thirty-five or forty paces always upon the same level. Thus the stakes which are planted upright to sustain the flooring of the staging become progressively less in length, because the shore runs ascending towards the land like a comedy theatre. All [94] these stakes are also well propped and strengthened with cross-pieces, as in the prow of the staging. Cross beams

* The staging is still an essential feature of the cod fishery, where extensively prosecuted, and it is still called chauffaud by the French and Acadian fishermen. Our author's very detailed description of its construction can be followed more readily by aid of his illustration, reproduced herewith. It happens, however, that another illustration, given a few pages later (page 311), taken from Moll's map, agrees in some respects better with our author's description than does his own illustration, while it supplies much additional detail.

† The present-day stagings made by the fishermen of Newfoundland, the English at least, are built with square ends (called stage-heads), while the horizontal poles (called longers) which serve as ladders are placed upon pieces (called strouters) inclined against the end of the staging.

are continuously placed on top, a fathom apart, to finish the flooring of the staging. In the middle of these cross beams, large poles, of twenty-five or thirty feet [in length], are placed upright to support the ridge of the edifice ; the larger ends of these rest upon the ground and are nailed to each alternate one of the cross beams, beginning with the base of the triangle and extending

CONSTRUCTION OF THE STAGING USED IN THE COD-FISHERY
Copperplate from Deny's book
(Reduced to about three-fourths the original size) towards the land. All this having been finished, little poles, the longest that can be found, are obtained and laid lengthwise upon the cross beams, where they are arranged as closely as possible one against another, from [95] the point thence upward as far as the ridge other poles are placed at a foot from one another, nailed above and below, which shorten with the pitch of the sail. The same is done with the opposite gable, where, however, the poles run from the bottom to the top. After this [98] the ends and the sides are lined with branches interwoven as compactly as possible between these poles.

p. 2059

Whilst all this work is under way, the captain does not fail to send the boats to the fishing just as soon as the carpenters have put them into condition so they can go. The fish which they bring back every evening are dressed upon boards which are placed upon barrels. These form a sort of temporary tables which they use until the staging and its appurtenances shall be completed. This fish is salted and put into a pile exactly as if everything were in condition to receive it, as I shall tell you in the part to follow.

The staging is no sooner [99] finished than they set to work to fill it up inside. There a table is made, of four feet wide and about three feet high, removed three feet from the partition of which I have just been speaking. This table is called the splitting-table [étably]. In the space between this splitting table and the partition are placed the throaters [picqueurs] and the headers [decoleurs], and on the other side are the splitters [habilleurs].* These splitters are five, six, or seven, according to the size of the vessel. Each splitter has a throater and a header. The splitters have on their right side a kind of trough or box of wood, about a foot and a half wide and a little longer ; its bottom is tipped up about clear to the end towards the land. This makes an efficient flooring for the staging.

From these two stakes of the point, which determine the breadth of the staging, and extending on both sides towards the land, there are placed little poles which run from the ground straight up to pass above the flooring about four feet ; they are distant about two feet from one another. At the upper ends of these little poles, which make the two sides of the staging, another large pole is nailed to their tops, and this holds them crosswise from one end to the other.

Upon those large poles which are nailed to the middle of the cross beams, are placed other poles which are nailed upon their [96] top ends from one extremity to the other, and these poles form the ridge. Then other poles are arranged which extend to rest or fall upon those other poles which are elevated four feet on the sides of the staging ; and these serve as rafters.

This being done, a mainsail of the vessel is placed on top, with the seams running like the rafters in order that the water may run off more easily. To effect this the sail is stretched as much as possible by means of cords which are fastened to the poles on which rest the rafters. If the sail is not large enough to cover the whole staging, the end towards the land is left uncovered, for the chief place is the opposite end, where the hardest of the work is done. [97] To close the two gables and the two sides of four feet in height, one begins with the gable towards the point, which is at those two large stakes which determine the breadth of the staging. For this a large pole is nailed from one stake to the other, with the exception of the breadth of a door which is left on one side to lead out upon the point. This pole, which is nailed underneath is raised some two feet* above the floor, while half a foot towards the floor, facing [100] inward,† and the side towards which the bottom inclines is closed by a slide, and this is raised and lowered between two guide pieces. This is in order that the fish may fall of itself and all at once into the barrows, as I shall explain more at length when I speak of the dressing of the fish. At five or six feet farther on towards the land, in the middle of the building, there is made a kind of enclosure for containing the salt which is used to salt the fish. This enclosure is called the salt-bin [saline], and is situated exactly under the ridge. Thus the stakes which support the ridge pass through the salt-bin, which may be twenty to twenty-five feet in length and more, according to the size of the vessel to which [101] it is proportioned, and it is about four feet wide. This bin is made of long stakes laid one upon another up to the height of a foot and a half or thereabouts. On the two sides of this building there are two doors, which are used in discharging the staging of fish when it is necessary to carry them to the water to wash them. And that is about everything which can be said as to the staging, in order to give an understanding of it.

* I have given here the modern English equivalents, used by all the English fishermen, for these three important terms, though they are not exactly translations of the French words. A picqueur, literally translated, would be a slitter, decoleur would be a beheader, while habilleur would be a dresser. The picqueur is called a cut-throat in Newfoundland, but a throater in Nova Scotia and New England. The French of Newfoundland do not now use the term habilleur, but trancheur or splitter. The étably, or splitting-table, is called by the French fishermen étal, as our author also calls it on page 155.

[102]

CHAPTER VI

Containing the method of obtaining the oil from the livers of Cod, with a description of the instruments and tools which are used in dressing, salting, and washing the fish : what flakes and beach are, their construction and their use.

Whilst this work is being done, others are engaged on the preparations necessary for making oil, which is accomplished in three ways. The first is a kind of bin like that of a wine-press [103] in which the vintage is pressed, but in which the sides are very much higher all around. There are three planks, and four if they are narrow, one above another, well joined, well caulked, and well pitched, both on the bottom and on the sides, so that the oil cannot run out. This may be six to seven feet square. At one of the sides there is placed a wicker or basket-work, with mats of straw, of the height and breadth of the bin, inside along one side of the press. Between this wicker and mat and the side of the press, there is a little empty space. This is made to prevent all the cod livers, which are thrown every day into that large space which remains shut off from the empty space, from passing through, and [104] that there may remain a space for the oil in proportion as it is made.‡ This happens

* This space of two feet, as our author tells later at page 159, and as is shown both in his own figure and in the Moll engraving at page 311, is left open for the admission of the fresh fish. At the back gable, however, this space is not needed and is filled with poles and branches.

† This trough is well shown in the Moll engraving at page 311 of this work, where it is made plain that it was raised considerably from the floor. It faces inward relative to the staging, not to the table. The mode of emptying it is explained by our author at page 163 of his book.

‡ As our author's drawing further shows, the wicker acted as a strainer to keep the livers thrown into the larger space from entering the smaller, which therefore contained only oil readily drawn off as described and as shown by the engraving.

p. 2061

only through power of the sun, which makes the livers melt. For the bin, or kind of press, is placed outside the staging in the most convenient place possible. The oil always rises to the top of the blood which the livers yield, whilst the water which falls when it rains settles below the oil ; the latter is in the middle between the water and the livers which are thrown in there every day and float upon the oil. When it is desired to draw it, a hole is made in the side of the press at about a foot from the bottom on the side of the wicker, whilst another hole is made lower to empty the water and blood. In these holes is placed a good plug or a faucet, and the oil is drawn off in [105] proportion as it is formed ; and then it is placed in barrels. All of the livers do not melt entirely, and there form over the oil many vile matters which it is necessary to empty and throw away from time to time ; otherwise this would form a crust by virtue of its drying up, and this would keep the sun from melting the livers which are thrown in every day. There is hardly anybody except the Basques who make this kind of presses, and they are only necessary, moreover, for large vessels. Others make use of a well-caulked boat, which has one end placed some little higher than the other ; at the lower end is placed a wicker with mats, as in the bin or press, to prevent the livers from passing. At this end are made two holes, [106] one to empty the water, and the other to draw off the oil, which are emptied from time to time [respectively] above and below, as in the bin or press. In default of boats or press, use is made of good barrels, knocked in at one end, and placed upright upon stocks, somewhat raised. A wicker is placed therein, from top to bottom, with mats, which make an empty space of about a half foot in breadth from the top to the bottom of the barrel. Two holes are also made in the lower part to empty the water and the oil, and one empties also from time to time all the filth or the residuum, which is formed on top. A barrel of this oil is worth as much as twenty to twenty-five écus. All these three sorts of vessels which are used [107] for making oil are called a Charnier by all the fishermen, with the exception of the Bretons, who call it a Treüil.*

Just as the entire crew does not work all at once upon a single duty, so each one has his special work. Let us look at those who are employed with the appliances which are used for preparing the Cod, such as the galaire ; † this is a kind of little staging which is made on land at the edge of the beach. For this there is made a foundation of stakes planted upright like those underneath the staging ; they are increasingly tall towards the sea, in order that the flooring may be level. It is made in the same way as the staging, both as

* By the English fishermen it is called a liver-butt, and is commonly made from a hogshead, at least on the fishing vessels. It is illustrated, along with some other articles used in the fishery, on the plate in our author's book reproduced herewith. By the French fishermen of Newfoundland it is called a foiessiere.

† This galaire, which serves, as our author tells us on page 202 of his book, for a support to the pile of fish while draining after being washed clear of salt, finds its equivalent in Newfoundland in a small platform placed near the flakes, but I have not been able to find its name. The piles of draining fish are said to be in water-horse, an expression used also in Nova Scotia, and by the Acadian fishermen are said to be en fumier.

p. 2062

to the foundation and also as to the flooring of little poles, with the [108] exception that it is only twelve or fifteen feet both in length and breadth. The latter is a double one ; the single ones have the same length along the beach,

ARTICLES USED IN THE COD-FISHERY

Copperplate from Deny's book

and half the breadth towards the sea. Some are made like this, but only three four feet across, according to the size of the vessel, and always more rather than less through fear that bad weather may prevent the fish being spread out to dry. This galaire is covered above with poles in the form of an arbour, upon which are placed plenty of branches to prevent the sun, when striking upon the fish, from overheating them, something which would spoil them.

There are also needed some barrows [boyars], which we call handbarrows [sivières à bras] in France.* Everybody [109] knows what they are.† There are also wickerworks which are flat, made from long rods an inch thick, inter-laced like a wickerwork for cleaning clothes, but they are much larger and stronger. They are used to throw the Cod upon when it is washed, in order that it may not take up sand. Another is also made of about a fathom and a half square. It is formed like a cage, except that it is not closed on top ; the sticks in it are as large as the thumb, and it is bottomed with boards. This is placed in the water, the fish are thrown inside it for washing, and it is called a Timbre.‡

* Called civiadières by the French fishermen of Newfoundland.

† If he does not, he will find one illustrated in the Moll picture (on the beach) later at page 311 of this work.

‡ Shown by our author's figure. This washing-box, the use of which is explained by our author at page 101 of his book, is still in use and called, in Newfoundland, a ram's horn. It is not placed on the beach, as our author describes, but is lowered from the staging by a proper tackle.

Page	1	2	3	4
------	---	---	---	---

The wheelbarrows [broüettes] are nothing other [110] than two pieces of squared wood, as large as the arm or thereabouts, of four to five feet in length, [and having] the form of a crook at one end. On these are nailed staves of a foot and a half in length, the ends of which are nailed to the round part of these bars to form a bottom. In order that it may form a hollow, staves are also placed on the two sides, of which one end of the stave is nailed against the end of the crook, and the other end of the stave in the middle of the bar where it commences to lose its curvature. Hence the curvature of these bars, when thus prepared, makes a large hollow like a wheelbarrow.* In place of a wheel there is added a large roller of wood [111] pointed at both ends, which are passed into two iron eyes attached underneath this wheelbarrow. Thus when it is dragged this roller serves as a wheel, which makes it more easy to move. Its use is to carry the fish from those troughs, which I have described as used by the splitters. This barrow is placed under the troughs, and no sooner is the slide raised than the fish fall therein without being touched. This is done to save time and expedite labour.

Whilst all these works are being constructed, the doctor, with some of the boys, is working to build the flakes [vignaux]. For this they have a quantity of little poles which are cut into pieces [112] of about five to six feet in length and pointed at one end ; these are driven into the ground, so that there remain about three and a half or four feet above the ground. These pickets are distant one from another about a fathom ; they are all arranged in a single line, and are all of the same height. They continue about twenty-five, thirty, or forty paces in length according to the extent of the place, which requires them sometimes to be longer and sometimes shorter. This first line of pickets being completed, another is made of the same sort, with a distance between the two lines of about five feet, a little more or less. Then long poles are placed in position and tied to the top ends of these pickets, [113] from one end to the other of the two sides. The strings which are used are threads of rope-yarn. All these poles being in position, others are placed across them, the ends of which rest upon those poles of the two sides ; they are tied at each end to those poles at distances of about one foot from one another. This being done one covers all this length and breadth with branches, from which all the foliage is removed in order that the air may circulate as well from below as from above, whilst the Cod are upon the flakes to dry.† There are needed for one ship about thirty, forty, or fifty of these flakes, according to the bigness of the vessel, and also according to the extent of the place, which is sometimes of [114] thirty, fifty, and even of a hundred paces in length.

In another place the steward has some of the boys, whom he makes work

* Its construction is made plain by our author's plate. Such rolling hand-barrows are still in use, and in Newfoundland are called drudge-barrows. The French fishermen call it by the same name as our author.

† These flakes are made in substantially the same way at the present day. They are always a conspicuous feature of any fishing village or station. They are figured, though not well, in the Moll picture at page 311 of this work. They are still called vignots, or vigneaux, by the French and Acadian fishermen.

p. 2064

on the gravel beach [grave∗] if there is no other business more pressing. But let us look at the work on the beach, and then I will tell that which is done in having this beach prepared. That which is called beach is the little pebbles which the sea throws upon the coast. This is flattened as evenly as possible, and if there is too much in one place it is removed to fill up the hollows in other spots ; or else the boys go to fetch it from the shore in hampers [mannes] (which is a kind of basket, round, and without handle),† and carry it where it is needed. If the beach is old, and has not been torn up [115] during the winter by the sea, grass is found coming up amongst the gravel, and it is necessary for the boys to tear it all out shoot by shoot, so that none at all is left.

The duty of the steward, aside from the work on the beach, is to take charge of everything connected with the cooking every day for the whole crew, and to go occasionally with his boys, in a boat which he has, from land to the vessel to fetch wine, biscuit, pork, butter, oil, and all other provisions. He goes to the spring with his barrels to fetch water to make his drinks, and for the kettle. He goes also to the ship with his boat to fetch salt, and has it carried ashore and placed in [116] a little pile by the boys, until the time when the staging may be finished and the salt-bin ready to receive it. This salt, which is thus brought, is for salting the Cod which are caught while this work is going on. This is done by the boats which go to the fishery, as I have said, in proportion as the carpenters get them ready ; and it is these fish which I have described earlier as dressed upon those boards which are laid upon the barrels.

[155]

CHAPTER X

On the method of dressing and salting the Cod, and of making the oil which is obtained therefrom : how one prepares the roe, what the latter is, and what it is used for.

Just as soon as two or three boats are unloaded, and there are fish upon this point or stage-head, and the boat-masters and the stowers are upon the staging, then each according to his duty begins to prepare himself to go to the fish-table [aller a l'etal], that is, to take his place around the table. For this purpose the splitters commence with their [156] knives, which are furnished them by the captain. They sharpen them, and their sharpener is a piece of flat wood, four inches wide, three thick, and as long as the arm, upon which they place the sediment of a grindstone. This sediment is made by the action of the carpenters in sharpening their iron tools upon a large millstone, which is used up by dint of use ; that which is consumed falls into the trough in which is the water. They take care to collect this, and some of them even carry it from France ; with it they sharpen their knives which cut like razors. They

* There is no exact English equivalent for this word grave, which our author applies to those accumulations of pebbles without sand which are formed only upon shores exposed to a strong surf. Its exact use in the drying of fish is described later under page 212 of our author's book. Being thus economically important it has passed into a place-name (as Grevé) in Gaspé and elsewhere.

† These brackets are our author's.

p. 2065

each have two of them. As soon as these are sharpened they put on a large leather apron, which takes them [157] under the chin, and extends to the knees. They have also sleeves of leather or of tarred linen. In this garb they take their places in barrels which come up to the mid-thigh. These barrels are between those little boxes which are attached to the table, and of which I have earlier spoken. They place their aprons outside or above the barrel to prevent the water, the blood, and other filth from entering it. Such are the splatters, arranged ready for work.* But they each need a throater and a header. These have also a big apron and sleeves like the others, but they have no barrels.

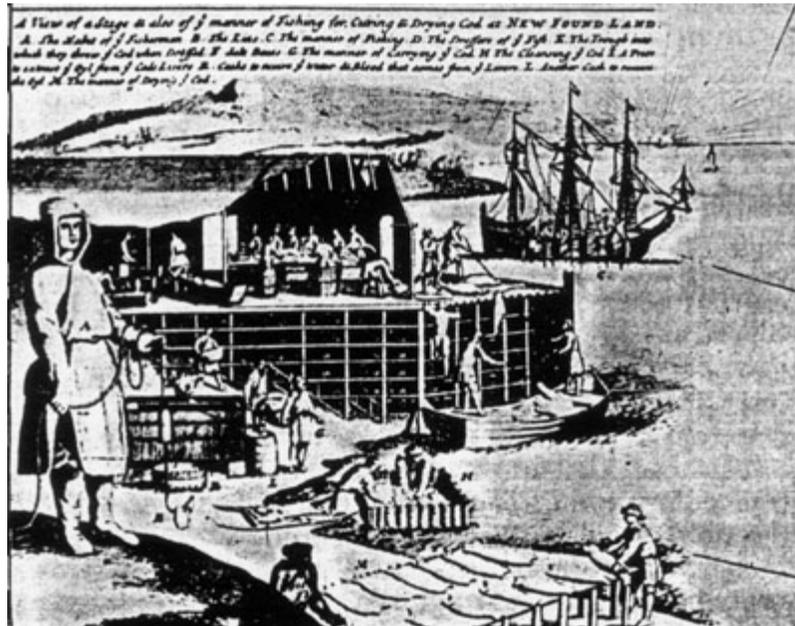

ILLUSTRATION OF METHODS USED IN THE COD-FISHERY

From Moll's Map of North America of about 1713.

In addition, those who work on the water have their boots, which they never leave except to sleep. Those who stay on land and take part [158] in this work, do not have them. The header has no knife, but the throater has one,

* The various operations of the fishery are shown, with pre-Raphaelite detail and clearness, upon the accompanying picture, reproduced from Moll's map of North America of 1713 (or thereabouts). Its agreement with the descriptions of our author is so close as to suggest some connection between his work and the picture, or else a remarkable uniformity in the methods of the fishery as practised by the French in Acadia and the English in Newfoundland. It is to be noted, however, that while the picture is very like our author's description, it differs in some details, such as in showing several salt-bins instead of one, the table set at right angles to the end partition instead of parallel, the door to the stage-head in the middle instead of one side. It is possible the picture is much older than Moll's map, but if so I do not know its origin. It is reproduced, reduced, in Prowse's History of Newfoundland (page 22), while the same picture, crudely re-drawn and in greater part reversed, is given in Winsor's Narrative and Critical History of America, IV. 2, where it is said to be taken from a map of America of 1738 in Keith's History of the British Plantations in America, Part I. 1738.

p. 2066

different from that of the splitter. That of the splitter is square at the end, and very thick on the back in order to give it weight that it may have more power to cut the spine of the Cod. That of the throater is longer and pointed, the point rounding on the side towards the edge. The throaters and headers are on the other side of the table near the partition, which is on the side towards the sea, adjoining that point on which the Cod are unloaded. Being thus all placed, the boys and others are also upon the point of the staging with their pews, with which they pierce the Cod in [159] the head, and thrust it near the table under that partition or gable which I have earlier described, and in which is left an opening of about two feet in height.

Having thrust it there, other men who are between the throaters and the headers take the Cod and place it upon the table near the [207]

CHAPTER XIV

Of the work on land which is done in washing the Cod, carrying it to the galaire, to the flakes, to the beach, in turning and returning it, and placing it in piles.

It is necessary now to follow the work of those on land. Having arisen, the first thing that they do every day is to go to the staging to get the pile of Cod which is to be washed, carry it to the water, [place it] in that timbre, wash it and carry it thence to the galaire. There is also on the galaire every day some [208] which must be carried to the flakes. That is loaded upon the barrows, and is taken to the flakes. Those who take it arrange it upon the flakes tail against head, the skin upwards.

When one flake is all covered, they commence to place it upon another. When there is a question of carrying the barrow there is nobody exempt, not even the captain, except he be some aged captain who has [long] had command and who has seen the world.* During this time those who have brandy drink a little dram of it by stealth without leaving their place at the work. [The fish] having remained thus up to nine o'clock, when the skin has had time to dry, they go and overturn it flesh upward, and there [209] it remains until about four o'clock, when they go and overturn it, skin up, thus to pass the night.

The flesh is never left up during the night, because of the dampness. That is repeated every morning—the washing, the carrying to the galaire, and from the galaire to the flakes. All the Cod that is upon the flakes, as well those of that day as of the preceding, is turned flesh up every morning about nine o'clock or thereabouts, when the sun has acquired the force to dry up the dew and the dampness of the night. Thus they are left until about four o'clock in the afternoon, if there does not appear any rain or appearance of rain. For once the Cod has been placed to dry, it must no more [210] be wet. And even if the rain continues it is always left with the skin up, and that which is upon the galair remains there also, and that which is in salt remains unwashed. There occur sometimes six, seven, and eight days without the possibility of placing them upon the flakes, washing or overturning them. When that happens, which is rarely, the Cod runs great risk of heating ; and if that happens, they are obliged to throw it away. Even when this happens for two or three days [only], the Cod is never so good, and it is nearly always waste at the sale, when it is then necessary to give two quintals or two hundred pounds of it for one.

* Such seems to be the meaning of the expression, obviously local, qui a veu le loup.

When that which was first placed upon the flakes commences to be a little dry, and [211] when the beach-master judges that it may be in condition to be placed en mouton, instead of overturning it at evening in the usual manner, skin up, he has them placed, up to eight, ten, and twelve, tails against heads, one above another, the foundation of this little pile being only two Cod, which are called mouton. They are placed thus in order that they may preserve their heat, which they cannot do when overturned singly, for the reason that the night is always cool, and this moistens them too much in the open air and in the moist wind which strikes them from underneath upon the flakes. They enlarge these moutons every evening up to fifteen, twenty, and twenty-five Cod. When these have been [212] placed in this fashion in large moutons,* at evening instead of being replaced upon the flakes, they are carried to the beach to unload the flakes and make room for others. Of two moutons they make only one upon the beach. Then every evening there are removed from the flakes only those which are placed upon the beach. Every day some are placed on the flakes, and some are removed from and some are placed upon the beach, and so on to the end of the fishery.

Having thus all the flakes and the beach covered with Cod, every morning after having washed and carried that on the galair to the flakes, and having overturned all of that other flesh up, they overturn likewise that which is on the beach ; and that which is there [213] in moutons they spread out one by one, skin upwards. Then they go to overturn that which they had brought from the galair in the morning, flesh up, like the others. After this they return to do the same thing which they had just been doing [viz., turning the Cod flesh up] to that on the beach, which was in large moutons that had been selected and placed skin up. Presently all the Cod of the flakes and of the beach has all the flesh upwards. Such is the work that is done every day in the morning before dinner. I do not doubt that they have a good appetite for having done their duty well. But if, during the time of the dinner, there appears any sign of clouds, or if there is any appearance of rain, it is necessary for them to leave everything and to run [214] swiftly to the Cod and to turn it skin up, for fear lest the flesh become wet. This being done, they go to finish their dinner. And if that cloud does not bring rain, or only a little, and the sun comes out again finely, it is necessary to leave their dinner yet again and go back to place the Cod as it was before, where it remains until four o'clock in the evening or thereabouts.

From the time of the dinner until the time when it is necessary to overturn the Cod, the captain visits everywhere, seeks whether there is anything to be done, goes to have the Gaff Cod changed to another place, has that resalted which has been longest salted, has it placed in some spot on the staging where it is not in the way, and there has a pile made of it. There it remains [215] until the time when it is necessary to load it. At another time he will fix his rabbes or Cod eggs, which are salted daily at one of the ends of the salt-bin, as I have related. He has them taken up and carried thence to a corner of the staging, at the end on the land side ; there he has them resalted and arranges them in a pile one above another. When the pile is large he has them placed in barrels, in which they are resalted once more, but lightly, since they are saturated. They are packed in, and remain there until the time when everything is loaded. At another time he will visit his liver-butts, where oil is made. If they are full, he has it drawn off and placed in barrels, which also remain there until the embarkment. At another time he will have [216] his charniers emptied to get rid of the water and blood, and to remove all the filth which forms on top of the livers which are not melted. He always finds something to keep him busy, and to keep the others at work, for fear lest the blues [havives] may get possession of them.* The steward goes on board ship to have provision brought ashore in proportion as they are needed, or he goes to obtain water for his drink. He makes sure that the boys do that which is their duty, which is to obey everybody in everything, and to take care that the aprons of the dressers, and their sleeves, are well washed and dried, that the knives of the throaters are clean and sharp, that the staging is washed and cleared of all those bones of [217] Cod, which the dressers throw behind them and of the entrails which fall here and there, and that the aprons are clean and well washed. For the least thing of all these that is neglected, all the boys get the whip ; they are not allowed to lay the blame one upon another.

* These piles are called by the English fishermen of Newfoundland and Nova Scotia faggots, but the Acadian fishermen still call them moutons.

Other sailors, with the pilot, have the duty to go on board to fetch salt for filling up the salt-bin. The doctor works at his garden, or goes hunting for the table of the captain. The beach-master walks around his flakes and beach, visits his Cod at one place and another, notes that which it is necessary to place in moutons, large and small, both on the flakes and the beach, and visits also those in the little piles to see if it is time to make them [218] larger. He visits also the big piles, to see if there are any which need to be placed the next day in the sun. Nobody lacks occupation. At two hours after midday they have an hour for luncheon, to smoke, or to sleep. As four o'clock approaches, the beach-master, the captain, and the pilot keep looking from time to time to see if the fishing boats are not returning. As soon as they are seen, the beach-master begins to call the crew. When he calls they have to leave every kind of work and go to him. Then he sends some to turn the flakes, and tells them, "You are to place that in little moutons, that in large ; that [219] you will carry upon the beach," and he sends others to the beach to do the same thing.

The Cod which ought to be placed in a pile the beach-master and the pilot have brought by armfuls, and make it into piles, some large and others small,

* This word havives does not occur in French lexicons. As Professor Cohn, of Columbia University, has suggested to me, it is probably simply a misprint for havies, of which our modern form is ennui. Our author's use of it, of course, involves a pleasantry.

p. 2069

according as they think best. Whilst that is being done, the fishermen arrive at the staging and discharge their Cod. Then every one goes to prepare for dressing it after the usual routine.

When the Cod has been placed several times in large moutons, it is placed in little piles, and at another time from these little piles a much larger one is made. Thus they go on every day making these piles larger, until the time when the Cod is [220] entirely dry. Of these a huge pile is made, which is not touched for more than twelve or fifteen days. Then it is rebuilt again in a pile [and remains] for a month without being touched.

It is every day the same business of dressing and salting ; every morning washing and building piles on the galaires ; carrying from the galaires to the flakes, from the flakes to the beach ; on the beach building little piles at evening ; from the little piles making large ones. As to the latter, there are every morning piles to be placed upon the beach until the time when the Cod is well dried, when a pile is made which remains a month or five weeks without being touched. At the end of this time they are once more given the sun. Then they are replaced [221] in a pile for as long a time.

This is done for fear lest the pile may take up some moisture, and to keep the fish always dry.

No. 860.

[1609.]

LESCARBOT'S DESCRIPTION OF THE COD FISHERY AT NEWFOUNDLAND.

EXTRACTS FROM LESCARBOT'S HISTORY OF NEW FRANCE (CHAMPLAIN SOCIETY'S REPRINT AND TRANSLATION, VOL. III.), pages 238-239.

And seeing we are in the codfish country, I shall not stop until I have said a word or two about it ; for so many people and in such great number go every year in quest of them from all parts of Europe, that I know not whence such a swarm can come. The cod brought into these parts are either dry or green. The fishing of the green cod is on the Bank in the open sea, some sixty leagues on this side of Newfoundland, as may be seen by looking at my map. Fifteen or twenty sailors, more or less, have each a line, i.e. a cord of forty or fifty fathoms long, at the end of which is a large baited hook, with a lead three pounds in weight to take it to the bottom. With this implement they fish the cod, which are so greedy, that the moment it is let down, it is snapped up, where the fishing is good. The cod being drawn on board, there are planks in the form of narrow tables along the ship where the fish are dressed. One man cuts off their heads, and usually throws them into the sea ; another cuts open their bellies and disembowels them, and sends them back to his mate, who cuts away the biggest part of the backbone. That done, they are put into the salting-tub for four-and-twenty hours, and then packed away. And in this sort they work continually, without respecting the Sabbath (which is an impiety, for it is the Lord's Day), for the space of almost three months, their sails down, until their load is complete. Sometimes they set sail to go farther on in search of better fishing. And the saying that it is cold in Canada has originated because the poor mariners suffer from the cold among the fogs, especially the most hasty, who set out in February.

As for the dry cod, one must go ashore to dry it. There are in Newfoundland and in Bacalaos, many ports where ships lie at anchor for three months. At break of day the sailors go one, two, or three leagues out on the watery plain to catch their load. By one or two o'clock in the afternoon they have each filled his boat, and return to port, where there is a great platform built on the seashore, on which the fish are cast, as one casts sheaves of corn through a barn-window. There is a great table on which the fish when cast are dressed as described above. After having been in the salting-tub, they are carried out to dry on the rocks exposed to the wind, or on the galets, i.e. piles of stone heaped up by the sea. After six hours they are turned, and so on at intervals. Then all are gathered, and piled up together, and again at the end of eight days exposed to the air. In the end when dried they are packed away. But there must be no fogs when they are drying, for then they will rot ; nor too much heat, for then they will rust, but temperate and windy weather.*

* This description of the cod-fishery, both for green and dry cod, agrees perfectly, so far as it goes, with the elaborate treatise of Denys, who has illumined the subject with a degree of detail and a vividness of expression that leave hardly anything more to be said ; cf. Denys, Description, ii. 27-252 (Champlain Society's edition, 257-348). (W. F. G.)

In the Privy Council

Privy Council
Documents

Volume I
Volume II
Volume III
Volume IV
Volume V
Contents
Volume VI
Volume VII
Volume VIII
Volume IX
Volume X
Volume XI
Volume XII

IN THE MATTER of the BOUNDARY between the DOMINION of CANADA and the COLONY of NEWFOUNDLAND in the LABRADOR PENINSULA.

BETWEEN

THE DOMINION OF CANADA of the one part

AND

THE COLONY OF NEWFOUNDLAND of the other part.

VOLUME V

OF

JOINT APPENDIX

CONTAINING

PART XI.

AUTHORITIES BEARING ON THE MEANING AND APPLICATION OF THE TERM "COAST."

PART XII.

DOCUMENTS SHOWING THE AREA OF "COAST" RESERVED OR CONSIDERED UTILIZABLE FOR FISHERY PURPOSES
ON THE EASTERN COASTS OF BRITISH NORTH AMERICA AND ON THE COASTS OF GREAT BRITAIN.

PART XIII.

DOCUMENTS (OTHER THAN MAPS) SHOWING THE GENERAL BELIEF AND REPUTATION AS TO THE EXTENT OF
THE JURISDICTION OF THE GOVERNMENT OF NEWFOUNDLAND ON THE LABRADOR PENINSULA.

PART XIV.

REPORTS AND DOCUMENTS RELATING TO THE LOCATION OF THE SEACOAST LINE WITH RELATION TO THE ESTUARY OF THE HAMILTON RIVER SYSTEM.

PART XV.

DOCUMENTS DESCRIPTIVE OF TOPOGRAPHY OF THE COAST OF LABRADOR AND OF CONDITIONS IN GENERAL ON THE COAST.

PART XVI.

DOCUMENTS DESCRIPTIVE OF PHYSIOGRAPHY, GEOLOGY AND ETHNOGRAPHY OF THE LABRADOR PENINSULA.

Numbers 861-1061. Pages 2073-2654.

[1927lab]

In the Privy Council

Privy Council
Documents

Volume I
Volume II
Volume III
Volume IV
Volume V
Contents
Volume VI
Volume VII
Volume VIII
Volume IX
Volume X
Volume XI
Volume XII

IN THE MATTER of the BOUNDARY between the DOMINION of CANADA and the COLONY of NEWFOUNDLAND in the LABRADOR PENINSULA.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

OF

VOLUME V

OF JOINT APPENDIX.

PART XI.

AUTHORITIES BEARING ON THE MEANING AND APPLICATION OF THE TERM “COAST.”

No.	Date.		Description of Document.	Page.
861	1744-1922	J	Definitions of “Coast” in leading Dictionaries	2073
862	1914	C	Definitions of “Coast” extracted from Law Dictionaries, Digests and works	2075
863	1910	C	Definitions of “Coast” extracted from Law Dictionaries, Digests and works	2076
864	1917	J	Definitions of “Coast” extracted from Law Dictionaries, Digests and works	2076
865	1903	C	Definitions of “Coast” extracted from Law Dictionaries, Digests and works	2077

p. iv

No.	Date.		Description of Document.	Page.
866	1898	C	Definitions of “Coast” extracted from Law Dictionaries, Digests and works	2077
867	1904	C	Definitions of “Coast” extracted from Law Dictionaries, Digests and works	2078
868	1900	C	Definitions of “Coast” extracted from Law Dictionaries, Digests and works	2078
869	28th May 1804	C	John Francis Sault v. Corvette L'Africaine	2079
870	Nov. 1805	C	The “Anna”	2082
871	20th Jan. 1836	C	The King v. Forty-nine casks of Brandy	2083
872	1854	C	Hamilton v. Menifée	2084
873	—	C	The United States v. The Steamboat “James

			Morrison”	2085
874	—	C	The United States v. The Steam Ferryboat “Wm. Pope”	2086
875	24th July 1888	C	Ravesies v. United States	2087
876	1919	C	Esquimault & Nanaimo Rly. Co. v. Treat	2089
877	27th Nov. 1801	C	The “Twee Gebroeders,” Northolt, Master	2093
878	9th March. 1858	C	The Queen v. Cox	2095
879	—	C	Bowie v. Marquis of Alisa	2097
880	—	C	In Gammell v. Commissioners of Woods and Forests et al.	2100
881	1224	C	Extract from Magna Charta	2100
882	1783	C	Extract from Treaty of Paris	2101
883	20th Oct. 1818	C	Extract from the convention between Great Britain and the United States	2102
884	—	C	Extract from decision of the Permanent Court of Arbitration at the Hague	2103
885	6th Oct. 1818	C	Extract from Protocol of the fifth conference between the American and British plenipotentiaries	2104
886	7th Oct. 1818	C	Extract from remarks on articles from Messrs. Gallatin and Rush to Messrs. Robinson and Goulburn	2106
887	21st July 1852	C	Extracts from “Memorandum on the Newfoundland Fishery Negotiations,” by Sir Anthony Perrier	2107

p. v

No.	Date.		Description of Document.	Page.
888	—	C	Extracts from Fuzier-Herman “Droit Civil Annote”	2108
889	—	J	Definitions of Coast in leading Dictionaries, etc.	2109
890	—	J	Corpus Juris (New York, 1917) Vol. XI., pp. 935-6	2109
891	1611	N	Extracts from the authorised version of the Bible	2109
892	17th Mar. 1824	N	Extract from letter from Sir C. Bagot to Mr. G. Canning	2110
893	11th Apr. 1824	N	Extract from letter from Count Nesselrode to Nikolas Semenovitch Mordvinof	2110
894	(1910-11)	N	Extracts from “Encyclopaedia Britannica”	2111
895	1824	N	Extracts from Callis on Sewers	2112
896	—	N	Extract from Robert Greenhow’s Memoirs	2114
897	—	C	Extract from argument of Hannis Taylor	2115
898	1904	N	The opinion of Lord Alverstone	2121
899	20th Apr. 1815	N	Messrs. Pickney and Monroe, United States Commissioners, to Don Pedro Cevallos, Spanish Commissioner	2122
900	12th Mar. 1818	N	Extract from U.S. Secretary of State to Don Luis de Onis, Spanish Commissioner	2124
901	—	N	Extract from “The Oregon Question Examined,” by Travers Twiss	2125
902	1879	N	Extract from the Commentaries upon International Law by the Rt. Hon. Sir Robert J.

			Phillimore	2127
903	—	N	Extracts from Books on International Law	2129
904	1884	N	Extract from the Ontario-Manitoba Case. The Argument for the Dominion of Canada . .	2130
905	1893	N	Extract from Behring Sea (Fur Seal) Arbitration	2132
906	1899	N	Extract from British Guiana-Venezuela Boundary Arbitration	2133
907	1904	N	Extracts from British Guiana-Brazil Boundary Arbitration	2134
908	15th July 1884	C	Extracts from proceedings before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in Ontario-Manitoba Boundary Case re “Watershed” contention	2135

p. vi

No.	Date.		Description of Document.	Page.
909	3rd Aug. 1878	C	Ontario-Manitoba Boundary Case	2146
910	11th Aug. 1884	C	Ontario-Manitoba Boundary Case. Imperial Order in Council embodying Her Majesty's decision on the Report from the Privy Council	2148
911	1670-1891	N	Extracts from Cases on extent of Public Right of Fishery	2152
912	1766	N	Extract from Valin's “Nouveau Commentaire sur l' Ordonnance de la Marine” (August 1681)	2155
913	1787	N	Extract from Hale de Jure Maris cap. IV. . .	2156
914	1847	N	Extracts from Angell's “The Right of Property in Tide Waters”	2160
915	1888	N	Extracts from Moore and Hall on Foreshores	2163
916	1903	N	Extracts from Moore on Fisheries	2164
917	1914	N	Extracts from Attorney General for British Columbia v. Attorney General for Canada	2165

PART XII.

DOCUMENTS SHOWING THE AREA OF “COAST”
RESERVED OR CONSIDERED UTILIZABLE FOR
BRITISH NORTH AMERICA AND ON THE COASTS
OF GREAT BRITAIN.

918	10th Mar. 1670	C	Order in Council	2167
919	27th Jan. 1676	C	Charter to the West Country Adventures for the Fishery of Newfoundland	2167
920	16th Feb. 1680	C	Amendments to Regulations by Lords of Trade and Plantations	2168
921	26th Feb. 1680	C	Further consideration of Newfoundland affairs by Lords of Trade and Plantations	2168
922	2nd June 1786	N	Instructions to Governor of Newfoundland	2168
923	27th May 1802	C	Instructions to Governor of Newfoundland, Article 7 and Instructions to succeeding Governors of Newfoundland	2168

No.	Date.		Description of Document.	Page.
924	1905	C	Extract from report of an official visit to the Coast of Labrador by the Governor of Newfoundland	2169
925	8th Feb. 1923	C	Extract from letter from the George E. Turner, Deputy Minister of Agriculture and Mines (Newfoundland) to Sir Patrick McGrath	2170
926	1921	C	Extract from "La Grande Peche de Terre-Neuve et d'Islande"	2171
927	1681	C	Extract from the Ordonnance de la Marine du Mois d'Aout	2177
928	11th Apr. 1713	C	Extracts from Treaties between Great Britain and France relating to the Fisheries	2181
929	21st July 1852	C	Extracts from official correspondance relative to Fisheries on the Coast of Newfoundland and Labrador	2185
930	14th Jan. 1857	C	Extract from convention between Great Britain and France relative to the Rights of Fishery on the Coast of Newfoundland, etc.	2188
931	1st Sept. 1873	C	Resolutions adopted at a meeting of the Executive Council of Newfoundland for transmission to Her Majesty's Government	2190
932	12th June 1884	C	Despatch from the Earl of Derby to Governor J. Glover	2193
933	14th Nov. 1885	C	Extract from arrangements signed at Paris, relating to the Newfoundland Fisheries Question	2208
934	15th Dec. 1763	C	Representations of the Lords of Trade re grant to Stumpel	2211
935	10th Feb. 1764	C	Extract from Privy Council Minutes	2213
936	5th June 1764	C	Representations of the Lords of Trade	2215
937	20th Dec. 1764	C	Baron Behr to Earl of Halifax	2218
938	10th Feb. 1764	C	Order in Council on Grant to Stumpel	2219
939	17th Feb. 1766	C	Extract from Privy Council Minutes granting Lands in Nova Scotia to Lord Colville and others	2221
940	3rd Dec. 1766	C	Extract from Privy Council Minutes granting Land in Nova Scotia to Tucker and others	2223
941	22nd Nov. 1763	C	Instructions, Lords of Trade to Montagu Wilmot, Governor of Nova Scotia respecting distribution of lands in St. John (Prince Edward) and Cape Breton Islands	2225

No.	Date.		Description of Document.	Page.
942	23rd Mar. 1764	C	Representation Lords of Trade re granting lands on the Island of St. John	2227
943	8th July 1767	C	Extract from the Minutes of the Privy Council respecting Grants of land in St. John (Prince Edward Island)	2231
944	1850-74	C	The Queen v. Cox	2232

945	10th Feb. 1764	C	Extract from Privy Council Minutes approving Grant for Messrs. Price and Knutton ..	2233
946	3rd Dec. 1766	C	Extract from Privy Council Minutes granting land to Alex. Maitland	2235
947	25th July 1785	C	Additional instruction for Frederick Haldimand as Captain General and Governor in Chief of the Province of Quebec or to the Commander in Chief of the said Province for the time being	2237
948	1786-1839	C	Instructions to Governors of Quebec (and Lower Canada)	2238
949	23rd July 1788	C	Extract from Minutes of the Executive Council of Quebec re Patent of Lands to John Schoolbred	2239
950	24th Jul. 1788	C	Draft of Letters Patent of Grant to John Shoolbred	2243
951	1756	C	An act for encouraging the Fisheries in that part of Great Britain called Scotland. 29. Geo. II, cap. 23	2247
952	1771	C	An act for the encouragement of the White Herring the Fishery. 11. George III, cap. 31	2249
953	1774	C	Extract from "Considerations of the Rights and Interests of the Adventurers in the Labrador Fishery" by John Cartwright	2250
954	25th June 1787	C	Extracts from Minutes of Legislative Council of Quebec respecting Cartwright's application for property at Touchstoke Bay	2251
955	1906	C	Extract from Minutes of Executive Council of Newfoundland granting Timber Licenses ..	2257
956	14th July 1924	C	Affidavit by William Ralph Parsons ..	2258
957	15th Aug. 1924	C	Extract from "Labrador Fisheries, 1892-1924" by Wilfred T. Grenfell	2259

p. ix
PART XIII.

DOCUMENTS (OTHER THAN MAPS) SHOWING THE
GENERAL BELIEF AND REPUTATION AS TO
THE EXTENT OF THE JURISDICTION OF THE
GOVERNMENT OF NEWFOUNDLAND ON THE
LABRADOR PENINSULA.

No.	Date.		Descriptions of Document.	Page.
958	17th Dec. 1829	N	"Maine Boundary" dispute	2261
959	18th Dec. 1835	N	The Indian Steam Boundary	2263
960	16th Aug. 1836	N	Extract from Sir George Simpson's letter to Governor and Committee, from Moose Factory	2265
961	16th Nov. 1848	J	Sir George Simpson to the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine	2266
962	16th Jan. 1843	N	Extract from Letter from Wm. Kennedy to Sir George Simpson	2271
963	25th Aug. 1843	N	Extract from Letter from Wm. Kennedy to Sir George Simpson	2272
964	25 Sept. 1843	N	Extract from Letter from William Nourse to Sir George Simpson

			..	2273
965	17th Jan. 1849	N	Letter to Sir J. Tetley, forwarding from Earl Grey, a despatch from the Governor-General of Canada with Letters from Wm. Kennedy making charges against Hudson'd Bay Company and Sir George Simpson's reply	2275
966	16th Nov. 1848	N	Sir G. Simpson to the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine	2276
967	23rd Mar. 1854	N	Extract of Letter from Sir George Simpson to Donald A. Smith	2277
968	15th Nov. 1856	N	Letter from Sir George Simpson to John Shepherd, Secretary, Hudson's Bay. Co. ..	2278
969	1857	J	Extract from the Evidence of Sir George Simpson before the Committee to consider the state of Hudson Bay Company's possessions in North America	2279
970	1857	C	Further Extracts from Evidence of Sir George Simpson before same Committee .. .	2282
971	28th May 1857	N	Extracts from Evidence of Hon. William H. Draper, C.B., before same Committee	2290

p. X

No.	Date.		Description of Document.	Page.
972	26th Oct. 1874	N	Sir E. Thornton to Mr. Fish	2293
973	27th Oct. 1874	N	Mr. Fish to Sir E. Thornton	2293
974	23rd Nov. 1874	N	Sir E. Thornton to Mr. Fish	2294
975	16th Nov. 1874	N	Lord Dufferin to Sir E. Thornton	2294
976	21st Dec. 1874	C	Lord Carnarvon to Lord Dufferin	2297
977	10th Nov. 1874	C	The Foreign Office to the Colonial Office	2298
978	26th Oct. 1874	C	Sir E. Thornton to the Earl of Derby	2299
979	26th Nov. 1874	C	The Colonial Office to the Foreign Office	2301
980	1st Dec. 1874	C	The Foreign Office to the Colonial Office	2302
981	16th Nov. 1874	C	Sir. E. Thornton to the Earl of Derby	2303
982	13th Nov. 1874	C	Messrs. Brigham & Co. to Sir Edward Thornton, K.C.B.	2304
983	7th Nov. 1874	C	The Treasury Department, Washington, to the Collector of Customs, Boston ..	2305
984	16th Nov. 1874	C	Sir E. Thornton to Honble. Hamilton Fish	2306
985	5th Dec. 1874	C	The Colonial Office to the Foreign Office	2307
986	15th Dec. 1874	C	The Foreign Office to the Colonial Office	2308
987	12th Dec. 1876	N	Letter from Geo. Goschen to the Hon. R. W. Scott	2309
988	3rd May 1879	N	John Bignell to Hon. Pierre Fortin, M.P.	2310
989	10th June 1889	N	Memorandum from J. Johnston to Burgess	2311
990	16th Aug. 1909	N	Affidavit of Henry Webb	2311
991	17th Aug. 1909	N	Affidavit of Abram Finger	2312
992	17th Aug. 1909	N	Affidavit of Adam Kopek	2313
993	17th Aug. 1909	N	Affidavit of Christian Schmidt	2314
994	24th Aug. 1909	N	Affidavit of William Ford	2315
995	25th Aug. 1909	N	Affidavit of Samuel James Bromfield ..	2316
996	26th Aug. 1909	N	Affidavit of Edward Mitchell	2316

No.	Date.		Description of Document.	Page.
997	26th Aug. 1909	N	Affidavit of John Winter	2317
998	10th Sept. 1909	N	Affidavit of Thomas Blake	2317
999	10th Sept. 1909	N	Affidavit of Joseph Goudy	2317
1000	10th Sept. 1909	N	Affidavit of Joseph Michelin	2318
1001	19th Mar. 1926	N	Affidavit of Thomas Winter	2318
1002	8th June 1926	N	Affidavit of F.C. Berteau	2318
1003	1925	N	Extract from "Chambers' Encyclopaedia"	2318

PART XIV.

REPORTS AND DOCUMENTS RELATING TO THE
LOCATION OF THE SEACOAST LINE WITH RELATION TO THE ESTUARY OF THE HAMILTON
RIVER SYSTEM.

1004	24th Nov. 1923	C	Report of W. J. Stewart, Chief Hydrographer, Canada, on the determination of the slope of the Narrows between Lake Melville and Lester Point	2319
1005	5th Aug.-2nd Oct. 1923.	C	Summary of results established by automatic Tide Gauge records	2321
1006	—	C	Map showing bench marks established in the Narrows in 1923 by the Geodetic Survey of Canada	2323
1007	26th Nov. 1923	C	Report on precise levelling in the Narrows (Hamilton River) between Lake Melville and Lester Point, by R.H. Montgomery ..	2324
1008	14th Nov. 1923	C	Reports of the tidal and current survey of Canada on investigation of Tidal conditions and character of water in the Narrows and the Hamilton Inlet	2329
1009	2nd Nov. 1923	C	Tidal and Current Survey—Canada. Investigations in Hamilton Inlet and in the Narrows off Rigolet	2331
	[1923]	C	[Appendices to Mr. Jones' Report (Tidal and Current Survey, Canada)]	[2338]
	[11 April, 1924]	C	[Tidal and Current Survey—Canada .. .]	[2357]
1010	—	C	Map of the Narrows showing where the Current was metered by the Tidal and Current Survey, Canada	2358A

No.	Date.		Description of Document.	Page.
1011	26th Apr. 1923	C	River slope on Ottawa and St. Lawrence

			Rivers to estimate the slope through Rigolet Harbour	2359
1012	—	C	Tidal information—Hamilton Inlet, the Narrows and Lake Melville	2360
1013	1921	C	Salinity determination of water samples from Lake Melville and vicinity, Northern Quebec	2361
1014	1924	C	Extracts from Report on “Geography and Geology of Lake Melville District, Labrador Peninsula,” by Dr. E.M. Kindle	2362
1015	23rd June 1924	C	Memorandum from Dominion Commissioner of Fisheries re unfavourable conditions for cod in the waters of Lake Melville . .	2399
1016	—	C	Memorandum from Johan Hjort, Sc. D., F.R.S., Professor at the University of Kristiana, Norway, re the unfavourable conditions for cod in the waters of Lake Melville	2403
1017	—	C	Memorandum from Johan Hjort, Sc. D., F.R.S., on the prevalence of unfavourable conditions for cod in the waters of Lake Melville for some time past, say, since 1763	2408
1018	15th Nov. 1922	C	Letter from Dr. Schetelig, Professor of Geology at the University at Christiania, to Dr. Johan Hjort	2410
1019	—	C	The “Twee Gebroeders,” 3 c. Robb 336, 341, 342, per Sir W. Scott (Lord Stowell) . .	2414
1020	—	C	Duke of Gordon v. Earl of Murray (Moray)	2414
1021	1839	C	Horne v. Mackenzie (1839), Maclean & Rob (H.L.) 977	2415
1022	11th July 1828	C	Earl of Kintore v. Forbes (1828-9), 3 Wil. & Shaw, App. Cas. 261	2438
1023	5th June 1854	C	Treaty between Great Britain and the United States, relative to Fisheries, Commerce, and Navigation	2445
1024	8th Apr. 1858	C	Awards by the Hon. John Hamilton Gray, Umpire under the Reciprocity Treaty . .	2449
1025	—	N	Extracts from Notes on Esquimaux Bay and the surrounding country by W.H.A. Davies	2479
1026	10th Oct. 1902	N	Letter from Secretary for Department of the Interior to Grand River Pulp and Lumber Company	2485

No.	Date.		Description of Document.	Page.
1027	16th Feb. 1926	N	Affidavit of W.E. Swaffield	2485
1028	10th Nov. 1823	N	Governor Hamilton to the Secretary of Admiralty	2485
1029	30th Sept. 1863	N	Extract from Captain Hamilton's Report to the Admiral and Governor, relative to the fisheries	2485
1030	4th May 1926	N	Affidavit of Ralph Parsons	2485
1031	18th June 1926	N	Affidavit of W.J. Carson	2485
1032	—	N	Extracts from Newfoundland and Labrador Pilot	2486
1033	—	N	Geographical considerations as to the Canadian-Newfoundland Boundary in

			Labrador, by Professor J.W. Gregory, F.R.S., D.Sc.	2489
1034	—	N	Hamilton Inlet. "Observation on the Fauna and Flora," by C. Tate Regan, M.A., F.R.S.	2509
1035	—	N	Observations by Vice-Admiral Sir Frederick C. Learmonth, K.B.E., C.B., on the hydrographic survey and reports by the Canadian Government of Lake Melville, Hamilton Inlet and the Narrows, 1921-23	2522

PART XV.
DOCUMENTS DESCRIPTIVE OF THE TOPOGRAPHY OF THE COAST OF LABRADOR AND OF THE CONDITIONS IN GENERAL ON THE COAST.

1036	—	C	Topography of the Northeast Coast of Labrador by Reginald A. Daly, S.D., F.R.S.E.	2533
1037	—	C	Typical views of the topography of the Labrador Coast from photographs taken by Dr. Reginald A. Daly	2539
1038	15th Oct. 1924	C	Affidavit of Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell . .	2563
1039	15th Aug. 1924	C	Report on "Labrador Fisheries, 1892-1924," by Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell	2564
1040	15th Oct. 1924	C	Extract from additional Report by Wilfred T. Grenfell	2574

p. xiv

No.	Date.		Description of Document.	Page.
1041	1911	C	Extract from "Newfoundland in 1911," by P.T. McGrath, on conditions on the Labrador Coast	2576
1042	1922	C	Extracts from "Labrador," by Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell and others	2578
1043	5th June 1923	C	Extract from address entitled "Life in Labrador," by Rev. Henry Gordon . .	2583
1044	1905	C	Extract from Report of an official visit to the Coast of Labrador by the Governor of Newfoundland (Sir William MacGregor)	2584
1045	1908	C	Extract from Report of an official visit to Labrador by Governor of Newfoundland (Sir William MacGregor)	2585
1046	1922	C	Missions on the Labrador Coast. Extracts from "Labrador," by Dr. W.T. Grenfell and others	2586

PART XVI.
DOCUMENTS DESCRIPTIVE OF PHYSIOGRAPHY, GEOLOGY AND ETHNOGRAPHY OF THE LABRADOR PENINSULA

I. PHYSIOGRAPHY.

1047	1895	C	Extracts from "Report on Explorations in the Labrador Peninsula," by A.P. Low	2590
I. GEOLOGY.
1048	1895	C	Extracts from "Report on Explorations in the Labrador Peninsula," by A.P. Low	2601
1049	1904	C	Extracts from "Physiography of the Archean Areas of Canada," by Prof. A.W.G. Wilson	2604
I. ETHNOGRAPHY.
1050	1895	C	Extracts from "Report on Explorations in the Labrador Peninsula," by A.P. Low	2606

No.	Date.		Description of Document.	Page.
1051	1922	C	"Labrador. The country and the People," by Wilfred T. Grenfell. ("The Indians," by W.B. Cabot.)	2621
1052	1889-90	C	"Ethnology of the Ungava District, Hudson Bay Territory," by Lucien M. Turner . .	2628
1053	1849	C	Extracts from "Notes of a Twenty five years' service in the Hudson's Bay Territory," by John M'Lean	2636
1054	1863	C	"The country of the Montagnais and Nascquapee Indians," by Henry Youle Hind	2638
1055	1774	C	Extracts from "Particulars of the country of Labradore," extracted from papers of Lieutenant Roger Curtis	2640
1056	1786	C	Extract from "A short natural history of the Country," by George Cartwright	2641
1057	1895	C	Indian Travel Routes and points of rendezvous in Labrador Peninsula. (Extracts from Low's Report)	2644
1058	1911	C	Extracts from "Through Labrador," by H. Hesketh Prichard, F.R.G.S.	2646
1059	1922	C	Extracts from "Labrador," by William B. Cabot	2651
1060	1895	C	Population of Labrador Peninsula. Extract from the "Labrador Peninsula," by Robert Bell, B.A.Sc., M.D., LL.D.	2653
1061	—	N	Geographical Considerations by Professor J.W. Gregory, F.R.S., D.Sc.	2654

P A R T X I .

AUTHORITIES BEARING ON THE MEANING AND APPLICATION OF THE TERM "COAST."

No. 861.DEFINITIONS OF "COAST" IN LEADING DICTIONARIES.

Barclay (London, 1744) :

A shore or land, which lies near and is washed by the sea.

Bailey (London, 1764) :

The edge of the land next the sea, the sea-shore ; it is not used for the banks of less waters. 2. It seems to be used by Newton for side.

Ash (London, 1775 and 1795) :

The edge of the land next the sea, the shore ; the bank of any large river or water, the side of anything ; the part of the country within view.

Sheridan (London, 1780) :

The edge or margin of the land next the sea ; the shore.

Johnson (London, 1805) ; Walker (American, 1813; London, 1818) :

The edge or margin of the land next the sea ; the shore.

Johnson (London, 1818 and 1831 ; Philadelphia, 1818) :

The edge or margin of the land next the sea ; the shore. It is not used for the banks of less waters.

Webster (London, 1864) :

The edge, border or margin of a country bounded by the sea ; the shore. (The border or frontier of a country : Exod.).

Smyth (London, 1867) :

The sea-shore and the adjoining country, in fact, the sea front of the land.

Richardson (London, 1867) :

The side, the edge or margin, border, limit or boundary ; a district.

p. 2074

Century Dictionary and Cyclopaedia (New York, 1904) :

The side, edge or margin of the land next to the sea ; the sea-shore.

New English Dictionary (Oxford, 1914) :

The side or margin of the land next the sea, the sea-shore.

Webster's New International Dictionary (Springhill, Mass., 1915) :

The sea-shore, or land near it ; the seaboard or sea marge, that is, land immediately abutting the sea ; as they saw across the water the English coast.

Murray's Oxford Dictionary, 1891 :

4. a. The edge or margin of the land next to the sea.

c. The coasts is familiarly applied in different regions to specific littoral districts in, India especially, to the Coromandel coast.

5. The border, bound, or limit, of a country ; territory on or near a frontier or boundary, borderland.

Encyclopaedia Britannica, 12th Edition, 1922 :

Coast : (from Lat. costa, a rib, side) the part of the land which meets the sea in a more or less regular form. The word is sometimes applied to the bank of a river or lake, and sometimes to a region (cf. Gold Coast, Coromandel Coast) which may include the hinterland.

DEFINITION OF “COAST” EXTRACTED FROM LAW DICTIONARIES, DIGESTS AND WORKS.

[1914.]

No. 862.

Bouvier's Law Dictionary (Rawle's 3rd rev. : 1914), Vol. 1, p. 507.

COAST: The margin of a country bounded by the sea. This term includes the natural appendages of the territory which rise out of the water, although they are not of sufficient firmness to be inhabited or fortified. Shoals perpetually covered with water are not, however, comprehended under the name of coast. The small islands situate at the mouth of the Mississippi, composed of earth and trees drifted down by the river, which are not of consistency enough for supporting life, and are uninhabited, though resorted to for shooting birds, form a part of the coast.

No. 863.

[1910.]

Black's Law Dictionary, 2nd ed., 1910, pp. 210-11

COAST: The edge or margin of a country bounding on the sea. It is held that the term includes small islands and reefs naturally connected with the adjacent land, and rising above the surface of the water, although their composition may not be sufficiently firm and stable to admit of their being inhabited or fortified ; but not shoals which are perpetually covered by the water. U.S. v. Pope, 28 Fed. Cas. 630 ; Hamilton v. Menifee, 11 Tex. 751.

[1917.]

This word is particularly appropriate to the edge of the sea, while “shore” may be used of the margins of inland waters.

No. 864.JOINTCorpus Juris (New York : 1917), Vol. XI, pp. 935-6.*

COAST.¹—As a noun, the shore ;² the seaboard of a country ;³ the sea-shore ;⁴ the margin of a country bounded by the sea ;⁵ the contact of the mainland with the main sea, where no bay intervenes, and with the latter ¹ See also Bank 6 C.J., p. 1,178 ; Beach 7 C.J., p. 1,016 ; Bed 7 C.J., p. 1,022 ; Sea Beach (35 Cyc 1,164) ; Seaboard (35 Cyc. 432) ; Strand (36 Cyc. 1,332).

Atlantic Coast see Atlantic Ocean, 5 C.J., p. 1,437, note 65 (a).

² U.S. v. The James Morrison, 26 F., Cas. No. 15,465, Newb. Adm. 241, 253 ; U.S. v. William Pope, 28 F., Cas. No. 16,703, Newb. Adm. 256, 259.

³ Ravesies v. U.S. 35, Fed. 917, 919.

⁴ Ravesies v. U.S. 35 Fed. 917, 919.

⁵ Bouvier L. D. (quot. Mowat v. North Vancouver, 9 B.C. 205). But compare Pacific El., etc., Co. v. Portland, 65 Or. 349, 382, 133 P 72, 46 LRANS 363 (holding that the words “sea shore” and “coast” in an act were broad enough to include tide and overflowed lands along a river emptying into the ocean) ; Bennett v. Morta, Holt N. P 359, 3 ECL 146 (where an act regulating pilotage on vessels on the coast of England was held to extend to the River Thames).

wherever it exists.¹ The term “coast,” or “sea-coast,” appears to have no fixed meaning apart from the context, and to be equally applicable to the space between high and low water mark, or to the territory bordering on the sea, or to that part of the sea which adjoins the land. The coast includes the natural appendages of the territory which rise out of the water, although they are not of sufficient firmness to be inhabited or fortified.³

¹ Hamilton v. Menifee, 11 Tex. 718, 751 (where, in referring to this definition by counsel, the court said : “This we believe to be substantially correct. The term coast undoubtedly suggests to the mind the place of meeting between the main-land and the water of the sea, where no bay intervenes ; but it does not so readily suggest also the shores of the bays. It is rather by a process of reasoning than suggestion, that it is made to comprehend the shores of the ocean, and of the bays, as one unbroken line. But whether the laws on the subject should have been construed to include, or other-wise, the shores of the bays, as a part of the coast, can scarcely be regarded as now an open question ”).

(a) “Shoals” distinguished.—(1) “Shoals perpetually covered with water are not . . . comprehended under the name of coast.” Bouvier L. D. (quot. Mowat v. North Vancouver, 9 B.C. 205, 206) .

(2) The act of congress, extending the jurisdiction of the federal courts to “a marine league from the coasts or shores of the United States,” has been construed to embrace the land bordering on, and washed by, the sea extending to low-water mark, and not shoals. Soutl v. L’Africaine, 22 F. Cas. No. 13,179, Bee 204, 207, 208 (where the court said that the term “from the coasts” differed from the expressions “off the coasts,” and “on the coasts.”)

² Gould Waters (quot. Mowat v. North Vancouver, 9 B.C. 205, 206).

³ Bouvier L. D. (quot. Mowat v. North Vancouver, 9 B.C. 205, 206).

(a) as including “islands.”—(1) As the letters patent creating the municipality of North Vancouver stated that the boundary should run from a point on the coast southerly along the coast line to point Atkinson, it was held that the island known as Itala Island or Eagle Island, was included within the boundaries of the municipality. Mowat v. North Vancouver, 9 B.C. 205. (2) “The small islands situate at the mouth of the Mississippi, composed of earth and trees drifted down by the river, which are not of consistency enough to support the purposes of life, and are uninhabited, though resorted to for shooting birds, form a part of the coast.” Bouvier L.D. (quot. Mowat v. North Vancouver, 9 B.C. 205, 206).

[1903.]

No. 865.

C

Cyc. of Law Procedure N.Y., 1903, Vol. 7, p. 266.

COAST.—As a noun, the shore ; the seaboard of a country ; the sea-shore ; the edge or margin of a country bounding on the sea ; the contact of the mainland with the main-sea, where no bay intervenes, and with the latter, wherever it exists. . . .

No. 866.

[1898.]

Amer. and Eng. Encyc. of Law (2nd ed., Northport, Long Island, N.Y. : 1898), Vol. 6 p. 171.

“Coast”—defined to be the seaboard of a country.¹

[1904.]

¹ Ravesies v. U.S., 35 Fed. 919.

No. 867.

Farnham on Waters and Water Rights : Rochester, 1904, Vol. 2, p. 1463.

“In a statute which requires measurement from the coast, the coast is the point of contact of the main land with the main sea ; and when a bay intervenes the point of contact of the bay with the main land is to be considered as the coast.”²

² Hamilton v. Menifee, 11 Tex. 718.

[1900.]

No. 868.

Gould on Waters, 3rd ed., Chicago, 1900, p. 64.

“The term 'coast' or 'sea-coast,' appears to have no fixed meaning apart from the context, and to be equally applicable to the space between high and low-water mark, or to the territory bordering on the sea, or to that part of the sea which adjoins the land.”

JUDICIAL DEFINITIONS OF THE TERM “COAST.”No. 869.

[28 May, 1804.]

Jurisdiction of district courts of the U. States ascertained by act of congress of 1794 to extend to a marine league from the coasts or shores, extending to low water mark. Shoals covered with water are not part of the coast or shore.

CASES ADJUDGED IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF SOUTH CAROLINA.

JOHN FRANCIS SOULT v. CORVETTE L'AFRICAINNE.

BEE'S ADM. REP. (1792-1809), pp. 204-208.

This suit is instituted on behalf of the French republic, by their agent of commercial relations, to pray restitution of the corvette L'Africaine, her tackle, furniture and apparel ; and also compensation for damages sustained by her detention.

To the libel filed in this cause, a claim and plea are interposed by William Pindar, commander of the brig Garland, a British privateer, on behalf of himself and crew, stating that this court ought not to have cognizance of the several matters mentioned in the libel, because they did not take place within the jurisdiction of this court ; the corvette having been captured on the high and open seas, not within a marine league of any coast or shore, of the state of South Carolina, or of any coast or shore of the United States.

From the pleadings and evidence produced, it appeared that the corvette L'Africaine had met with a gale of wind at sea, on the 22d. April last, in which she lost her mizenmast, and sixteen of her crew ; and was obliged to throw overboard six of her guns and a quantity of provisions. That, in this situation, she was boarded on the evening of the 3d. of May, off the bar of Charleston, by a pilot, who brought her to anchor in six fathoms water, her draught of water being too great to permit his carrying her over the bar, until the next tide. It was proved, that early the next morning, 4th May, the brig Garland, with a ship in company, bore down on the corvette as she lay at anchor ; and that, on a gun being fired from the privateer, the corvette struck her colours, was taken into possession, and brought in here, as stated in the libel.

The single question for the consideration of the court is, whether this capture was made within the waters of the United States, or within a marine league of the coasts or shores thereof : it being within those limits only that this court can take cognizance of captures between belligerent powers.

In determining this point, it will be proper first to fix precisely the place where this vessel lay at anchor when she was captured, which, from the evidence of pilots, and a chart of the coast produced in court, was done with great accuracy. All the witnesses agree that the corvette was anchored in six fathoms water, on the outside of the Rattlesnake shoal ; the nearest land to this shoal appears to be the south end of Long Island. From thence to the spot where the corvette lay at anchor, is, by measurement, nearly six miles. The Rattlesnake shoal, is, itself, four miles from land at least. Some of the witnesses say it is four and a half ; others six or seven miles distant from land ; and as this shoal lay between the corvette and the nearest land, the distance is ascertained with sufficient precision.

p. 2080

In the case quoted from Robinson's Admiralty Reports, sir William Scott remarks, that “an exact measurement cannot easily be obtained ; but that, in cases of this nature, the court would not willingly act with unfavourable minuteness towards a neutral state, but will be disposed to calculate the distance liberally.” On similar principles, I am also disposed to calculate liberally and impartially between the parties ; which the position of the Rattlesnake shoal between the nearest land and the vessel enables me to do. As that is acknowledged on all hands to be four miles at least, the question of distance as to the marine league from shore is settled.

But it is contended by the counsel for the French republic, that the words coasts or shores being both found in the act of congress, the jurisdiction ought to extend beyond a marine league from the shore, and ought to be measured from the coast, which includes all the shoals thereon : and this ground was much insisted on.

It was also said that this capture was contrary to the law of nations, the laws of humanity, and the treaty with France.

Much time was occupied in reading a number of cases from the law of nations ; and reference was made to the correspondence of Mr. Jefferson, when secretary of state, with Messrs. Genet and Hammond, the ministers, respectively, of France and England. It is only necessary for me to remark here, that this correspondence was prior to the 4th June 1794, when the law of congress was passed. As to the cases adduced, they shew that the line of jurisdiction has varied as the several nations referred to thought fit. I believe the United States are the only power who have fixed, by law, the limits of their maritime jurisdiction.

It was argued that this law of congress was passed on the spur of the occasion, and was intended only as an experiment. It may be so. But though the act was originally limited to two years, it was extended afterwards to four years ; was finally revived without any limitation, and continues to be, at this day, the law of the land.

It is not for this court, exercising a jurisdiction of this nature, to take into consideration the laws of humanity. A vessel, however distressed, may lawfully be captured on the high seas ; and the present question must be decided not by the law of humanity, but by the law of congress.

As to the treaty with France, I have examined it, and find that it does not at all relate to a case like the present. The 18th section does indeed mention "sailing along the coasts," but is, nevertheless, totally irrelevant to the question now before us.

But, in order to prove that coasts and shores have a different meaning, reference is made to the 7th section of the act of 1794, where it is said : "and in every case of the capture of a ship or vessel within the jurisdiction or protection of the United States, as above defined," &c. and it is contended that in this clause the word "jurisdiction" relates to coasts, and the word "protection" to shores. In answer to this I would observe, that by recurrence to the 6th section, we shall find that "jurisdiction," as there defined, must relate to captures within the waters of the United States, about which there could be no dispute, and protection to the marine league. With this distinction the several clauses are perfectly reconcilable, which they could not, otherwise, be.

p. 2081

Two witnesses were produced to explain the meaning of the word coast, among mariners. They said the coast included all the shoals, stretching out to any distance whatever ; and a critical inquiry was made into the distinction between the expressions "off the coasts and on the coasts." But the act by which we must be guided uses neither. It says, "from the coasts ;" and this signification differs, in my opinion, from both the others. If the construction contended for should obtain, the marine league would vary with every shoal that could be found. At one time, it would be three miles from the shore or land ; at another, ten or twenty miles, according to the extent of the shoal. It would be impossible to fix any boundary of jurisdiction ; no two district courts of the United States could determine alike, because the shoals lying off the coast or shore of each would be found to differ in extent ; in cases of appeal, the judges of the superior courts would be unnecessarily perplexed ; and "the glorious uncertainty of the law" would be established indeed.

Much stress was laid on the vessel's having taken a pilot on board. Had the law of congress not defined the distance, and the evidence fixed it so clearly, I should have been inclined, in a case of this sort, as I have already said, to reject unfavourable minuteness, and to give a liberal construction. A vessel that has taken a pilot near our shores, ought, primâ facie, in my opinion, to be protected by our neutral jurisdiction. But, as I am bound by the law as I find it, and not by what it ought to be, I can only express a wish that it may be so amended by the legislature as to embrace, in future, every bondâ fide case of this sort.

This is said to be a new case, and one of great importance. I view it as such in both lights, and have, therefore, given it very mature consideration : and after a full investigation of the matter, with reference to consequences both as respects ourselves and foreign powers, I am of opinion that the words in the sixth section of the act of congress “a marine league from the coasts or shores of the United States,” must have been intended and must be construed to the land bordering on and washed by the sea, extending to low water mark.

I, therefore, adjudge and decree that the plea in bar filed in this cause is relevant, and that the libel must be dismissed. But, as it appears that the agent of commercial relations of the French republic considered himself bound, in his public capacity to prosecute this suit, I order that each party pay his own costs.

Gernon.

No. 870.The "ANNA."

[Nov. 1805]

5 C. ROB. ADM. 373, November 6, 15 and 20, 1805.

This was the case of a ship under American colours, with a cargo of logwood, and about thirteen thousand dollars on board, bound from the Spanish main to New Orleans, and captured by the Minerva, privateer, near the mouth of the river Mississippi. A claim was given under the direction of the American ambassador for the ship and cargo "as taken within the territory of the United States, at the distance of a mile and a half from the western shore of the principal entrance of the Mississippi, and within view of a post protected by a gun, and where is stationed an officer of the United States."

* * * *

Judgment—20th November, resumed.

Sir W. SCOTT. . . . When the ship was brought into this country, a claim was given of a grave nature, alleging a violation of the territory of the United States of America. This great leading fact has very properly been made a matter of much discussion, and charts have been laid before the court to show the place of capture, though with different representations from the adverse parties. The capture was made, it seems, at the mouth of the river Mississippi, and, as it is contended in the claim, within the boundaries of the United States. We all know that the rule of law on this subject is "terrae dominium finitur, ubi finitur armorum vis," and since the introduction of firearms, that distance has usually been recognized to be about three miles from the shore. But it so happens in this case, that a question arises as to what is to be deemed the shore, since there are a number of little mud islands composed of earth and trees drifted down by the river, which form a kind of portico to the main land. It is contended that these are not to be considered as any part of the territory of America ; that they are a sort of "no man's land," not of consistency enough to support the purposes of life, uninhabited, and resorted to only for shooting and taking birds' nests. It is argued that the line of territory is to be taken only from the Balize, which is a fort raised on made land by the former Spanish possessors. I am of a different opinion ; I think that the protection of territory is to be reckoned from these islands ; and that they are the natural appendages of the coast on which they border, and from which, indeed, they are formed. Their elements are derived immediately from the territory, and on the principle of alluvium and increment, on which so much is to be found in the books of law, Quod vis fluminis de tuo praedio detraxerit, et vicino praedio attulerit, palam tuum remanet, even if it had been carried over to an adjoining territory. Consider what the consequence would be if lands of this description were not considered as appendant to the main land, and as comprised within the bounds of territory. If they do not belong to the United States of America, any other power might occupy them ; they might be embanked and fortified. What a thorn would this be in the side of America. It is physically possible, at least, that they might be so occupied by European nations, and then the command of the river would be no longer in America, but in such settlements. The possibility of such a consequence is enough to expose the fallacy of any arguments that are addressed to show that these islands are not to be considered as part of the territory of America. Whether they are composed of earth or solid rock, will not vary the right of dominion, for the right of dominion does not depend upon the texture of the soil.

p. 2083

I am of the opinion that the right of territory is to be reckoned from those islands. . . .

[20 Jan.
1836.]

No. 871.

C

THE KING v. FORTY-NINE CASKS OF BRANDY.

3 HAGG ADM., p. 257-293.

January 20, 1836.

Effect, as against the office of Admiralty, of grants from the crown to a lord of a manor of "wreck of the sea." Claim, by grant, to "flotsam," &c., &c., not exceeding three miles from low water mark, rejected. Boundaries of the admiralty jurisdiction on the coasts of the kingdom. Office of Lord High Admiral, its duties, and rights. To constitute "wreck of the sea," goods must have touched the ground, though they need not have been left dry. Goods afloat on the high sea (though within low-water mark) if they have not touched the ground, are "droits." If they have touched the ground, but are still moved by the sea, quaere. Semble, that the crown cannot lawfully grant "droits" to a private person.

Rule of construction of grants from the crown.

Three miles beyond low-water mark is the limit of territorial right as between nations only.

* * * *

Sir J. Nicholl. . . . Now the coast is, properly, not the sea, but the land which bounds the sea ; it is the limit of the land jurisdiction, and of the parishes and manors—bordering on the sea—which are part of the land of the county. The limit, however, and its character, varies according to the state of the tide ; when the tide is in, and covers the land, it is sea ; when the tide is out, it is land as far as low-water mark ; between high and low-water mark it must therefore be considered as divisum imperium.

No. 872.

HAMILTON v. MENIFEE.

[1854.]

11 TEXAS REPORTS, pp. 718-754. (1854).

	*	*	*	*
Hemphill, Ch. J.	*	*	*	*

The question of the proper mode of defining the interior boundary of the ten coast leagues has been discussed with earnestness and ability and we will proceed with all possible brevity to express our views on that subject.

The fourth article of the national Colonization Law of the 18th of August, 1824, declares, that there cannot be colonized any lands comprehended within twenty leagues of the limits of any foreign nation, nor within ten leagues of the coast, without the previous approbation of the Supreme Executive Power. The seventh article of the state Colonization Law is to the effect, that the government shall take care that within twenty leagues bordering on the limits of the United States, of the North, and ten littoral leagues upon the coast of the Gulf of Mexico, within the limits of the state, no other settlements shall be made than such as shall meet the approbation of the Executive of the Union, &c., &c. In the translation of this article of the state law, as published by Stephen F. Austin, in 1829, the expression is ten leagues, in a straight line from the coast of the Gulf of Mexico. But there is nothing in the original, corresponding to "straight line," in the English ; and ten littoral leagues upon the coast of the Mexican Gulf, is the literal translation of the terms used in the original.

In the first place, then, what is the coast, from which the ten leagues are to be measured ? What was and is generally understood by the term coast ? The counsel of the appellee has defined the coast or sea-shore to be the contact of the main-land with the main sea, where no bay intervenes, and with the latter, wherever it exists. This we believe to be substantially correct. The term coast undoubtedly suggests to the mind the place of meeting between the main-land and the water of the sea, where no bay intervenes ; but it does not so readily suggest also the shores of the bays. It is rather by a process of reasoning than suggestion, that it is made to comprehend the shores of the ocean, and of the bays, as one unbroken line. But whether the laws on the subject should have been construed to include, or otherwise, the shores of the bays, as a part of the coast, can scarcely be regarded as now an open question. The Governor of the State, in 1826, decided that they should be included ; and the contracts of colonization require the projection of the ten leagues into the interior to be, not from the coast proper of the Gulf, but from the mouths of rivers, all of which constituting boundaries emptying into bays ; and whether their mouths be in the heads or lower down in the bays, made no difference with the authorities. The Executive, in his opinion, directed the measurement to be from the shore of the main-land, leaving thus the sea and the lagunas, having communication with it, since, according to his view, they should be considered as parts of one whole.

p. 2085

* * * *

No. 873.

C

THE UNITED STATES v. THE STEAMBOAT "JAMES MORRISON."

1 NEWB. ADM., REP. 241.

District Court of the United States. District of Missouri. In Admiralty.

HON. R. W. WELLS, JUDGE.

* * * *

HON. R. W. WELLS:

The next matter of inquiry will be, is there anything in the laws of the United States, previous to the act of 1838, which requires a boat employed only in ferrying across a river, at a place wholly within the limits of a state, to obtain a license for such employment ? A person will be greatly aided in the investigation, by bearing in mind the constitutional power of Congress. For if words or phrases in an act, will bear a construction which is in accordance with the constitutional power of the legislature, and one which is opposed to that power, we are bound to believe, that the legislature intended that construction which is in accordance with their power. The title of the act, which is the principal one on this subject (18th Feb. 1793), is "An act for enrolling and licensing ships or vessels to be employed in the coasting trade and fisheries, and for regulating the same." The form of the license, given in the act itself, is “license is hereby granted for the said —— called the said ——, to be employed in carrying on the coasting trade.” The act provides for the forfeiture of any ship or vessel, found trading between, &c., laden with foreign goods ; and for the payment of custom duties, if laden with certain goods, &c., not being registered or licensed for carrying on the coasting trade. The coast is the shore. “To coast” is to navigate along the shore. The “coasting trade,” is the trade along the shore. It cannot with any propriety be applied to ferrying across a river ; and never, I think, has been so applied. Neither the phrase “coasting trade,” nor the word “coasting,” nor “trade,” could with any propriety, be applied to a ferry across a river.

No. 874.THE UNITED STATES v. THE STEAM FERRY BOAT
"WM. POPE."

1 NEWB. ADM. REP. 256.

District Court of the United States. District of Missouri. In Admiralty.

HON. R. W. WELLS, JUDGE.

1. The act of July 7th, 1838, "To provide for the better security of the lives of passengers on board of vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam," was not intended by Congress to apply to all steamboats, but only to such as before the passage of that act were required to be enrolled and licensed for the coasting trade.
2. Under the laws of Congress enacted prior to that of 1838, ferry boats were not required to be enrolled and licensed.
3. The words, "coasting trade," mean, the trade along the shore, and the business of a ferry boat is not included therein.
4. A license from the United States, and a license from a state, are not both necessary to authorize the owners of a steamboat to employ her in ferrying.
5. The laws of the United States contain no regulations for ferries as such, while the states have exercised the right to license and regulate ferries from the commencement of the government to this day.

* * * *

WELLS, J.—A libel was filed against the Wm. Pope for a violation of the act of Congress, approved 7th July, 1838, to provide for the better security of the lives of passengers on board of vessels propelled in whole or in part by steam.

* * * *

The license required to be granted by the act of 1838, is a license to carry on "the coasting trade ;" such are the licenses now actually granted, and no other. The coast is the shore. To coast is to navigate along the shore. "The coasting trade" is the trade along the shore. How absurd would it be to require a license to carry on the coasting trade, for a vessel that was engaged in no trade at all, and certainly in no coasting trade. A vessel that merely crosses the river as a ferry boat, can in no proper sense be said to be engaged in any trade ; nor can it be said to coast or be employed in the coasting trade.

RAVESIES v. UNITED STATES.[24 July,
1888.]

35 FED. REP. 971, 918, 919.

*(District Court, S. D. Alabama. July 24, 1888.)*1. SEAMEN—SHIPMENT—FEES OF SHIPPING COMMISSIONER—COASTWISE TRADE.

Vessels engaged in the inland river trade of the state of Alabama, though carrying merchandise between the several states of the United States, are not engaged in the "coastwise trade" within the meaning of the act of congress of June 19, 1886, so as to entitle a shipping commissioner to the fees therein prescribed for shipping crews for such vessels.

* * * *

At Law.

Action by Paul Ravesies against the United States to recover fees for services rendered as shipping commissioner for the port of Mobile.

* * * *

TOULMIN, J.—As shown by the petition, the plaintiff was United States commissioner for the port of Mobile, in the state of Alabama, from the 4th of March, 1887, to the 19th of July, 1887, inclusive, and during that period he, as such commissioner, shipped seamen to compose the crews of American vessels engaged in trade on the inland navigable rivers within the state of Alabama, and also the crews of American vessels engaged in trade between the port of Mobile, in said state of Alabama, and Tampa and other ports, in the state of Florida. It is shown that each of the said vessels in the inland river trade in the state of Alabama was engaged in voyages between ports within said state ; that all said shipments were made at the request of the masters of said vessels, respectively ; that the vessels were duly enrolled in the customhouse at Mobile, and licensed to carry on the coasting trade ; and that they were directly and actually engaged in commerce between the several states of the United States. The plaintiff duly presented to the treasury department his account for the fees which he claims to be due him for the services rendered, but it was disallowed, and payment thereof refused. He now sues to recover the amount of the account. The United States, by the district attorney, demurs to the petition so far as it relates to the shipment of seamen on vessels engaged in making voyages in the river trade from and to points exclusively within the state of Alabama, and pleads the general issue to the allegations of the petition relating to the shipment of seamen on the vessels engaged in the trade with ports in the state of Florida. The plaintiff bases his right to the fees sued for on the act of congress of June 19, 1886, which provides "that shipping commissioners may ship and discharge crews for any vessel engaged in the coastwise trade * * * at the request of the master or owner of such vessel." It is conceded that, unless plaintiff is entitled under this act to the fees claimed, he has no right to them. To entitle him to such fees the vessels for which he performed the services charged for must have been engaged in the "coastwise trade." The question raised by the demurrer to the petition is whether vessels engaged in making voyages in the inland river trade from and to points exclusively within the state of Alabama are engaged in the coastwise trade, it being admitted they were engaged in the transportation of merchandise and other subjects of trade and commerce between the state of Alabama and other states of the United States. Does it follow that because a vessel is engaged in commerce among the states it is engaged in the "coastwise trade?" These vessels may be said to be engaged in interstate commerce when they aid in the transportation of objects of trade and commerce, and of passengers, from points within this state to points within another of the United States, and to foreign nations, and also in the transportation to points within this state of such objects shipped from foreign nations, or from other of the United States. But the fact that they are engaged in commerce among the states does not of itself give them a right to the services of the shipping commissioner under the act of congress of June 19, 1886. Unless they were at the same time engaged in the "coastwise trade," the plaintiff would not be entitled to the fees claimed. Were they so engaged? To be engaged in means to be employed, to be occupied, in the "coastwise trade." "Coast" is defined to be the seaboard of a country. The coast is the sea-shore. "Coastwise," by way of the coast; along shore. See the case of The James Morrison, 1 Newb. Adm. 241; The William Pope, Id. 256. "Coastwise trade" means trade or intercourse carried on by sea between two ports or places belonging to the same country. "Coastwise trade" may be a part of the commerce among the several states, but commerce among the several states is not necessarily "coastwise trade."

p. 2088

No. 876.

TERM "COAST-LINE" DEFINED.

July 18 and Aug. 1, 1919.

(Present: The Right Hons. Lord HALDANE, BUCKMASTER, and ATKINSON.)

ESQUIMAULT AND NANIMO RAILWAY COMPANY v. TREAT.

ON APPEAL FROM THE COURT OF APPEAL OF BRITISH COLUMBIA.

121 L. T. REP., pp. 657-8.

British Columbia—Statute—Construction—Meaning of "coast line."

Held, that in a grant to the appellant company by the Dominion Government of certain lands, together with the minerals thereunder, for the purpose of constructing a railway made under a British Columbia Act of 1883 the expression "coast line" used to describe the eastern boundary of the land in view of the context and circumstances of the case was meant to describe the eastern boundary of the land at high water mark and did not, as the appellants contended, include the foreshore and foreshore rights.

APPEAL from a judgment of the Court of Appeal for British Columbia dated the 5th Nov. 1918 affirming a decision of Clement, J. whereby the action brought by the appellant company against the respondent was dismissed with costs.

E. P. Davis (of the Canadian Bar), the Hon. M Macnaughten, K.C., and Harold R. Robertson (of the Canadian Bar) for the appellants.

Hon. J. W. de B. Farris (Attorney-General of British Columbia) and Oscar C. Bass (of the Canadian Bar) for the respondent.

The considered opinion of their Lordships was delivered by Viscount HALDANE.—The question in this case is what is meant by the expression "coast line" in a statutory conveyance. The courts below have unanimously held that in its context in the instrument the expression was used to indicate a boundary at high water mark, which excluded the foreshore and the foreshore rights. Their Lordships are of opinion that the decision appealed from was right, and should be affirmed.

The action out of which the appeal arises was brought in the Supreme Court of British Columbia to establish the title of the appellants to the coal and other minerals and substances under the foreshore and sea opposite certain lands which had been conveyed to them. The respondent Treat was a licensee from the Provincial Government who was authorised to prospect for coal under the foreshore, and had entered on it for that purpose. The lands in question are situated in Vancouver Island. They form a belt or strip. The portion of it to which the controversy relates are described, in a statute of British Columbia, which is the root of the appellants' title, as bounded on the east by the coast line of Vancouver Island to the point of commencement, and including all coal, coal oil, ores, stones, clay, marble, slate, mines, minerals and substances whatsoever thereupon, therein and thereunder.

p. 2090

When British Columbia entered Confederation in 1871 under the provision enacted by sect. 146 of the British North America Act of 1867, it was one of the terms of the Imperial Order in Council then made that the Government of the Dominion should secure the construction of a railway from the Pacific towards the Rocky Mountains, and from the east of the Rocky Mountains towards the Pacific to connect the seaboard of the new province with the rail-way system of Canada. To facilitate this the province agreed to convey to the Dominion Government, in trust to be appropriated in such manner as that Government should consider advisable in furtherance of the construction of the railway, a certain extent of public lands along the proposed line, not to exceed twenty miles on each side. There was subsequent negotiation between the two Governments which resulted in an agreement modifying in a fashion which is not material for the purposes of the present question the description of the lands to be conveyed. In the result the Government of the province undertook to procure the incorporation, by Act of their Legislature, of certain persons, to be designated by the Dominion Government, for the construction of the portion of the railway in Vancouver Island from Esquimault to Nanaimo, and the Government of the Dominion undertook to secure the construction of this railway.

By Act of the Provincial Legislature, passed on the 19th Dec. 1883, there was granted to the Dominion Government for the purpose of constructing this railway; land in Vancouver Island described as follows : Bounded on the south by a straight line drawn from the head of Saanich Inlet to Muir Creek on the Straits of Fuca ; on the west by a straight line drawn from Muir Creek aforesaid to Crown Mountain ; on the north by a straight line drawn from Crown Mountain to Seymour Narrows ; and on the east by the coast line of Vancouver Island to the point of commencement ; and including all coal, coal oil, ores, stones, clay, marble, slate, mines, minerals, and substances whatsoever thereupon, therein, and thereunder.

By a Dominion statute (47 Vict. c. 6) passed subsequently to the British Columbia Act referred to statutory authority was inter alia given to an agreement between the Dominion and provincial Governments, and also to an agreement relative to the construction of the railway, and for a grant of the whole, with certain exceptions which are not material, of the land conveyed to the Dominion by the Government of British Columbia for the construction of the line. The latter agreement, which was scheduled to the statute, was made between Robert Dunsmuir and others, called the contractors, and associated for such construction, and the Minister of Railways and Canals of the Dominions. It provided among other things for the grant by the Dominion to the contractors of the land referred to, in so far as such lands should be vested in the Crown in right of the Dominion, and held for the purposes of the railway, and for the minerals and substances in or under such lands, and the foreshore rights in respect of all such lands as aforesaid which were thereby agreed to be granted to the contractors and border on the sea, together with the privilege of mining under the foreshore and sea opposite any such land, and of mining and keeping for their own use all coal and minerals under the foreshore or sea opposite any such lands, in so far as such coal and minerals and other substances and foreshore rights were owned by the Dominion Government. The statute authorised the Governor in Council to grant to the railway company, which was stated to have been incorporated by the British Columbia Act already referred to, the land in question in terms and with reservations which are for all material purposes identical with those their Lordships have quoted from the scheduled agreement.

p. 2091

On the 21st April 1887 a Crown grant was made by the Dominion Government to the appellant Railway Company. It recited the British Columbia Act and the Dominion Act already referred to, and that it had been agreed between the Dominion Government, the Government of British Columbia, and the company, that the grant to the company of the lands in question should be in the terms thereafter contained, and that the exact boundaries of the lands should be as settled and agreed upon by and between the Government of British Columbia and the company with certain provisions as to settlers which are not material. It then granted to the company the land situated on Vancouver Island, which had been granted to the Crown in right of the Dominion by the Act already referred to of the province of the 19th Dec. 1883, in so far as such lands were vested in the Crown and held for the purposes of the construction of the railway, with all the coal and other minerals and substances thereunder, and the foreshore rights in respect of such lands as border on the sea, together with the privilege of mining under the foreshore and sea opposite any such land, and of mining and keeping all the coal and minerals mentioned, "in so far as such coal, coal oil, ores, stones, clay, marble, slate, mines, minerals, and substances and foreshore rights were vested in," the Crown as represented by the Government of the Dominion.

The question is whether under the terms of the British Columbia and Dominion Acts and the Crown grant referred to the appellant company obtained a title to the foreshore or foreshore rights mentioned in the grant. Their Lordships agree with the courts below in thinking that it did not obtain such a title. The Dominion statute and grant are careful to limit what they purport to convey to the appellants to such rights only as were vested in the Crown in right of the Dominion. This throws the question back to the construction of the words in the British Columbia Act of 1883. It may well have been that the general words relating to foreshore rights were introduced to cover the possibility of the Dominion [sic] possessing rights apart from the grant to them by the province in the foreshore on a certain interpretation of the British North America Act of 1867. It has since been made clear by decision that no right of property in the foreshore which was vested in a province before confederation has been taken away by that Act, except so far as transferred by express enactment, and there is nothing in the British North America Act of 1867 or in any other statute referred to in this appeal which transfers the foreshore generally as originally vested in the Crown in right of the province. There are, of course, the provisions of sect. 108 of the Act of 1867 which by implication take away the property in specific parts of it, but these provisions have no application to the present case.

p. 2092

Their Lordships are accordingly of opinion that unless the words they have already quoted in full from the statutory grant to the Dominion in sect. 3 of the Provincial Act of the 19th Dec. 1883 passed the foreshore, it remains in the Crown in right of the province. The appellants rely on the use of the expression "coast line" as sufficient to include the foreshore. But it is the natural inference from the context that "coast line" is there referred to as contrasted with "straight line," the expression which is apposite in the descriptions of the other parcels in the grant. They think that the natural interpretation of the expression is that it was intended to indicate the actual and the normal boundary of land which was divided from the sea by high water mark, and that it consequently included the land down to the normal high water mark, and not further, to the exclusion of the foreshore and all rights to mine under it. In an instrument which in reality did no more than operate as a transfer by the Crown of administration in right of the province to administration in right of the Dominion their Lordships think that there is no presumption or other reason for construing words purporting to be words of grants in any other than their natural and strict sense. They will, accordingly, humbly advise His Majesty that the conclusions arrived at by the learned judges of the courts of British Columbia were correct, and that the appeal ought to be dismissed with costs to be paid by the appellants to the respondent Treat. In accordance with the usual practice the intervening respondent will bear his own costs.

Solicitors for the appellants: Linklater and Co.

Solicitors for the respondents: Gard, Lyell, Betenson and Davidson.

[27 Nov.,
1801.]TERM "COAST" INAPPLICABLE TO TIDAL RIVERS.*No. 877.*THE "TWEË GEBROEDERS," NORTHOLT, MASTER.

3 C. ROB. ADM. 336, 337, 340, 341. November 27, 1801.

Territorial claim to protect capture, on the part of Prussia, held not to be established.
Vessel condemned.

This was a case of considerable importance, as it is respected the claim of a sovereign state for a right of territory over the spot where the capture in question was alleged to have taken place. The case arose on the capture of vessels in the Groningen Watt, on a suggestion that they were bound from Hamburg to Amsterdam, then under blockade ; and a claim was given under the authority of the Prussian minister, averring the place in question to be within the territories of the king of Prussia.*

JUDGMENT.

SIR W. SCOTT.—This is the case of a ship and goods proceeded against for a breach of the blockade of Amsterdam ; they are claimed as being taken on neutral territory ; but it is denied on the part of the captors that they were so taken.

On the blockade of Amsterdam, this court has been inclined to hold, generally, that all sea passages to Amsterdam by that great body of waters, the Zuyder Zee, were blockaded, supposing those sea passages to be in the possession of the enemy. Such as were in the possession of neutrals, it was of opinion, were not included, unless the blockading force could be applied at the interior extremity of their communication. Whether the present capture in question was made in a sea passage to the Zuyder Zee, belonging to the enemy or to a neutral power, will be decided by the considerations which are to be examined in the farther pursuit of this question.

* * * *

The capture is represented on both sides to have been made in the Watt, which runs along the coast of Groningen, by two or three of his Majesty's

* The claim of the Prussian consul described the captured vessels to have been lying at anchor upon the Outhousen Watt, near Eems, close to the third beacon ; and the capture to have been made, 14th July, 1799, by a boat from the L'Espiegle, then lying in the Wester Balg, and also on the river Eems, and within the territories and dominions of his Prussian Majesty. The affidavit of the captors gave a different account of the situation of the capturing vessel. See Appendix, p. xl. et seq.

p. 2094

ships that went up the Eems. It is not, I think, contended, that the capturing ships were stationed on the neutral territory, unless the whole of the Watt passage is to be so considered.

* * * *

It will be proper for me to consider, first, the natural quality and position of this place. It is the Watt passage, running along the Dutch coast of Groningen, and called the Groningen Watt, to the Lower Zee.

* * * *

It is necessary for me to notice here another phrase which has been used, "that all this is river, and not sea." That it is quite so, is not indisputably clear. It is true there are two passages which, during the reflux of the sea, carry down the river title of Eems a great way from the main land ; and for the convenience of navigation they are indicated by buoys. But surely it might be questioned, without impropriety, supposing no decided understanding in this particular case how far such streams, beyond all capes and headlands, are, at all times of the flow of the ocean, to be deemed mere river. In common understanding, the embouchure, or mouth of a river, is that spot where the river enters the open space to which the sea flows, and where the points of the coast project no farther. There may be shoals and-sands beyond, as on the coasts of this kingdom the Godwin sands ; and buoys may be placed, and they may be distinguished from the sea at low water. But what are these when the tide flows up, or at half tide, one way or the other? Undistinguishably parts of the ocean, undique pontus. I will not venture to lay down any thing more positively on this matter, than that the nature of such sea passages must be held to be divisi imperii between the ocean and the main land ; and when the sea flows, for navigation, they should rather seem to belong to the former than the latter.

It is the less necessary to be precise on this point, because the capture in question did not happen in these streams, the eastern or western Eems, but in the Watt. And supposing that these two passages were at all times rivers, and mere rivers, how does it follow that all the waters with which they communicate, are not only river but parts of those rivers? They seem, certainly, not to be so considered by the neighboring states. Do they carry with them the name of Eems? By no means. They have a denomination of their own. In the chart which has been exhibited, and is referred to on both sides, though not introduced by authority, how is the bank of land described? The new Zee dyke, not the river dyke, which it ought to be, if the portion of waters was considered as river, and not sea. How is the portion of waters at the other end of it denominated? The Lower Zee. What do the witnesses say? It is stated in one affidavit, that Groningen extends as far as a man standing on the coast can throw a horse-shoe. So the other witness uses the same expression, standing on the coast, a word very strangely applied to a river, but the proper word applied to the sea. Where is the horse-shoe to be thrown? Into the sea, not into the river, as they all express themselves.

* * * *

[Plan follows on page 2094A.

No. 878.THE QUEEN v. COX.

(1850-1874) 1 P. E. I. REP. 170.

Fishery reserves—Construction of term “high water mark on the coast” in Township Grants.[9 March, 1858.]

The original grants of townships reserved to the Crown five hundred from feet "high water mark on the coast" for the purposes of the fisheries. Under this reservation the Crown claimed sixty nine acres fronting on St. Peter's Bay, and sixty-nine acres on the Morell River, in which th [sic] tide ebbs and flows. A verdict for the Crown was found for the whole. A rule nisi for a new trial was granted on the ground, amongst others, that the reservation clause only applied to land fronting on the open sea, and not to that fronting on tidal rivers. It was contended that the employment of the word "coast" limited the reservation to land fronting on the open sea ; also that in construing the grant regard must be had to the purpose for which the reserve was made, and as it would be of no use for the purpose intended in a tidal river, it could not have been meant to apply to such river.

Held, (Peters, J.) That the clause only applied to land fronting on the open sea.

The Attorney General for the plaintiff.

Mr. Edward Palmer for defendant.

9th March, 1858.

PETERS, J. This was an information filed by the Attorney General for intrusion on land called the fishery reserve. The locus in quo is situated partly on the shore of St. Peter's Bay and partly on Morell river, and forms part of Townships 39 and 40. In 1769 these Townships were granted to Spence & others and Fraser, and in each of these grants is contained the following clause of reservation : "And further saving and reserving for the disposal of His Majesty, his heirs and successors, five hundred feet from high water mark on the coast of the tract of land hereby granted, to erect stages and other necessary buildings for carrying on the fishery." Under this clause the Crown claims sixty-nine acres fronting on the bay, and sixty-nine acres on the Morell river, in which the tide ebbs and flows.

On the trial the jury were directed that under this reservation the land fronting on the bay was excepted and belonged to the Crown, but that fronting on the river was not excepted and passed to the grantee. The jury, notwithstanding, found for the Crown for the whole.

The point now to be decided is, whether the sixty-nine acres fronting on the Morell river is embraced within the reserve. As many of the grants of Township lands in the Island contain a similar reservation, the decision of the question thus raised is one of considerable importance.

In legal construction the term "sea shore" applies to all land over which the ordinary tides flow and reflow, and as, under that definition, wherever a high water mark exists the "sea shore" in contemplation of law, extends, if the words "high water mark," in these grants, are construed as designating both the "sea shore" along which the reservations were to extend, and also the point on the shore from which the five hundred feet is to be measured, the land fronting on this tidal river would be clearly comprised within the reservation. But the construction of grants, like other instruments, depends on the intention of the grantor, and a knowledge of the nature or peculiarities of the subject matter of the grant is, sometimes, essential in order to ascertain the sense and meaning in which particular words are intended to be used. The reservation in the grants in question is expressed to be made for the purpose of enabling His Majesty to dispose of the lands reserved for a particular purpose, viz., to erect stages and other necessary buildings for carrying on the fisheries. The object in making this reservation, evidently, was to promote and encourage the development of a great source of national wealth by affording facilities and conveniences to those who might embark in the fisheries. Along the coasts, on the open sea, and also in the bays of this Island, very valuable cod and other fisheries exist, in prosecuting which stages and other buildings, covering a considerable extent of ground, are necessary ; and on those shores, therefore, such a reservation might prove a valuable privilege to fishermen. But the rivers corresponding to the size of the Island are on a diminutive scale, while from the general formation of the country, the tides ebb and flow many miles up all the rivers and almost to the source of many others. We cannot be ignorant of what every one in the country knows, that no fisheries exist in those rivers of a description to require any such extensive reservations for the erection of stages or other buildings in which to carry them on. In fact, in such situations the reservation for fishing purposes would be useless. We must not assume the Crown to have been ignorant of the nature of the country it was granting away, and it seems to us that under such circumstances, the clause reserving a certain space from high water mark on the coast for the purpose of carrying on a fishery must have been intended to apply only to those parts of the Townships popularly known as coast, viz., the shores of the open sea and the bays and inlets of the sea along which only any fisheries existed, for which such reserves could be necessary and that it could not have been meant to extend to rivers where a large extent of ground would then be appropriated to a purpose for which it could be of no practical use.

p. 2096

But it appears to us, without drawing on our local knowledge of the country, the language of the reservation itself when taken altogether, will not bear so extensive a construction as is contended for. The words of the reservation are "five hundred feet from high water mark on the coast of the tract hereby granted." Now if the reservation was intended to extend to all tidal rivers, or to every place where the tide ebbed and flowed, why was the word "coast" used? since the words five hundred feet from high water mark would have extended to all places where a high water mark could be found. If, therefore, the words "on the coast" were not intended to confine the description of the premises reserved within narrower limits than the words "high water mark" would have done, they seem to us to have no meaning, or at most, are mere surplusage but in construing an instrument no words should be rejected if a sensible interpretation can be put upon them. The term coast, in its popular sense is, we believe, applied to the land fronting on the open sea, or inlets off the sea, or bays, but is never applied to that fronting on rivers. And taking the word in that sense it appears to us, evidently, used to contradistinguish high water mark on what is popularly called the coast from high water mark on the rivers, and to limit the reservation to the former, and prevent its extending to the latter.

p. 2097

On these grounds we think the land fronting on Morell river is not included in the reserve, but passed to the grantee.

Another ground on which a new trial is moved for is, that the verdict is contrary to the evidence in finding for the whole five hundred feet, whereas a considerable portion of it was proved to have been washed away by the encroachment of the sea. There is no doubt that the verdict is contrary to the evidence in this respect. That the sea had encroached to a considerable extent was proved beyond all question, but the evidence as to the extent of that encroachment was conflicting. Some of the witnesses estimated it on the average at one foot, and others at four feet per annum. It was admitted by the Attorney General that whatever part of the five hundred feet had been so lost must be deducted. The jury, however, found for the whole.

On both these grounds, therefore, we think the rule for a new trial must be absolute.

Several other points were raised, but as they were disposed of during the arguments it is unnecessary now to advert to them.

Rule absolute.

BOWIE vs. MARQUIS OF AILSA.

14 COURT OF SESSION CASES (4TH SER.). 649.

Fishings—White fishings—Tidal and navigable river—Acts Anne, 1705, cap. 2, and 29 Geo. II. cap. 23.—A member of the public brought an action against the riparian proprietor concluding for declarator that he had a right to fish with single rod and line for floating white fish, including trout, flounders, eels, and any other sort of floating white fish which were not of the salmon kind, in that part of the river Doon where the tide ebbed and flowed, and as far as the highest point reached by the ordinary spring tides ; and averred that the portion of the Doon so described extended from the sea to a distance of about 500 yards inland. The action was founded both on common law and the Acts of Anne, 1705, cap. 2, and 29 Geo. II. cap. 23, which gave the public right to take "herrings, cod, ling, or any other sort of white fish in all and every part of the seas, channels, bays, firths, lochs, rivers, and other waters where such fish are to be found on the coasts" of Scotland.

The riparian proprietor in defence produced a crown charter of barony, dated 1793, which contained a clause "cum piscationibus yairis et cruives et salmonum et alborum piscium tam in aquis salsis quam dulcibus," and averred exclusive possession of both the white and the salmon fishings on that title. He further denied that the river was either tidal or navigable beyond a point in line with the line of high-water on the neighbouring coasts, and averred that between the points in dispute floating white fish were not to be found, or at least not in such numbers as to be of any value to the public.

p. 2098

It was proved that no part of the solum of the river for the 500 yards in question was left dry at low water, although the level of the water rose and fell with the flow and ebb of the tide, and was sometimes found to be brackish up to the extreme point claimed by the pursuer. The defender had let the fishings in question for more than forty years previous to the date of the action, and had granted licences to anglers entitling them to fish there, of which the pursuer at one time held one. Eels, small flounders, and also, to some extent, seath and lythe were caught in the water in question ; but the only fish which the defender's tacksmen thought it worth while to keep, were fish of the salmon kind and yellow trout, of which last comparatively few were to be caught. Pleasure parties in rowing boats occasionally went up the river at high tide, but there was a bar at the mouth which was an obstacle to more extended navigation, although it was proved that in former years small smacks and on one occasion a small steamer, had gone a short way up.

Held (rev. judgment of Lord Trayner) (1) that the Doon between the points in question was neither a tidal nor a navigable river, and that the pursuer was not entitled to declarator either at common law or under the statute ; and (2) that the defender under his titles had right to the whole fishings therein, and had had from time immemorial exclusive possession thereof. Defender therefore assolzie'd.

* * * *

LORD JUSTICE-CLERK.—

* * * *

It was contended on the part of the pursuer that as long as he confines himself to fishing for white fish, he is entitled to fish anywhere in the river Doon where white fish can be found within the salt water of the sea, and he founds his contention upon two Acts of Parliament of Queen Anne and Geo. II. for the encouragement of white-fishing in Scotland, which certainly give a right to fish for white fish wherever they can be found on the "coasts" of Scotland.

* * * *

In the first place, I am quite clear that the Acts of Parliament referred to do not affect this case, and are not meant to affect any question about private property in a tidal stream. They are meant to apply to sea-fishings, and to provide protection for the public in carrying on an important article of commerce without interruption. The case of M'Douall, 2 R. (H. of L.)

p. 2099

55, referred to in the Sheriff's note, was a case of that sort, and Lord Cairns' observation was necessarily directed to sea-fishing only. It certainly never was intended to do more than to give a right to the public to fish on the "coasts," as the Act expresses it ; and I do not apprehend that the banks of a river, although subject to tidal influence, come within that description.

* * * *

LORD YOUNG.—I am of the same opinion. I concur exactly in all that your Lordship has said, and I agree generally with the Sheriff in the opinion expressed by him in the Sheriff Court action. It is quite clear, and I have no doubt about it, that the public have a right to fish for white fish in the sea ; if it were necessary that I should do so, I should say that they have that right irrespective altogether of the Acts of Anne and Geo. II., which were passed to promote the fishing industry in Scotland ; but I agree with your Lordship that the river Doon is no part of the sea. It runs into the sea, but it is not the sea. Nor do I think that it is a river of the kind or class to which the statutes refer. There are rivers in Scotland, as we know, which have estuaries opening out gradually until they really become sea, finishing their course through sand which on either side is uncovered at low water. The Doon is not a river of that kind at all. It is a river with a distinct narrow alveus or channel, very much like a creek, only that it contains fresh water which fills it from bank to bank, and leaves no part dry at any state of the tide.

* * * *

"The fishing industry of Scotland" is, no doubt, a very general expression, but according to the statutes, taking the later of them, it applies to herrings, cod, ling, or any other white fish, to the fishing for these in the sea, and to taking measures upon the sea-coast for curing them.

* * * *

LORD RUTHERFURD CLARK.—I am of the same opinion. I am clear that the river Doon between Doonfoot Bridge and the high-water mark of ordinary spring tides is a private river in all essential respects, and is in no sense a public navigable river. I therefore think that the Acts of Parliament do not apply to it in so far as between these two points, because it is not there a river in the sense of these statutes upon the coasts of Scotland. That being so, I have no difficulty in concurring in the judgments which your Lordships propose to pronounce.

* * * *

No. 880.

IN GAMMELL v. COMMISSIONERS OF WOODS AND FORESTS, et al, 3 Macq. A. C. 419, 460, the Lord Chancellor (Lord Chelmsford) said :—

“But the grants since the Union are many of them not capable of being referred to rivers or estuaries, because they are grants of fishings in the sea adjacent to lands “upon the sea coast,” or “upon the sea shore,” or “along the sea coasts,” or “lying along the sea coast ;” and with respect to the modern Crown Charters, some of them (as was pointed out in the course of the argument) can only be understood as applying to the sea shore upon an open coast, such as the one to Mr. Anderson, dated 21st December 1840, “Totas et integras terras et baroniam de Kinnaber et clum salmonum piscariis aliisque piscariis super aqua de Northesk &c., ac etiam cum salmonum piscariis aliisque piscariis in littore maris inter dictam aquam de Northesk et aquam de Southesk.”

[1224.]

No. 881.

C

MAGNA CHARTA.

9 HEN. III.

A.D. 1224.

* * * *

C. 26. Omnes kidelli decetero deponantur penitus per Tamisiam et Mede weyam et per totam Angliam nisi per costeram maris.

All weirs from henceforth shall be entirely put down on the Thame and Medway and throughout all England, except by the sea coasts.¹

¹This chapter of Magna Charta is still in force, vide, Moore's Law of Fisheries (London : 1903) p. 215.

[1783.]

EXTRACT FROM TREATY OF PARIS, 1783.

*DEFINITIVE TREATY of Peace and Friendship between His Britannic Majesty and the United States of America.
— Signed at Paris, the 3rd of September, 1783.*

* * * *

III. It is agreed, that the People of The United States shall continue to enjoy unmolested the right to take Fish of every kind on the Grand Bank and on all the other Banks of Newfoundland ; also in the Gulph of St. Lawrence, and at all other places in the Sea, where the Inhabitants of both Countries used at any time heretofore to fish. And also that the Inhabitants of The United States shall have liberty to take fish of every kind on such part of the Coast of Newfoundland, as British Fishermen shall use, (but not to dry or cure the same on that Island,) and also on the Coasts, Bays, and Creeks of all other of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions in America ; and that the American fishermen shall have liberty to dry and cure fish in any of the unsettled Bays, Harbours, and Creeks of Nova Scotia, Magdalen Islands, and Labrador, so long as the same shall remain unsettled ; but so soon as the same, or either of them, shall be settled, it shall not be lawful for the said Fishermen to dry or cure fish at such Settlement, without a previous agreement for that purpose with the Inhabitants, Proprietors, or Possessors of the ground.

* * * *

[20 Oct.,
1818.]EXTRACT FROM THE CONVENTION BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES,

DATED OCTOBER 20TH, 1818.

ARTICLE 1. Whereas differences have arisen respecting the liberty claimed by the United States, for the inhabitants thereof, to take, dry, and cure fish on certain coasts, bays, harbours, and creeks, of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions in America, it is agreed between the high Contracting Parties, that the inhabitants of the said United States shall have, for ever, in common with the subjects of His Britannic Majesty, the liberty to take fish of every kind, on that part of the southern coast of Newfoundland which extends from Cape Ray to the Rameau Islands, on the western and northern coast of Newfoundland, from the said Cape Ray to the Quirpon Islands, on the shores of the Magdalen islands, and also on the coasts, bays, harbours, and creeks, from Mount Joly [sic], on the southern coast of Labrador, to and through the streights of Belleisle, and thence northwardly indefinitely along the coast, without prejudice, however, to any of the exclusive rights of the Hudson's Bay Company : and that the American fishermen shall also have liberty, for ever, to dry and cure fish in any of the unsettled bays, harbours, and creeks, of the southern part of the coast of Newfoundland hereabove described, and of the coast of Labrador ; but so soon as the same, or any portion thereof, shall be settled, it shall not be lawful for the said fishermen to dry or cure fish at such portion so settled, without previous agreement for such purpose, with the inhabitants, proprietors, or possessors of the ground. And the United States hereby renounce for ever any liberty heretofore enjoyed or claimed by the inhabitants thereof, to take, dry, or cure fish, on or within three marine miles of any of the coasts, bays, creeks, or harbours of His Britannic Majesty's Dominions in America, not included within the above-mentioned limits : provided, however, that the American fishermen shall be admitted to enter such bays or harbours, for the purpose of shelter and of repairing damages therein, of purchasing wood, and of obtaining water, and for no other purpose what-ever. But they shall be under such restrictions as may be necessary to prevent their taking, drying or curing fish therein, or in any other manner whatever abusing the privileges hereby reserved to them.

No. 884.EXTRACT FROM DECISION OF THE PERMANENT COURT OF ARBITRATION AT THE HAGUE,

ON THE SCOPE AND MEANING OF ARTICLE 1 OF THE CONVENTION SIGNED AT LONDON ON THE 20 OCTOBER, 1818, BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES.*

“ The correspondence between Mr. Adams and Lord Bathurst . . . shows that during the negotiations for the Treaty the United States demanded the former rights enjoyed under the Treaty of 1783, and that Lord Bathurst in the letter of 30th October, 1815, made no objection to granting those 'former rights' 'placed under some modifications,' which latter did not relate to the right of fishing in bays, but only to the 'pre-occupation of British harbours and creeks by the fishing vessels of the United States and he forcible exclusion of British subjects where the fishery might be most advantageously conducted,' and 'to the clandestine introduction of prohibited goods into the British colonies.' It may be therefore assumed that the word 'coast' is used in both Treaties in the same sense, including bays.”

* Copied from "North Atlantic Coast Fisheries Arbitration at the Hague" (Washington : 1912), Vol. I, p. 100.

[6 Oct.,
1818.]EXTRACT FROM PROTOCOL OF THE FIFTH
CONFERENCEHELD BETWEEN THE AMERICAN AND BRITISH PLENIPOTENTIARIES
AT WHITEHALL.¹ 6 October, 1818.

Present : Mr. Gallatin, Mr. Rush, Mr. Robinson, Mr. Goulburn.

The Protocol of the preceding conference was agreed upon and signed.

The British plenipotentiaries gave in the five annexed articles, on the fisheries, the boundary, the Mississippi, the intercourse between Nova Scotia and the United States, and the captured slaves. (A, B, C, D, E.)

It was agreed to meet again on the 9th instant.

ALBERT GALLATIN,

RICHARD RUSH,
FREDERICK JOHN ROBINSON,
HENRY GOULBURN.

ARTICLE A.

It is agreed that the inhabitants of the United States shall have liberty to take fish, of every kind, on that part of the western coast of Newfoundland which extends from Cape Ray to the Quirpon Islands, and on that part of the southern and eastern coasts of Labrador which extends from Mount Joli to Huntingdon Island ; and it is further agreed that the fishermen of the United States shall have liberty to dry and cure fish in any of the unsettled bays, harbours, and creeks of the said south and east coasts of Labrador, so long as the same shall remain unsettled ; but as soon as the same, or any part of them, shall be settled, it shall not be lawful for the said fishermen to dry or cure fish without a previous agreement for that purpose with the inhabitants, proprietors, or possessors of the ground.

And it is further agreed that nothing contained in this article shall be construed to give to the inhabitants of the United States any liberty to take fish within the rivers of His Britannic Majesty's territories, as above described ; and it is agreed, on the part of the United States, that the fishermen of the United States resorting to the mouths of such rivers shall not obstruct the navigation thereof, nor wilfully injure nor destroy the fish within the same,

¹ Reproduced from appendix to British case, North Atlantic Coast Fisheries Arbitration, p. 89.

p. 2105

either by setting nets across the mouths of such rivers, or by any other means whatever.

His Britannic Majesty further agrees that the vessels of the United States, bona fide engaged in such fishery, shall have liberty to enter the bays and harbours of any of His Britannic Majesty's dominions in North America, for the purpose of shelter, or of repairing damages therein, and of purchasing wood and obtaining water, and for no other purpose ; and all vessels so resorting to the said bays and harbours shall be under such restrictions as may be necessary to prevent their taking, drying, or curing fish therein.

It is further well understood that the liberty of taking, drying, and curing fish, granted in the preceding part of this article, shall not be construed to extend to any privilege of carrying on trade with any of His Britannic Majesty's subjects residing within the limits hereinbefore assigned for the use of the fishermen of the United States, for any of the purposes aforesaid.

And in order the more effectually to guard against smuggling, it shall not be lawful for the vessels of the United States, engaged in the said fishery, to have on board any goods, wares, or merchandise whatever, except such as may be necessary for the prosecution of the fishery, or the support of the fishermen whilst engaged therein, or in the prosecution of their voyages to and from the said fishing grounds. And any vessel of the United States which shall contravene this regulation may be seized, condemned, and confiscated, together with her cargo.

* * * *

No. 886.

[7 Oct.,
1818.]EXTRACT FROM REMARKS ON ARTICLES FROM MESSRS. GALLATIN AND RUSH TO MESSRS.
ROBINSON AND GOULBURN.

London, October 7, 1818.

Mr. Gallatin and Mr. Rush present their compliments to Mr. Robinson and Mr. Goulburn, and beg leave to send them the enclosed paper, containing some remarks on the articles handed to them at the conference yesterday. They are to be considered as unofficial, according to the intimation given yesterday, when they were promised, and have been drawn up merely under the hope that, by possessing the British plenipotentiaries of some of the views of the American plenipotentiaries before the next meeting on the 9th, the progress of the negotiation may be accelerated.

FISHERIES.

The American plenipotentiaries are not authorised by their instructions to assent to any article on that subject which shall not secure to the inhabitants of the United States the liberty of taking fish of every kind on the southern coast of Newfoundland, from Cape Ray to the Ramea Islands, and on the coasts, bays, harbours, and creeks from Mount Joli, on the southern coast of Labrador, to and through the Straits of Belleisle, and thence northwardly, indefinitely, along the coast ; and also, the liberty of drying and curing fish in any of the unsettled bays, harbours, and creeks of Labrador and of the southern coast of Newfoundland, as above described ; with the proviso respecting such of the said bays, harbours, and creeks as may be settled.

The liberty of taking fish within rivers is not asked. A positive clause to except them is unnecessary, unless it be intended to comprehend under that name waters which might otherwise be considered as bays or creeks. Whatever extent of fishing-ground may be secured to American fishermen, the American plenipotentiaries are not prepared to accept it on a tenure or on conditions different from those on which the whole has heretofore been held. Their instructions did not anticipate that any new terms or restrictions would be annexed, as none were suggested in the proposals made by Mr. Bagot to the American Government. The clauses forbidding the spreading of nets, and making vessels liable to confiscation in case any articles not wanted for carrying on the fishery should be found on board, are of that description, and would expose the fishermen to endless vexations.

* * * *

*Reproduced from Appendix to British case, North Atlantic Coast Fisheries Arbitration, p. 91.

No. 887.

[21 July,
1852.]EXTRACTS FROM "MEMORANDUM ON THE NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERY NEGOTIATIONS." 21

July, 1852.

BY SIR ANTHONY PERRIER.*

“Sir A. Perrier will therefore submit to Her Majesty's Government. the expediency of his making a counter proposal embodying all the conditions contained in Lord Aberdeen's instructions of March 14, 1846. He will also suggest that he be instructed to hold out (in the event of refusal to entertain the English proposal, or of the French Government insisting upon the removal of British settlers within the French limits) that Her Majesty's Government will enforce the strict observance of all the stipulations of the several treaties which concede to France a temporary right of fishery upon certain parts of the coast of Newfoundland ; that the French will be restricted from fishing, curing and drying, and to board Stages and Huts necessary for these purposes, that they will be prevented taking Salmon† or any other fish, in any part of the rivers, streams, or other water not bona fide on the coast.”‡

* Copied from Appendix to Journal of Legislative Assembly of Newfoundland, pp. 194-195.

† In the last degree for apportioning the Fishery stations on the coast of Newfoundland the French have provided for allotment of the Salmon fisheries. This is an encroachment never before attempted.

‡ Coast.—The edge or margin of the Land next the sea ; the shore. It is not used for the Banks of less waters (Johnson's folio dictionary.)

No. 888.

EXTRACTS FROM FUZIER-HERMAN "DROIT CIVIL ANNOTÉ"

ART. 538 FRENCH CIVIL CODE.

194. De ce que les terrains formant le rivage de la mer sont domaniaux, pour tout l'espace qui est couvert par la mer au grand flot de mars, il ne suit pas qu'il doive en être de même à l'égard des terrains bordant une rivière ayant son embouchure dans la mer. Le rivage des rivières même couvert par les flots de la mer, reste bord de rivière et n'est pas rivage de la mer.—Cass. 23 Juin 1830 (S. et P. chr., D. p. 30. 1. 308)—Sic, Laurent, t. 6, n. 6.

195. De même l'ordonnance de la marine de 1681 (art. 1er, tit. 7, liv. 4) qui répute bord et rivage de la mer tout ce qu'elle couvre et découvre pendant les nouvelles et pleines lunes, et jusqu'où le grand flot de mars peut s'étendre sur les grèves, n'entend parler que des terrains bordant la mer et lavage qui, même en temps de marée basse, se trouvent en contact avec ses eaux. Mais lorsque, par l'effet de certaines marées, un fleuve qui aboutit à la mer, se trouvant arrêté dans son cours et même refoulé par le flot montant, vient à mêler ses eaux à celles de la mer, et à déborder avec elle sur ces rives et sur ses îles, les terrains ainsi envahis momentanément ne cessent pas d'être rives et dépendances du fleuve, et de demeurer, à ce titre, susceptibles de propriété privée.—Cass. 28 Juill. 1869. (S. 71, 1. 141, D. p. 69, 1. 489).

196. Il en résulte qu'un terrain en culture situé en amont de l'embouchure d'une rivière qui se jette dans la mer, ne peut être considéré comme grève dans le sens de l'ordonnance de la marine de 1681 (Liv. 4 tit. 7, art. 1^{er}), encore bien qu'il soit couvert par le gonflement des eaux de la rivière à l'époque des plus grandes marées. Dès lors, il ne peut être compris dans le rivage de la mer, faisant à ce titre partie du domaine public.—Rouen, 26 Août 1840 (S. 41, 2. 32. P. 41. 1. 262, D. p.—41.2. 112)—Cons. d'état, 27 Mai 1863 (S. 63. 2.240. P. chr., D. p. 63, 3.63) Sic., Henrion de Pansey, Dissert, f. éodales t. 1, v^o aux S 6 ; Merlin, Quest., v^o Rivages de la mer ; Proudhon, du Dom. publ., t. 3, n. 717 ; Garnier, t. 1, n. 24 ; Hennequin t. 1, p. 292 ; Beaussant, t. 1, n. 549 ; Dufour, t. 4, n. 266 ; Cotelle, t. 4, n. 821 ; Daviel, p. 1, n. 68 ; Aubry et Rau, t. 2, p. 39 S. 669 ;

Laurent, t. 6, n. 6.

THE DIFFERENT MEANINGS OF THE WORD "COAST."

No. 889.

JOINT

DEFINITION OF COAST IN LEADING DICTIONARIES, ETC.

Vide supra, Part XI, page 2075.

No. 890.

JOINT

CORPUS JURIS (NEW YORK, 1917) VOL. XI. pp. 935-6.

Vide supra, Part XI, page 2072.

[1611.]

No. 891.

N

EXTRACTS FROM THE AUTHORISED VERSION OF THE BIBLE, 1611.

Deut. XI. 24. Every place whereon the soles of your feet shall tread shall be yours : from the wilderness and Lebanon, from the river, the river Euphrates, even unto the uttermost sea shall your coast be.

S. Matthew II. 16. Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth, and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under.

S. Mark, VII. 31. And again, departing from the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, he came unto the sea of Galilee, through the midst of the coasts of Decapolis.

The Acts XIII. 14. But when they departed from Perga they came to Antioch in Pisidia.

50. But the Jews stirred up the devout and honourable women, and the chief men of the city, and raised persecution against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coasts.

No. 892.

EXTRACT FROM LETTER FROM SIR C. BAGOT TO Mr. G. CANNING.

[17 March,
1824.]

(Alaska Boundary Tribunal—U.S. Case Appx. p. 155, British Case Appx. p. 67).

St. Petersburg
March 17, 1824.

SIR,

* * * *

I entertained sanguine expectations that such a proposal, coupled with the concession of a line of coast extending 10 marine leagues into the interior of the continent, would have been considered as amply sufficient for all the legitimate objects which Russia could have in view, and quite as much as she could pretend to with any shadow of real claim or justice.

No. 893.

EXTRACT FROM LETTER FROM COUNT NESSELRODE TO NIKOLAS SEMENOVITCH MORDVINOF.

[11 April,
1824.]

(Translation.)
(Alaska Boundary Tribunal U.S. Case Appx. p. 167.)

St. Petersburg
April 11, 1824.

MY GRACIOUS SIR, NIKOLAS SEMENOVITCH :

* * * *

The width of the coast line necessary for the safe existence and consolidation of our Colonies, the directions of the frontier and even its starting point on the Continent of America, still form subjects of negotiation.

* * * *

[1910-11.]

EXTRACTS FROM ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA, 11TH EDITION, 1910-1911.

Gold Coast, that portion of the Guinea Coast (West Africa) which extends from Assini upon the west to the river Volta on the east. It derives its name from the quantities of grains of gold mixed with the sand of the rivers traversing the district. The term Gold Coast is now generally identified with the British Gold Coast colony. This extends from $3^{\circ} 7'$ to $1^{\circ} 14' E.$, the length of the coast-line being about 370 miles. It is bounded W. by the Ivory Coast colony (French), E. by Togoland (German). On the north the British possessions, including Ashanti and the Northern Territories, extend to the 11th degree of north latitude. The frontier separating the colony from Ashanti (fixed by order in council, 22nd of October 1906) is in general 130 miles from the coast, but in the central portion of the colony the southern limits of Ashanti project wedge-like to the confluence of the rivers Ofin and Prah, which point is but 60 miles from the sea at Cape Coast. The combined area of the Gold Coast, Ashanti and the Northern Territories, is about 80,000 sq. m. with a total population officially estimated in 1908 at 2,700,000 ; the Gold Coast colony alone has an area of 24,200 sq. miles, with a population of over a million, of whom about 2,000 are Europeans.

* * * *

Ivory Coast (Côte d'Ivoire).—A French West African colony, bounded S. by the Gulf of Guinea, W. by Liberia and French Guinea, N. by the Colony of Upper Senegal and Niger, E. by the Gold Coast. Its area is approximately 120,000 sq. miles, and its population possibly 2,000,000, of whom some 600 are Europeans. Official estimates (1908) placed the native population as low as 980,000.

Physical features.—The coast-line extends from $7^{\circ} 30'$ to $3^{\circ} 7' W.$, and has a length of 380 miles. It forms an arc of a circle of which the convexity turns slightly to the north ; neither bay nor promontory breaks the regularity of its outline.

No. 895.

[1824.]

EXTRACTS FROM CALLIS ON SEWERS (1824) 4TH ED.

THE SHORE

But now I am arrived at the continent and the first ground I set my foot on is the shore, which in Latin is called littus maris . . .
 . Littus maris est quousque maximus hibernicus et jus fluctus eluderet, et quousque fluctus maris in estate longius exestuat . .
 . .

SEA COASTS

The coasts of the sea come next in order to be treated of Costera maris be words well known, but their confined definition is hard to be found out ; yet certainly they contain the shore and banks, for by the statute of 27 Eliz. chap. 24 an act was made for the mending of the banks and sea works on the sea coasts ; but in the 7th chap. of Maccabees coasts have a larger extent ; for there Demetrius son of Seleucus departed from Rome and came to a city of the sea-coasts. Here a whole city is set on the sea-coasts ; and in Justine treating of Alexander the Great, it is reported of him, that he entered into Lycia and Pamphylia, and won and conquered all the sea-coasts this could be taken for no less than whole countries ; for Alexander's great mind and huge army could not march on a mole-hill, or small tract of ground. In St. Mark chap. VII it is thus written, "That Jesus, departing from the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, came to Galilee" ; so that it may thereby be gathered, that these coasts were near the sea, for our Saviour was no sooner out of the coasts but he was on the sea which shews that sea and coasts be contigue jacentia, yet no certain definition can I find of the words "coasts of the sea," but by these and suchlike descriptions ; yet this I gather and collect thereby, that in respect of the whole world, a whole kingdom lying next may be said to be a sea-coast and a whole country in respect of a kingdom ; and in my opinion the next town and territories thereof lying next to the seas, be in our law taken to be the sea-coasts and no other ; and therefore some do much err which take coast to be the edge of land next the water, and shore to be the brinks of the water next the land quasi duo opposita.

CREEKS

Creek of the sea is an inlet of sea cornered into the mainland, shooting with a narrow passage into some angle of the land, and therein stretching itself more than ordinary into the land, and so holdeth not even quarter with the levant sea ; and such creeks or inlets we commonly term in the law to be arms of the sea ; for like as the arm of a man shooteth out from the body, so by a metaphor the inlet or corner of the sea let into the land is called an arm of the sea ; and although it go far into the land yet the points of land on both sides may well be discovered. And this appears in that eat arm of the sea on Humber, where it runs betwixt Lincolnshire and Yorkshire.

p. 2113

The points of either county may be seen at once and seem to stand even over the one to the other.

ARM OF THE SEA

And an arm of the sea is said to extend into the land so far as the flow and reflow goeth. In the patent of the Admiral of England I find this word creek used ; for there the King granteth to him omnia bona mercimonia et catalla in vel super mare littora crecas et costeras maris ; but it differs much both from the shore and coast ; for a shore is sometimes dry land, and sometimes water. A coast is always dry land : but the creek is always sea and new land. In the statute 28 H. 8 chap. 15 Rastal's Piracy, A, it is that all felonies etc. done upon the sea, haven or creek, where the Admiral hath jurisdiction, shall be tried in such county which the King shall appoint. By the statute it is manifest that the creek is not all one with the sea, nor the same that a haven is, by the statute made in the 4 H. 4. cap 20 Rastal Merchants 5 appoints that all merchandizes entering in or going out of the realm of England should be charged and discharged in great ports and not in creeks or small arrivals ; by which statute it is apparent that a creek is not all one that a port is. But yet here it seems to be an inlet of the sea where ships may have their arrivals, as, at Fosdyke, Stow, Wainflet and such like ; and I take it that a bay and a creek be all one, and that a mere and a fleet be also of that nature, and that all these rather vary in words than in matter (a)

(a) Though the King is the owner of this great waste and as a consequent of his propriety hath the primary right of fishing in the sea and the creeks and arms thereof ; yet the common people of England have regularly a liberty of fishing in the sea or creeks or arms thereof as a public common of piscary ; and may not without injury to their right be restrained of it, unless in such places, creeks or navigable rivers, where either the King or some particular subject hath gained a propriety exclusive of that common liberty. Hale de Jure Maris c. 4 s. 1.

No. 896.EXTRACT FROM ROBERT GREENHOW'S MEMOIR.

“In the following pages the term 'coast' will be used, sometimes as signifying only the sea-shore, and sometimes as embracing the whole territory extending therefrom to the sources of the river ; care has however been taken to prevent misapprehension, where the context does not sufficiently indicate the true sense.”

* “Memoir Historical and Political of the north-west coast of North America and the adjoining territories,” by Robert Greenhow, Translator and Librarian to the Department of State. Senate 26 Cong. 1st session (174) 1840. Wiley and Putnam, New York, 1840. Cited in Behring Sea (Fur Seal) Arbitration, 1893, British Case, p. 67.

No. 897.EXTRACT FROM ARGUMENT OF HANNIS TAYLOR.

ALASKAN BOUNDARY TRIBUNAL, VOL. 7, 1904, p. 605.

What I desire to submit to the Tribunal is this, that there are but two possible coast lines known to international law. One is the physical coast line traced by the hand of nature, where the salt water touches the land, which exists for the purpose of boundary ; the second is the political coast line—that invisible thing superimposed upon the physical coast by the operation of law, which exists for the purpose of jurisdiction.

The proposition is so simple that nobody can misunderstand it : that there are two coast lines which international law knows or deals with ; one is the physical coast line made by the hand of nature through the contact of salt water with the land, and that exists for the purpose of boundary ; the second is the political coast line, which the law superimposes upon the outer physical coast for the purpose of jurisdiction. They exist separate and apart, and there is no chance of confusing one with the other.

The PRESIDENT : I follow that, Mr. Taylor, and it is a very useful argument indeed. I should like you just to tell us in which of those categories—how you would deal with an estuary like the Orinoco, for instance ? I quite follow your argument, but I should like to know how you apply it.

Mr. TAYLOR : That is the very purpose of my argument—to answer your query. I am just at the end of the predicate. Now, to make it clear, although it is one of those self-evident things that proves itself. There is always a certain sanctity about a thing that is read out of a book, especially if you read it out of a French book or a book written in French. But your Honours know that Rivier, the great Swiss publicist—although he writes in French he is not guilty of being a Frenchman, if there is any guilt in that condition. Rivier, in his treatise, which is so authoritative throughout the world, has given us a fine simple statement in his “Principles du Droit des Gens,” of this definition I am speaking. Speaking of “la mer littorale——”

The PRESIDENT : What page are you reading from ?

Mr. TAYLOR : I am reading from the brief of the United States.

The PRESIDENT : What page will it be ?

p. 2116

Mr. TAYLOR : The United States' brief, page 17. Speaking of "la mer littorale." Now this explanation is especially important. "Le caractère d'un accessoire"—and it cannot be taken independently of the coast ("indépendamment de la côte"). Speaking of "les frontières," he says, "I have spoken already of the frontier on the sea, and that of the land. There exists also special limits for the wants of administration, because the geographical and political frontier ('la frontière politique et géographique') do not always answer in a sufficient manner."

The distinction between the physical and political coast line is drawn with a distinctness that cannot be mistaken, and the fact that the political coast line is a mere accessory to the physical coast line that it is something superimposed upon it cannot be mistaken. As a practical illustration I desire to call the attention of the Tribunal to the coast of Maine, which gives one of the best object lessons for illustration. If you take the coast of Maine from the south-west point up to the north-east, and take what would be called the trend of the political coast line runs it is about 400 kilometres long. If you take the physical coast line with all the sinuosities where the salt water touches the line it is about 4,000 kilometres long. Let me read the brief description of it from the "Nouveau Dictionaire":—

On the Atlantic Coast Maine presents an uninterrupted succession of peninsulas, islands, and bays ; and all these bays are the mouths of rivers, outlets of valleys having their origin far in the interior. Nothing similar is seen on all the territory of the Union. One must come to Norway, or go to the extreme point of South America, to find so long a part of the coast—400 kilometres in a straight line from the south-west to the north-east—so deeply cut up that we measure on it more than 4,000 kilometres of contact with the deep sea. All these bays of Maine are also fjords.

And I will call the attention of the Court, as we were speaking of that definition—

All the bays of Maine are also fjords, but spacious, and which, in spite of their equally rocky banks, of comparatively little elevation, receive the morning and afternoon sun, as well as that of noon, and open to mariners more ports, more anchorages, and safe shelters than all the other coasts upon the three seas of the Union.

Here we have good basis for illustration. The coast of Maine, as this geographer expresses it, fixed by the contact of the deep sea with the land that is, the physical coast line of Maine, as made by the hand of Nature is about 4,000 kilometres long.

You must have the physical coast line as the basis. It is on the physical coast line that the international law super-imposes as an accessory, as Rivier expresses it, the political coast line, which, cuts across the heads of all the bays and inlets. So when you take the political coast line there, the 3-mile zone, the barrier which the United States presents by international law to the world, the political coast line is about 400 kilometres, and the physical coast line is about 4,000. These two entities are too distinct to be mistaken.

* * * *

When we take the authority of Rivier explaining those two coast lines, he says that it is the physical coast line that exists for the purpose of boundary,

p. 2117

and that it is the political coast line that exists for the purpose of jurisdiction. Nothing can be more illogical, nothing can be more indefensible, than a system of organised confusion which attempts to mix a political coast line with a physical coast line. Nothing is more indefensible than the attempt to put a political coast line outside of that archipelago, and at the same moment to assume that there is a political coast line inside of that archipelago. And the contention which I desire most to emphasize is that this attempt of Great Britain to establish a coast line or to run that line of mountains parallel with what is called "the general trend of the coast" is basing it upon an assumption which has no existence in international law, and cannot have any existence in international law. There is no such thing as a general trend of coast apart from the political coast.

* * * *

It [the political coast line] is an imaginary line which the law superimposes upon the physical coast line as a basis. But for the purposes of international law, instead of following all the convolutions and sinuosities of the coast, it is permitted to go across the heads of bays and inlets, and it is in that particular that the rule of international law comes in as to the width of bays and inlets, either 6 or 10 miles. We are not encumbered with that question, because the British Case contends that they must be 10 miles, and we do not dispute it, and these outside inlets are 10 miles. So we are not encumbered with that question. It is a legal fiction imposed by the operation of law as an accessory, as Rivier puts it, to the political coast line. The minute you establish, the minute you fix it, all waters back of it, whether they are waters in the Archipelago there of Alexander or the Archipelago de Los Canarios, of Cuba, they all become, as Hall says, salt-water lakes : they are just as much interior waters as the interior waters of Loch Lomond, and there is no earthly principle, so far as reason is concerned, by which any human being could claim that there could be a political coast line back of a political coast line.

Then, if there is no reason for it, is there any authority for it ? I respectfully call upon the Representatives of Great Britain to go, if they can, and search the international jurisprudence of the world, and see if they can prove from the treatise of any publicist in any nation that anybody has ever put into any book anything in the way of authority for the proposition that a political coast line can exist back of a political coast line. I say that it is absolutely impossible upon the basis of reason or authority to establish or to give any colour to the idea that such a thing exists. It cannot exist under the existing principles of international law.

If that is true, the only coast line that can take the general trend of the coast is the political coast line. The interior coast line is a physical coast line, and has the character and attributes of a physical coast line which exists for the purpose of a boundary merely. There can be no conflict there of precedent or authority. The physical coast line is made by the hand of Nature where the salt water touches the land, and that is the explanation of the word “sinuosities.” These people were dealing with a question of boundary ; they were not dealing with a political coast line for the purpose of jurisdiction ; they were dealing with a physical coast line, as Rivier says, for the purpose of boundary. Therefore, as the physical coast line must bear the marks put upon it by the hand of Nature, the physical coast line follows the sinuosities as Nature made them. And when you put the political coast line out here [indicating on map] it is impossible to have it there. The whole confused and fundamental misconception upon which this whole British line is based is that you can run a political coast line in here. And there you have a positive demonstration. To talk about a line going across Lynn Canal, whether it is 6 miles or 10 miles, becomes empty jargon unless it is a political coast line, for no other coast line can cross the head of a bay or inlet, and all this is unintelligible jargon in conflict with the very fundamentals of international law. It rests upon that fundamental confusion, the idea that there is a trend of the coast of which international law knows nothing. There can be no trend of a coast, except the trend where the political coast line is. If that be true, then the conclusion is irresistible that such is the coast,—and there is no use in our confusing ourselves by the word “ocean.” The primary inquiry is : What is the physical coast ? That is the technical question to be defined, and physical “coast” is where the salt water touches the land.

p. 2118

The only difficult question that can arise is when a river flows into an arm of the sea. There is a point at which you can go up an arm of the sea into a river and reach a certain point where the sea ends. I must refer here to something in the British case which would be very serious to us if it had any real foundation. We have the case of Peroux v. Howard (1833), in the 7th of Peters, page 343, the decision of the Supreme Court of the United States, cited against us in reference to the point at which an arm of the sea into which a river opens ceases to be sea. When I came to read the case I confess I was somewhat amused because there were so many reasons which could be urged against its application. There is an old story about a young advocate who was called upon to defend a sheriff who was threatened by a rule nisi for not bringing a prisoner into court. In the zeal of his advocacy he gave twenty-three reasons to the presiding judge why he should not produce the body of the prisoner in court, and when he came to argue his case, with a great brief almost as big as one of ours, it was found that his first proposition was that the prisoner had been long dead, whereupon the presiding judge said that he would excuse him arguing the remaining twenty-two reasons.

I shall not argue all of the twenty-three reasons I have against this Case, because the first one is that the Case in question has been long dead. Fifty-two years ago it was solemnly overruled by the Supreme Court of the United States, and the principles upon which it was founded were eliminated from our national jurisprudence. The reason of that was this : In the early days of our history, when it became necessary to define the Admiralty jurisdiction of the United States, in that Case, and in almost every other, we wisely adhered to the rule of the mother country, and we took the rule as to our Admiralty jurisdiction as to the rise and fall of the tide. The men who lived at the mouths of the Hudson and the Mississippi assumed that the same rule should govern us which prevailed at the mouth of the Thames and the Mersey. The leading case under that rule was the case of Thomas Jefferson, in the 10th of Wheaton, page 428, in which the English Admiralty rule was adopted, and we lived under that rule for forty years. Then when our commerce extended to the mighty rivers, and the great interior lakes, where there was no rise and fall of the tide, lakes upon which great armadas could float if necessary, some Western lawyer said, "This old English rule of Admiralty is utterly irrational as applied to this country"—that we should have a new test, that we should substitute the navigable character of the water for the rise and fall of the tide, and a great discussion took place in the Supreme Court of the United States, which is an epoch in our judicial history. The Court, speaking through Chief-Justice Taney, said they would disregard the rule of the Thomas Jefferson Case, as no rule of property was fixed by the decision, and they rooted up and overturned the case of Thomas Jefferson, and this case, which was a mere satellite to it, and eliminated it from our jurisprudence, and established, instead of the principle of the rise and fall of the tide, the principle of the navigable character of the water as the test of Admiralty jurisdiction.

p. 2119

But our friends on the other side have not lost anything in the world by the annihilation of the case in question, because if it was in full force it would not have the slightest application.

It was a case testing the question whether Admiralty jurisdiction existed at New Orleans 110 miles, by the winding of the river, from the estuary. To avoid any possible question, instead of going 110 miles up some river beyond these inlets, we have stopped at a point at which there can be no claim or controversy. It would be just as easy to prove that the Admiralty Courts had no jurisdiction at the mouth of the Thames as it would be to prove that the water in question is not sea up to the point at which we claim. My distinguished friend, Mr. Robinson, likes to set up popular criteria as to the test of these questions. If, therefore, there is any doubt on that point I would like to call as a witness the Prime Minister of Canada, Sir Wilfred Laurier, who, in the Canadian Parliament, discussing this question and he used a word of which he seemed to be enamoured, about the “ocean terminous,” which he repeats, I think, four or five times in one document—has told us what the terminous of the sea is at that particular place.

Mr. LODGE : What page?

Mr. TAYLOR : I will just read it from the Appendix to our Counter-Case, page 171. He says :—

We had either to take the route by the Lynn Canal and Dyea, or the route by the Stikine River. The advantages of the one had to be set against the disadvantages of the other, and vice versa. The advantages of the route by the Lynn Canal were that it was shorter and more direct than the route by the Stikine River. But if we had adopted the route by the Stikine Canal, that is to say, had chosen to build a railway from Dyea, by the Chilkat Pass up to the waters of the Yukon, we would have to place the “ocean terminous” of the railway upon what is now American territory. I agree that the statement that has been made on the floor of this house, on more than one occasion, that Dyea, if the Treaty is correctly interpreted, is in Canadian territory. It ought to be ; but the fact is, as my hon. friends know very well, even those who do not belong to the legal profession, that possession is nine points of the law ; and even though by the letter of the Treaty, Dyea is in Canadian territory, the fact remains that from time immemorial, Dyea was in the possession of the Russians, and in 1867 it passed into the hands of the Americans, and it has been held in their hands ever since.

Now, I will not recriminate here ; this is not the time nor the occasion for doing so ; but so far as I am aware, no protest has ever been entered against the occupation of Dyea by the American authorities ; and when the American authorities are in possession of that strip of territory on the sea which has Dyea as its harbour, succeeding the possession of the Russians from time immemorial, it becomes manifest to everybody that at this moment we cannot dispute their possession ; and that before their possession can be disputed, the question must be determined by a settlement of the question involved in the Treaty. Under such circumstances Dyea was practically in American territory—at all events, in possession of the Americans, and, therefore, if we had undertaken to build a railway from Dyea to the Yukon country, we would have been placed at the mercy of the American authorities with regard to the bonding privilege. We would have been in this position ; that though we had built a railway, the “ocean terminous” of that railway was not in our own country, and we could not send a ton or a pound of goods over that railway, unless we had the permission of the American authorities.

Mr. TURNER : The accepted pronunciation of the town there mentioned is Dy'-a'.

Mr. TAYLOR : Thank you. But whatever we may call it, this I am simply giving as a popular interpretation, and it concurs exactly with the scientific, that the end of the head of the inlet is the ocean itself, the “ocean terminous,” and if they had built down to Dyea a railroad, it would have been there ; the “ocean terminous” would be right there where the technical rule of international law says that, the ocean ends. I say that it would be just as impossible for an Admiralty lawyer of Great Britain to stand before this Tribunal and deny that the estuary of the Thames is part of the ocean, the sea, as it would be to deny that the head of Lynn Canal is part of the sea. The popular interpretation, as given by the Prime Minister of Canada, is in perfect harmony and accord with the definition of international law.

[1904.]

THE OPINION OF LORD ALVERSTONE. FIFTH QUESTION.

ALASKAN BOUNDARY TRIBUNAL, VOL. 1, 1904.

Stated shortly, I understand this question to ask whether the eastern boundary, whether fixed by the crest of the mountains or by a distance of 10 marine leagues, was to run round the heads of the bays, ports, inlets, havens, and waters of the ocean, or not, I have come to the conclusion in the affirmative, viz., that the boundary, whether running along the summits or crests of the mountains or in the absence of mountains at a distance of 10 marine leagues, was to run round the heads of the inlets, and not to cross them.

* * * *

There is, as far as I know, no recognised rule of international law which would by implication give a recognised meaning to the word "coast" as applied to such sinuosities and such waters different from the coast itself.

THE WATERSHED DOCTRINE.

No. 899.

MESSRS. PINCKNEY AND MONROE, UNITED STATES COMMISSIONERS TO DON PEDRO
CEVALLOS, SPANISH COMMISSIONER, 20
APRIL, 1805.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN STATE PAPERS (1817-8), p. 326.

“The facts which are material in the case, are such as relate to the discovery and possession of the Territory referred to, by the Subjects and under the authority of each nation. The principles are those which have been recognised by European Powers in similar transactions, and which of course ought to govern in the present one. It is by a correct view of the material facts, and the faithful application of these principles to them ; that the rights of each Nation will be established in this point, and thereby the Boundary between them.”

* * * *

The principles which are applicable to the case, are such as are dictated by reason, and have been adopted in practice by European Powers in the discoveries and acquisitions which they have respectively made in the New World. They are few, simple, intelligible, and at the same time founded in strict justice. The first of these that when any European Nation takes possession of any extent of Sea Coast, that possession is understood as extending into the interior Country, to the sources of the Rivers emptying within that Coast, to all their branches, and the Country they cover, and to give it a right in exclusion of all other Nations to the same. (See Mémoire de l'Amérique page 116.) It is evident that some rule or principle must govern the rights of European Powers in regard to each other, in all such cases : and it is certain that none can be adopted, in those to which it applies, more reasonable or just, than the present one. Many weighty considerations show the propriety of it. Nature seems to have destined a range of Territory so described for the same society ; to have connected its several parts together by the ties of a common interest, and to have detached them from others. If this principle is departed from, it must be by attaching to such discovery and possession a more enlarged or contracted scope of acquisition ; but a slight attention to the subject will demonstrate the absurdity of either. The latter would be to restrict the rights of a European Power, who discovered and took possession of a new Country, to the spot on which its Troops or Settlements rested :

p. 2123

a doctrine which has been totally disclaimed by all the Powers who made discoveries and acquired Possessions in America. The other extreme would be equally improper : that is, that the Nation who made such discovery should, in all cases, be entitled to the whole of the Territory so discovered. In the case of an island, whose extent was seen, which might be soon sailed round and preserved by a few Forts, it may apply with justice ; but in that of a Continent, it would be absolutely absurd. Accordingly we find, that this opposite extreme has been equally disclaimed and disavowed by the doctrine and practice of European Nations. The great Continent of America, North and South, was never claimed or held by any one European Nation ; nor was either great Section of it. Their pretensions have been always bounded by more moderate and rational principles. The one laid down has obtained general assent.

This principle was completely established in the controversy which produced the War of 1755. Great Britain contended that she had a right, founded on the discovery and possession of such territory, to define its Boundaries by given latitudes in grants to individuals, retaining the Sovereignty to herself from Sea to Sea. This pretension, on her part, was opposed by France and Spain, and it was finally abandoned by Great Britain in the Treaty of 1763, which established the Mississippi as the Western Boundary of her Possessions. It was opposed by France and Spain on the principle here insisted on, which of course gives it the highest possible sanction in the present case.

[12 March,
1818.]EXTRACT FROM U.S. SECRETARY OF STATE TO DON LUIS DE ONIS, SPANISH COMMISSIONER, 12
MARCH, 1818.

BRITISH AND FOREIGN STATE PAPERS (1817-1818), pp. 327-328.

“In their Note of the 20th April, 1805, to the same Minister, replying to his argument in support of the pretensions of your Government with regard to those Limits, they lay down and establish, by a chain of reasoning, which neither Mr. Cevallos, at the time, nor your Government, at any period since, have ever attempted to break, three principles, sanctioned alike by immutable justice, and the general practice of the European Nations, which have formed Settlements and held Possessions in this Hemisphere ; and by the application of which to the facts also stated in their Note, this question of the Western Boundary ought then to have been, and, eventually, must be settled.

“These principles were :

“First : 'That whenever any European Nation takes possession of any extent of Seacoast, that possession is understood as extending into the interior Country, to the sources of the rivers emptying within that coast, to all their branches, and the Country they cover, and to give it a right in exclusion of all other Nations to the same.' ”

No. 901.

EXTRACT FROM “THE OREGON QUESTION EXAMINED.” BY TRAVERS TWISS.

The object of the tenth article of the Treaty of Utrecht was to secure to the Hudson's Bay Company the restoration of the forts and other possessions of which they had been deprived at various times by French expeditions from Canada, and of which some had been yielded to France by the seventh article of the Treaty of Ryswick. By this latter treaty Louis XIV. had at last recognised William III. as King of Great Britain and Ireland, and William in return had consented that the principle of uti possidetis should be the basis of the negotiations between the two crowns. By the tenth article, however, of the Treaty of Utrecht, the French King agreed to restore to the Queen (Anne) of Great Britain “to be possessed in full right for ever, the Bay and Straits of Hudson, together with all lands, seas, sea coasts, rivers and places situate [sic] in the said bay and straits, and which belong thereto, no tract of land or sea being excepted, which are at present possessed by the subjects of France.” The only question therefore for commissaries to settle, were the limits of the Bay and Straits of Hudson, coastwards, on the side of the French province of Canada, as all the country drained by streams entering into the Bay and Straits of Hudson were by the terms of the treaty recognised to be part of the possessions of Great Britain.

If the coast boundary, therefore, was once understood by the parties, the head waters of the streams that empty themselves in the Bay and Straits of Hudson, indicate the line which at once satisfied the other conditions of the treaty. Such a line, if commenced at the eastern extremity of the Straits of Hudson, would have swept along, through the sources of the streams flowing into the Lake Mistassinnie and Abbitibis, the Rainy Lake, in 48° 30', which empties itself by the Rainy River into the Lake of the Woods, the Red Lake, and Lake Travers. This last lake would have been the extreme southern limit, in about 40° 50', whence the line would have wound upward to the north-west, pursuing a serpentine course, and resting with its extremity upon the Rocky Mountains at the southernmost source of the Saskatchewan River, in about the 48th parallel of latitude. Such would have been the boundary line between the French possessions and the Hudson's Bay district ; and so we find that, in the limits of Canada, assigned by the Marquis de Vaudreuil himself, when he surrendered the province to Sir J. Amherst, the Red Lake is the apex of the which, on the one side, the line is drawn to Lake Superior ; on the other “follows a serpentine course southward to the river Oubache, or Wabash, and along it to the junction with the Ohio.” This fact was insisted upon by the British Government in their answer to the ultimatum of France, sent in on the 1st September, 1761 ; and the map, which was presented on that occasion by Mr. Stanley, the British minister, embodying those limits, was assented to in the French Memorial of the 9th of September. (Historical Memorial of the Negotiations of France and England from March 26th to Sept. 20th, 1761. Published at Paris by authority.) By the fourth article, however, of the Treaty of Paris 1763, Canada was ceded in full, with its dependencies, including the Illinois ; and the future line of demarcation between the territories of their Britannic and Christian Majesties, on the Continent of America was, by the seventh article, irrevocably fixed to be drawn through the middle of the River Mississippi, from its source to the river Iberville, and thence along the middle of the latter river and the Lakes Maurepas and Pontchartrain to the sea. Thenceforward the French territory in North America was confined to the western bank of the Mississippi, and this was the Louisiana which was ceded by France to Spain in 1769, by virtue of the treaty secretly concluded in 1762, but not promulgated till 1765. There would have been no mistake as to the boundaries of Louisiana, Canada, and the Hudson's Bay territories, as long as they were defined to be the aggregate of the valleys watered by the rivers flowing into the Gulf of Mexico, the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and the Bay of Hudson respectively. The difficulty in executing the provisions of boundary treaties in America, has arisen chiefly from adopting the data which incorrect maps have furnished, to which there has been nothing in nature corresponding, and from agreeing to contain parallels of latitude, as appearing from those maps to form good natural frontiers, but which have been found upon actual survey to frustrate the intentions of both parties.

* * * *

By the Treaty of Utrecht, the British possessions to the north-west of Canada were acknowledged to extend to the headwaters of the rivers emptying themselves into the Bay of Hudson : by the Treaty of Paris, they were united to the British possessions on the Atlantic by the cession of Canada and all her dependencies ; and France contracted her dominions within the right bank of the Mississippi. That France did not retain any territory after this treaty to the north-west of the sources of the Mississippi, will be obvious, when it is kept in mind that the sources of the Mississippi are in $47^{\circ} 35'$, whilst the sources of the Red River, which flows through Lake Winnipeg, and ultimately finds its way by the Nelson River in the Bay of Hudson, are in Lake Travers, in about $45^{\circ} 40'$.

[1879.]

EXTRACT FROM COMMENTARIES UPON
INTERNATIONAL LAW BY THE RT. HON. SIR
ROBERT J. PHILLIMORE.

2ND EDITION. VOL. I, pp. 277-9.

The United States of America, during the pendency of the negotiations with England, with respect to the Oregon boundary, asserted “that a nation discovering a country, by entering the mouth of its principal river at the sea-coast, must necessarily be allowed to claim and hold as great an extent of the interior country as was described by the course of such principal river and its tributary streams”*

But this proposition was strenuously denied by great Britain upon various grounds :

1. That no such right accrued at all to mere discovery ;

2. Not to discovery by a private individual. Great Britain “was yet to be informed (she said) under what principles or usage, among the nations of Europe, his having first entered or discovered the mouth of the River Columbia, admitting this to have been the fact, was to carry after it such a portion of the interior country as was alleged. Great Britain entered her dissent from such a claim ; and least of all did she admit that the circumstance of a merchant vessel of the United States having penetrated the coast of that continent at Columbia River, was to be taken to extend a claim in favour of the United States along the same coast, both above and below that river, over latitudes that had been previously discovered and explored by Great Britain herself, in expeditions fitted out under the authority and with the resources of the nation” †

CCXXXVII. If the circumstances had been these, viz. that an actual settlement had been grafted upon a discovery made by an authorised public officer of a nation at the mouth of a river, the law would not have been unreasonably applied.

There appears to be no variance in the opinions of writers upon International Law as to this point. They all agree that the Right of Occupation incident to a settlement, such as has been described, extends over all territory actually and bona fide occupied, over all that is essential to the real use of the settlers, although the use be only inchoate, and not fully developed ; over all, in fact, that is necessary for the integrity and security of the possession, such necessity being measured by the principle already applied to the parts of the sea adjacent to the coasts, namely, “ibi finitur imperium ubi finitur armorum vis.” The application of the principle to a territorial boundary is, of course, dependant in each case upon details of the particular topography.

Martens, discussing “jusqu'ou s'étend l'occupation,” writes with as much precision and clearness upon the point as the subject will admit of. “Une nation qui occupe un district doit être censée avoir occupé toutes les parties vacantes qui le composent ; sa propriété s'étend même sur les places qu'elle laisse incultes, et sur celles dont elle permet l'usage à tous. Les limites de son territoire sont ou naturelles (telle que la mer, les rivières les eaux, les montagnes, les forêts) ou artificielles (telles que des barrières des bornes, des poteaux, etc.) Les montagnes, les forêts les bruyères, etc., qui séparent le territoire de deux nations, sont censés appartenir à chacune des deux jusqu'à la ligne qui forme le milieu, à moins qu'on ne soit convenu de régler différemment les limites, ou de les neutraliser. A défaut des limites certaines le droit d'une nation d'exclure des nations étrangères des terres ou îles voisines ne s'étend pas au-delà du district qu'elle cultive, ou duquel du moins elle peut prouver l'occupation ; à moins que, de part et d'autre, l'on ne soit convenu de ne pas occuper certains districts, îles, etc., en les déclarant neutres.”*

CCXXXVIII. This middle distance mentioned by Martens appears, in cases where there is no sea-coast boundary, to be recognised in practice.

In the negotiations between Spain and the United States of America respecting the western boundary of Louisiana, the latter country laid down with accuracy and clearness certain propositions of law upon this subject, and which fortify the opinion advanced in the forgoing paragraphs.

* Martens. Droit des Gens, 1. ii, c. 1, s. 38.

No. 903.EXTRACTS FROM BOOKS ON INTERNATIONAL LAW.

WESTLAKE—INTERNATIONAL LAW, Part 1, page 112.

Cites principle laid down by negotiators for the United States in disputes with Spain and Great Britain—

“That whenever any European nation takes possession of any extent of sea coast, that possession is understood as extending into the interior country to the sources of the rivers emptying within that coast, to all their branches and the country they cover and to give it a right in exclusion of all other nations to the same.”

LAWRENCE—PRINCIPLES OF INTERNATIONAL LAW, p. 151 (3rd Edn.)

Occupation of a considerable extent of coast gives a title up to the watershed of the rivers which enter the sea along the occupied line. . . . If a coast line is effectively occupied, the rivers which fall into the sea throughout its extent and the country drained by them are held to belong in full sovereignty to the power whose settlements are dotted along the shore.

HALL—INTERNATIONAL LAW, p. 104 (5th Edn.)

It has generally been admitted that occupation of the coast carries with it a right to the whole territory drained by the rivers which empty their waters within its line.

[1884.]

EXTRACT FROM THE ONTARIO-MANITOBA CASE.
THE ARGUMENT FOR THE DOMINION OF CANADA.

 PRINTED CASES IN APPEAL. VOL. 7, 1884, p. 25.

The British Nation, therefore, acquired, by discovery and by settlements made on Hudsons [sic] Bay, the possession of the country extending into the interior to the sources of the rivers emptying within that coast, which would include the Saskatchewan and English rivers to the West, having their sources at the foot of the Rocky Mountains, and extending South and East to the sources of all the rivers flowing into James' Bay.

[1878.]

The law entitling England to this has been stated not only by Vattel, but has been adopted as correct by the United States, and is recognised by the highest authorities on International Law in England—Dr. Twiss and Dr. Phillimore—as being the correct principle to apply in such cases.

PART OF THE CASE FOR THE DOMINION, AS SUBMITTED TO THE ARBITRATORS IN 1878.

In 1871 a Commissioner was appointed by each of the Governments of the Dominion and Province of Ontario, for the settlement of the northerly and westerly boundaries of the Province.

The instructions given to the Commissioners on behalf of the Dominion were that “The boundary in question is clearly indential [sic] with the limits of the Province of Quebec, according to the 14th George III., ch. 83, known as the 'Quebec Act,' and is described in the said Act as follows, that is to say :

Having set forth the Westerly position of the Southern Boundary of the Province, as extending along the River Ohio, 'westward to the banks of the Mississippi [sic],' the description from thence (i.e., the junction of the two rivers) and northwards to the southern boundary of the territory granted to the Merchants Adventurers of England trading to the Hudson's Bay.

“Having determined the precise longitude, west of Greenwich, of the extreme point of land making the junction of the north and east banks respectively of the said river, you will proceed to ascertain and define the

p. 2131

corresponding point of longitude or intersection of the meridian passing through the said junction with the international boundary between Canada and the United States.

“Looking, however, to the tracing enclosed, marked A, intending to illustrate these instructions, it is evident that such meridian would intersect the international boundary in Lake Superior.

“Presuming this to be the case, you will determine and locate the said meridian, the same being the westerly portion of the boundary in question, on such point on the northerly shore of the said lake as may be nearest to the international boundary, and from thence survey a line due South to deep water, marking the same upon and across any and all points or islands which may intervene, and from the point on the main shore found as aforesaid, draw and mark a line due north to the southern boundary of the Hudsons [sic] Bay territory before mentioned. This will complete the survey of the westerly boundary line sought to be established.

“You will then proceed to trace out, survey, and mark, eastwardly, the aforementioned southern boundary of the territory granted to the Merchants Adventurers of England trading to Hudson's Bay.

“This is well understood to be the height of land dividing the waters which flow into Hudson's Bay from those emptying into the valleys of the Great Lakes, and forming the northern boundary of Ontario ; and the same is to be traced and surveyed, following its various windings, till you arrive at the angle therein between the Provinces of Ontario and Quebec, as the latter is at present bounded, having accomplished which, the same will have been completed.”

EXTRACT OF ARGUMENT OF MR. McMAHON, Q.C., COUNSEL FOR THE DOMINION BEFORE THE ARBITRATORS, 3rd AUG., 1878.

Mr. McMAHON : “My learned friends do not claim that they are entitled to any land north of the height of land.”

The ATTORNEY-GENERAL : “I thought I had occupied a good deal of time in showing that I was claiming that.”>

CHIEF-JUSTICE HARRISON: “I understood the Attorney-General to claim to the Arctic Ocean.”

Mr. MCMAHON : “I did not know that he meant that.”

SIR FRANCIS HINCKS: “Do I understand that you have no difficulty about the northern boundary.”

Mr. MCMAHON : “The northern boundary is of no consequence: the trouble is with the western boundary.”

No. 905.

[1893.]

EXTRACT FROM BEHRING SEA (FUR SEAL) ARBITRATION 1893.

ARGUMENT OF THE UNITED STATES, pp. 39-40.

We may, however, briefly observe here, that according to the best authorities in international law the occupation of a new country which is sufficient to give to the occupying nation a title to it depends very largely upon the nature of the country and the beneficial uses which it may be made to subserve. In the case of a fruitful region capable of supporting a numerous population, it might not be allowable for a nation first discovering it to maintain a claim over vast areas which it did not actually occupy and attempt to improve ; but where a remote and desolate region has been discovered yielding only a single or few products, and all capable of being beneficially secured by the discovering nation, a claim to these products asserted and actually exercised, is all the occupation of which the region is susceptible and is sufficient to confer the right of property ; and that whatever authority it may be reasonably necessary to exercise upon the adjoining seas in order to protect such, interests from invasion may properly be asserted. Says Phillimore, who seems to have understood the Oregon territory as embracing the whole Northwest coast of North America :

“A similar settlement was founded by the British and Russian Fur Companies in North America.

“The chief portion of the Oregon territory is valuable solely for the fur-bearing animals which it produces. Various establishments in different parts of this territory organised a system for securing the preservation of these animals, and exercised for these purposes a control over the native population. This was rightly contended to be the only exercise of proprietary right of which these particular regions were at that time susceptible, and to mark that a beneficial use was made of the whole territory by the occupants.” *

* Int. Law; Vol. I, pages 259, 260.

[1899.]

EXTRACT FROM BRITISH GUIANA—VENEZUELA BOUNDARY ARBITRATION.

BRITISH CASE, p, 161.

“It is not disputed that the Dutch and the British have for centuries been in full possession of a very considerable territory on both sides of the Essequibo below the point where it is joined by the Massanini. It is submitted that according to every principle of international law, this carries with it the right to the whole basin of the Essequibo and its tributaries except in so far as any portion of that basin may have been occupied by another Power.

“The Power in control of so large an extent of territory round the lower course of a river such as the Essequibo, to which no other Power has ever had any access and where no dominion other than that exercised by the Dutch and the British has ever existed, has a prima facie right to the whole of the river basin. Such right can only be rebutted by proof of actual occupation by another Power. There is not even a pretence of such occupation by Spain or Venezuela except as regards the territory in the neighbourhood of the Yuruan.”

BRITISH ARGUMENT, p. 55.

“In order to displace the title of Great Britain to the drainage areas of all the rivers between the right bank of the Amakum and Essequibo and their tributaries, Venezuela must show effective occupation ; and it is only to the extent to which such effective occupation can be shown that the title of Great Britain can be defeated.”

[1904.]

EXTRACTS FROM BRITISH GUIANA—BRAZIL BOUNDARY ARBITRATION.

BRITISH CASE. Chapter IX. (Discussion of the Watershed Doctrine).

pp. 127. Again in 1861 Twiss in his work on the “Law of Nations,” after referring at length to the Oregon case, continues in the following words :—

“It is obvious that a claim to all the lands watered by a river and its tributaries, founded on the discovery and occupation of the mouth of the river, must conflict with a claim to all the inland territory as far as the line of watershed, founded in the discovery and occupation of an extent of seacoast, about which latter position of Law there is no dispute amongst Nations.”

pp. 128. in 1867 Bluntschli stated the following proposition as part of his code :—

Lorsque les colons commencent par prendre possession des rivages de la mer, on admet que cette prise de possession comprend toute la partie de la terre ferme qui, par sa situation et spécialement par les fleuves qui la traversent, est reliée a la côte de manière à former avec celle-ci un ensemble naturel.

p. 138. One of the most important matters for enquiry in regard to occupation on the upper waters of a river-basin is this : how far is access to these upper waters obtained from the country beyond the watershed, and how far, on the other hand, does the river itself afford the means of communication with the outer world ?

No. 908.

[15 July,
1884.]EXTRACTS FROM PROCEEDINGS BEFORE THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE OF HER MAJESTY'S PRIVY COUNCIL IN ONTARIO-MANITOBA BOUNDARY CASE RE "WATERSHED" CONTENTION.

(Taken from printed transcription of notes of argument printed by order of the Legislative Assembly of Ontario, Toronto, 1889).

Council Chamber, Whitehall,
Tuesday, July 15th, 1884.

PRESENT :

The Right Honourable The LORD CHANCELLOR,
The Right Honourable The LORD PRESIDENT,
The Right Honourable LORD ABERDARE,
The Right Honourable SIR BARNES PEACOCK,
The Right Honourable SIR MONTAGUE E. SMITH,
The Right Honourable SIR ROBERT P. COLLIER.

[19 July,
1884.]

Counsel for Ontario :—Mr. MOWAT, Q.C., Attorney-General for Ontario, Mr. SCOBLE, Q.C., Mr. MILLS, and Mr. HALDANE.

Counsel for Manitoba :—Mr. J. A. MILLER, Q.C., Attorney- General for Manitoba, and Mr. D. MCCARTHY, Q.C.

Counsel for the Dominion Government :—Mr. CHRISTOPHER ROBINSON, Q.C., and Mr. HUGH MACMAHON, Q.C.

FOURTH DAY.

Saturday, July 19th, 1884.

Mr. MCCARTHY.—Yes, my Lord I say there is no proof that there was any possession of any country which as not drained by part of the St. Lawrence, prior to 1670. I start with that.
Now, if it be necessary, I will go back and prove that to your Lordships, so far as we can trace it from the historical documents which are left to us. What were the French pretensions ? The French pretension was, that they had

Hudson's Bay, and by virtue of that discovery they claimed that they had a better right than the English. The English said that they had discovered it, and I assumed on Thursday, and I think it was an expedient and a fair and proper assumption, that the English were right in that view. But whether they are right or wrong, the English undoubtedly first took possession of it under their discovery and then it is a question of law to what extent of territory that gives the English a right, internationally speaking as between them and the French, by virtue of their prior discovery and their after occupation. That question of law I propose to discuss still later on. As I understand the result of the authorities—speaking in that sense of the recognised rules which govern all the treaties dealing with this part of the North American continent, and I submit they must be accepted as the international law on the subject—it is this, that the discovery of a coast line, and the occupation of that coast line, give to the discoverer an entire right to all the territory that is drained there. Now, the American ministers put forward a much wider claim. They put forward this claim. They said that the discovery of the mouth of a river gave to the discoverer and occupier of that river, or of the mouth of that stream, a right to all the territory that was drained by the stream, and that is discussed in Dr. Phillimore's work, and afterwards [sic] in Sir Travers Twiss's, and settled now on this basis : that the American view put forward by Mr. Gallatin was too broad—that merely the discovery of the mouth of a river did not give a right to all the territory which it drained ; but that the discovery of the coast line, and the occupation, of course, in either case, did give to that discoverer and occupier a right, internationally speaking, to all the country that was drained into the coast line.

Sir ROBERT COLLIER.—You must not assume that to be so.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—If Sir Travers Twiss said so—it cannot be taken to be the law.

LORD ABERDARE.—You must shew that the occupation followed on the discovery.

Mr. McCARTHY.—Of course, my Lord, that would be so.

LORD ABERDARE.—I suppose the first occupation was under the charter.

Mr. McCARTHY.—Yes.

LORD ABERDARE.—And the discovery was in 1610.

Mr. McCARTHY.—Yes, that is also dealt with. If the discovery is not followed by the occupation, and anybody else intervenes, then it is also a question of whether there has been an abandonment.

LORD ABERDARE.—Yes, the French claim to have intervened.

Mr. McCARTHY. . . Now, the proposition of international law I will state, and I do not think anything can be found to the contrary, and I submit it is in accordance with reason and law. If this continued, how was the country settled ? The English settled on the Atlantic coast ; they claimed, as the map shews, that that settlement gave them a right as far as the Pacific Ocean. They claimed that Virginia stretched to the Pacific Ocean. The English claim was wider than the French, because the French claimed the watershed of the system up to the height of land. If your Lordships remember—and I will give the reference to it—when La Salle discovered the Mississippi, he came from the north. He started from Quebec and came down by the Wisconsin, and penetrated down the Mississippi to the mouth, and it was not until he got to the mouth of the Mississippi that he claimed to be the discoverer. Then he erected a pole, and made a proclamation in the name of the King of France that the whole of the territory drained into the Mississippi was taken possession in the name of the Crown of France. Now, everything in these matters relating to the continent was treated on that basis, and the only dispute was, as between the American minister setting up that the mere discovery of a river gave a right to the watershed of a river, and the other claim, contended for by the British minister and the Spanish minister, that that was not so unless there was a discovery of the coast line as well.

p. 2137

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—There seems to be about as much foundation for the one idea as for the other. If you say, that because you take possession of a few miles of the coast of Africa, you take possession of all the country which is drained by a river which goes three thousand miles, it is so absurd that I cannot conceive it to be laid down by any writer on international law. However, it has very little bearing upon this question.

SIR ROBERT COLLIER.—Whether it is so or not is of very little consequence.

The LORD PRESIDENT.—What do you conceive to be the bearing of all this ?

Mr. McCARTHY.—The bearing of all this is that the charter did give to the Hudson's Bay certain definite limits. If it did not give to Hudson's Bay certain definite limits, the charter was void for uncertainty. Now what were those limits ?

SIR ROBERT COLLIER.—Then we go back to the charter.

Mr. McCARTHY.—I am speaking about that charter, under which was the only possession that the English had in all this north country. The Hudson's Bay Company represented the Crown of England, and the charter purported to give them all the lands which drained into the Bay. Now, either it was void for uncertainty, and a piece of waste paper—and I am not required to admit that—or it did give to the Hudson's Bay Company certain definite limits. Where are those definite limits ? Can my learned friends on the other side suggest any definite limits to the Hudson's Bay grant ?

p. 2138

SIR ROBERT COLLIER.—I thought you were trying to suggest some title that they had, independently of the charter.

Mr. McCARTHY.—No, my Lord.

SIR ROBERT COLLIER.—Then we come back to the charter, and we have heard your views on that subject.

LORD ABERDARE.—Would you argue that although the French may have possessed themselves of the portion of the territory draining into Hudson's Bay more distant from Hudson's Bay, and held possession of it for a considerable time, that claim of the company would have availed as against England itself when it once became possessed of Canada ?

Mr. McCARTHY.—Precisely.

LORD ABERDARE.—You argue that even although the evidence shewed, for instance—just as an example—that a portion of this territory awarded by the arbitrators within the watershed towards Hudson's Bay, had been occupied by the French, that occupation for fifty, eighty or a hundred years, would not avail against the claim of the Hudson's Bay Company ?

Mr. McCARTHY.—Yes, my Lord, that is my proposition.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—It is really a proposition which, if it is anything, is the most extraordinary imaginable. The French got access to this country, which is drained at a certain point by the St. Lawrence, they push their settlements into the interior, and do not meet there with any other settlements of any other nation whatever. According to your argument, they might organize these settlements in the most civilized way, and build towns and villages, and cultivate the land, but because King Charles II. had granted, a hundred or fifty years before, a charter to some of his subjects, which in the terms of it, as you say, construed upon certain principles, would include part of the territory which the French had so settled, therefore, internationally, the adventurers, the grantees of Charles II., have a right to turn out the French settlers ?

[21 July,
1884.]

Mr. McCARTHY.—Yes.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—It is perfectly absurd.

FIFTH DAY.

Monday, 21st July, 1884.

Mr. McCARTHY.—Yes. I wish to observe your Lordship's rule, and therefore do not go into the effect of the commissions. My learned friends who are to follow me will deal with that, and they would not be following your Lordship's rule if they repeated what I had said. Therefore I leave that to my friends.

p. 2139

Now, I have some observations to make, and they shall be very few, because my learned friend will have to deal with this in some measure. But I do not think I ought to close my statement without making some references as to the doctrine of law on which we rely as to the height of land. I suppose I may refer to Sir Travers Twiss' work on international law, as I suppose your Lordship will allow me to do to Mr. Halleck's works and other works on international law.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—The thing which I am at a loss to understand is how the boundaries between the two different territories can possibly be determined by international law, unless you include in international law all conventions, acts and documents of title which have to define those boundaries.

Mr. McCARTHY.—I mean this, and your Lordship will say whether I am to go on or not ; but what I understand is this, that from time to time nations have agreed upon certain well known rules for settling matters of this kind, and that this question as to the watershed, and as to the territory which one nation that discovers becomes entitled to, has in that way—by conventions, by arguments adduced at those conventions, by settlements made upon references—been so firmly established that it may now be accepted as a well known rule of international law. Now that well known rule of international law, so far as this continent is concerned of course, in early times—within the last century I may say—was of very great importance. There was an enormous continent ; the discoveries had all been made from the ocean ; each discoverer and each occupier was claiming certain quantities of land by reason of that discovery, and that gave rise to disputes and difficulties which ultimately have been settled, and settled upon a fair and reasonable basis, and these rules are now incorporated—if they were not incorporated before, and I think that the earlier authorities shew that they were—as rules of international law. Now I have already stated what I understand to be that rule, and what I understand also to have been the dispute with regard to that rule. One claim put forward by the Americans, which ultimately they had to withdraw as the argument was against them, was this : that the mere discovery of the mouth of a river gave to the discoverer the whole of that river (I mean followed by occupation because I am assuming occupation in all cases) and the land that was drained by it. Then the British authorities stated that that was stating the claim too widely, and that the true rule was this, that not merely the discovery of the river, but the discovery and settlement of the coast line, gave to the discoverer and settlers of that coast line all the country that drained into it. And upon that basis the French seem to have proceeded from the earliest times. The English at first took a wider view. They claimed that the mere discovery of the coast line gave them all that they chose to claim back even to the very ocean. The French took a more correct view by saying that it gave them a right to all the land that it watered, down to the sea where the discovery was made ; and so I have read, once or twice, references to the commissions of the French King and his officials and governors, in which it is referred to as to the land drained by such a stream. Now I will read from Sir Travers Twiss' work, the second edition, page 196.

LORD ABERDARE.—Did the French claim all the land which was watered by the tributaries of the Mississippi from the east to the west ?

Mr. McCARTHY.—Yes ; in fact they did, I mean the discoverer La Salle proclaimed that on his discovery.

Sir ROBERT COLLIER.—According to that view, if a few miles of the coast on either side of the mouth of a river were discovered and settled you might claim any extent of country you like to suppose.

LORD ABERDARE.—That is to say that the discoverer of the mouth of the Mississippi, or the land on either side of the Mississippi, could claim not only the lands on the line of the Mississippi, but all the lands watered by the enormous tributaries of the Mississippi on either side.

Mr. McCARTHY.—That is what the French claimed and what La Salle claimed when he erected the post and put the French arms upon it. Then the portion of that west of the Mississippi was ceded to Spain, and then Spain gave that to the States, and then the question arose, and it was with regard to that that this passage, which I am going to refer to was dealt with. That is Sir Travers Twiss' book, and I am reading at present at page 196.

Sir BARNES PEACOCK.—But what treatise is it—on International Law, I suppose ?

Mr. McCARTHY.—Yes.

Sir ROBERT COLLIER.—You may read it valeat quantum.

Mr. McCARTHY.—

“The Exclusive right of a nation to territory which it has acquired by occupation has been universally recognized by the nations of Europe and in respect of such right certain rules have become established by usage, whereby the condition of law constituting occupation may be placed beyond doubt. The natural right of an individual to appropriate——”

Then he goes on to give the reasons for that, which I need not trouble your Lordships with reading. Then section 119:

“A nation is under an obligation towards other nations analogous to that under which an individual stands towards other individuals with regard to the discovery of a thing. If it seeks to found an exclusive title to its possession upon the right of discovery, it must manifest in some way or other to other nations its intention to appropriate the territory to its own purposes. The comity of nations then sanctions a presumption, that the execution of the intention will follow within a reasonable time the announcement of it. But natural reason requires that the discovery should be notified to other nations, otherwise if actual possession has not ensued, the obvious inference would be that the discovery was a transient act and that the territory was never taken possession of animo et facto.”

p. 2141

Then he says that the meaning of notification is, either by notifying it formally, or taking possession. Then we come to section 120, which I do not think I need read to your Lordships. Then section 122 :

“When discovery has been followed by the settlement of a nation, other nations, in accordance with the law of nature, recognize a perfect title in the occupant. Where discovery has not been immediately followed by occupation, but the fact of discovery has been notified, other nations, by courtesy, pay respect to the notification, and the usage of nations has been to presume that settlement will take place within a reasonable time ; but unless discovery has been followed within a reasonable time by some sort of settlement, the presumption arising out of notification is rebutted by non-user, and lapse of time gives rise to the opposite presumption of abandonment.”

That point does not become important here because there was the occupation. Now here is section 123, as to the extent of right which the discovery gives:

“The two rules generally, perhaps universally, recognized and consecrated by the usage of nations, have followed from the nature of the subject.”

This is quoting now from Mr. Gallatin on the other side, the plenipotentiary of the United States, who thus states his view:

“By virtue of the first, prior discovery gave a right to occupy, provided that occupancy took place within a reasonable time, and was ultimately followed by permanent settlement and by the cultivation of the soil. In conformity with the second, the right derived from prior discovery and settlement was not confined to the spot discovered or first settled. The extent of territory which would attach to such first discovery, gave the right of occupancy, and ultimately of sovereignty, to the whole country drained by such river and its several branches, has been generally admitted, and in a question between the United States and Great Britain, her acts have with propriety been appealed to, as shewing that the principles on which they rely accord with their own."

Now comes Sir Travers Twiss' view upon that:

"The question as to the extent of territory over which the discovery of a part given rise to the right of occupancy, may receive a solution by reference to the principles of law which decide to what extent actual possession must go in order to give a title to more than is actually inhabited. It is not necessary, in order to constitute the occupant of a thing the local proprietor of it, that he should have actual possession of the whole of it. If he has possession of a part, which cannot be separated from the whole, he is in possession of the whole."

p. 2142

Then section 125 is :

"The principles applicable to such question were discussed by the commissioners of the United States of America, in the negotiations with the commissioners of Spain, on the subject of the western boundary of Louisiana "—which is just the point which your Lordship was putting to me a moment ago—" 'The principles,' they observe, 'which are applicable to the cases are such as are dictated by reason, and have been adopted in practice by European nations in the discoveries and acquisitions which they have respectively made in the New World. They are few, simple, intelligible, and at the same time founded in strict justice. The first of these is, that when any European nation takes possession of any extent of sea coast, that possession is understood as extending into the interior country, to the sources of the rivers emptying within that coast, to all their branches and the country they cover, and so give it a right in exclusion of all other nations to the same. It is evident that some rule or principle must govern the rights of European powers in regard to each other in all such cases, and it is certain that none can be adopted, in those cases to which it applies, more reasonable or more just than the present one. Many weighty considerations shew the propriety of it. Nature seems to have destined a large range of territory so described for the same society ; to have connected its several parts together by a common interest, and to have detached them from others. If this principle is departed from, it must be by attaching to such discovery and possession a more enlarged or contracted scope of acquisition, but a slight attention to the subject will demonstrate the absurdity of either. The latter would be to restrict the rights of a European power who discovered and took possession of a new country, to the spot on which its troops or settlements rested, a doctrine which has been totally disclaimed by all the powers who made discoveries and acquired possessions in America. The other extreme would be equally improper, that is, that the nation who made such discovery should, in all cases, be entitled to the whole territory so discovered.”

Then he speaks of an island and says that if an island be discovered it all goes. At section 126 he says :

“The position of law maintained on behalf of the United States by Mr. Gallatin, in 1827, above alluded to, had been previously advanced by Mr. Rush, in 1824, when resident as Minister Plenipotentiary of the United States in London. 'I asserted,' he writes to the American Secretary of State, Hon. J. Quincy Adams, 'that a nation discovering a country by entering the mouth of its principal river at the sea coast, must necessarily be allowed to claim and hold as great an extent of the interior country as was described by the course of such principal river and its tributary streams.' The plenipotentiaries of the United States in support of their position appealed to the language of ancient charters _____” and so on. Then :

p. 2143

“It was replied on behalf of the British plenipotentiaries, that those charters had no valid force or effect against the subjects of other sovereigns, but could only bind and restrain, vigore suo, those who were under the jurisdiction of the grantor of the charters, and that although they might confer on the grantees an exclusive title against the subjects of the same sovereign power, they could only affect the subjects of other sovereign powers so far as the latter might be bound, by the common law of nations, to respect acts of discovery and occupation effected by the members of other independent political communities.”

LORD ABERDARE.—That last position does not seem to have been contested by Rush.

MR. MCCARTHY.—Yes, my Lord, he contended for a much wider position. He contended that the mere discovery of the land near a river gave the whole of the territory ; the British said not.

Lord ABERDARE.—Although a part of the land watered by the tributaries of the principal river had been already occupied.

Mr. McCARTHY.—No, My Lord, I do not think that is contended. The discoveries were always from the sea in this country, and being from the sea there could be hardly any foreign power or rival power at the head of the stream. At section 127 then he says :

“The principle involved in the position of law advanced by the United States on the above occasions, seems not to be reconcilable with other positions of law in which all nations agree. It is inconsistent in the first place, with one of the positions of law upon which the United States themselves rested their claims against Spain respecting the boundary of Louisiana, in 1805, namely, that the discovery and occupation of an extent of sea coast by a nation are understood to convey to that nation a right of possession over the interior country as far as the watershed line, which position of law Messrs. Monroe and Pinckney the commissioners of the United States, then alleged to have been completely established by the controversy between France and Spain on the one hand, and Great Britain on the other, which produced the war of 1755 between those nations. It is obvious that a claim to all the lands watered by a river and its tributaries, founded on the discovery and occupation of the mouth of the river, must conflict with a claim to all the inland territory, as far as the line of watershed, founded on the discovery and occupation of an extent of sea coast, about which latter position of law there is no dispute amongst nations.”

p. 2144

Now there are many authorities—it is not merely Sir Travers Twiss—to the same effect, and all of them are quite consistent with what I have read. My learned friend will refer to them more in detail. But what is the reason of it ? One reason is given in the book which I have just read. Another reason is that if you allow a rival nation to come to the head waters of the stream you would have no opportunity of defending yourselves against them ; they would come down with ease and swiftness, and without any opportunity being afforded of preparing for defence. And therefore it has been essential in the settlement of these new countries that some such reasonable rule should be adopted. I refer also to Sir Robert Phillimore's work, the second edition, volume 1, pages 277 and 279, where he lays it down in the same very clear and unmistakeable terms to which I have just referred.

Those are the propositions of law for which we contend ;

[22 July,
1884.]

and now to apply them.

SIXTH DAY.

Tuesday, 22nd July, 1884.

Mr. ROBINSON.—What we do contend, my Lord is this. I am anticipating my argument there, because I wish first to try and settle the construction of the charter as to what the word “granted” meant ; but what we do contend is that the English, beyond all question, had obtained Hudson's Bay and whatever goes under the construction of international law with that discovery. They had discovered Hudson's Bay ; they had taken possession of a considerable portion of the coast. Whatever, according to the rule of international law they acquired by that discovery the English had.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—What was that ?

Mr. ROBINSON.—I cannot say.

The CHANCELLOR.—Then, when different nations are disputing about boundaries, they have recourse to abstract reasoning and certain principles and so on ; but to represent that as a rule of international law—and especially as a rule of international law which had any existence or was imagined by anybody at the time we have to consider in this enquiry—is surely a proposition which cannot be maintained. You might just as well go back to the time at which the Pope was supposed, by international law, to be able to give away whatever districts in the world he pleased. Those words “international law” are very misleading. There are certain principles generally accepted amongst nations ; there are particular reasons which have been constantly resorted to when disputes have taken place, about boundaries or otherwise, between nations, as the best available means of settling those disputes ; but to say that there is any general international law that gives to the first discoverer of the mouth of a river and a certain line of coast, as against all other nations, whether he occupies it or not, or without regard to what extent it is occupied or not, a right to all the country that is watered by any of the rivers that come in there, is a proposition which no amount of modern books will prove.

Mr. ROBINSON.—Well, I am not desirous for one moment of arguing this question at length, or expressing any opinion of my own. All that I can say is that I find it laid down in the clearest language in the book which my learned friend has referred to, and your Lordship will find that confirmed.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—We really cannot have the laws of the World made by gentlemen, however learned, who have published books within the last twenty or thirty years.

Mr. ROBINSON.—I do not desire to have the laws of the World made in that way.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—Can you find any such proposition in Chancellor Kent ?

Mr. ROBINSON.—No, I do not know that he was written a word on the subject.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—Or Wheaton ?

Mr. ROBINSON.—No, I do not think he has written upon it.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—These writers merely generalize from the reasoning which has been employed between particular nations and particular subjects.

Lord ABERDARE.—It must be borne in mind that Charles II. was utterly unaware of the enormous bearing of such a proposition as yours.

Mr. ROBINSON.—As all the persons were who took possession, or as all the powers were who took possession, of the new world at the time ; nevertheless the other grants were construed upon that footing.

The LORD CHANCELLOR.—It is quite certain that France never recognized any such idea, nor can I perceive that it was ever suggested on the part of the Hudson's Bay Company in the early stages. We first meet with it in the Selkirk grant of 1814.

Mr. ROBINSON.—You will find some grants by France very much upon the same principle, granting rivers, and the lands upon rivers, which were held to mean the same thing ; but at all events, I have in Sir Robert Phillimore's work, the last edition, first volume, page 277, and the previous edition at page 338——

Lord ABERDARE.—Are those the pages which were substantially read yesterday ?

[3 Aug.
1878.]ONTARIO-MANITOBA BOUNDARY CASE.

AWARD OF THE ARBITRATORS.

To all to whom these presents shall come :

The undersigned, having been appointed by the governments of Canada and Ontario as arbitrators to determine the northerly and westerly boundaries of the Province of Ontario, do hereby determine and decide the following are and shall be such boundaries ; that is to say :—

Commencing at a point on the southern shore of Hudson Bay, commonly called James' Bay, where a line produced due north from the head of Lake Temiscaming would strike the said south shore ; thence along the said south shore westerly to the mouth of the Albany River ; thence up the middle of the said Albany River and of the lakes thereon, to the source of the said river at the head of Lake St. Joseph ; thence, by the nearest line, to the easterly end of Lac Seul, being the head waters of the English River ; thence westerly, through the middle of Lac Seul and the said English River, to a point where the same will be intersected by a true meridional line drawn northerly from the International Monument placed to mark the most northwesterly angle of the Lake of the Woods by the recent Boundary Commission ; and thence due south, following the said meridional line, to the said International Monument ; thence southerly and easterly, following upon the international boundary line between the British possessions and the United States of America, into Lake Superior.

But if a true meridional line drawn northerly from the said international boundary at the said most north-westerly angle of the Lake of the Woods shall be found to pass to the west of where the English River empties into the Winnipeg River, then, and in such case, the northerly boundary of Ontario shall continue down the middle of the said English River to where the same empties into the Winnipeg River, and shall continue thence, on a line drawn due west from the confluence of the said English River with the said Winnipeg River, until the same will intersect the meridian above described ; and thence due south, following the said meridional line, to the said International Monument ; thence southerly and easterly, following upon the international boundary line between the British possessions and the United States of America, into Lake Superior.

Given under our hands, at Ottawa, in the Province of Ontario, this third day of August, eighteen hundred and seventy-eight.

ROBT. A. HARRISON.
EDWD. THORNTON.
F. HINCKS.

Signed and published in the presence of—

E. C. MONK.
THOMAS HODGINS.

[11 Aug.
1884.]ONTARIO-MANITOBA BOUNDARY CASE.

IMPERIAL ORDER IN COUNCIL, 11TH AUGUST, 1884, EMBODYING HER MAJESTY'S DECISION ON THE REPORT FROM THE JUDICIAL COMMITTEE
OF HER PRIVY COUNCIL, DATED 22ND JULY, 1884.

At the Court, at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, the 11th day of August, 1884.

Present :

THE QUEEN'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY.
HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES.

LORD PRESIDENT.	EARL OF NORTHBROOK.
LORD STEWARD.	Sir T. ERSKINE MAY.
Earl GRANVILLE.	Sir A. COOPER KEY.

WHEREAS there was this day read at the Board a Report from the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, dated the 22nd of July last past, in the words following, viz. :—

“Your Majesty having been pleased by your Order in Council of the 26th June, 1884, to refer unto this Committee the humble petition of Oliver Mowat, Your Majesty's Attorney-General for the Province of Ontario, as representing that Province, and of James Andrews Miller, Your Majesty's Attorney-General for the Province of Manitoba, as representing that Province, in the matter of the boundary between the Provinces of Ontario and Manitoba, in the Dominion of Canada, between the Province of Ontario of the one part and the Province of Manitoba of the other part, setting forth that a question has arisen, and is in dispute, between the Provinces of Ontario and Manitoba, respecting the western boundary of the Province of Ontario, and it has been agreed between those Provinces to submit such question to Your Majesty in Council for determination ; the following Special Case has accordingly been agreed upon between the petitioners as representing the two Provinces aforesaid
:—

“ 'SPECIAL CASE.

“ 'The Province of Ontario claims that the western boundary of that Province is either (1) the meridian of the most north-westerly angle

p. 2149

of the Lake of the Woods, as described in a certain Award made on the 3rd August, 1878, by the Honourable Chief Justice Harrison, Sir Edward Thronton [sic], and Sir Francis Hincks, or (2) is a line west of that point.

“ The Province of Manitoba claims that the boundary between that Province and the Province of Ontario is (1) the meridian of the confluence of the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, or (2) is that portion of the height of land dividing the waters which flow into Hudson's Bay from those which empty into the valley of the Great Lakes, and lying to the west of the said meridian line.

“ It has been agreed to refer the matter to the Judicial Committee of Her Majesty's Privy Council, and an Appendix has been prepared containing the materials agreed to be submitted with this Case for the adjudication of the dispute ; each and every of the particulars in the said Appendix is submitted quantum valeat, and not otherwise.

“ In addition to the particulars set forth in the Appendix, any historical or other matter may be adduced which, in the opinion of either party, may be of importance to the contention of such party, and (subject to any rule or direction of the Judicial Committee in that behalf) such additional matter is to be printed as a separate Appendix by the party adducing the same, and copies are to be furnished at least ten days before the argument.

“ The book known as the Book of Arbitration Documents may be referred to in the argument for the purpose of shewing in part what materials were before the Arbitrators.

“ It is agreed that in the discussion before the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council reference may be made to any evidence of which judicial notice may be taken, or which (having regard to the nature of the case and the parties to it) the Privy Council may think material and proper to be considered, whether the same is or is not contained in the printed papers.

“ The questions submitting to the Privy Council are the following : —

“ '(1) Whether the Award is or is not, under all the circumstances, binding ?

“ '(2) In case the Award is held not to settle the boundary in question, then what, on the evidence, is the true boundary between the said Provinces ?

“ '(3) Whether, in case legislation is needed to make the decision on this case binding or effectual, Acts passed by the Parliament of Canada and the Provincial Legislatures of Ontario and Manitoba in connection with the Imperial Act 34 and 35 Vict., cap. 28, or otherwise, will be sufficient, or whether a new Imperial Act for the purpose will be necessary.

p. 2150

“ 'O. MOWAT,

“ 'Attorney-General of Ontario.

“ 'JAMES A. MILLER,

“ 'Attorney-General of Manitoba.'

“And humbly praying that Your Majesty in Council will be pleased to take the said Special Case into consideration, and that the said Special Case may be referred by Your Majesty to the Lords of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council to report thereon to Your Majesty at the Board, and that such Order may be made thereupon as to Your Majesty shall seem meet. The Lords of the Committee, in obedience to Your Majesty's said Order of Reference, have taken the said humble Petition and Special Case into consideration, and having heard counsel for the Province of Ontario, and also for the Province of Manitoba, their Lordships do this day agree humbly to report to Your Majesty as their opinion :—

“ 1. That legislation by the Dominion of Canada, as well as by the Province of Ontario, was necessary to give binding effect as against the Dominion and the Province to the Award of the 3rd August, 1878, and that, as no such legislation has taken place, the Award is not binding.

“ 2. That, nevertheless, their Lordships find so much of the boundary lines laid down by that Award as relate to the territory now in dispute between the Province of Ontario and the Province of Manitoba to be substantially correct and in accordance with the conclusions which their Lordships have drawn from the evidence laid before them.

“3. That, upon the evidence, their Lordships find the true boundary between the western part of the Province of Ontario and the south-eastern part of the Province of Manitoba to be so much of a line drawn to the Lake of the Woods, through the waters eastward of that lake and west of Long Lake, which divide British North America from the territory of the United States, and thence through the Lake of the Woods to the most north-western point of that lake, as runs northward from the United States boundary, and from the most north-western point of the Lake of the Woods a line drawn due north until it strikes the middle line of the course of the river discharging the waters of the lake called Lake Seul, or the Lonely Lake, whether above or below its confluence with the stream flowing from the Lake of the Woods towards Lake Winnipeg, and their Lordships find the true boundary between the same two Provinces to the north of Ontario and to the south of Manitoba, proceeding eastward from the point at which the beforementioned line strikes the middle line of the course of the river last aforesaid, to be along the middle line of the course of the same river (whether called by the name of the English River or, as to the part below the confluence, by the name of the River Winnipeg) up to Lake Seul, or the Lonely Lake, and thence along the middle line of Lake Seul, or the Lonely Lake, to the head of that lake, and thence by a straight line to the nearest point of the middle line of the waters of Lake St. Joseph, and thence along that middle line until it reaches the foot or outlet of that lake, and thence along the middle line of the river by which the waters of Lake St. Joseph discharge themselves, until it reaches a line drawn due north from the confluence of the rivers Mississippi and Ohio which forms the boundary eastward of the Province of Manitoba.

p. 2151

“ 4. That without expressing an opinion as to the sufficiency or otherwise of concurrent legislation of the Provinces of Ontario and Manitoba, and of the Dominion of Canada (if such legislation should take place), their Lordships think it desirable and most expedient that an Imperial Act of Parliament should be passed to make this decision binding and effectual.”

Her Majesty, having taken the said Report into consideration, was pleased by and with the advice of Her Privy Council to approve thereof, and to order, as it is hereby ordered, that the same be punctually observed, obeyed and carried into execution. Whereof the Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada, the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario, the Lieutenant Governor of the Province of Manitoba, and all other persons whom it may concern, are to take notice and govern themselves accordingly.

THE EXTENT OF THE PUBLIC RIGHT OF FISHERY.

No. 911.

[1891.]

EXTRACTS FROM CASES. 1670—1891.

EXTRACTS FROM SMITH v. ANDREWS.
(1891) 2 Ch. D. 678, 692, 693.

NORTH J. The Plaintiff's title having been thus challenged she has thought it necessary or desirable to prove it from the earliest times. I do not quite understand why this course had been adopted. It would certainly have been necessary if that portion of the Thames now in question had been affected by the ebb and flow of the tide as well as been navigable, for then the bed or soil of the river would have been in the Crown and the right of fishing in the public unless the Plaintiff could have made out a valid title to the fishery based upon some grant by the Crown antecedent to Magna Carta. But it is not suggested in this action that the Thames, in which we know that in Lord Hale's time long before Teddington Lock was built the tide was not felt above Kingston, was ever tidal at the part now in question

[1780.]

EXTRACTS FROM THE KING v. SMITH.
[1780] 2 Douglas 441, 444.

. . . . The case was argued by Erskine for the prosecution and Hunter for the Defendants. . . .

Hunter insisted . . . the sea did not properly flow above London Bridge. The tide beyond that limit was occasioned by the pressure and accumulation backwards of the river water. Therefore the soil there did not belong to the Crown. . . .

Lord Mansfield told Erskine it was unnecessary for him to reply. His Lordship said the distinction between rivers navigable and not navigable, and those where the sea does or does not ebb and flow was very ancient but that what Hunter contended for, viz. a distinction between the case of the tide occasioned by the flux of sea water, or by the pressure backwards of the fresh water of a river, seemed to be entirely new, and that there were no facts set forth in the case which let in the consideration of that distinction. That the case did not state whether the water when the tide rises at Richmond is fresh or salt, but that it rather took it for granted that it is salt, describing the Thames generally as a navigable river.

[1670.]

p. 2153

LORD FITZWALTER'S CASE.

1 mod. 105.

A trial at Bar concerning the river of Wall-Fleet : the question was whether the Defendant had not the right of fishing there exclusive of all others.

HALE C.J. In case of a private river the lord's having the soil is good evidence to prove that he hath the right of fishing and it puts the proof upon them that claim liberam piscariam. But in case of a river that flows and reflows, and is an arm of the sea, there, prima facie, it is common to all : and if any will appropriate a privilege to himself, the proof lieth on his side ; for in case of an action of trespass brought for fishing there it is prima facie a good justification to say that the locus in quo is brachium maris in quo unusquisque subjectus dom. Regis habet et habere debet liberam piscariam. In the River Severn there are particular restraints as gurgites etc., but the soil doth belong to the lords on either side : and a special sort of fishing belongs to them likewise ; but the common sort of fishing is common to all. The soil of the River of Thames is in the King ; and the Lord Mayor is conservator of the river, and it is common to all fishermen : and therefore there is no such contradiction bewixt [sic] the soil being in one and yet the river being common for all fishers, etc.

[1862.]

EXTRACT FROM MALCOMSON v. O'DEA.

[1862] 10 H.L.C. 593.

Mr. Justice Willes delivered the unanimous opinion of the Judges.

. . . Some discussion took place during the argument as to the proper name of such a fishery, whether it ought not to have been called in the pleadings (following Lord Blackstone) a “free” instead of a “several” fishery. This is more of a confusion which the ambiguous use of the word “free” has occasioned from a period as early as that of the Year Book of 7 H. 7 P. f o. 13 down to the case of Hoford v. Bailey, 13 Q.B. Rep. 426, where it was clearly shown that the only substantial distinction is between an exclusive right of fishery usually called “several” sometimes “free” (used as in free warren) and a right in common with others usually called “common of fishery” sometimes “free” (used as in free port).

[1882.]

EXTRACT FROM PEARCE v. SCOTCHER.

CASE STATED BY JUSTICES FOR DENBIGH UNDER 20 & 21 VIC. CAP. 43.

1. . . . A complaint was heard upon an information preferred by a river watcher against the Defendant charging that he at the Parish of Ruabon by angling unlawfully and wilfully did attempt to take certain fish called salmon, then being found in a stream of water there known as the River Dee, wherein Arthur Mostyn Owen and others there had a private right of fishery,. . . . the justices dismissed the information

p. 2154

5. The River above Eibistock Weir (including the place mentioned in the information) is not tidal nor capable of being navigated except by small pleasure boats or fishing boats called corraclles, or barges carrying very light weights ;

5A. For the purposes of this case, but not otherwise, it was to be taken as a fact admitted by both parties that the River Dee at the place where the respondent fished is a public navigable river and highway for the public to pass and repass in corraclles and such light craft as are suitable for such navigation.

10. It was contended on the part of the respondent that the fishing at this place belonged to the public,

11. It was contended on the part of the appellant that, as the Dee at this spot is not a tidal river, the right of fishery necessarily belonged to the owner of land over which the river ran,

GROVE, J. I entertain no doubt in this case. It is determined by authority. The cases cited by Mr. Matthews are all uniform and consistent with the rule laid down in Hale de Jure Maris, and by Sir John Davis in The Banne.* Mr. M'Intyre's argument amounts to this,—It being conceded that the public have enjoyed the right of navigating this river at the spot in question, and as navigation is some evidence of ownership of the soil, the right to fish follows. But, to sustain his argument, he must go further, and shew not only that the public have the right stated in par. 5A. of the case, but also that they have a right to take fish from the river at a point where it ceases to be tidal. The cases of Reg. v. Burrow† and Bristow v. Cormican,‡ as explained by Mr. Matthews, do not in reality conflict with the strong current of decisions. The question is not whether the river Dee at the spot in question is more or less navigable, but whether the spot at which the respondent claims the right to fish is within the flow and reflow of the tide. I think it is a perfectly clear case, and that the appeal must be allowed.

HUDDLESTON, B. I also am of opinion that the justices were bound to convict. The whole case is disposed of when you read paragraphs 5 and 5A of the statement. The distinction is clear upon the whole current of authorities in this country and in Ireland, that, where a river is navigable and tidal, the public have a right to fish therein as well as to navigate it ; but that, where it is navigable but not tidal, no such right exists.

Judgment for the Appellant.

* Davis 55

† 34 J.P. 53.

‡ 10 Ir. Rep. C.L. 398.

No. 912.

EXTRACT FROM VALIN'S NOUVEAU
COMMENTAIRE [1766] SUR L'ORDONNANCE DE LA
MARINE DU MOIS D'AOÛT 1681

[1766.]

VOL. II. 691.

LIV. V TIT 1. ARTICLE I.

DECLARONS LA PÊCHE DE LA MER LIBRE ET COMMUNE À TOUS NOS
SUJETS, AUXQUELS NOUS PERMETTONS DE LA FAIRE, TANT EN
PLEINE MER QUE SUR LES GREVES AVEC LES FILETS ET ENGIS
PERMIS PAR LA PRÉSENTE ORDONNANCE.

La permission de faire la pêche, tant sur les groves qu'en pleine mer, suppose nécessairement dans celui qui la donne, le pouvoir de la defendre, en vertu de son droit de propriété et domanial sur les memes greves et sur la mer qui vient y briser ses flots.

Il est de principe en effet, comme on l'a montré sur l'article 26 du titre des naufrages, que ce qui n'est à personne en particulier, mais appartient à la République, c'est-à-dire à la communauté d' un Etat souverain, est dévolu de plein droit, au Prince, dans un Etat monarchique comme étant le chef de la nation, et comme réunissant à ce titre, en sa personne, tous les droits communs à la nation, du nombre desquels est le domaine de la mer et de toutes les côtes et greves qui en sont baignées. Omne imperium in Caesarem translatum est omnisque populi et plebis potestas in principium translata. Instil. lib 1° de jure naturali etc Tit 2 sed et quod.

Le Souverain pourroit donc s'en reserver l'usage et le droit d'y pêcher, ou le céder à qui bon le sembleroit, par preference à tous autres. Mais nos Rois toujours plus attentifs au bien général de leurs sujets qu'à leurs intérêts propres ; ou, si l'on veut, parce que le bien général des sujets fournit toujours au Souverain un ample dédommagement du sacrifice qu'il leur fait de ses droits particuliers : nos Rois, dis-je, se sont, dans tous les temps, fait une loi de laisser libre et commune à leurs sujets la peche de la mer ; et cette loi à été irrévocablement confirmée par le present article.

De sorte que tout ce qui peut goner cette liberté de la pêche soit sur les greves, soit en mer, est défavorable de sa nature, et ne doit par consequent être toléré qu'autant que ceux qui prétendent s'attribuer un droit de pêche exclusif, sont fondés en titres valables, ou en possession suffisante pour s'y faire maintenir.

Cependant en même temps que nos Rois ont dérogé à leur droit de souveraineté en cette partie, en laissant à leurs sujets la liberté de la pêche en mer et sur les greves, sans en exiger aucun tribut, ils se sont réservés le droit de veiller à la police de cette pêche, et par là de régler la manière de la faire, de prescrire les temps et les lieux où elle pourroit être pratiquée ou interdite ; enfin de déterminer la forme et la maille des filets et engins qui pourront y être employés.

p. 2156

Excepté ces pares et pêcheries, il est permis à quiconque de pêcher sur les greves de la mer, soit du poisson, soit du coquillage. . . .

Pour ce qui concerne la pêche dans les étangs et les rivières, au-dessus de l'endroit où le flux et reflux de la mer cesse de se faire sentir, il faut voir l'Ordonnance des Eaux et Forêts.

No. 913.

N

[1787.]

EXTRACT FROM HALE DE JURE MARIS CAP. IV.

In Hargrave's Tracts, pp. 10-14.

Concerning the King's interest in salt waters, the sea and its arms, and the soil thereof : and first, of the right of fishing there.

Thus much concerning fresh waters or inland rivers, which though they empty themselves mediately into the sea are not called arms of the sea, either in respect of the distance or smallness of them.

We come now to consider the sea and its arms : and first, concerning the sea itself.

The sea is either that which lies within the body of a County or without.

That arm or branch of the sea which lies within the fauces terrae, where a man may reasonable discern between shore and shore, is or at least may be within the body of a County and therefore within the jurisdiction of the Sheriff or Coroner. 8.E.2. Corone 399.

The part of the sea which lies not within the body of a County, is called the main sea or ocean.

The narrow sea, adjoining to the coast of England, is part of the wast and demesnes and dominions of the King of England, whether it lie within the body of any County or not.

p. 2157

This is abundantly proved by that learned treatise of master Selden called Mare Clausum ; and therefore I shall say nothing therein, but refer the reader thither.

In this sea the King of England hath a double right, viz a right of jurisdiction which he ordinarily exerciseth by his Admiral and a right of propriety or ownership. The latter is that which I shall meddle with.

The King's right of propriety or ownership in the sea and soil thereof is evidenced principally in these things that follow.

1st. The right of fishing in this sea and the creeks and arms thereof is originally lodged in the Crown, as the right of depasturing is originally lodged in the owner of the wast whereof he is Lord, or as the right of fishing belongs to him that is the owner of a private or inland river. I shall not give many instances of this because they are abundantly done to my hand in the book I formerly cited.

Pat. 23. E.1. m. 6. The King grants liberty to the Hollanders to fish in mari nostro prope Jernemuth.

Rot. Parliamenti 3 H. 5 pars 1 n 33. The King by proclamation made a general inhibition of fishing upon the coasts of Ireland to the prejudice of the English. Desired to be recalled, but was not.

Rot. Parl. 8. H. 5 n 6.

Item pry le commons, que come nostre seigneur le roy et ses nobles progeniteurs de tout temps ont estre seigneurs de le mere, et ore per le grace de dieu est si venus que nostre seigneur le roy est seigneur de costs de ambe parties de le mere d'ordeiner sur tous les estrangers passants permy le dit mere tiel imposural oeps nostre seigneur le roy apprendre que a luy semble reasonable pur le salve gard del dit mere.

Responsio, "Le Roy s'avisera."

But though the King is the owner of this great wast and as a consequent of his propriety hath the primary right of fishing in the sea and the creekes and armes thereof ; yet the common people of England have regularly a liberty of fishing in the sea or creekes or armes thereof, as a publick common of piscary, and may not without injury to their right be restrained of it unless in such places creeks or navigable rivers, where either the King or some particular subject hath gained a propriety exclusive of that common liberty.

Mich. 19. E. 3.B. R. Rot. 127 Lincoln. The commonalty of Grimsby impleaded the fishermen of Ole, which is within five miles of Grimsby, for lading and unlading their fish and other victuals at Ole ;

Custuma non soluta, quae est debita dictae villae Grimsby juxta cartas regis contra prohibitionem regis.

The Defendants plead,

Quod ipsi sunt libeni tenentes in hamletto de Thrusco, qui est infra praecinctum villae de Ole, et quod ipsi tanquam piscatores juxta costeram maris a tempore quo etc usi sunt piscari cum retibus et battellis suis, et pisces captos ad terram apud Thrusco et alibi in patria ibidem venditioni exponere, absque hoc quod

p. 2158

blada victualia bona aut mercimonia carcarunt aut discarcarunt aut venditioni exposuerunt ideo veniat jurata.

Vide statutum 2 E. 6. cap 6 5 El. cap. 5. Bracton lib. 2. cap. 12. Jus piscandi omnibus commune in portu et in fluminibus. It must be taken to be rivers that are arms of the sea, and primo intuitu ; for de facto there doth fall out in many ports and arms of the sea an exclusion of public fishing by prescription or custom.

IId. The next evidence of the King's right and propriety in the sea and the arms thereof is his right of propriety to

The shore ; and

The maritima incrementa.

(1) The shore is that ground that is between the ordinary high-water and low-water mark. This doth prima facie and of common right belong to the King, both in the shore of the sea and the shore of the arms of the sea.

And herein there will be these things examinable.

1st. What shall be said the shore, or littus maris.

2nd. What shall be said an arm or creek of the sea.

3rd. What evidence there is of the King's propriety thereof.

*sic.

1. For the first of these it is certain that that which the sea overflows, either at high-spring tides or at extraordinary tides, comes not as to this purpose under the denomination of littus maris ; and consequently the King's title is not of that large extent, but only to land that is usually overflowed at ordinary tides. And so I have known it ruled in the Exchequer-chamber in the case of Vanhaesdanke on prosecution by information against Mr. Whiting about 12 Car 1. for lands in* in the County of Norfolk, and accordingly ruled 15 Car. B.R. Sir Edward Heron's Case and Pasch. 17 Car. 2. in Scaccario upon evidence between the Lady Wansford's Lessee and Stephens, in an ejectione firmae for the town of Cowes in the Isle of Wight. That therefore I call the shore, that is between the common high-water and low-water mark and no more.

2. For the second, that is called an arm of the sea where the sea flows and reflows, and so far only as the sea so flows and reflows ; so that the river of Thames above Kingston and the river of Severn above Tewkesbury etc. though there they are publick rivers, yet are not arms of the sea. But it seems that, although the water be fresh at high water, yet the denomination of an arm of the sea continues, if it flow and reflow as in Thames above the Bridge.

22 Ass. 93. Nota que chescum ew que flow et reflow est appel bras de mere cy tantavint come il flow.

3. For the third it is admitted that de jure communi between the highwater and low-water mark doth prima facie belong to the King, 5 Rep. 107.

p. 2159

Constable's Case. Dy. 326. Although it is true that such shore may and commonly is parcel of the manor adjacent, and so may be belonging to a subject, as shall be shewn, yet prima facie it is the King's.

And as the shore of the sea doth prima facie belong to the King, viz between the ordinary high-water and low-water mark, so the shore of an arm of the sea between the high-water and low-water mark belongs prima facie to the King, though it may also belong to a subject, as shall be shewn in the next chapter.

In the case between the town of Newcastle and the prior of Tinnmouth 20 E.1. which is afterwards, in the Second Part, chapter the 6th, more fully recited ; one of the charges against the prior is that he had built houses at Sheles upon the river of Tyne between the high-water and low-water mark. The prior pleads that it was built on his own soil.

Ubi dominus rex nullum habet solum, neque liberum tenementum, eo quod solum dictae domus et liberum tenementum extendit se usque ad filum aquae Tyne ultra terram suam siccam, et inter quod quidem filum aquae et terram praedictam domus praedicta habet piscariam suam liberam in longitudinem terrae ejusdem in eadem aqua.

The King's Attorney replied,

Quod qualescumque mansiunculae ibidem fuerunt temporibus praedecessorum prioris, idem prior, qui nunc est, tempore suo fieri fecit ibidem 26 domus super solum quod domino regi esse debet, eo quod fluxu et inundatione maris comprehenditur.

Afterwards judgment was given against the prior, but not in express termes for the soil, but implicitly. See the judgment afterwards in the Second Part, 6th chapter.

And consonant to this there was a decree Paschae 8 Car 1. in the Exchequer, entered in the book of Orders of that Term, Fol. 66 whereby it was decreed that the soil and ground lying between Wapping Wall and the river of Thames is parcel of the Port of London ; and therefore and for that the same lies between the high-water and low-water mark of the river of Thames, all the houses built between the Hermitage-wharfe unto Dickshore eastward and between the old wall of Wapping-Wall on the north and the river of Thames on the south, are decreed to the King ; and the same were accordingly by commission seized into the King's hands.

The title of the bill or information was laid, viz. 1st That the river of Thames flowed and reflowed. 2nd That consequently it was an arm of the sea. 3rd That it was the King's river. 4th That it was the King's port.—And upon all these it was concluded that the land between the high-water and low-water mark was the King's land, and accordingly decreed.

And this shall suffice for the King's right in the shore of the sea, or rivers that are arms of the sea, viz the land lying between the high-water and the low-water mark at ordinary tides.

No. 914.

[1847.]

EXTRACTS FROM ANGELL'S "THE RIGHT OF PROPERTY IN TIDE WATERS," 2nd Ed., BOSTON, 1847.

Ch. iii. p. 66.

Having shown that by the common law as expounded and settled in England, and as recognised and applied by the judicial tribunals in the United States, the right of property in tide waters and in the soil under their surface, is prima facie in the sovereign, and held subject to the right of use of the public or jus publicum ; in order to determine the exact limits of this sovereign and public right, it next becomes necessary to consider what, in legal acceptance is understood by the terms "shore", "high-water mark" and "navigable river".

* * * *

*p. 2152.

The rule as to ordinary high-water mark applies as well to the shore of an arm of the sea, or wherever the tide flows and reflows, as to the shore by the sea itself. And an arm of the sea is considered as extending as far into the interior of a country, as the water of fresh rivers is propelled backwards by the ingress and pressure of the tide. To the extent that such fresh rivers are backwardly propelled, they are denominated "navigable" rivers ; and to determine whether or not a river is "navigable", both in the common law and in the Admiralty acceptance of that term, regard must be had to the ebbing and flowing of the tide. In the Supreme Court of the United States, in a case which came up from the district Court of the Eastern district of Louisiana, the question was presented of admiralty jurisdiction in the river Mississippi, which the Court considered was to be determined by the ebbing and flowing of the tide ; and in determining the question, the ordinary state of the water, uninfluenced by any extraordinary freshets, was to be regarded. Peyroux v. Howard 7 Peters (U.S.) R. 324.

*p. 2415.

It was urged in * Rex v. Smith (2 Doug. R. 441), that the river Thames, above London Bridge, was not navigable, although it was flowing and reflowing, inasmuch as the tide beyond that limit was occasioned by the pressure and accumulation backward of the fresh water. But the distinction attempted was, by Lord Mansfield, pronounced new and inadmissible. In a case, in the British House of Lords, where the question was, what was to be considered "river" and what "sea" ; and where the direction was, that the thing to be looked to is the fact of the absence or prevalence of the fresh water, though strongly impregnated with salt ; the direction was held to be erroneous. * Horne v. Mackenzie 6 Clark & Finn

p. 2161

R. 628. The Supreme Court of the United States, referring to the above case of Rex v. Smith, have decided that although the current in the river Mississippi at New Orleans, may be so strong as not to be turned backwards by the tide ; yet if the effect of the tide upon the current is so great as to occasion a regular rise and fall of the water, it might properly be said to be within the ebb and flow of the Tide. Peyroux v. Howard 7 Peters (U.S.) R. 324. The Colonial ordinance of Massachusetts of 1641, is applicable wherever the tide ebbs and flows, though it be fresh water thrown back by the influx of the sea. Lapish v. Bangor Bank 8 Greenl. (Me.) R. 85.

There is therefore an important distinction between the term “navigable” as applied to a river, in its technical sense, and in the common acceptance of it when so applied. In the case of the Royal Fishery of the river Banne in Ireland, Davies' R. 149 it was resolved “that there are two kinds of rivers, navigable and not navigable ; thus every navigable river, so high as the sea ebbs and flows in it, is a royal river and belongs to the King by virtue of his prerogative ; but in every other river, and in the fishery of such other river the tertendants on each side have an interest of common right ; the reason for which is, that so high as the sea ebbs and flows, it participates of the nature of the sea, and it is said to be a branch of the sea so far as it flows.”

Ch. v. p. 124.

Fishery in the sea and in the waters which are made to flow inland therefrom by its egress and influence, constituting as it does a great source of sustentation, has in all ages and in all Countries been deemed of such importance, that it has ever been regarded a privilege open and common to all persons. Selden in his Mare Clausum and Grotius, De Jure Gentium, have collected from the works of the learned of all civilised nations, as well philosophers, divines, and poets, as lawyers, to prove that the waters of the sea are, conformably to the use which nature intended them, as common to all men as the air which blows over them. The obvious justice that fishery in such waters should be free open and common to every one, has made it a part of the civil law and of the common law. Jus piscandi, says the former, omnibus commune est in portu fluminibusque. (Just. I 2 § 1.) The civil law on the subject, is the customary law of France, and is recognised and expressly confirmed, by the ordinance of Louis XIV, which thus declares, (47)—“We declare the fishing in the sea to be common to all our subjects, whom we allow to fish, as well in the high sea, as upon the shore, with the nets and engines specified in this ordinance.” The civil code of Louisiana declares, that navigable rivers, sea ports, roads, harbours, etc., are among things public, or among things the use of which is allowed to all the members of the nation ; and that hence it follows that every man has a right freely to fish in the rivers, ports, roads and harbours. (Civil code of Louisiana Fisheries, Art. 6.)

p. 2162

By the common law (though the right of fishery is subservient in a measure to the right of navigation) it has ever been well settled that no member of the community can be excluded from an equal and fair participation of the benefit afforded by tide waters of fishing therein, so long as it remains unrelinquished or not curtailed by public authority, or so long as no particular and exclusive right has been acquired by an individual by prescription, or by the inhabitants of a place, by custom. In England, although the King, says Lord Hale, “has the primary right of fishing in the sea, and the creeks and arms thereof ; yet the common people of England have regularly a liberty of fishing in the sea, or the creeks and arms thereof, as a public common of piscary, and may not without injury to their right, be restrained in the exercise of it, unless in such places, creeks or navigable rivers, where either the King or some particular subject has acquired a property exclusive of this common liberty.” The doctrine as thus laid down is expressly recognised in Carter v. Murcot, 4 Burr. R. 2162, in which it was asserted by Lord Mansfield, that a man may have an exclusive privilege of fishing in an arm of the sea ; but such right is not to be presumed, it must be proved. In the same case, Yates J. observed, that he knew a case to fail wherein an exclusive right was claimed, because no prescription was proved, and in that case it was determined, that the right of fishing in the salt water was common to all. The case of the Mayor and Commonalty of Oxford v. Richardson, 4 T.R. 437, in the King's Bench and afterwards in the Exchequer Chamber was determined wholly on the ground that every subject, prima facie, has a right to fish in an arm of the sea.

[1888.]

EXTRACTS FROM MOORE AND HALL ON FORESHORES. 1888
(3RD EDITION.)

Now, as we have already attributed the absolute ownership of the sea and sea-shore to the King, ab origine, it might be thought that the above perquisites are absolutely his own, and grantable exclusively to any one of his subjects. But according to the acknowledged law of the land, although the King is owner of this great waste, yet the common people of England have regularly a liberty of fishing in the sea, and creeks and arms thereof, and in navigable rivers within the tides, as a public common of piscary.

This public or general right of fishing in the sea, claimed by the subject, is a beneficial privilege enjoyed by British subjects, time out of mind. Whether, in fact, it was originally a public grant from the King, or whether it was a reservation by the people of such right, when they vested the rest of the property of the sea in him or whether it be one of those natural and necessary rights which, like the air we breathe, has ever been free and unquestioned in enjoyment, is immaterial ; for the conclusion is the same ; viz. that such right of fishing has immemorially belonged to, and been enjoyed by the public, and that, in point of title, it is admitted to be held and enjoyed by the common right i.e. by the common law, and custom of the Realm.

The public right, or common of piscary, claimed and allowed by the common law to the people of England in the sea, extends, not only over the open sea, but over all bays, creeks, ports, havens, arms of the sea, and tide-rivers, up to the reach of the tide, and also, as it would seem, over and upon the sea-shore itself, for such kinds of fish as are usually caught upon the rocks, and sands of the coast. But in some cases, statute law has set bounds to the exercise of this right., in respect of seasons, particular kinds of fish, and manner of fishing. There are also other excepted case s ; viz. where private individuals or Corporate bodies claim and enjoy a separate fishery, in some particular places, in derogation and exclusion of the general right.

[1903.]

EXTRACTS FROM MOORE ON FISHERIES (1903), Ch.
XIX.

In tidal waters, estuaries, and arms of the sea below the high water mark of ordinary tides situate within the limit of the kingdom, as fixed by the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878, the public, as subjects of the realm, have the right to fish to the exclusion of the subjects of all foreign powers, except in such parts of those tidal waters as have been legally appropriated as private fisheries. In such parts, so legally appropriated and granted to a subject, no public right exists, or can exist, and can be acquired by the public by user, however long existing ; and such parts being put in defence as against the public are in the same condition as regards any public right of fishing as the non-tidal waters.

The limit seawards of the public right exclusive of subjects of foreign states is the limit of the kingdom as fixed by the Territorial Waters Jurisdiction Act, 1878 ; the limit landwards, where the public right ends and the private right of owners of non-tidal fisheries commences, has given rise to much discussion. In non-tidal waters, viz., in rivers and lakes, ponds, canals, and artificial watercourses, the public have not, and cannot acquire by any means, a right to fish as members of the public. The right of the public depends wholly upon the existence of tidal influence at the spot in question. Notwithstanding that the river or water may have been navigable and navigated from time immemorial, if it is not also tidal there can be no right in the public to fish, not even when it is proved that they have so fished from a period beyond the time of living memory.

There was formerly an erroneous impression that where a river was a public navigable river, although not tidal, the public had a prima facie right to fish. It was, in fact, contended that the navigability of the river imparted the public right, and that it was not necessary that the river should be also tidal. In one case, the claim of the public to fish was made as to the river Itchen, a non-tidal river made navigable by means of a canal system. The point has been definitely decided, and is summed up by Grove, B. and Huddleston B., thus : “The distinction is clear upon the whole current of authorities in this country and in Ireland that when a river is navigable and tidal the public have a right to fish there as well as to navigate it ;

but that when it is navigable but not tidal, no such right exists.”*

* Pearce v. Scotcher, [1882] 9 W.B.D. 162. See p. 2153.
p. 2165

It is therefore now settled law that the right of the public to fish depends upon the water being tidal and not comprised within the limits of any several fishery. This is founded on the theory that the soil of the sea and tidal water up to the flow of the ordinary tides, as settled by the case of Att.-Gen. v. Chambers,* is prima facie vested in the Crown, and the right of the public is co-extensive with and depends upon the limit of the prima facie right of the Crown to the soil covered by the tidal water.

No. 917.

N

EXTRACTS FROM ATTORNEY GENERAL FOR BRITISH COLUMBIA

v.

ATTORNEY GENERAL FOR CANADA.

[1914.]

1914 A.C. 153.

Appeal by special leave from a judgment of the Supreme Court (February 18, 1913) answering questions referred for hearing and consideration.

* * * *

VISCOUNT HALDANE L.C. The general principle is that fisheries are in their nature mere profits of the soil over which the water flows, and that the title to a fishery arises from the right to the solum. A fishery may of course be severed from the solum, and it then becomes a profit à prendre in alieno solo and an incorporeal hereditament. The severance may be effected by grant or by prescription, but it cannot be brought about by custom, for the origin of such a custom would be an unlawful act. But apart from the existence of such severance by grant or prescription the fishing rights go with the property in the solum.

The authorities treat this broad principle as being of general application. They do not regard it as restricted to inland or non-tidal waters. They recognize it as giving to the owners of lands on the foreshore or within an estuary or elsewhere where the tide flows and reflows a title to fish in the water over such lands, and this is equally the case whether the owner be the Crown or a private individual. But in the case of tidal waters (whether on the foreshore or in estuaries or tidal rivers) the exclusive character of the title is qualified by another and paramount title which is prima facie in the public. Lord Hale in his De Jure Maris in a passage cited with approval by Lord Blackburn in his judgment in *Neill v. Duke of Devonshire states the law as follows : “the right of fishing in this sea” (i.e. the narrow seas adjoining the coasts) “and the creeks and arms thereof, is originally lodged in the Crown, as the right of depasturing is originally lodged in the owner of the waste whereof he is lord, or as the right of fishing belongs to him that is the owner of a private or inland river . . . But though the King is the owner of this great waste, and as a consequence of his propriety hath the primary right of fishing in the sea and the creeks and arms thereof, yet the common people of England have regularly a liberty of fishing in the sea or creeks or arms thereof, as a public common of piscary, and may not without injury to their right be restrained of it, unless in such places, creeks, or navigable rivers where either the King or some particular subject hath gained a propriety exclusive of that common liberty.”

* * * *

Their Lordships are in entire agreement with him on his main proposition, namely, that the subjects of the Crown are entitled as of right not only to navigate but to fish in the high seas and tidal waters alike. The legal character of this right is not easy to define. It is probably a right enjoyed so far as the high seas are concerned by common practice from time immemorial, and it was probably in very early times extended by the subject without challenge to the foreshore and tidal waters which were continuous with the ocean, if, indeed, it did not in fact first take rise in them.

* * * *

These considerations enable their Lordships to answer the first question, which reads as follows:—

“Is it competent to the Legislature of British Columbia to authorize the Government of the Province to grant by way of lease, licence, or otherwise the exclusive right to fish in any or what part or parts of the waters within the railway belt—(a) as to such waters as are tidal, and (b) as to such waters which, though not tidal, are navigable ?”

The answer to this question must be in the negative. So far as the waters are tidal the right of fishing in them is a public right subject only to regulation by the Dominion Parliament. So far as the waters are not tidal they are matters of private property, and all these proprietary rights passed with the grant of the railway belt, and became thereby vested in the Crown in right of the Dominion. The question whether non-tidal waters are navigable or not has no bearing on the question. The fishing in navigable non-tidal waters is the subject of property, and according to English law must have an owner and cannot be vested in the public generally.

* * * *

The principles above enunciated suffice to answer the third question, which relates to the right of fishing in arms of the sea and the estuaries of rivers. The right to fish is in their Lordships' opinion a public right of the same character as that enjoyed by the public on the open seas.

* A.C. 135, 177.

PART XII.

DOCUMENTS SHOWING THE AREA OF "COAST"
RESERVED OR CONSIDERED UTILIZABLE FOR FISHERY PUPOSES ON THE EASTERN COASTS OF
BRITISH NORTH AMERICA AND ON THE COASTS OF GREAT BRITAIN.

[10 March,
1670.]

NEWFOUNDLAND.

No. 918.

C

10 Mar., 1670—ORDER OF HIS MAJESTY KING CHARLES II. IN COUNCIL.

[27 Jan.
1676.]

Vide Vol. IV, page 1759.

No. 919.

C

27 Jan., 1676—CHARTER TO THE WEST COUNTRY ADVENTURERS FOR THE FISHERY OF NEWFOUNDLAND.

Vide Vol. IV, page 1777.

[16 Feb.
1680.]

16 Feb., 1680—AMENDMENTS TO REGULATIONS BY LORDS OF TRADE AND PLANTATIONS.

[26 Feb.
1680.]

—
Vide Vol. IV, page 1791.

26 Feb., 1680—FURTHER CONSIDERATION OF NEWFOUNDLAND AFFAIRS BY LORDS OF TRADE AND PLANTATIONS.

[2nd June,
1786.]

—
Vide Vol. IV, page 1793.

2nd June, 1786—INSTRUCTIONS TO GOVERNOR OF NEWFOUNDLAND

ARTICLE 7.

—
Vide Vol. II, page 546.

[27 May,
1802.]

27th May, 1802—INSTRUCTIONS TO GOVERNOR OF NEWFOUNDLAND, ARTICLE 7, AND INSTRUCTIONS TO SUCCEEDING GOVERNORS OF NEWFOUNDLAND UP TO AND INCLUDING THOSE GIVEN VICE-ADMIRAL SIR CHARLES HAMILTON, 9th MAY, 1818.

—
Vide Vol. III, pages 607, 620, 624, 641, 677, 691, 692.

No. 924.

[1905.]

EXTRACT FROM REPORT OF AN OFFICIAL VISIT TO THE COAST OF LABRADOR BY THE GOVERNOR OF NEWFOUNDLAND, DURING
THE MONTH OF AUGUST, 1905.

“The conservation of the forests of this Island in the interest of the fishermen is so well recognized and understood that a three mile margin is preserved. for them all round the Island on all the Crown lands of the Colony.”

* Appendix to Journal of Assembly, Newfoundland, (1907), p. 355.

[8 Feby.,
1923.]

EXTRACT FROM LETTER FROM GEORGE E.
TURNER, DEPUTY MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE AND MINES (NEWFOUNDLAND), TO SIR PATRICK McGRATH.

“As to the reservation from License to cut timber over land lying within three miles of the seashore : there is no Section in the Crown Lands Act prohibiting the granting of timber on such land, but it has been the policy of succeeding Governments for many years not to grant Licenses to cut timber over lands so situate.”

* The information contained in this extract was furnished in answer to a query from the Department of Justice at Ottawa, and upon reference to the Attorney General of Newfoundland the latter stated he had no objection to its being used by the Dominion in this case.

THE FRENCH “SHORE” (NEWFOUNDLAND).No. 926.*EXTRACT FROM “LA GRANDE PECHE DE TERRE-NEUVE ET D'ISLANDE.”

ABBÉ. J. M. GROSSETÊTE, DOCTOR, &C. (RENNES : 1921).

CHAPTER II.

COUTUMES ET RÉGLEMENTATION.

Le Règlement de Saint-Malo pour la répartition des places.—Décrets et Ordonnances.—Nouvelle législation pour le placement. . . .

Les pêcheurs français étaient nombreux, jadis, sur les côtes de Terre-Neuve : il n'y avait pas moins de deux cents bateaux dans la seule partie orientale de l'île Les places appartenaient au premier occupant ; mais, dans la pratique, il se produisait de fréquentes contestations. Afin de couper court à des querelles et à des rixes, préjudiciables aux intérêts de tous, les armateurs de Saint-Malo, réunis en assemblée générale le 26 mars 1640, s'entendirent pour élaborer un règlement.

Le premier capitaine qui arrivait à l'anse du Croc, dans la baie du Petit-Maitre, avait droit à la meilleure place et devenait amiral de la pêche : en cette qualité, il était chargé de faire la police, d'arbitrer les différends et de juger les contestations. Pour obtenir ce titre et les prérogatives qui y étaient attachées, il devait inscrire, sur un tableau suspendu à un mât, son nom et celui du navire, le nombre de ses hommes, la date de son arrivée et le havre qu'il avait choisi. Ainsi faisaient, après lui, les autres capitaines. Les derniers venus se rendaient compte, immédiatement des places restées libres, et ne perdaient pas de temps en vaines recherches. Les échafauds et cabanes restaient, à la fin de la campagne, à la disposition de celui qui occuperait le même endroit l'année suivante.

Ce règlement qui s'est maintenu jusqu' à la Révolution, fut homologué par le parlement de Rennes, le 31 mars 1640. C'est le premier acte de police relatif à la pêche côtière de la morue. Les contraventions étaient punies d'une amende de 500 livres, au paiement de laquelle la cargaison et le navire lui-même pouvaient être affectés La paix revint parmi nos compatriotes. Mais bientôt arrivèrent dans cette région du Petit-Nord, où étaient confinés les Bretons, des pêcheurs qui refusèrent de se soumettre à un règlement fait par d'autres. Les désordres recommencèrent. Les armateurs et capitaines malouins firent appel à l'autorité de Louis XIV. contre ces intrus, dont la plupart étaient normands. Par un arrêt du Conseil, en date du 28 avril 1671, le roi étendit à tous ses sujets qui viendraient sur les côtes du Petit-Nord, le règlement du 26 mars 1640 et la décision du parlement de Rennes, qui lui donnait autorité. *

L'ordonnance de la Marine du mois d'août 1681, oeuvre de Colbert, codifia les prescriptions du règlement de Saint-Malo, et en généralisa l'application. Le premier capitaine arrivé sur les lieux de pêche conservait toutes ses prérogatives d'autrefois ; on lui retirait seulement le titre d'amiral. La situation et les avantages excitaient néanmoins les convoitises des pêcheurs, qui faisaient tout pour les acquérir. Pendant la traversée, les bateaux ne cherchaient pas à se distancer, ils voguaient de conserve et les plus rapides modéraient leur allure. Mais, quand elle arrivait à quelques lieues de Terre-Neuve, la flotte se disloquait et c'était à qui le premier inscrirait son nom au tableau. Si le vent était contraire, ou s'il venait à tomber, on mettait les chaloupes à la mer, et, à force de rames, on s'efforçait avant les autres. Il en résulta de nombreux sinistres, qu'il fallait conjurer.

Une nouvelle ordonnance du roi, rendue le 8 mars 1702, défendit aux capitaines d'envoyer des chaloupes avant d'avoir mouillé, et ce, à peine de mille livres d'amende pour la première infraction, et de peines corporelles en cas de récidive. L'ordonnance de 1721, pour supprimer radicalement les inconvénients et les dangers de cette course à l'inscription, réserva désormais au plus ancien capitaine les fonctions de l'amiral de la pêche. †

Longtemps déjà avant l'arrangement du 8 avril 1904, cette législation avait complètement disparu. Les places étaient tout simplement tirées au sort. Ce nouveau mode de répartition fut réglé d'abord par le décret du 15 pluviôse an XI—4 février 1803—revu en 1815 et 1821, puis par l'ordonnance du 28 avril 1842, que complétèrent les décrets des 2 et 22 mars 1852. Dans le principe tous les trois ans, plus tard tous les cinq ans, le 5 janvier, les armateurs intéressés se réunissaient à Saint-Servan, sous la présidence du chef du service de la Marine, pour procéder au tirage.

Les navires étaient divisés en trois séries : les bâtiments de 149 tonneaux et au-dessus, avec un équipage minimum de trente hommes ; ceux de 90 à 149 tonneaux, avec un équipage d'au moins vingt-cinq hommes ; les goélettes au-dessous de 90 tonneaux, dont l'équipage n'était pas inférieur à vingt hommes. La première série choisissait d'abord, puis la deuxième, et la troisième.

Les armateurs étaient obligés, la première année, sous peine d'amendes élevés, d'envoyer à Terre-Neuve le bateau annoncé ou un autre de la même série. Ils jouissaient des installations laissées par les prédécesseurs, mais ils devaient entretenir et remettre en bon état aux remplaçants les établissements de pêche, échafauds, cabanes, qui existaient déjà ou qu'ils avaient construits eux-mêmes. A la fin de la première année, ils pouvaient renoncer à la place que le sort leur avait attribuée. Tous les ans, il se faisait un tirage partiel entre les armateurs désireux d'occuper les havres abandonnés.*

* Ad. Bellet, La grande pêche de la morue, p. 50-52.

† E. Hervé, Le French-Shore, p. 24.

Les anses étaient ainsi complètement occupés. Certaines baies restaient "communes" ; des "défileurs" s'y installaient et faisaient parfois un riche butin.

Le capitaine, en possession de sa place, assignait aux membres de son équipage des fonctions en rapport avec leurs aptitudes. Les uns s'éloignaient chaque soir des côtes pour aller jeter au fond de la mer de longues lignes ou harouelles. D'autres, sur des embarcations plus grandes et plus solides, pêchaient avec des sennes : c'étaient d'immenses filets de cent à cent cinquante brasses de longueur, sur une largeur au centre de cinquante à cent pieds, et rétrécis aux extrémités. La senne était jetée autour d'une troupe de poissons et halée ensuite hors de la mer. Elle renfermait parfois de quarante à cinquante tonneaux de butin. . . .

La morue était rapportée chaque soir à l'échafaud, sorte de wharf ou plate-forme en planches, supportée par des poteaux, et s'avancant assez loin dans la mer pour que les embarcations pussent s'y décharger à toute heure de marée. On la décollait et on l'habillait, c'est-à-dire qu'on lui enlevait la tête et les viscères. †

Le poisson était ensuite tranché, salé et mis à sécher sur les galets, sur des branches, ou sur des claies appelées vignots. Il y restait étendu tout le jour à l'action de l'air et de la chaleur ; les manipulations duraient plus d'un mois, et l'on donnait à la morue jusqu'à dix SOLEILS, quotidiennement d'abord, puis à des intervalles de plus en plus éloignés. Ces dernières opérations étaient l'affaire des graviers, qui accomplissaient une besogne très dure et assez peu rémunérée. Ils devaient faire sécher la morue, et empêcher que la pluie ne la mouillât : on devine quels soins cela exigeait dans un pays aussi humide que Terre-Neuve. ‡

Il y a, dans tout ceci, un curieux, et d'ailleurs assez banal exemple des rapports de la loi et de la coutume. Les pêcheurs étaient, sur les côtes de Terre Neuve [sic], dans les conditions les plus particulières. Eloignés de la métropole, ils ne pouvaient être soumis aux mêmes réglemens et ordonnances que les autres Français. En fait, la législation ordinaire était insuffisante : à une situation spéciale il faut des lois spéciales.

Les marins ont commencé par prendre des mesures de sauvegarde ; le gouvernement n'a eu qu'à les enregistrer, en leur apportant une force nouvelle et les sanctions nécessaires.

Bientôt les lois sont tombées en désuétude : elles ne répondaient plus à leur but ou ne convenaient plus aux circonstances. Une nouvelle coutume est intervenue qui n'a pas

* E. Hervé, le French-Shore, p. 25.

† Ad. Bellet, op. cit., p. 68, et suiv.

‡ Art. de M. Le Breton, Questions diplomatiques et coloniales, tome XV., pp. 411-428, 640-654, 712-720.

[Translation of No. 926.]

CHAPTER II.

CUSTOMS AND REGULATIONS.

St. Malo regulations for the distribution of places—Decrees and Ordinances —New legislation respecting location.

There was a time when the coasts of Newfoundland were frequented by a large number of French fishermen, and in the eastern part of the island as many as two hundred vessels were gathered. The places would belong to the first occupant, but this practice gave rise to frequent disputes. In order to put an end to quarrels and conflicts detrimental to all concerned, the ship-owners of St. Malo held a general meeting, on the 26th March, 1640, and agreed on the drafting of a regulation.

The first captain to arrive at the cove du Croc, in the bay of Petit-Maître was entitled to the best place and would become the “admiral” of the fishery ; as such, his duties consisted in maintaining order, adjusting disputes and determining contestations. This title was conferred to him, with the prerogatives attached to it, subject to the condition that he should inscribe, on a board nailed to a pole, his name and that of his vessel, the strength of his crew, the date of his arrival and the harbour he had chosen. As they came after him, the other captains would do the same thing. Thus, the late arrivals would immediately be informed of what places were available and no time was wasted in useless enquiries. At the end of the fishing season, the stages and huts remained at the disposal of the captain occupying the same place the ensuing year.

This regulation, which was kept in force up to the Revolution, was confirmed by the Rennes Parliament on 31st March, 1640 ; this was the first measure regulating coast cod fishery. The offenders were liable to a fine of 500 livres for the payment of which both cargo and vessel could be assigned. Peace was restored among our nationals. But there soon came in that district of Petit-Nord fishermen who refused to submit to a regulation passed by others, and further disturbances occurred. The ship-owners and captains of St. Malo appealed to the authority of Louis XIV. against the intruders, most of whom were from Normandy. Under a decree of the Council, dated 28th April, 1671, the King extended to all those of his subjects going to the shores of Petit-Nord the regulation of 26th March, 1640, as well as the ordinance of the Rennes Parliament ratifying the same.*

The Ordinance of the Marine of August, 1681, drafted by Colbert, consolidated the provisions of the St. Malo regulation and made them of a general application. The first captain to arrive retained all his former prerogatives with the exception that the title of admiral of the fishery was withdrawn.

* Ad. Bellet, La grande pêche de la morue, pp. 50-52.

The situation and the advantages attached to it were coveted by the fishermen who would do everything in their power towards securing them. During the voyage across there was no attempt, between the vessels, to outdistance one another they would keep in company and the swifter crafts slackened their speed. But when only a few leagues away from Newfoundland, the whole fleet would disperse and every vessel would rush to the shore in order to secure the first inscription on the board. When the wind was foul or became calm, boats were lowered and the men, tugging at the oar, would vie with each other in an effort to land ahead of others. Such practice resulted in frequent accidents and called for preventive measures.

A new ordinance by the King was passed on the 8th of March, 1702, whereby no captain was to send out boats until his vessel had reached the anchoring-place, and this under pain of a fine of one thousand livres for a first offence, and of corporal punishment for subsequent offences. With a view to put definitely to an end disorders and risks occasioned through that race for inscription, the ordinance of 1721 provided that, from then on, the duties of the admiral of fishery would be assigned to the oldest among the captains.*

This last provision was repealed a considerable time before the agreement of the 9th of April, 1804, was passed, and places were simply distributed by means of a drawing. The new system of distribution was first regulated by the decree of 15th Pluviôse year XI.—4th February, 1803—revised in 1815 and 1821, and then by the ordinance of 28th April, 1842, which was perfected by the decrees of the 2nd and 22nd March, 1852. Originally every three years, and subsequently every five years, on the 5th January, the ship-owners concerned met at Saint-Servan, under the presidency of the head of the Department of Marine, and proceeded with the drawing.

Vessels were classified in three series : vessels of 149 tons and over, with a minimum crew of thirty men vessels of 90 to 149 tons, with a crew of at least twenty five men and schooners below 90 tons with a crew of not less than twenty men. Vessels of the first series had the preference, followed by those of the second and third series.

For the first year ship-owners were held, under heavy penalties, to send to Newfoundland the vessel mentioned at the drawing or another belonging to the same series. They enjoyed the use of plants left by those who had preceded them, but they were bound to keep in repair and hand over to their successors the fishery establishments, stages, huts which already existed or which they had erected themselves. At the end of the first they could relinquish the place allotted to them. Every year a special drawing was held between the shipowners wishing to occupy harbours that had been abandoned.†

In this manner the bays were all occupied some remained “common,” and were taken up by “trawlers” (défileurs) whose operations sometimes resulted in a substantial catch.

Once in possession of his station, the captain would assign the members of his crew to whatever task their respective qualifications called for. Some were sent every evening at some distance off shore where they would cast long lines or trawls (harouelle). Others, on larger and stouter crafts, fished with seines. The latter were large-sized nets measuring from one hundred to one hundred fifty fathoms in length by fifty to a hundred feet in width, and tapering towards the ends. The seine was cast so as to encircle a school of fish and then drawn out of the sea, the catch totalling at times as much as forty or fifty hundredweights. . . .

* E. Hervé, Le French-Shore, p. 24.

† E. Hervé Le French-Shore, p. 25.

Every evening the catch was brought to the stage, a sort of board wharf or platform, built on stakes, and projecting far enough into the sea to allow the unloading of the boats at both high and low tides. There the fish was “headed”-and “dressed” or cleaned.*

The cod fish were then split, salted and put to dry on the pebbles, on boughs or on hurdles called “flakes.” It remained there all day long exposed to the action of the sun and heat ; such process of handling extended over a whole month, and the cod was given as many as ten “sun exposures,” daily at first and then at greater intervals. The final operations were assigned to the “beach workers” (graviers), whose task was a rather arduous one and poorly remunerated. Their duties consisted in drying cod and protecting it against any damage from rain. One may imagine what difficulties this entailed in a wet country like Newfoundland.¹

The foregoing remarks afford a peculiar, and yet fairly common, instance of the relationship that exists between custom and legislation. The fishermen, on the shores of Newfoundland, laboured under most exceptional conditions. Being at a great distance from the mother-country, they could not be made subject to the same legislation and ordinances as the other French people. As a matter of fact, legislation of a general character was inadequate, and special conditions called for special enactments. The mariners undertook themselves to provide for their safety, and the government merely confirmed such steps as had been taken, giving them force of law and supplementing them with penalties. That legislation soon became obsolete, no longer serving its purpose or suitable to new conditions. New practices sprung up that soon became the law.

* Ad. Bellet, op. cit., pp. 68, et ssqq.

[1681.]

EXTRACT FROM THE ORDONNANCE DE LA
MARINE DU MOIS D'AOUT, 1681.TITRE VI.—De la Pêche des Molues.

- ART. 1. Quand nos sujets iront faire la pêche des molues aux côtes de l'île de Terre-Neuve, le premier qui arrivera ou enverra sa chaloupe au hâvre appelé du Petit-Maître, aura le choix et prendra l'étendue du galet qui lui sera nécessaire et mettra au lieu dit l'Echafaud du Croc, une affiche signée de lui, contenant le jour de son arrivée et le nom du hâvre qu'il aura choisi.
2. Tous les maîtres qui arriveront ensuite seront tenus d'aller ou envoyer successivement l'Echafaud du Croc, et d'écrire sur la même affiche le jour de leur arrivée, le nombre de leurs matelots, et les hâvres ou galets qu'ils auront choisis à proportion de la grandeur de leur vaisseau et de leur équipage.
3. Le capitaine arrivé le premier fera garder l'affiche par un des hommes de son équipage, qu'il laissera sur le lieu jusqu'à ce que tous les maîtres y aient écrit leur déclaration, qui sera mise ensuite entre ses mains.
4. Faisons défenses à tous maîtres et mariniers de s'établir en aucuns hâvres, ou s'accommoder d'aucuns galets sans en faire leur déclaration en la forme ci-dessus, et de troubler aucuns maîtres dans le choix qu'ils auront fait, à peine de cinq cents livres d'amende.
5. Le premier de nos sujets qui arrivera aussi avec son vaisseau en la baie de Canada pour y faire la pêche des molues, sera le maître du galet pour y prendre la place qui lui sera nécessaire, même pour y marquer successivement à ceux qui viendront après lui, celles dont ils auront besoin, eu égard à la grandeur de leur vaisseau et au nombre de gens dont ils seront équipés.
6. Faisons défenses au gouverneur ou capitaine de la côte de puisle cap des Roziers jusqu'au cap d'Espoir, et à tous autres, sous peine de désobéissance de troubler le premier maître arrivant dans la baie, au choix et en la distribution des places sur le galet.
7. Faisons aussi défenses, sous peine de cinq cents livres d'amende, aux maîtres et équipages des vaisseaux qui arriveront tant aux côtes de Terre-Neuve qu'en la baie de Canada, de jeter le lest dans les hâvres, de s'emparer des sels et huiles qui s'y trouveront, et de rompre, transporter ou brûler les échafauds lesquels appartiendront aux maîtres qui auront fait choix des hâvres ou galets sur lesquels ils auront été laissés.

p. 2178

8. Leur défendons pareillement de s'emparer des chaloupes échouées sur le galet ou laissées dans la petite rivière de la baie de Molues, sans un pouvoir spécial des propriétaires des chaloupes, à peine d'en payer le prix, et de cinquante livres d'amende.

9. Si toutefois les propriétaires des chaloupes ne s'en servent ou n'en ont point disposé, ceux qui en auront besoin pourront, par la permission du capitaine le premier arrivé, s'en servir pour faire leur pêche, à condition d'en payer, à leur retour, les loyers aux propriétaires.

10. Le capitaine ou maître qui se saisira de quelques chaloupes, sera tenu de mettre entre les mains du maître qui lui en aura donné la permission, ou en son absence en celles du capitaine établi sur le galet voisin, un état contenant le nombre des chaloupes, avec sa soumission d'en payer le loyer, même de les remettre au propriétaire s'il arrive à la côte, et à tout autre ayant pouvoir de lui.

11. Sera aussi tenu, après sa pêche, de remettre en lieu de sûreté les chaloupes, et d'en tirer certificat du même capitaine s'il est sur le lieu, sinon d'en prendre attestation d'un autre étant encore à la côte.

12. Enjoignons au capitaine du premier navire arrivé aux côtes de Terre-Neuve ou dans la baie de Canada, de dresser procès verbal de toutes les contraventions aux articles ci-dessus, de le signer et faire signer par les principaux officiers de son équipage, et de le mettre, à son retour, entre les mains des juges de l'amirauté, pour y être pourvu.

13. Défendons à tous maîtres de navires faisant la pêche des molues sur le banc de Terre-Neuve ou dans la baie de Canada, de faire voile pendant la nuit, à peine de payer le dommage qu'ils pourroient causer en cas qu'ils abordent quelque vaisseau, quinze cents livres d'amende, et de punition corporelle s'il arrive perte d'homme dans l'abordage.

[Translation of No. 927.]

TITLE VI.—Cod Fishery.

Art. 1. When our subjects proceed to the coasts of the Island of Newfoundland to fish cod, the first one to arrive or to despatch a boat into the harbour called Petit-Maître, shall make election and take possession of such extent of beach as he may require, and shall post up, at the place called the Echafaud (Stage) du Croc, a paper, signed by him and setting forth the date of his arrival and the name of the harbour he shall have selected.

2. Every master to arrive afterwards shall be held to proceed or to send in successive order to the Echafaud du Croc, and to write on the said notice

p. 2179

the date of their arrival, the number of their crew and the harbours or beaches selected by them in proportion to the size of their vessel and crew.

3. The captain to arrive first shall cause the notice to be looked after by a man of his crew, who shall remain on the premises until such time as all the masters shall have written their declaration on the said notice which shall then be handed to him.

4. No master and mariner shall establish themselves in any harbour, or occupy any beach unless a declaration to that effect be made in the form hereinbefore provided for, nor shall disturb any master in the place of their choice, under the penalty of a fine of five hundred livres.

5. The first of our subjects to arrive with his vessel in the bay of Canada for cod fishing shall be the master of the beach there to take such place as he shall require, and likewise to apportion in order of succession to those who may come after him, the beaches they shall require, regard being had to the tonnage of their vessel and to the number of men they are equipped with.

6. The governor or captain of the coast, between Cape des Roziers and Cape d'Epoir, and all others are prohibited, on pain of disobedience, from disturbing the master arriving first in the bay, in the choice and distribution of stations on the beach.

7. Prohibitions are also made, under pain of a fine of five hundred livres, to the masters and crews of vessels arriving both on the shores of Newfoundland and in the bay of Canada, from throwing ballast in the harbours, from taking salts and oils that may be found there, and demolishing, carrying away or burning stages which shall belong to the masters who shall have made election of harbours or beaches in or on which said salts or oils may have been left.

8. Prohibitions are also made to them from taking possession of boats stranded on the beach or left in the small river of the bay of the Molues (Cod), unless specially authorized by the owners of the boats, under pain of paying the price of the same and of a fine of fifty livres.

9. Provided however, in the event of the boat owners not using or having disposed of the same, any person requiring the said boats, may with the permission of the captain arrived first, use the said boats for their fishery, subject to payment, on their return, of the price of rental to the owners.

10. The captain or master who shall take any boat, shall be held to deliver to the master authorizing him, or in the latter's absence to the captain established on the adjacent beach, a statement setting forth the number of boats taken with his promise to pay the rental thereof, and to return the same to the owner should he come to the coast, or to any other person authorized by him.

p. 2180

11. Shall also be held, upon his return, to lay the boats in a safe place, and to secure a certificate to that effect from the same captain, if on the premises, or else from another still present at the coast.

12. The captain of the vessel arriving first on the coasts of Newfoundland or in the Bay of Canada, is enjoined to draw up a report of any contraventions of the preceding articles, to sign or cause the same to be signed by the chief officers of his crew, and to deliver the same, on his return, to the admiralty judges, in order that they may be dealt with.

13. No master of vessels fishing cod on the bank of Newfoundland or in the bay of Canada shall set sail by night, under pain of such damages as might result from running foul of some vessel, and of a fine of, fifteen hundred livres, and of corporal punishment in case of loss of life through the collision.

(Nouveau Commentaire sur l' Ordonnance de la Marine du mois d' août 1681. par Valin. La Rochelle, 1760, pp. 715 & ssqq.)

[11 April,
1713.]

No. 928.

EXTRACTS FROM TREATIES BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE RELATING TO THE FISHERIES.

TREATY OF UTRECHT, 11 APRIL 1713.

XIII. The Island called Newfoundland, with the adjacent islands, shall, from this time forward, belong of right wholly to Great Britain ; and to that end the town and fortress of Placentia, and whatever other places in the said island, are in the possession of the French, shall be yielded and given up, within seven months from the exchange of the ratifications of this Treaty, or sooner, if possible, by the Most Christian King, to those who have a commission from the Queen of Great Britain for that purpose. Nor shall the Most Christian King, His Heirs and Successors, or any of their subjects, at any time hereafter lay claim to any right to the said island and islands, or to any part of it, or them. Moreover, it shall not be lawful for the subjects of France, to fortify any place in the said Island of Newfoundland, or to erect any buildings there, besides stages made of boards, and huts necessary and usual for drying of fish ; or to resort to the said island, beyond the time necessary for fishing and drying of fish. But it shall be allowed to the subjects of France, to catch fish, and to dry them on land, in that part only, and in no other besides that, of the said island of Newfoundland, which stretches from the place called Cape Bonavista, to the northern point of the said island, and from thence running down by the western side, reaches as far as the place called Point Riche. But the Island called Cape Breton, as also all others, both in the mouth of the river of St. Lawrence and in the Gulph of the same name, shall hereafter belong of right to the French ; and the Most Christian King shall have all manner of liberty to fortify any place or places there.

TREATY OF PARIS, 10 FEBRUARY, 1763.

V. The subjects of France shall have the liberty of fishing and drying, on a part of the coasts of the Island of Newfoundland, such as it is specified in Article XIII, of the Treaty of Utrecht ; which Article is renewed and confirmed by the present Treaty (except what relates to the Island of Cape Breton, as well as to the other islands and coasts in the mouth and in the Gulph of St. Lawrence). And His Britannic Majesty consents to leave to the subjects of the Most Christian King the liberty of fishing in the Gulph of St. Lawrence, on condition

* From "A Complete Collection of the Treaties and Conventions subsisting between Great Britain and Foreign Powers." I, pp. 237-265. By Lewis Hertslet, London, 1840.

p. 2182

that the subjects of France do not exercise the said fishery, but at the distance of three leagues from all the coasts belonging to Great Britain, as well those of the continent, as those of the islands situated in the said Gulph of St. Lawrence. And as to what relates to the fishery on the coasts of the Island of Cape Breton out of the said Gulph, the subjects of the Most Christian King shall not be permitted to exercise the said fishery, but at the distance of fifteen leagues from the coasts of the Island of Cape Breton ; and the fishery on the coasts of Nova Scotia or Acadia, and every where else out of the said Gulph, shall remain on the foot of former Treaties.

VI. The King of Great Britain cedes the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, in full right to His Most Christian Majesty, to serve as a shelter to the French fishermen ; and His said Most Christian Majesty engages not to fortify the said Islands ; to erect no buildings upon them, but merely for the convenience of the fishery ; and to keep upon them a guard of fifty men only for the police.

TREATY OF VERSAILLES, 3 SEPTEMBER, 1783.

IV. His Majesty the King of Great Britain is maintained in His right to the Island of Newfoundland, and to the adjacent Islands, as the whole were assured to Him by the Thirteenth Article of the Treaty of Utrecht ; excepting the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, which are ceded in full right, by the present Treaty to His Most Christian Majesty.

V. His Majesty the Most Christian King, in order to prevent the quarrels which have hitherto arisen between the two Nations of England and France, consents to renounce the right of fishing, which belongs to Him in virtue of the aforesaid Article of the Treaty of Utrecht, from Cape Bonavista to Cape St. John, situated on the eastern coast of Newfoundland, in fifty degrees North latitude ; and His Majesty the King of Great Britain consents on His part, that the fishery assigned to the subjects of His Most Christian Majesty, beginning at the said Cape St. John, passing to the north, and descending by the western coast of the Island of Newfoundland, shall extend to the place called Cape Raye, situated in forty-seven degrees, fifty minutes latitude. The French fishermen shall enjoy the fishery which is assigned to them by the present Article, as they had the right to enjoy that which was assigned to them by the Treaty of Utrecht.

VI. With regard to the fishery in the Gulph of St. Lawrence, the French shall continue to exercise it conformably to the fifth article of the treaty of Paris.

* * * *

[DECLARATION OF HIS BRITANNIC MAJESTY.]

The King having entirely agreed with His Most Christian Majesty upon the Articles of the Definitive Treaty, will seek every means which shall not only insure the execution thereof, with His accustomed good faith and punctuality, and will besides give, on His part, all possible efficacy to the principles which shall prevent even the least foundation of dispute for the future.

p. 2183

To this end, and in order that the fishermen of the two nations may not give cause for daily quarrels, His Britannic Majesty will take the most positive measures for preventing His subjects from interrupting, in any manner, by their competition, the fishery of the French, (luring the temporary exercise of it which is granted to them, upon the coasts of the Island of Newfoundland ; and He will, for this purpose, cause the fixed settlements which shall be formed there, to be removed. His Britannic Majesty will give orders, that the French fishermen be not incommoded, in cutting the wood necessary for the repair of their scaffolds, huts, and fishing vessels.

The Thirteenth Article of the Treaty of Utrecht, and the method of carrying on the fishery which has at all times been acknowledged, shall be the plan upon which the fishery shall be carried on there ; it shall not be deviated from by either party ; the French fishermen building only their scaffolds, confining themselves to the repair of their fishing vessels, and not wintering there ; the subjects of His Britannic Majesty, on their part, not molesting, in any manner, the French fishermen, during their fishing, nor injuring their scaffolds during their absence.

The King of Great Britain, in ceding the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon to France, regards them as ceded for the purpose of serving as a real shelter to the French fishermen, and in full confidence that these possessions will not become an object of jealousy between the two nations ; and that the fishery between the said Islands, and that of Newfoundland, shall be limited to the middle of the channel.

Given at Versailles, the 3rd September, 1783

(L. S.) MANCHESTER.

The principles which have guided the King, in the whole course of the negotiations which preceded the re-establishment of peace, must have convinced the King of Great Britain, that His Majesty, has had no other design than to render it, solid and lasting, by preventing as much possible, in the four quarters of the world, every subject of discussion and quarrel. The King of Great Britain undoubtedly places too much confidence in the uprightness of His Majesty's intentions, not to rely upon His constant attention to prevent the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon from becoming an object of jealousy between the two nations.

As to the fishery on the coasts of Newfoundland, which has been the object of the new arrangements settled by the two Sovereigns upon this matter, it is sufficiently ascertained by the fifth Article of the Treaty of Peace signed

p. 2184

this day, and by the Declaration likewise delivered to-day, by His Britannic Majesty's Ambassador extraordinary and Plenipotentiary ; and His Majesty declares that He is fully satisfied on this head.

In regard to the fishery between the Island of Newfoundland, and those of St. Pierre and Miquelon, it is not to be carried on, by either party, but to the middle of the channel, and His Majesty will give the most positive orders, that the French fishermen shall not go beyond this line. His Majesty is firmly persuaded that the King of Great Britain will give like orders to the English fishermen.

Given at Versailles, the 3rd of September, 1793.

GRAVIER DE VERGENNES.

TREATY OF PARIS, 30 May, 1814.

VIII. "His Britannic Majesty, stipulating for Himself and His Allies, engages to restore to His Most Christian Majesty, within the term which shall be hereafter fixed, the colonies, fisheries, factories, and establishments of every kind, which were possessed by France on the 1st of January, 1792, in the seas and on the continents of America, Africa, and Asia ; with the exception however of the Islands of Tobago and St. Lucia, and of the Isle of France and its dependencies, especially Rodrigues and the Séchelles, which several colonies and possessions His Most Christian Majesty cedes in full right and Sovereignty to His Britannic Majesty, and also the portion of St. Domingo ceded to France by the Treaty of Basle, and which His Most Christian Majesty restores in full right and Sovereignty to His Catholic Majesty.

* * * *

XIII. The French right of fishery upon the great bank of Newfound-land, upon the coasts of the island of that name, and of the adjacent islands iii the Gulph of St. Lawrence, shall be replaced upon the footing in which it stood in 1792.

TREATY OF PARIS, 20 November, 1815.

XI. "The Treaty of Paris, of the 30th of May, 1814, and the final Act of the Congress at Vienna, of the 9th of June, 1815, are confirmed, and shall be maintained in all such of their enactments which shall not have been modified by the Articles of the present Treaty.

No. 929.

EXTRACTS FROM OFFICIAL CORRESPONDENCE

[21 July,
1852.]RELATIVE TO FISHERIES ON THE COAST OF NEWFOUNDLAND AND LABRADOR.¹EXTRACT FROM THE MEMORANDUM FROM NEWFOUNDLAND ON THE FISHERY NEGOTIATIONS, JULY 21ST, 1852, BY SIR ANTHONY PERRIER.

Sir A. Perrier will therefore submit to Her Majesty's Government the expediency of his making a counter proposal embodying all the conditions contained in Lord Aberdeen's instructions of March 14, 1846. He will also suggest that he be instructed to hold out (in the event of refusal to entertain the English proposal, or of the French Government insisting upon the removal of British settlers within the French limits) that Her Majesty's Government will enforce the strict observance of all the stipulations of the several treaties which concede to France a temporary right of fishery upon certain parts of the coast of Newfoundland ; that the French will be restricted from fishing, curing and drying, and to board Stages and Huts necessary for these purposes, that they will be prevented taking Salmon* or any other fish, in any part of the rivers, streams, or other water not bona fide on the coast.†

* * * *

[Enclosure with "Confidential Despatch" of 19th August, 1853.][4 June,
1853.]

(COPY.)

COLONIAL
OFFICE, }Downing Street,
4th June, 1853.

SIR,—

In pursuance of the instructions given to us by the Duke of Newcastle, to take into consideration the project of Treaty which you have suggested for negotiation with France, in reference to the Newfoundland fisheries, and ¹ Reproduced from "The Journal of the Legislative Assembly of Newfoundland," 1857, Appendix, pp. 195-260.

* In the last degree for apportioning the Fishery stations on the coast of Newfoundland the French have provided for allotment of the Salmon fisheries. this is an encroachment never before attempted.

† Coast—The edge or margin of the Land next the sea ; the shore. It is not used for the Banks of less waters (Johnson's folio dictionary.)

communicate with you on the subject, we transmit to you, herewith, a statement of such amendments of the project as we think, after the discussions which we have had with you, to be advisable, together with observations in explanation of them.

We have, &c.,
(Signed)

E. M. ARCHIBALD.¹
W. STRACHEY.

Sir A. PERRIER.

[Enclosure 1 in Letter to Sir A. PERRIER.]

Dated 4th June, 1853.

Project of proposal to France for the Settlement of the Newfoundland Fishery Question.

* * * *

2nd—The term coast (the literal meaning of which is the shore or margin of the sea) being vague and open to contradictory interpretation, it is proposed to determine its signification with reference to the fishery rights in question, as follows:—

The word Coast, so far as it relates to French fishing, curing, or drying, and erection of scaffolds and huts for fishery purposes at Newfoundland, shall be understood to mean the strand and the ground extending inland one quarter of a mile from high water mark ; and where any river, creek, arm of the sea, or other opening less than three miles wide, intervenes, then a straight line drawn from headland to headland, across this aperture, shall be considered as equivalent to high water mark.

We would suggest, in place of the first part of this proposition, Article 3 of our separate papers.

This latter part of the proposition would shut out the French from several of the harbors now used by them. But as between Cape John and Bonne Bay there are no large rivers, nor any in which we understand the tide flows beyond a short distance, we suggest, instead of this latter passage, the insertion of a provision that the right of fishery shall in no case be enjoyed by the French in any creek, river, or stream, above the flow of the tide, and shall be limited to salt water only, as in Article 2 of the separate paper.

* * * *

p. 210.

¹ Mr. Archibald, Attorney General of Newfoundland, was on a visit to England on leave of absence, and took an important part in discussions which took place.

p. 2187

The following further concessions may be agreed to by Sir A. Perrier if he can thereby bring his French Colleague to a final adjustment of this question:

—

1—Half a mile to be the Coast limits instead of a quarter of a mile.

A quarter of a mile appears to us sufficient, but we see no particular objection to half a mile if desired by the French.

* * * *

[Enclosure 3 in Letter to Sir A. PERRIER, dated 4th June, 1853.]

DRAFT PROJECT.

Her Majesty's Government being unable to accede to the proposals of Monsieur de Bon, for the reasons stated, but being as desirous as the Government of France to preclude by every possible means the disputes between the two Governments, to which the existing Treaty stipulations on the subject of the Newfoundland fisheries have been shown by experience to tend, more particularly in consequence of the ambiguity of some of the leading provisions, and being of opinion that the ambiguous rights admit of a compromise not interfering with the main advantages at present realized by the respective parties, empower Sir A. Perrier to make the following propositions :—

* * * *

3.—The operations in connection with the fishery, which the French shall have a right to conduct on shore, shall be limited to a strand bordering upon the waters in which the French shall have a right to fish as above defined, and extending inland a quarter of (or half) an English mile from high water mark. The French, however, shall be allowed to cut wood for the purposes contemplated in the British Declaration, attached to the Treaty of 1783, upon unoccupied land at such further distance inland from the strand as may not be inconvenient to the British Government.

* * * *

EXTRACT FROM DESPATCH, RT. HON. H. LABOUCHERE TO GOVERNOR DARLING, 16TH JAN. 1857, RELATIVE TO THE CONVENTION BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE OF JAN. 4TH, 1857.

The remaining stipulations of the Treaty may, as I believe, be classed not as concessions or alterations of existing rights, but as an endeavor to put into as definite a shape as the subject admitted, the right which usage, founded on the above mentioned Treaties and Proclamations, has already sanctioned.¹

* * * *

¹ This observation seems to apply to the clause (inter alia) defining the depth inland of “the coast” upon which the French were at liberty to enjoy the right of fishing.

[14 Jany.
1857.]

No. 930.

EXTRACT FROM CONVENTION BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND FRANCE,

RELATIVE TO THE RIGHTS OF FISHERY ON THE COAST OF NEWFOUNDLAND AND ON THE NEIGHBOURING COASTS. SIGNED AT LONDON, 14 JAN., 1857.¹

ARTICLE I.

French subjects shall have the exclusive right to fish, and to use the strand for fishery purposes, during the season elsewhere specified (Article VIII.), on the east coast of Newfoundland, from Cape St. John to the Quirpon Islands. They shall also have the right to fish, and to use the strand for fishery purposes, during the said season, to the exclusion of British subjects, on the north coast of Newfoundland, from the Quirpon Islands to Cape Norman ; and on the west coast, in and upon the five fishing-harbours of Port-au-Choix, Small Harbour (or Petit Port), Port-au-Port, Red Island, and Cod Roy Island. Such exclusive fishing, from the Quirpon Islands to Cape Norman, shall extend to a distance of three marine miles due north from a straight line joining Cape Norman and Cape Bauld, and as regards the five harbours, shall extend to within a radius of three marine miles in all directions from the centre of each such harbour, but with power to the Commissioners or Umpire, elsewhere provided for in this Convention, to alter such limits for each harbour, in accordance with the existing practice.

* * * *

ARTICLE III.

French subjects shall have the right, concurrently with British subjects, to fish on the coasts of Labrador, from Blanc Sablon to Cape Charles, and of North Belleisle, together with liberty to dry and cure fish on any of the portions of the coast of North Belleisle aforesaid, which shall not be settled when this Convention shall come into operation. The British Government, however, retains the right to erect thereon buildings for military or public purposes ; and if any settlement for permanent habitation shall be thereafter established on any portion of the coast of the said island, the right of French subjects to dry and cure fish on such portion of the coast shall cease, one season's notice of such settlement having been given beforehand to the French Commander on the station.

¹ "A Complete Collections of Treaties and Conventions." By Lewis Hertslet. Vol. X, pp. 750—752.

p. 2189

The said French concurrent right of fishing shall terminate at the embouchures or outlets of rivers and creeks : the place of each embouchure or outlet shall be determined, in the manner elsewhere specified in this Convention, by the Commissioners or Umpire.

* * * *

ARTICLE VII.

From Cape St. John to Rock Point in the Bay of Islands, the French right of fishing shall extend up all rivers or creeks, as high as the salt water. From Rock Point to Cape Ray the right shall be limited to half a marine mile above the embouchure or outlet of each river or creek.

The point hereby limited for each river or creek from Cape St. John to Rock Point, and from Rock Point to Cape Ray, shall be settled in the manner elsewhere provided for by the Commissioners or Umpire.

ARTICLE VIII.

The French season of fishery on the coast of Newfoundland, Labrador, and North Belleisle, shall extend from the fifth of April to the fifth of October.

* * * *

ARTICLE X.

The strand reserved for French exclusive use for fishery purposes shall extend to one-third of an English mile inland from high-water mark, from Rock Point to Bonne Bay, inclusive, and at the four reserved harbours south of Bonne Bay ; and from Bonne Bay to Cape St. John, to half an English mile inland from high-water mark.

* * * *

[1 Sept.
1873.]

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED 1 SEPTEMBER, 1873, AT A MEETING OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL OF NEWFOUNDLAND FOR TRANSMISSION TO HER MAJESTY'S GOVERNMENT

UPON THE SUBJECT OF FRENCH AGGRESSIONS AND BRITISH RIGHTS ON THAT PART OF THE COAST COMMONLY TERMED THE FRENCH SHORE. ¹

Resolved,—That by the Treaty of Utrecht the exclusive sovereignty of the whole territory of Newfoundland and the Islands adjacent thereto were conveyed by His Majesty the King of France to His Majesty the King of Great Britain and his heirs for ever in full right. But His Majesty the King of Great Britain, by the same Treaty, conceded to the subjects of His Most Christian Majesty the privilege of a concurrent right of fishing on that part of the coast of Newfoundland extending from Cape Bonavista to Point Rich, together with the liberty to land their fish and dry them. The following is the language used in the Treaty. “The Island called Newfoundland with the adjacent islands shall from this time forward belong of right wholly to Great Britain.”

“Nor shall the Most Christian King, his heirs and successors, or any of their subjects, at any time hereafter lay claim to the said Island and Islands, or any part of it or them.”

That by the subsequent Treaties of Paris and Versailles and by every succeeding Treaty, these rights were affirmed to His Majesty the King of Great Britain and his heirs, with the following exceptions : That by the Treaties of Paris and Versailles His Majesty the King of Great Britain ceded in full sovereignty to His Majesty the King of France the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, subject to given conditions, together with the privilege to his subjects of fishing concurrently with those of His Britannic Majesty “ on that part of the coast of Newfoundland extending from Cape John passing to the north and descending by the western coast of Newfoundland to the place called Cape Ray, situate in forty-seven degrees fifty minutes north latitude,” in exchange for that portion of the coast extending from Cape Bonavista to Cape John, which His Most Christian Majesty assented to abandon.

That on the introduction into this Colony of self-government by virtue of its great charter granted by His late Majesty King William, and affirmed by ¹ Reproduced from Journal of House of Assembly, Newfoundland, 1876, Appendix, pp. 624-627.

p. 2191

subsequent acts of the Imperial Government and of the Legislature of this Colony, all the rights which Great Britain possessed in Newfoundland became under stipulated conditions the property of this Colony, and is now held in trust by its Government for the benefit of the people. That such is the high appreciation in which these Treaty rights are, and ever have been held by the inhabitants of this Colony, that no minister in this country would dare to compromise them in any manner. Not an inch of their soil, not an atom of their concurrent rights in the fisheries, on the so-called French Shore, would any permanent resident of sound mind in the Colony consent to part with.

That out of deference to the perplexities which circumstances have imposed on the Imperial Government in their negotiations for many years. past in regard to this subject, the aggrieved parties resident on the so-called French Shore have borne with great forbearance the studied audacious periodical robberies, and other grievances perpetrated on them by the French when peaceably engaged in their fishing operations. But should such conduct be repeated, the Government greatly fear that when the hope of legal redress ceases to exercise its influence on them, our people may be induced to make reprisals for the wrong done them.

That with the view to establish a preposterous and untenable claim to an exclusive right in the place of a concurrent right of fishing on the most valuable part of our fishing grounds, the French have, and more particularly of late years, by force attempted to assert that right.

That the inhabitants of this Colony appreciate the able and successful manner in which Lord Palmerston, and other able British statesmen, have from time to time sustained their Treaty rights. Had there been the slightest misunderstanding with regard to our concurrent right of fishing, it surely would have been put at rest at the same time when the islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon were conveyed in full right to France, and in the same unmistakable language, or it would have been so inserted in some subsequent Treaty ; but this was never done, and we have exercised and maintained our rights ever since with an annually increasing population.

That there are localities on the so-called French Shore which have been exclusively occupied by the French time out of mind, and others in like manner occupied by British subjects. During the time of war British subjects took possession of those French premises, and in some cases refused to conform to the stipulations of the Treaties when peace was restored. Hence the Imperial act which was passed to meet the contingency and the Proclamations of Governors ordering the removal of such parties. In no other case was that Act ever availed of. There is no instance on record where the French have been interrupted in the rightful exercise of their fishery. All the collisions, with respect to the fishery, have been from the unlawful interruptions and aggressions on British subjects by the French.

That the Treaties provide that no fixed settlement shall be erected on the so-called French Shore. But the fact is, as if by mutual consent, both the

p. 2192

French and British have disregarded this restriction, for both have fixed settlements, and British subjects are employed by the French to take care of their property during their absence. The French do not and have no right to reside in Newfoundland during the winter season.

That there is an Act in existence, VII. Victoria, authorizing the issue of grants of land without any restriction as to the so-called French Shore, and a subsequent Act, which received the special sanction of Her Majesty after twelve months' deliberation, under which licenses to search for minerals have been issued and grants made subject to French rights.

That the extent of the coast-line of the so-called French Shore, inclusive of the sinuosities of the Bays and Inlets, is little short of the one-half of the whole sea-coast of the island. Of this great distance the French occupy a small fractional part only ; the British are scattered more or less throughout the whole length.

That the rights of fishing involved in the absurd claims of an exclusive fishery by the French are not limited to the residents of Newfoundland ; they are the rights of the other provinces of British North America, and also those of the United States, to the latter granted them under their Treaty with Great Britain in the year 1818. England could not and would not have granted to the United States that which she had no right to grant, and much less would she deprive the inhabitants of the soil of rights she had granted to non-residents and to aliens.

That should Her Majesty's Government deem it desirable to appoint Commissioners to negotiate with the French Government with a view to the settlement of existing disputes between the fishermen of the two nations, such Commissioners should be instructed to make no concession whatever of any part of the soil beyond the privilege to which the French are entitled under existing Treaties, namely :—“ To erect stages made of boards, and huts necessary and usual for drying fish, nor to resort to the said Island beyond the time necessary for fishing or drying fish ;” nor any fishery rights other than a concurrent right, to which only they are entitled.

That the simple questions for the consideration and decision of the Commissioners be limited to the beach or strand necessary for the purposes contemplated under the Treaty, extending from the sea towards the interior, limiting that space to the necessary requirements of “landing and drying their fish,” and their sea-fishing to the entrance of the rivers flowing from the interior within which rivers the French have no right of fishing whatever.

That the valuable and important privilege to purchase bait, both herring and caplin, on the Southern Coast be conceded to the French to be exercised at such times as British subjects may lawfully take the same, conditionally that the French abandon their untenable pretensions to an exclusive fishery.

The foregoing Resolutions were read and adopted by His Excellency the Governor and Council, and a certified copy handed His Excellency for transmission to the Right Honorable the Earl of Kimberley, 1st September, 1873.

No. 932.

DESPATCH FROM THE EARL OF DERBY TO GOVERNOR J. GLOVER.¹

Sir, Downing Street, June 12, 1884.

In my despatch of the 18th December last² I informed the Officer administering the Government of Newfoundland of the appointment of Mr. Clare Ford, C.B., C.M.G., and Mr. E. B. Pennell as British Commissioners on the Commission to meet in Paris in connection with the Newfoundland Fisheries question.

These gentlemen, representing Her Majesty's Government, and M. Jagerschmidt and Captain Bigrel, acting on behalf of the Government of the French Republic, met in Paris on the 23rd January last, and the labours of the Commission were concluded at a meeting held on the 26th April, when an Arrangement was signed by the Commissioners.

I have now the honour to transmit to you a copy of that Arrangement, together with two inclosures accompanying it, which consist of a statement and Map referred to in Article II.

You will observe that the Arrangement has been entered into subject to the approval of the Governments of Great Britain and France ; and Her Majesty's Government will not intimate their approval until the Colonial Government and Legislature have had an opportunity of studying its provisions, and of considering the great advantages which it affords for a settlement of the long outstanding and difficult question of the fisheries.

Before proceeding to explain the details of the present Arrangement, it may be convenient to recapitulate the provisions of the Treaties bearing upon the question.

They are as follows:—

By Article XIII. of the Treaty of Utrecht, 1713, it was agreed that “The island called Newfoundland, with the adjacent islands, shall, from this time forward, belong of right wholly to Britain, and to that end the town and fortress of Placentia, and whatever other places in the said island are in the possession of the French, shall be yielded and given up within seven months from the exchange of the ratifications of this Treaty, or sooner if possible, by the Most Christian King to those who have a commission from the Queen of Great Britain for that purpose. Nor shall the Most Christian King, his heirs and successors, or any of their subjects, at any time hereafter lay claim to any right to the said island and islands, or to any part of it or them. Moreover, it shall not be lawful for the subjects of France to fortify any place in the said Island of Newfoundland, or to erect any buildings there, besides stages made of boards, and huts necessary and usual for drying of fish, or to resort to the said island beyond the time necessary for fishing and drying of fish. But it shall be allowed to the subjects of France to catch fish, and to dry them on land in that part only, and in no other besides that, of the said Island of Newfoundland, which stretches from the place called Cape Bonavista to the northern point of the said island, and from thence running down by the western side, reaches as far as the place called Point Riche. But the island called Cape Breton, as also all others, both in the mouth of the River St. Lawrence and in the gulf of the same name, shall hereafter belong of right to the French, and the Most Christian King shall have all manner of liberty to fortify any place or places there.”¹

¹ Reproduced from Comm. Pap., France, No. 1 (1890) Correspondence respecting the

And by Article V. of the Treaty of Paris, 1763, that “The subjects of France shall have the liberty of fishing and drying, on a part of the coasts of the Island of Newfoundland, such as it is specified in Article XIII. of the Treaty of Utrecht, which Article is renewed and confirmed by the present Treaty (except what relates to the Island of Cape Breton, as well as to the

¹ “XIII. Insula, Terra-Nova dicta, unà cum Insulis adjacentibus, Juris Britannici ex nunc in posterum omnino erit ; eumque in finem Placentia Urbs & Fortalitium, & si quæ alia Loca in dictâ Insulâ per Gallos possessa sint, per Regem Christianissimum, Commissionem cã in parte à Reginâ Magnæ Britannie habentibus, intra septem menses à commutatis hujus Tractatûs Ratihabitionum Tabulis, aut citiûs si fieri potest, cedentur & tradentur ; neque aliquid Juris ad dictam Insulam & Insulas ullamve illius aut earundem partem, Rex Christianissimus, Hæredes ejus, & Successores, aut Subditi aliqui, ullo de hinc tempore in posterum sibi vindicabunt. Quinetiã nec Locum aliquem in dictâ Insuâ de Terra-Novâ munire, nec ulla ibidem Ædificia, præter Contabulationes, & Tuguriola, Piscibus siccandis necessaria & consueta construere, neque dictam Insulam, ultra tempus Piscationibus & Piscibus siccandis necessarium, frequentare subditis Gallicis licitum erit. In eâ autém tantummodo, nec ullâ aliâ dicta Insulæ de Terra-Novâ parte, quæ à Loco, Cap Bonavista nuncupato, usque ad extremitatem ejusdem Insulæ septentrionalem protenditur, indeque ad Latus Occidentale recurrendo usque ad Locum, Pointe Riche appellatum, procedit, Subditus Gallicis Piscaturam exercere, & Pisces in Terrâ exsiccare permissum erit. Insula vero, Cap Breton dicta, ut & aliæ quævis, tam in Ostio Fluvii Sancti Laurentii, quam in Sinu ejusdem nominis sitæ, Gallici Juris in posterum erunt ; ibique Locum aliquem, seu Loca, muniendi facultatem omnimodam habebit Rex Christianissimus.”

“ L'île de Terre-Neuve, avec les îles adjacentes, appartiendra, désormais et absolument à la Grande-Bretagne, et à cette fin le Roi Très Chrétien fera remettre à ceux qui se trouveront à ce commis en ce pays là, dans l'espace de sept mois à compter du jour de l'échange des ratifications de ce Traité, ou plutôt si faire se peut, la Ville et le Fort de Plaisance, et autres lieux que les François pourroient encore posséder dans la dite île, sans que de dit Roi Très Chrétien, ses Héritiers et Successeurs, ou quelques-uns de ses sujets puissent désormais prétendre quoique ce soit, et en quelque tems que ce soit, sur la dite île, et les îles adjacentes en tout ou en partie. Il ne leur sera pas permis non plus d'y fortifier aucun lieu, ni d'y établir aucune habitation en façon quelconque, si ce n'est des échafauds et cabanes nécessaires et usités pour sécher le poisson, ni aborder dans la dite île dans d'autres tems, que celui qui est propre pour pêcher, et nécessaire pour sécher le poisson.

“Dans la dite île il ne sera pas permis aux dits sujets de la France de pêcher et de sécher le poisson en aucune autre partie, que depuis le lieu appelé Cap de Bonavista, jusqu'à l'extrémité septentrionale de la dite île, et de là en suivant la partie occidentale, jusqu'au lieu appelé Pointe-Riche. Mais l'île dit Cap Breton et toutes les autres quelconques, situées other islands and coasts in the mouth and in the Gulf of St. Lawrence) ; and His Britannic Majesty consents to leave to the subjects of the Most Christian King the liberty of fishing in the Gulf of St. Lawrence on condition that the subjects of France do not exercise the said fishery but at the distance of 3 leagues from all the coasts belonging to Great Britain, as well those of the continent as those of the islands situated in the said Gulf of St. Lawrence. And as to what relates to the fishery on the coast of the Island of Cape Breton, out of the said gulf, the subjects of the Most Christian King shall not be permitted to exercise the said fishery but at the distance of 15 leagues from the 10 coast of the Island of Cape Breton ; and the fishery on the coast of Nova Scotia or Acadia, and everywhere else out of the said gulf, shall remain on the foot of former Treaties."

And by Article VI. of the same Treaty, "The King of Great Britain cedes the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon in full right to His Most Christian Majesty, to serve as a shelter to the French fishermen ; and His said Most Christian Majesty engages not to fortify the said islands ; to erect no buildings upon them but merely for the convenience of the fishery ; and to keep upon them a guard of fifty men only for the police."

And by Article IV. of the Treaty of Versailles, 1783, that "His Majesty the King of Great Britain is maintained in his right to the Island of Newfoundland and to the adjacent islands, as the whole were assured to him by the XIIIth Article of the Treaty of Utrecht, excepting the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, which are ceded in full right by the present Treaty to His Most Christian Majesty"

And by Article V. of the said last-named Treaty, that "His Majesty the Most Christian King, in order to prevent the quarrels which have hitherto arisen between the two nations of England and France, consents to renounce the right of fishing, which belongs to him in virtue of the aforesaid Article of the Treaty of Utrecht, from Cape Bonavista to Cape St. John, situated on the eastern coast of Newfoundland, in 50° north latitude ; and His Majesty the King of Great Britain consents, on his part, that the fishery assigned to the subjects of His Most Christian Majesty, beginning at the said Cape St. John, passing to the north and descending by the western coast of the Island of Newfoundland, shall extend to the place called Cape Ray, situated in 47° 50' latitude. The French fishermen shall enjoy the fishery which is assigned to them by the Treaty of Utrecht."

And by Article VI. of the said last-named Treaty, that, "With regard to the fishery in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, the French shall continue to exercise it conformably to the Vth Article of the Treaty of Paris."

And by a Declaration of His Britannic Majesty, dated the 3rd day of September, 1783,¹ it was declared that "The King, having entirely agreed

¹ “Le Roi étant entièrement d'accord avec Sa Majesté Très Chrétienne sur les Articles du Traité Définitif, cherchera tous les moyens qui pourront non seulement en assurer l'exécution, avec la bonne foi et la ponctualité qui lui sont connues, mais de plus donnera, de son côté, toute l'efficace possible aux principes qui empêcheront jusqu'au moindre germe de dispute à l'avenir.

“A cette fin, et pour que les pêcheurs des deux nations ne fassent point naître des querelles with His Most Christian Majesty upon the Articles of the Definitive Treaty, will seek every means which shall not only insure the execution thereof, with his accustomed good faith and punctuality, but will besides give, on his part, all possible efficacy to the principles which shall prevent even the least foundation of dispute for the future.

p. 2196

“To this end, and in order that the fishermen of the two nations may not give cause for daily quarrels, His Britannic Majesty will take the most positive measures for preventing his subjects from interrupting in any manner, by their competition, the fishery of the French during the temporary exercise of it which is granted to them upon the coasts of the Island of Newfoundland ; and he will, for this purpose, cause the fixed settlements which shall be formed there to be removed. His Britannic Majesty will give orders that the French fishermen be not incommoded in cutting the wood necessary for the repair of their scaffolds, huts, and fishing-vessels.

“The XIIIth Article of the Treaty of Utrecht, and the method of carrying on the fishery, which has at all times been acknowledged, shall be the plan upon which the fishery shall be carried on there ; it shall not be deviated from by either party ; the French fishermen building only their scaffolds, confining themselves to the repair of their fishing-vessels, and not wintering there ; the subjects of His Britannic Majesty, on their part, not molesting in any manner the French fishermen during their fishing nor injuring their scaffolds during their absence.

“The King of Great Britain, in ceding the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon to France, regards them as ceded for the purpose of serving as a real shelter to the French fishermen, and in full confidence that these possessions will not become an object of jealousy between the two nations, and that the fishery between the said islands, and that of Newfoundland shall be limited to the middle of the channel.”

And by a Counter-Declaration of His Most Gracious Majesty the King

journalières, Sa Majesté Britannique prendra les mesures les plus positives pour prévenir que ses sujets ne troublent, en aucune manière, par leur concurrence, la pêche des François, pendant l'exercice temporaire qui leur est accordé, sur les côtes de l'île de Terre-Neuve ; et elle fera retirer, à cet effet, les établissements sédentaires qui y seront formés. Sa Majesté Britannique donnera des ordres pour que les pêcheurs François ne soient pas gênés dans la coupe de bois nécessaire pour la réparation de leurs échaffaudages, cabanes, et bâtimens de pêche.

“L'Article XIII du Traité d'Utrecht, et la méthode de faire la pêche qui a été de tout tems reconnue, sera le modèle sur lequel la pêche s'y fera. On n'y contreviendra pas, ni d'une part ni de l'autre ; les pêcheurs François ne bâtissant rien que leurs échaffaudages, se bornant à réparer leurs bâtimens de pêche, et n'y hivernant point ; les sujets de Sa Majesté Britannique, de leur part, ne molestant aucunement les pêcheurs François durant leurs pêches, ni ne dérangeant leurs échaffaudages durant leur absence.

“Le Roi de la Grande-Bretagne, en cédant les Iles de Saint-Pierre et de Miquelon à la France, les regarde comme cédées à fin de servir réellement d'abri aux pêcheurs François, et dans la confiance entière que ces possessions ne deviendront point un objet de jalousie entre les deux nations ; et que la pêche entre les dites îles, et celle de Terre-Neuve, sera bornée à mi-canal.”

p. 2197

of France, dated the 3rd day of September, 1783,¹ it was declared that “The principles which have guided the King in the whole course of the negotiations which preceded the re-establishment of peace must have convinced the King of Great Britain that His Majesty has had no other design than to render it solid and lasting, by preventing as much as possible, in the four quarters of the world, every subject of discussion and quarrel.

“The King of Great Britain undoubtedly places too much confidence in the uprightness of His Majesty's intentions not to rely upon his constant attention to prevent the Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon from becoming an object of jealousy between the two nations.

“As to the fishery on the coasts of Newfoundland, which has been the object of the new arrangements settled by the two Sovereigns upon this matter, it is sufficiently ascertained by the Vth Article of the Treaty of Peace signed this day, and by the Declaration likewise delivered to-day by His Britannic Majesty's Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary ; and His Majesty declares that he is fully satisfied on this head.

“In regard to the fishery between the Island of Newfoundland and those of St. Pierre and Miquelon, it is not to be carried on by either party but to the middle of the channel ; and His Majesty will give the most positive orders that the French fishermen shall not go beyond this line. His Majesty is firmly persuaded that the King of Great Britain will give like orders to the English fishermen.”

And by further Treaties between the said Great Contracting Parties, viz., by Article VIII. of the Treaty of Paris, 1814, it was agreed that “His Britannic Majesty, stipulating for himself and his allies, engages to restore to His Most Christian Majesty, within the term which shall be hereafter fixed, the Colonies, fisheries, factories, and establishments of every kind which were possessed by France on the 1st January, 1792, in the seas, on the Continents of America, Africa, and Asia, with exception, however, of the Islands of Tobago and St. Lucia, and the Isle of France and its dependencies, especially Rodrigues and the Seychelles, which several Colonies and possessions His Most Christian

¹ “Les principes qui ont dirigé le Roi, dans tout le tours des négociations qui ont précédé le rétablissement de la Paix, ont dû convaincre le Roi de la Grande-Bretagne, que Sa Majesté n'a eu d'autre but que de la rendre solide et durable, en prévenant, autant qu'il est possible, dans les quatre parties du monde, tout sujet de discussion et de querelle. Le Roi de la Grande-Bretagne met indubitablement trop de confiance dans la droiture des intentions de

Sa Majesté, pour ne point se reposer sur l'attention constante qu'elle aura d'empêcher que les Iles St. Pierre et Miquelon ne deviennent un objet de jalousie entre les deux nations.

“Quant à la pêche sur les côtes de Terre-Neuve, qui a été l'objet des nouveaux arrangements dont les deux Souverains sont convenus sur cette matière, elle est suffisamment exprimée par l'Article V du Traité de Paix signé ce jourd'hui, et par la Déclaration remise également aujourd'hui par l'Ambassadeur Extraordinaire et Plénipotentiaire de Sa Majesté Britannique ; et Sa Majesté déclare qu'elle est pleinement satisfaite à cet égard.

“Pour ce qui est de la pêche entre l'Ile de Terre-Neuve et celles de St. Pierre et Miquelon, elle ne pourra se faire, de part et d'autre, que jusqu'à mi-canal, et Sa Majesté donnera les ordres le plus précis, pour que les pecheurs François n'outrepassent point cette ligne. Sa Majesté est dans la ferme confiance que le Roi de la Grande-Bretagne donnera de pareils ordres aux pêcheurs Anglois.”

Majesty cedes in full right and sovereignty to His Britannic Majesty, and also the portion of St. Domingo ceded to France by the Treaty of Basle, and which His Most Christian Majesty restores in full right and sovereignty to His Catholic Majesty.” And by Article XIII. of the said last-named Treaty, that “The French right of fishery upon the Great Bank of Newfoundland upon the coasts of the island of that name, and of the adjacent islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, shall be replaced upon the footing in which it stood in 1792.” And by Article XI. of the Treaty of Paris, 1815, that the Treaty of Paris of the 30th May, 1814, and the Final Act of the Congress of Vienna of the 9th June, 1815, are confirmed, and shall be maintained in all such of their enactments which shall not have been modified by the Articles of the present Treaty.”

Under the provisions of these Treaties the French have hitherto maintained that they enjoy—

1. An exclusive right of fishery on that portion of the coast of Newfoundland between Cape St. John and Cape Ray, passing round by the north of the island.

2. That all British fixed settlements, of whatever nature, on that portion of the coast are contrary to Treaty.

The British Government, on the other hand, have maintained—

1. That British subjects have a right to fish concurrently with the French, so long as they do not interrupt the latter.

2. That the undertaking in the Declaration of 1783, to cause the removal of fixed settlements, referred only to fixed fishing settlements, and that fixed settlements of any other kind are not contrary to the Declaration.

French fishermen have, moreover, been in the habit of fishing the rivers, and of barring them with nets or weirs, interrupting the free circulation of salmon, and thereby causing great injury to the salmon fishery.

The British Government, however, have always maintained that the French have no right to the fisheries in rivers.

The Government of France each year during the fishing season employ ships of war to superintend the fishery exercised by their countrymen, and in consequence of the divergent views entertained by the two Governments respectively as to the interpretation to be placed upon the Treaties, questions of jurisdiction, which might at any moment have become serious, have repeatedly arisen.

Such being the provisions of the Treaties, and the construction placed upon them by the Governments and subjects of the two countries, practical difficulties have naturally occurred, and it has become of urgent importance that they should be removed.

The colonists have for some years past been desirous of developing the resources of their country as regards mines, agriculture, and other industries, but have constantly been met with the objections of the French Government to their doing so, and the development of the Colony on that part of the coast of Newfoundland where the French enjoy Treaty rights has been practically at a standstill, although rich mines are known to exist there, and the agricultural capabilities of the Colony are undoubtedly most valuable.

p. 2199

Your Government are aware that the present Commission is the eighth which has been appointed since the year 1846 for a settlement of the Newfoundland Fishery question, and it may be useful here to recapitulate briefly the various terms which have been proposed in the previous negotiations as a basis of settlement, in order to show distinctly how much more favourable to the Colony is the present arrangement as compared with the terms proposed on any previous occasion.

In the year 1844 the French Government proposed negotiations to be held in London, and previous to opening them it was determined to appoint a British and French Commissioner in Newfoundland to report upon the question.

Captain Fabvre, Commander of the French Naval Station, and Mr. Thomas, President of the Chamber of Commerce at Newfoundland, were, in consequence, appointed by their respective Governments.

On the 30th July, 1844, Mr. Thomas made his Report to the Governor. In this Report he suggested, with regard to the French claim of "exclusive rights," that the respective fishermen of both nations should be kept separate and distinct in their fishing places. He also suggested the extension of the French fishery limits to Belle Isle North, and made suggestions with regard to the sale of bait to French fishermen.

This Report resulted in negotiations being held in Paris in the month of March 1846.

The British Commissioner, Sir A. Perrier, was authorized to offer, in exchange for the French cession of all rights between Cape Ray and Bonne Bay, the following concessions :

—
Admission of exclusive right of fishery from Bonne Bay to Cape St. John, going round by the north.

Exclusive right of French fishery, drying, and curing at Belle Isle North.

Permission for English fishermen to sell bait at St. Pierre.

At preliminary Conferences held in Newfoundland these measures had nearly been agreed to by Mr. Thomas and Captain Fabvre ; but Captain Fabvre was desirous of retaining for France, in addition to the exclusive rights above mentioned, her rights of fishing, curing fish, &c., at Cod Roy, Red Island, Port-à-Port, and Lark Harbour, and to acquire for the French a "concurrent" right of fishery on the coast of Labrador.

The instructions, however, to the French Commissioner did not admit of his negotiating on the above-mentioned principles, and as no new propositions were brought forward by the French Government up to the month of May 1847, the negotiations fell through.

On the application of the French Government in 1851 negotiations were renewed, Sir A. Perrier being again directed to proceed to Paris to act as British Commissioner, M. de Bon being appointed on the part of France.

The British Commissioner was instructed to invite proposals from the French Commissioner such as might form a starting-point in the negotiations.

M. de Bon accordingly proposed, on the part of France, to admit the right of British subjects to inhabit the Bay of St. George, or, in other terms, to give up the exclusive right of fishery in that bay, to which they considered themselves entitled by the Treaty of 1783. In return for this concession he demanded—

p. 2200

1. The right of purchase and fish for bait (herring and capelin) on the south coast of Newfoundland, without restriction.

2. The right to fish during two months of the year (without curing or drying on shore) on that part of the coast of Labrador situated between the Isles Vertes and the Isles St. Modeste, both included ; and

3. The right of fishery at Belle Isle North, in the Straits, which the French Commissioner asserted was enjoyed by the French up to 1841, without any demur on the part of Great Britain.

The concessions demanded by the French negotiator were not considered admissible, and the British Commissioner, in order to overcome the difficulties arising out of the claim of Great Britain to a concurrent right of fishery, suggested that the question would be best settled if the rights of the fishermen of the two nations were kept separate and distinct. In order to carry out this suggestion, he proposed that the French rights should be made exclusive as against British subjects from Cape St. John to some point on the western coast, such as Cape Verte (Green Point, to the north of Bonne Bay) ; the French, on the other hand, to renounce their right altogether on the remainder of the coast, which would be that part where the British had been in the habit of carrying on the herring fishery and other fisheries incidental to the requirements of a fixed population.

The French negotiator offered no objection to the plan of recognizing the French “exclusive right” on a diminished extent of coast ; but he contended for the retention of a “concurrent right” on that portion of the coast on which their exclusive claim might be renounced, and for other advantages as well, such as admission, concurrently with British fishermen, to the fisheries of Labrador and North Belle Isle, and to the “bait fishery” on the southern coast, all of which, he maintained, were necessary, as an equivalent for admitting British subjects to a free “concurrent right” on the lower portion of the western coast.

The British Commissioner was disposed to accept the demands of the French so far as to extend the French fishery to North Belle Isle, and also to remove all restrictions on the purchase of "bait," on condition that the French should entirely renounce their rights between Cape Verte and Cape Ray ; and in June 1855 he forwarded to the Foreign Office the above suggestions in the form of a counter-proposal to those which had been made by France.

Mr. Labouchere, Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the Colonies, concurred in the adoption of the British negotiator's project of a "compromise" as the basis of negotiation to be offered to the French Government. It corresponded, he believed, with the views of the Colonial authorities ; deprived neither nation of any advantage of real value ; and there would only be a reciprocal abandonment of barren rights and useless or nominal restrictions ; and he prepared a draft Treaty which might be substituted for the whole of the existing engagements on the Newfoundland Fisheries question.

The negotiations were continued in the year 1856 by Captain Pigead, who arrived in London in the month of July of that year, and by Mr. Merivale the Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies. The basis of these negotiations was founded upon the counter-proposals made by Sir A. Perrier, and also upon the draft of the Treaty proposed by Mr. Labouchere. The negotiations finally terminated by the signature of a Convention in London on the 14th January, 1857.

p. 2201

According to the stipulations of this Convention,¹ a printed copy of which is annexed, an exclusive right of fishery and the use of the strand for fishery purposes was conceded to the French from Cape St. John, on the east coast of Newfoundland, to the Quirpon Islands, and from the Quirpon Islands, on the north coast, to Cape Norman, on the west coast, in and upon the following five fishery harbours, namely, Port-au-Choix, Small Harbour, Port-à-Port, Red Island, and Cod Roy Island, to extend, as regarded these five harbours, to a radius of 3 marine miles in all directions from the centre of each such harbour. On other parts of the west coast (the five harbours excepted) British subjects were to enjoy a "concurrent" right of fishing with French subjects, but French subjects were to have the exclusive use of the strand for fishery purposes from Cape Norman to Rock Point, in the Bay of Islands, north of the River Humber, in addition to the strand of the reserved harbours.

A "concurrent" right of fishing was also granted to French subjects on the coast of Labrador, from Blanc Sablon to Cape Charles, and of North Belle Isle.

With regard to the question of fixed establishments, the Convention of 1857 stipulated that no British buildings or inclosures should be erected or maintained on the strand reserved for French exclusive use. It was provided, however, that buildings which had stood for five successive seasons previous to the date of the Convention, without objection on the part of the French Government, should not be liable to removal without equitable compensation to the owners from the French Government. By the Convention a limited right of jurisdiction was conceded to the French, and French naval officers were to have the power to enforce the French exclusive rights of fishing by the expulsion of vessels or boats attempting concurrent fishing, in the case of there being no British cruising vessel in sight or made known to be present within a distance of 5 marine miles. French naval officers were likewise entitled to take such measures as occasion might require to put French fishermen in possession of any portion of the strand of which their exclusive use for fishery purposes was recognized by the Convention.

It will thus be seen that, according to the terms of the Convention of 1857, France would have obtained an exclusive right of fishery on the northern extremity and north-eastern coast of Newfoundland, and also on five points on the western coast of the island.

This Convention did not come into force owing to the objections raised by the Government of Newfoundland.

In the year 1859 a Mixed Commission, composed, on the part of Great

¹ Convention of 1857.
p. 2202

Britain, of Captain Dunlop and Mr. Kent (Colonial Secretary in Newfoundland), and, on the part of France, of M. de Montaignac de Chauvance and M. de Gobineau, was appointed to verify facts connected with the infraction of the Treaties ; and at the close of that year the Commissioners furnished their Report, accompanied by recommendations which led to the reopening of negotiations in 1860.

The Terms of a Convention, and of Joint Instructions to be given to the British and French naval officers on the Newfoundland Station, were then agreed on, and are inclosed (Inclosure 3¹), but the negotiations fell through, mainly in consequence of the wording of Articles 4 and 15 of the Joint Instructions.

The 4th Article related to the punishment of offenders in fishery disputes, and the 15th Article had reference to the removal of such buildings on the French Shore as might interfere with the French fishery, with regard to which it was found impossible to reconcile the conflicting views.

It may be useful to quote in extenso the latter Article, as the use of one word in it contributed more than anything else to the failure of the negotiations.

It was to the following effect in the French version:—

“Toute construction qui sera élevée à l'avenir sans le consentement de la Commission de Pêcheries sera enlevée par l'ordre du Commissaire Britannique et sans indemnité, dans un délai de six mois de la notification qui en sera faite, si la place occupée par la dite construction est *requis*e pour les besoins de la pêche Française.”

It was proposed to substitute the words: "faite par la Commission que la place occupée par la dite construction est nécessaire pour les besoins de la pêche Française."

This alteration was proposed by the British Government in order to make the erections removable, not on a requisition from the French Government or its officer, but on notice from a Commission of which a British officer was a member. To this alteration the French Government objected on grounds with which it was difficult to deal, because they proceeded from an acknowledged difference of view between the two Governments. The British Government would, however, have been willing subsequently to waive their objections with regard to wording of the 4th and 15th Articles of the stipulations which were framed in 1860, and to accept the arrangement with some trifling modifications but on the matter being referred to the French Government the proposal was rejected, nor did the French Government give any reasons for their refusal to accept it.

In the month of OCTober 1874 negotiations were again renewed with the French Government, Captain (afterwards Admiral) Miller being appointed on the part of Her Majesty's Government, and Captain de Boissoudy on that of France, and were continued, with various interruptions, during the course of the years 1875 and 1876, and, as you are aware, were not productive of any settlement.

¹ Proposed Convention of 1860, with Joint Instructions.

In the course of these negotiations Her Majesty's Government received the assistance of Sir F. Carter, Premier of Newfoundland, who was in England at the time.

The arrangement which was originally contemplated on this occasion was founded on Resolutions, dated the 23rd April, 1874, adopted by the Newfoundland House of Assembly, and concurred in by the Legislative Council, and it embraced the following stipulations :—

1. The establishment of a Joint Naval Commission to take cognizance only of such matters as related to the fisheries ; and in case of disagreement, reference to be made to the respective Governments ; all other questions to be dealt with by competent authorities.

2. That the existing British settlements in St. George's Bay, Cod Roy, and Bay of Islands, Bonne Bay, and White Bay should remain undisturbed, and no interruption to be made by the French to fishing by the British in those bays, nor interference with their buildings and inclosures there, nor with any erections or buildings on any part of the coast where the French enjoy a temporary right of fishery which did not actually interfere with the fishery privileges of the French, as should be determined by the Commissioners ; nor were British subjects to be molested in fishing on any part where they did not actually interrupt the French by their competition.

3. That no building or inclosure which had been erected for five years should be removed as interfering with the French fishery privileges without compensation to be determined on by the Commissioners ; but no compensation to be payable for any such building or inclosure hereafter erected without the consent of the Commissioners.

4. That the Commissioners should determine the limit or boundary-line to which the French might prosecute their fishery, the British having the exclusive right of salmon and all other fishing in rivers.

5. That the breadth of strand of which the French should have the right of temporary use for fishery purposes should be defined ; thus removing objections to grants of land for all purposes beyond the boundary so to be defined, and within the same for mining purposes ; right being reserved to the British Government to erect on such strand works of a military or other public character, and to the British subjects for wharves and buildings necessary for mining, trading, and other purposes apart from the fishery in places selected with permission of Commissioners.

It was further recommended that the Colonial Legislature should state to Her Majesty's Government that they were not prepared to agree to any concessions to the Government of France which would convey to the French rights of fishery which they did not at present possess under existing Treaties ; but that they would recommend the Legislature to consent that the valuable and important right to purchase bait, both herring and capelin, on the southern coast, should be conceded to the French at such times as British subjects might lawfully take the same upon terms which were to be agreed upon.

During the course of the negotiations which took place certain modifications of the above terms were introduced, which it is unnecessary to dwell upon here, inasmuch as the negotiations came to no result ; but the above extracts have been quoted in order to show the nature of the arrangement which at that time was considered by the Government of Newfoundland as offering a satisfactory settlement of the Fisheries question ; and it is obvious that had an arrangement been entered into at that period on the above-quoted basis, it would have been far less advantageous to the interests of the Colony than the one which has now been signed by the British and French Commissioners in Paris.

p. 2204

A period of five years now elapsed before fresh negotiations, by means of a Joint Commission, took place. In the year 1881 a Commission was appointed, Admiral Miller being again the British Commissioner, and Admiral Pierre being named on the part of France.

During the negotiations Sir William Whiteway was in London, and was constantly consulted by Her Majesty's Government as the negotiations proceeded.

Draft Articles were drawn up by the British Commissioner, with the concurrence of Sir William Whiteway, which it was hoped would offer to the French Government a satisfactory basis for discussion, and lead to an agreement being arrived at between the Commissioners of the two respective countries for a settlement of the question.

The basis of this Arrangement consisted in the appointment of a Commission, to be called a Commission of Demarcation, whose duty it would be to define and allot certain parts of the strand on which the French might exercise the rights conceded to them by Treaty, and the remainder of the coast to be released from Treaty stipulations ; and it was contemplated to allot not more than one-half of any one harbour for the purpose of French use, and the amount of the strand inland was not to extend to a greater distance than one-third of a mile from high-water mark.

Moreover, in the allotments for French use there was to be reserved in each case to the British Government a sufficient space for the erection of wharves, &c., and other public works or buildings, which, however, were not to be erected without previous consent on the part of the French Government.

It was further contemplated that all establishments or settlements existing at the time, British or French, were, under certain provisos, to remain undisturbed.

In addition to the appointment of a Commission of Demarcation, a Mixed Commission was to be appointed, which was to be named the Fishery Commission, and was to act in conformity with Joint Instructions based on the Articles of the Agreement.

The duty of the Fishery Commission was to see that neither British nor French fishermen were interrupted in their fishing operations.

The Fishery Commission was to have power to punish any person contravening its orders or decisions, either by means of fines or seizure of property.

The French were to be allowed to leave their boats, &c., during the winter months, and to erect dwelling-houses for their guardians, who might be either French or British.

p. 2205

The French were to be allowed to purchase bait, both herring and capelin, on shore or at sea, on the southern coast of Newfoundland, at such times as British subjects might lawfully take the same, free from all duty or restriction not equally imposed on British subjects.

The French Commissioner, on being made acquainted with the substance of the draft Articles, reported at a meeting of the Commission that the French Government were unable to accept the arrangement embodied in them, stating that the principle of British and French occupying the same harbours and fishing-grounds could never be entertained.

It is not necessary to enter further on these negotiations, as they did not result in any agreement being come to.

On comparing the provisions of the various proposals enumerated above with those embodied in the present Arrangement, the advantages to the Colony offered by the latter will at once be seen.

The result under its provisions will be—

1. That fixed settlements of every description will be allowed on the very extended portions of the coast which are tinted in red on the Map, with the exception of fishing establishments which Her Majesty's Government have never contended to be permissible under the Treaties.

2. That the claim of the French to an exclusive right of fishery will be withdrawn, as the Arrangement recognizes the concurrent right of British fishermen to fish everywhere on the coast between Cape St. John and Cape Ray, under the condition of not interfering with or molesting French fishermen when in the exercise of their fishing industry.

3. That the claim of the French to the right of fishing in rivers, except at the mouths, as far as the water remains salt, is withdrawn, and the practice of barring the rivers is prohibited.

4. That all fixed settlements, fishery or otherwise, at present existing within the limits of that portion of the coast over which the French enjoy Treaty rights, will not be disturbed.

In previous negotiations the subject of fixed establishments received the earnest consideration of the British negotiators, and it was, on more than one occasion, contemplated to appoint Mixed Commissions to assess the amount of compensation which should be paid to the owners of property whose buildings were to be removed.

However desirable such a course might have been, great difficulty would probably have been experienced in carrying it into effect, and it might have given rise to many vexatious and complicated questions.

No such inconvenience can result under the very satisfactory provision of the present Arrangement dealing with this branch of the subject.

In return for the advantages to the Colony above enumerated, Her Majesty's Government would, under the present Arrangement, recognize little more than the de facto state of things existing as regards the acts of authority exercised every fishing season by the French cruizers in the waters over which the French Treaty rights extend, and the exercise of these acts on the part of French cruizers would only take place in cases of infraction of the very reasonable provisions of this Arrangement, and then only in the absence of any of Her Majesty's cruizers.

p. 2206

I may here observe that a Convention, a copy of which is inclosed, was signed in 1881 at the Hague by the Representatives of certain Maritime Powers for the regulation of the fisheries in the North Sea. This Convention contains very useful provisions for the orderly prosecution of the fisheries in common by fishermen of different nationalities, and some of its provisions have been considered applicable to the case of the Newfoundland fisheries.

The stipulations of the North Sea Convention no doubt apply to waters which are not territorial, still the peculiar fisheries rights granted by Treaties to the French in Newfoundland invest those waters during the months of the year when fishing is carried on in them both by English and French fishermen with a character somewhat analogous to that of a common sea for the purposes of fishery. It could not be expected that the French would give up in favour of the development of the Colony the interpretation they place on the Treaties, without obtaining in return some equivalent by which they will in the future be better able to secure for their fishermen the full enjoyment of their fishing industry, and it appears to Her Majesty's Government that little inconvenience is likely to result from the exercise of the limited right accorded to French cruizers by the present Arrangement.

The French Government have invariably maintained that the establishment of a fixed population on any portions of the coast on which they enjoy Treaty rights must result in their ultimate exclusion from those spots, through French fishermen being virtually debarred from enjoying the free and uninterrupted exercise of the fishery rights accorded to them ; and they instance the cases of the Bay of St. George on the west coast and of Conche on the east coast, where such a condition of affairs has arisen.

In agreeing, therefore, to the opening of all those extensive portions of coast tinted red on the Map to a fixed population, the French Government naturally, and, in the opinion of Her Majesty's Government, not unreasonably, ask in return that they may be enabled to exercise, in cases where none of Her Majesty's cruizers may actually be present, such an amount of supervision as may insure an uninterrupted enjoyment of the fisheries by their countrymen in these waters.

Any inconvenience which might possibly be entailed by this arrangement would be obviated, if necessary, by a closer supervision being exercised on the part of Her Majesty's cruizers of those portions of the coast where the cruizers of the French navy may be stationed, and, indeed, it is contemplated that two of Her Majesty's cruizers should in future cruize more especially off the northern portion of the coast, where the French are in the habit of carrying on their principal fisheries.

It will be further observed that the fishery rights of the British are not in any way curtailed, but are, on the contrary, strengthened, their right of concurrent fishery being, as already pointed out, now recognized by the French.

¹ Convention (1881) relating to Regulation of North Sea Fisheries.

In conclusion, I have to inform you that Her Majesty's Government have thought it desirable that the British Commissioners who attended the Commission in Paris should proceed to Newfoundland, in order to offer any explanations of the present Arrangement which your Government may desire to receive ; and Her Majesty's Government confidently trust that your Ministers will view the Arrangement in the same light as that in which it is regarded by Her Majesty's Government, namely, as being a most advantageous one to the interests of the Colony, and as affording a means of avoiding the recurrence of those irritating questions which have so constantly arisen in connection with the Newfoundland Fisheries question, and, moreover, as greatly diminishing the risk of any conflicts between the fishermen of the two nations.

The British Commissioners will sail for Newfoundland on the 17th instant, and will present this despatch to you on their arrival.

Her Majesty's Government would be gratified if your Ministers should find it in their power to convene a special meeting of the Legislature as soon as may be possible, in order that the necessary Acts may be passed to give effect to those portions of the Arrangement which require legislative action, so that its provisions may be brought into operation at as early a date as possible.

I have, &c.
(Signed) DERBY.

[14 Nov.,
1885.]EXTRACT FROM ARRANGEMENTS¹ SIGNED AT PARIS NOVEMBER 14, 1885,RELATING TO THE NEWFOUNDLAND FISHERIES QUESTION.²

The undersigned Commissioners, who have been appointed by the Governments of Great Britain and France in order to find means, without touching the Treaties at present in force, which it is not their duty either to modify or to interpret, of preventing and regulating disputes relative to the exercise of the fishery on the coasts of Newfoundland, have framed in concert the following Regulations, subject to the approval of their respective Governments :—

ARTICLE I.

The Government of Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland engages to comply with the following Regulations for securing to French fishermen, in execution of the Treaties in force, and particularly of the Declaration of 1783, the free exercise of their industry on the coasts of Newfoundland without any interference or obstruction whatever on the part of British subjects.

ARTICLE II.

The Government of the French Republic engages, on its part, in exchange for the security accorded to French fishermen by the application of the Regulations contained in the present Arrangement, not to raise any objections against the formation of establishments necessary for the development of every industry other than that of the fisheries on those portions of the coasts of Newfoundland comprised between Cape St. John and Cape Ray which are tinted in red on the Map hereto annexed, and which do not appear in the Statement also annexed describing the portions of the coast to which the present paragraph does not apply.

It engages equally not to disturb the resident British subjects in respect of the establishments actually existing on those parts of the coast comprised between Cape St. John and Cape Ray passing by the north, but no new ones will be established on those parts of the coast described in the Statement mentioned in the preceding paragraph.

¹ This arrangement was not accepted by the Government of Newfoundland which passed resolutions declining to assent to it on May 4, 1887.

* * * *

ARTICLE XV.

The French Government abandons for its subjects the salmon fisheries in rivers up to the point where the water remains salt, but it is forbidden to place fixed barriers capable of impeding interior navigation or the circulation of the fish.

* * * *

Statement annexed to the Arrangement of the 14th November, 1885, respecting the Newfoundland Fisheries, in execution of Article II of the said Arrangement.

WEST SIDE.

(From Cape Ray to Cape Norman.)

1. COD ROY Island. On the mainland opposite, that portion of the coast situated between the two perpendicular lines drawn from the extremities of the island in the general direction of the coast :

2. Red Island ;

3. That portion of the coast situated between Cape Cormoran and the west point of Pic Denis Harbour in the Bay of Port-à-Port on the west ;

4. The small islands situated in the Bay of Port-à-Port, together with those which close it on the north ;

5. That portion of the coast situated between Bear Cove (“l’Anse-à-l’Ours”) and the foot of the Mountain Blow-me-down ;

6. Governor's Island, the Islands of Guernsey, Tweed, the two Shags, the Pearl, and Green Island ;

7. That portion of the coast which borders the Harbour des Roches ;

8. Stearing Island and the adjacent coast from the latitude of the northern point of Stearing Island to the foot of a perpendicular line drawn down from Cape Pointu on the coast, following the sinuosities of the Peninsula of Cow Head (“la Tête de Vache”);

9. That portion of the coast comprised between a point situated at a distance of 3 miles to the south of the mouth of the River Ponds and the

p. 2210

latitude of the northern part of Savage Island following the sinuosities of the Peninsula of Port-au-Choix ;

10. All those islands situated within the Bay of St. John ;

11. That portion of the coast situated between Castor Point (at the southern entrance of the bay) and the northern point of the entrance of Savage Cove (Anse aux Sauvages) ;

* * * *

11. That portion of the coast situated between Cape Partridge and the parallel of the southern point of the group of islands of Pot d'Etain (Coachman's Cove);

12. That portion of the coast situated on the east side of the Bay of Pines, and stretching from the 50th degree of latitude to the north point of that part of the bay ;

13. Those small islands situated on the coast between the harbour of Fleur de Lys and Cape St. John, which the exception of Horse Islands (Les Isles Ste. Barbe) ;

14. That portion of the coast following the sinuosities of Paquet Harbour ;

15. That portion of the coast situated between Cape Cagnet on the west and the east entrance of the Harbour of Scie.

The prohibition to erect new establishments on those portions of the coast mentioned in the present statement shall be applicable to a distance inland of 500 yards with regard to paragraphs numbered 7, 8, and 9 on the west coast, and to a distance of 800 yards with regard to all the other paragraphs, following the sinuosities of the coast.

It is understood that the distances of 500 and 800 yards are to be reckoned from high-water mark.

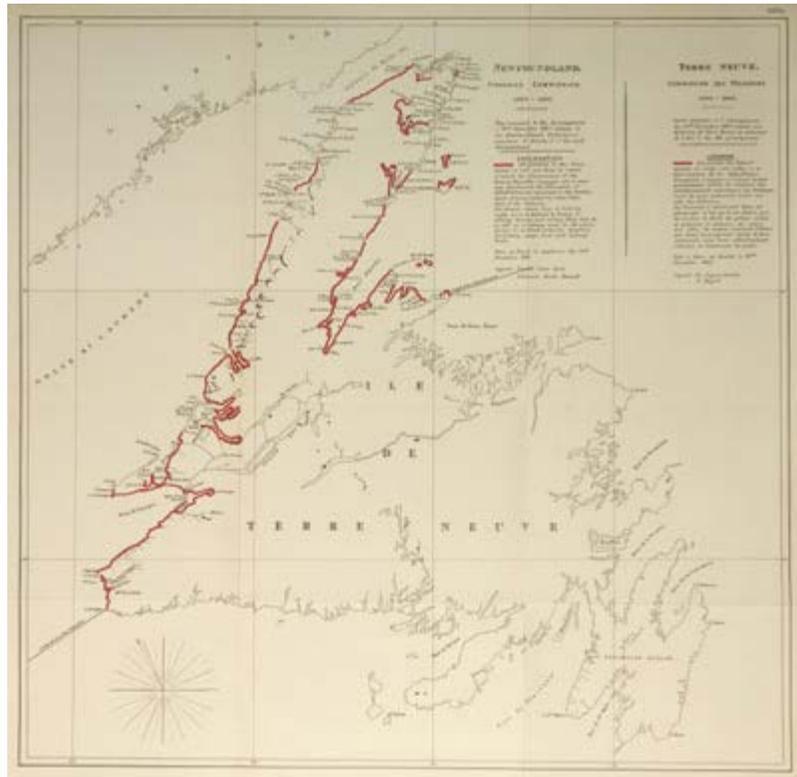

Done at Paris, in duplicate, the 14th November, 1885.

(Signed) FRANCIS CLARE FORD.

EDMUND BURKE PENNEL.

[Litho Map follows as p. 2210A

Litho Map

Much Larger Version 2000x1954 pixels (419 kb)

Back

[1927lab]

NEWFOUNDLAND.

FISHERIES COMMISSION.

1884 - 1885

Map annexed to the Arrangement of 14th November 1885 relative to the Newfoundland Fisheries in execution of Article 2 of the said Arrangement

EXPLANATION

The portions of the Coast tinted in red are those in respect of which the Government of the French Republic engages not to raise any objection to the formation of Establishments necessary to the development of every industry other than that of the fisheries. The French retain here in full the right, as it is defined by Treaty of fishing, drying and curing their fish, &c. as well as of cutting wood in all parts, except on enclosed property, necessary for fishing stages, huts and fishing boats

Done at Paris in duplicate the 14th November 1885

Signed Francis Ulmer Ford, Edmund Burke Pennell

TERRE NEUVE.

COMMISSION DES PÊCHERIES

1884 - 1885

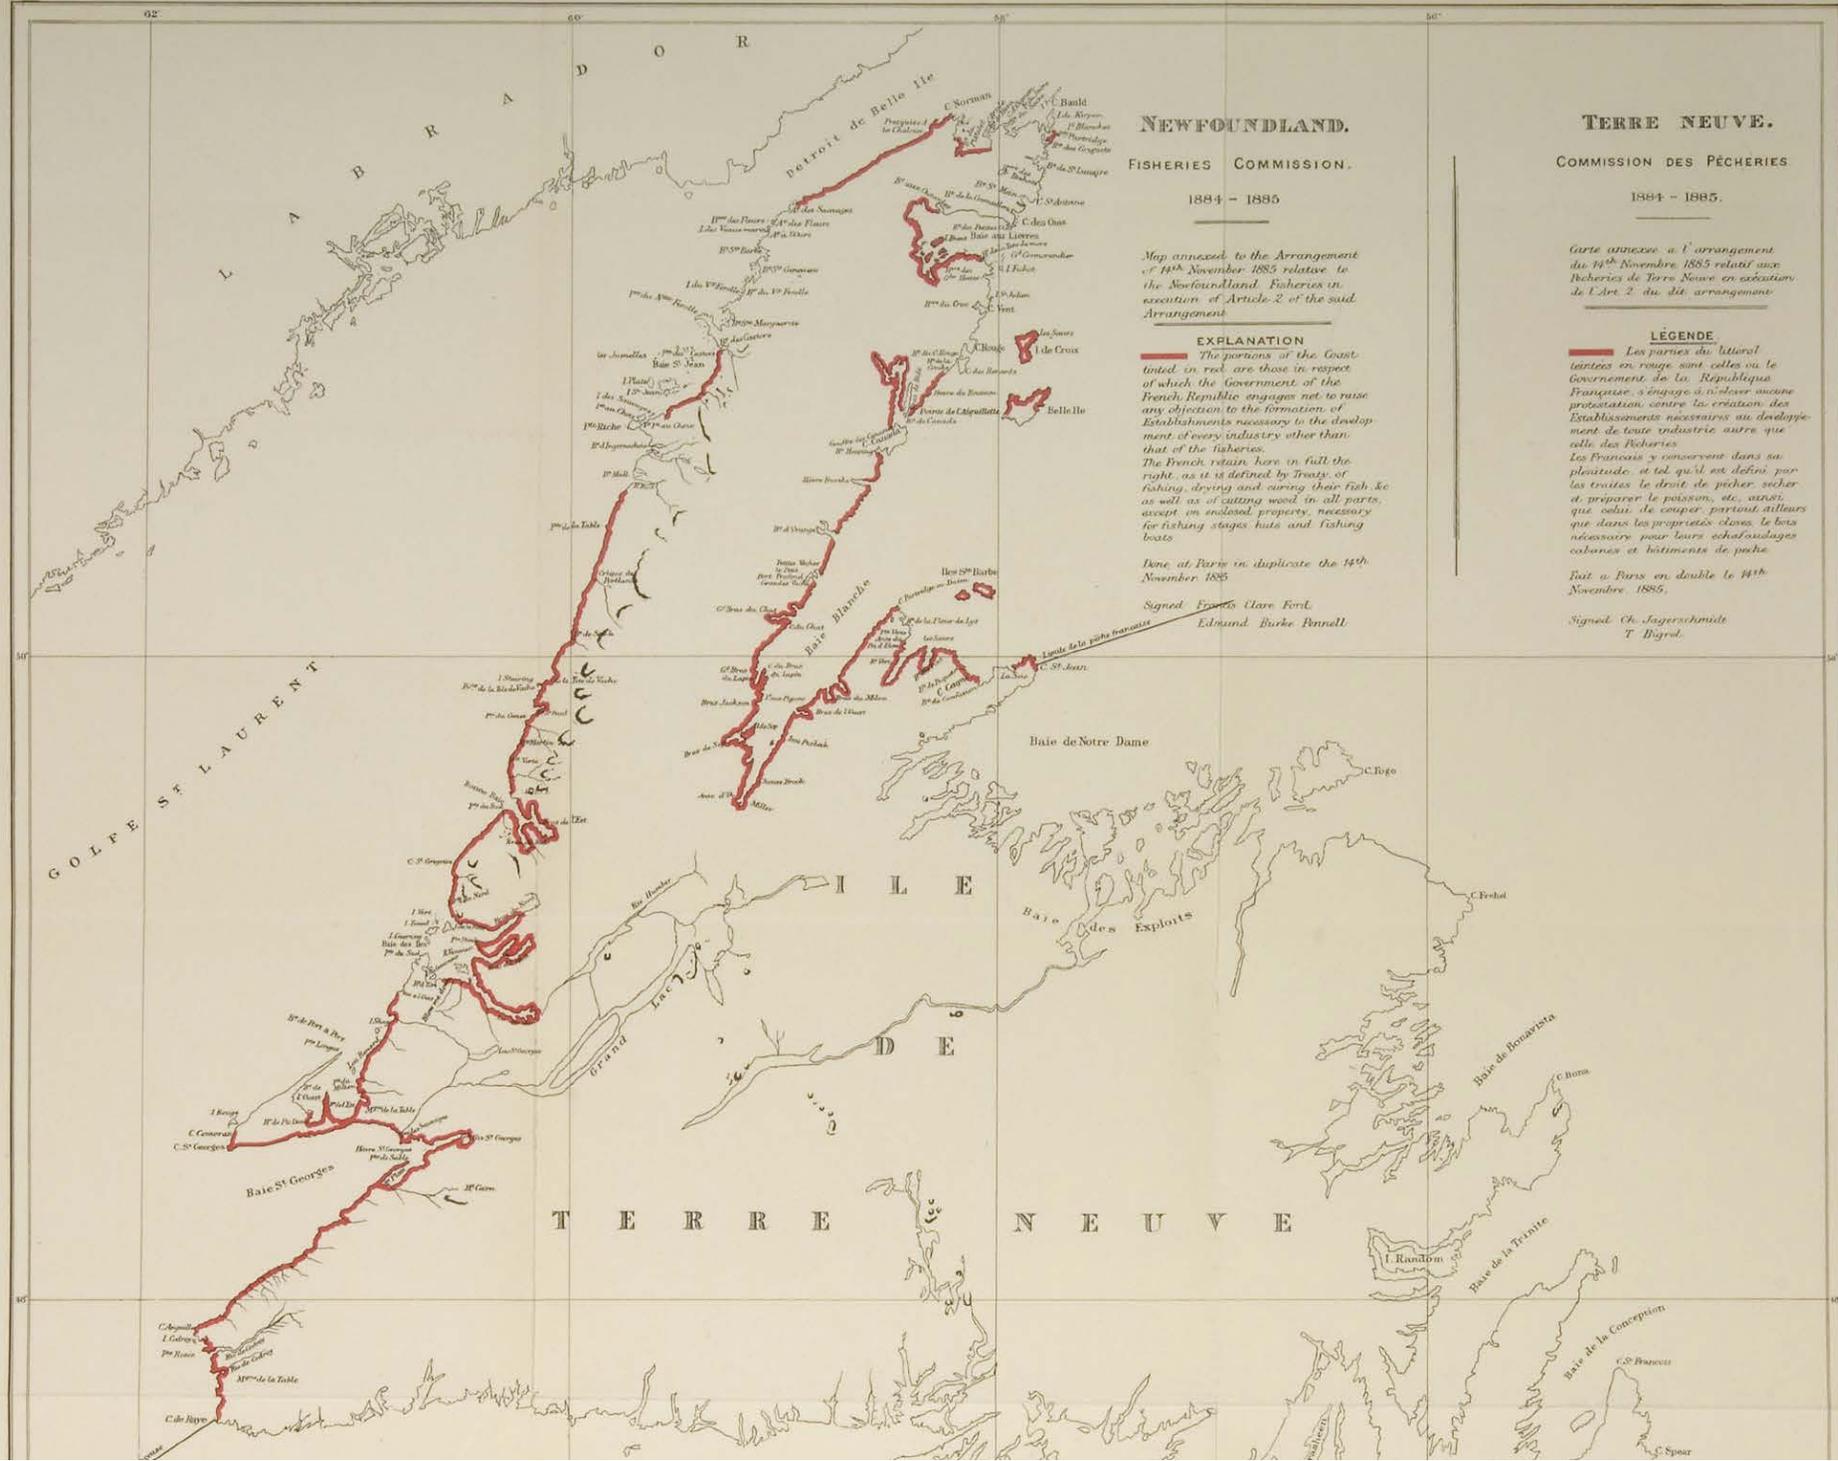

Carte annexée à l'arrangement du 14^{ème} Novembre 1885 relatif aux Pêcheries de Terre Neuve en exécution de l'Art. 2 du dit arrangement

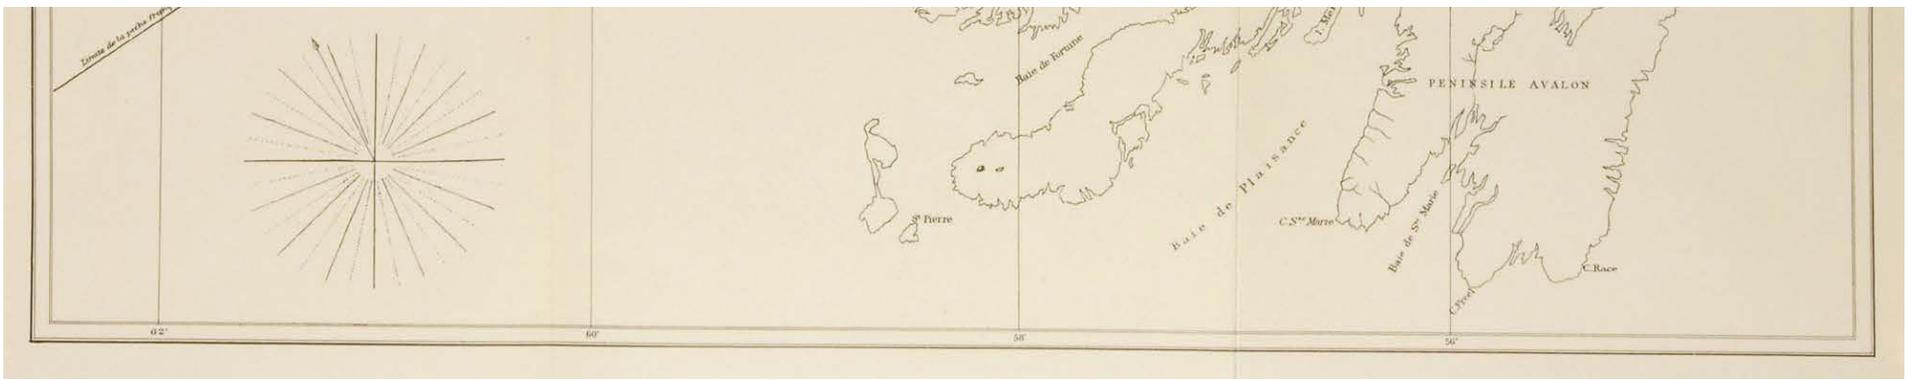

LÉGENDE

Les parties du littoral tintées en rouge sont celles où le Gouvernement de la République Française s'engage à n'élever aucune protestation contre la création des Etablissements nécessaires au développement de toute industrie autre que celle des Pêcheries. Les Français y conservent dans sa plénitude, et tel qu'il est défini par les traités le droit de pêcher, sécher et préparer le poisson, &c. ainsi que celui de couper, partout ailleurs que dans les propriétés closes, le bois nécessaire pour leurs échafaudages, cabanes et bâtiments de pêche

Fait à Paris en double le 14^{ème} Novembre 1885,

Signed Ch. Jagerschmidt, T. Bigard

Back

THE PROVINCE OF NOVA SCOTIA.

[15 Dec., 1763.]

No. 934.Representation to His Majesty upon a petition of the Sieur de Stumpel upon a petition for a grant of Lands.REPRESENTATION OF THE LORDS OF TRADE TO THE KING, RE GRANT TO STUMPEL.

15 DECEMBER, 1763.

B.T.N.S., VOL. 37.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty. :—

May it Please your Majesty.

In obedience to your Majesty's commands signified to us in your Majesty's Order in Council of the 4th of last month we have reconsidered the Representation made to your Majesty by this Board on the 30th of August last upon the petition of the Sieur de Stumpel, an officer in the Hanoverian Service, praying for a Grant of 20,000 Acres of Land upon S^t Johns River in Nova Scotia, and all tho' we think, that the making such a Settlement, as he proposes may be of advantage to the Publick, yet it does not appear to us, upon a further Enquiry that he is of Sufficient Ability either from his circumstances or the number of people he has actually engaged to undertake the Settlement of so extensive a Tract as 200,000 Acres of Land, and therefore that it would not be adviseable or expedient for the present to grant to him so large a quantity of Land to the exclusion of others whom the Advantages of that part of America, might induce to undertake Settlements there.

In conformity to this opinion, the Petitioner has reduced his proposall as to the quantity of Lands to 20,000 Acres, which he desires may be laid out into a Township and granted to him, either upon the River St. John, or in such part of the Country between that River and the River St. Croix, as he shall find most advantageous and best adapted to the object he has in view ; and as we find upon further Enquiry, that there are now actually in London Forty five Families amounting to 128 Persons ; foreign Protestants of various Countries, who are engaged to settle under the Protection of this Gentleman, we see no objection to complying with his request, and therefore humbly propose to your Majesty, that an Instruction may be given to your Majesty's Governor of Nova Scotia, to direct a survey to be made of a Tract of 20,000 Acres on the said River

S John or between that and the River S Croix in such a Situation as the Petitioner shall choose (taking care that it shall not be upon any Lands occupied by the Indians or used as their hunting grounds) and to grant the same to the Petitioner under the seal of the Province upon the following Terms and Conditions :

p. 2212

That the Grantee shall be obliged to settle the Township with Protestant Inhabitants within ten years from the Date of the grant, in the proportion of one person for every hundred Acres.

That if one third of the Township is not settled with Protestant Inhabitants in the above mentioned proportion, within three years, from the date of the Grant, the whole shall be void.

That all such parts of the Lands, as are not settled with Protestant Inhabitants in the said Proportion at the Expiration of ten years from the date of the Grant shall revert to your Majesty.

That the grantee shall pay an annual Quit Rent to the Crown of 2^s Sterling, for every hundred Acres. Contained in the grant the Payment of such Quit Rent not to commence untill the Expiration of ten years from the Date of the grant.

That there be a Reservation in the grant, of all such spots, as the person legally appointed to survey the Lands previous to the grant, shall report, and mark out in a map to be annexed to such Report as proper for erecting Fortifications for publick Quays, Beach for the Fishery, Roads and all other publick uses whatever.

That there be a Reservation to your Majesty of all mines of Gold and Silver.

That after the Expiration of 3 years from the Date of the grant the grantee be obliged to plant and continue to cultivate 6 Acres of Land, with Hemp and Flax.

Which is most humbly Submitted

HILLSBOROUGH
SOAME JENYNS
ED. ELIOT
ED. BACON
GEO. RICE.

Whitehall, }
Dec^r 15th, 1763. }

[10 Feb., 1764.]

EXTRACT FROM PRIVY COUNCIL MINUTES OF

10 FEBRUARY, 1764.

Nova Scotia.

Order approving
Commee Report
upon the Petition of John MarteilheMerch^t praying for a Grant of Lands near Baye des Chaleurs in this province.

P.C. 2, Vol. 110, p. 255.

Whereas the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations have represented to His Majesty at this Board that a Memorial has been presented to them by John Marteilhe of Quebec Merchant, praying that a Grant may be made to him of a Tract of Land to the South of the Baye des Chaleurs and the Mouth of the River Caraquet in His Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia, with a View to settling useful Inhabitants there for carrying on the Fishery and other beneficial Undertakings, which Request the said Lords Commissioners apprehend will be for His Majesty's Service to comply with. His Majesty this day took the said Representation together with a Report made thereupon by a Committee of the Lords of His Majesty's Most Honourable Privy Council into His Royal Consideration, and being inclined to give all fitting Encouragement for the Settling of Lands in the said Province, is hereby pleased with the Advice of His Privy Council to Order, that the Governor, or Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia for the time being do cause a Survey to be made, and a Township, consisting of Twenty thousand Acres, to be laid out in a proper and convenient Situation to the South of the said Bay des Chaleurs near the Mouth of the River Caraquet, and to grant the said Township to the Memorialist John Marteilhe under the Seal of the said Province upon the following Terms, Reservations and Conditions, Viz^t.

First—That the Grantee be obliged to settle the Township with Protestant Inhabitants within Ten Years from the Date of the Grant in the Proportion of one Person to every hundred Acres.

Secondly—That if one Third of the Township be not settled with Protestant Inhabitants in the abovementioned Proportion within three years from the Date of the Grant, the whole to be void.

Thirdly—That all such Parts of the Land as shall not be settled with Protestant Inhabitants in the said Proportion at the Expiration of Ten Years from the Date of the Grant do revert to the Crown.

Fourthly—That the Grantee do pay an Annual Quit Rent to the Crown of Two Shillings Sterling for every hundred Acres contained in the Grant, to commence at the Expiration of Ten Years from the Date thereof.

p. 2214

Fifthly—That there be Reservations in the Grant of all such Parts as the Person legally appointed to survey the said Lands shall report and mark out, in a Map to be annexed to his Report, as proper for erecting Fortifications, for Publick Quays, Roads and all other Publick Uses whatsoever.

Sixthly—That there be a Reservation to the Crown of all Mines of Gold and Silver.

Seventhly—That after the expiration of three Years from the Date of the Grant the Grantee be obliged to Plant and cultivate annually Six Acres of Land with Hemp and Flax.

Eighthly—That One hundred Yards in Breadth above High Water Mark along the Sea Coast be reserved to the Crown for the free Use and benefit of all His Majesty's Subjects. And the Governor or Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia for the time being, and all others whom it may concern are required to carry His Majesty's Commands hereby signified into Execution.

No. 936.

[5 June, 1764.]

REPRESENTATIONS OF THE LORDS OF TRADE TO THE KING,

5 JUNE, 1764.

Representation to His Majesty with a List of Several persons for Grants of Lands in Nova Scotia.

B.T.N.S., VOL. 37, p. 422.

To the King's Most Excellent Majesty.

May it please Your Majesty.

We humbly beg leave to lay before your Majesty a List of the names of Several Persons, who, having intention to Make Settlements in the Continental part of your Majesty's Colony of Nova Scotia in America, have requested grants of Lands there, in greater quantities, and upon different Terms and conditions, than those upon which your Majesty's Governor is empowered, by his Commission & Instructions, to make such Grants ; and as it appears to us, upon a consideration of these proposals, that such undertakings will be of advantage to your Majesty's Province, and promote the speedy Settlement thereof ; We humbly beg leave to propose, that your Majesty's Orders may be given to the Governor of Nova Scotia, immediately upon the said orders being presented to him, to cause the quantities of Land petitioned for by each Person respectively, (which Quantity is specified in the List hereunto annexed) to be Surveyed in one contiguous Tract ; and conformable to the direction of your Majesty's Instructions with regard to the manner of laying out grants of Land in such parts, on the continent, of the said Province as the Proponents, or their Attorneys shall choose, not already granted or Surveyed to others, and not possessed or claimed by the Indians ; and upon a return of such Survey, conformable to your Majesty's directions in your General Instructions, to pass grants for the same under the Seal of the Province, upon the following Terms, Conditions and reservations, viz^t :

That the grantees do settle the Lands with Protestant Inhabitants within ten years from the date of the grant in the Proportion of one person for every two hundred Acres, in failure whereof the Land to revert to your Majesty, your Heirs and Successors.

That an annual Quit Rent of one Farthing  acre be reserved to your Majesty, your Heirs and Successors, payable on the Feast of St. Michael in every year, one half of which to commence and become payable on the said Feast of St. Michael, which shall first happen after the Expiration of five years from the date of the grant ; and to be payable on every ensuing Feast of St.

p. 2216

Michael, or within fourteen days after, and the whole to become payable in like manner at the expiration of 10 years ;

That there be a reservation in all such grants to your Majesty, your Heirs and Successors, of all those parts of the Land, which the Surveyor shall, upon the return of the Survey, report to be proper for erecting Fortifications, publick Wharffs, and naval yards, or for other Military purposes, and a reservation of an entire liberty to all your Majesty's Subjects to fish upon the Coasts of each Tract granted where such Tract abuts upon the Sea Shore ;

That there be a reservation to your Majesty, yours Heirs and Successors of all mines of Gold, Silver and Coals.

That there be a reservation to your Majesty, your Heirs and Successors of all mines of Gold, Silver and Coals. That if any part of the Land shall appear by the Surveyor's report to be well adapted to the growth of Hemp or Flax, it shall be a condition of the grant that the grantee shall Sow, and continue annually to cultivate a due proportion of the Land, not less than one rood in every thousand Acres, with that beneficial Article of produce.

Which is most humbly Submitted.

HILLSBOROUGH.
SOAME JENYNS.
ED. ELIOT.
ED. BACON.
GEO. RICE.
ORWELL.
BAMBER GASCOYNE.
J. DYSON.

Whitehall, }
June 15th 1763.

	Acres
Thomas Pownall Esq ^r	20,000
John Tucker Esq ^r	20,000
R ^d Jackson Esq ^r	20,000
John Mitchell Esq ^r	20,000
Thomas Thoroton Esq ^r	20,000
Richard Oswald Esq ^r	20,000

Levett Blackbourn Esq ^r	20,000
Samuel Holland Esq ^r	20,000
Joseph Peach Esq ^r	20,000
Benj ⁿ . Hollowell Esq ^r	20,000
Michael Franklin Esq ^r	20,000
Joseph Pornette Esq ^r	20,000
George Adam Gucelin Esq ^r	20,000
Joseph Frederick Wallet Desbarres Esq ^r .	..				20,000
Richard Bulkely Esq ^r	20,000
John Henniker Esq ^r	20,000

p. 2217

John Major Esq ^r	20,000
Humphry Bradstreet Esq ^r	5,000
Richard Byron Esq ^r	10,000
Alexander Hay Esq ^r	5,000
Joseph Gorham Esq ^r	20,000
Richard Spry Esq ^r	20,000
Godhard Hagen Esq ^r	20,000
John Fisher Esq ^r	20,000
John Wentworth Esq ^r	20,000
Richard Wright Esq ^r	10,000

BARON BEHR TO EARL OF HALIFAX.[20 Dec., 1764.]

C.O. 217, VOL. 34, p. 191.

My Lord,

C'est par ordre du Roi, My Lord, que j'ai l'honneur de remettre cijoint à Votre Excellence la Commission, que le nommé Stumpel a obtenû au commencement de la presente année, pour etablir une Colonie sur la Riviere de St^e Jean dans la Nouvelle Ecosse, et que le dit Stumpel, qui a été arrêté, il y a quelque tems, sur le Territoire de Monseigneur le Marggrave d'Anspac, a été obligé de rendre, à la requisition du Ministère du Roi à Hannovre, à fin de le mettre hors d'etat d'en faire mauvais usage, comme il a deja fait.

Ju suis avec la Consideration la plus distinguée.

My Lord,
de Votre Excellence,
Le très humble er très
obeissant Serviteur

B. BEHR.
L.S.

Londres ce 20 Dec. 1764.

S.E. My Lord Comte de Halifax.

pp. 192-3 follow p. 194.

p. 194 Endorsed :—

London 20th Dec^r. 1764
M. le Baron Behr
Stumpel.

R 21.

No. 938.

[Enclosure in No. 937.]

C.O. 217, VOL. 34, p. 192.

L. S.

AT THE COURT OF ST. JAMES'S
THE 10^h DAY OF FEBRUARY, 1764.

PRESENT

The Kings most Excellent Majesty

Duke of Leeds

Earl of Halifax

Duke of Rutland

Earl of Powis

Duke of Queensberry

Earl of Egmont

Duke of Argyll

Earl of Hillsborough

Duke of Ancaster

Viscount Falmouth

Lord Steward

Lord Le Despencer

Lord Chamberlain

Lord Berkeley of Stratton

Earl of Huntingdon

Lord Sandys

Earl of Denbigh

Lord Hyde

Earl of Sandwich

Lord Tyrrawley

Earl of Shaftesbury

Humphry Morice Esq^r.

Earl of Marchmont

Sir John Philipps.

Earl of Hyndford

[10 Feb.,
1764.]

Whereas the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations, have represented to His Majesty at this Board, that a Petition has been presented to them by the Sieur John Henry Christian de Stumpell, an Officer in the Hanoverian Service, praying that a Tract of Twenty Thousand Acres of Land may be laid out into a Township, and granted to him, either upon the River S^t John^l in the Province of Nova Scotia, or in such Part of the Country between that River and the River S^t Croix, as he shall find most Advantageous and best adapted to the Object he has in view, in order to make a Settlement thereupon ; Which Request the said Lords Commissioners apprehend will be for His Majestys Service to comply with — His Majesty this day took the said Representation together with a Report made thereupon by a Committee of the Lords of His Majestys most Honourable Privy Council, into His Royal Consideration and being inclined to give all fitting Encouragement for the

Settling of Lands in the said Province, is hereby pleased, with the Advice of His Privy Council, to Order, That the Governor or Commander in Chief of

¹ In present province of New Brunswick.

p. 2220

His Majestys Province of Nova Scotia for the time being, do cause a Survey to be made and a Township, consisting of Twenty Thousand Acres of Land, to be laid out on the said River S^t John, or between that and the River S^t Croix, in such a Situation as the Petitioner shall chuse (taking care that it be not upon any Lands occupied by the Indians, or used as their Hunting Grounds) and to grant the Same to the Petitioner the Sieur John Henry Christian de Stumpel, under the Seal of the said Province, upon the following Terms, Reservations and Conditions, Viz^t.

That the Grantee be obliged to settle the Township with Protestant Inhabitants within Ten Years from the Date of the Grant, in the Proportion of One Person for every hundred Acres.

That if One third of the Township be not settled with Protestant Inhabitants in the abovementioned Proportion within three Years from the Date of the Grant, the whole to be void.

That all such Parts of the Land as are not settled with Protestant Inhabitants in the same Proportion at the Expiration of Ten Years from the Date of the Grant shall revert to His Majesty.

That the Grantee do pay an Annual Quit Rent to the Crown of Two Shillings Sterling for every hundred Acres contained in the Grant, the Payment of such Quit Rent not to commence until the Expiration of Ten Years from the Date of the Grant.

That there be a Reservation in the Grant of all such Spots as the Person legally appointed to survey the Lands, previous to the Grant, shall report, and mark out in a Map to be annexed to such Report, as proper for erecting Fortifications, for publick Quays, Beach for the Fishery, Roads, and all other publick Uses whatsoever.

That there be a Reservation to His Majesty of all Mines of Gold and Silver.

That after the Expiration of Three Years from the Date of the Grant, the Grantee be obliged to Plant, and continue to cultivate Six Acres of Land with Hemp and Flax.

And the Governor or Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia, for the time being, and all others, whom it may concern, are required to carry His Majesty's Commands hereby signified into Execution.

PHIL. SHARPE.
D.S.

Endorsed : — In M. le Baron Behr's of the 20 Dec^r 1764.

[17 Feby., 1766.]

EXTRACT FROM PRIVY COUNCIL MINUTES OF

17 FEBRUARY, 1766.

Nova Scotia.

Order for granting Lands in this province to Lord Colville.

P.C. 2, VOL. III., p. 504.

Whereas application hath been made to His Majesty at this Board by the Right Honourable Alexander Lord Colville, praying for a Grant of Lands in His Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia in order to make a Settlement thereupon.—His Majesty this day took the same into Consideration, and having received the opinion of the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations and also of a Committee of the Lords of His Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council thereupon, is hereby pleased with the Advice of His Privy Council, to order, that the Governor or Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia for the time being do immediately upon the Receipt hereof, cause ten thousand Acres of Land to be surveyed in one contiguous Tract (conformable to the directions of His Majesty's Instructions with regard to the manner of laying out Grants of Land) in such part on the Continent of the said Province as the said Alexander Lord Colville or his Attorney shall choose, not already granted or surveyed to others and not possessed nor claimed by the Indians, and that upon a return of such survey conformable to His Majesty's directions in His General Instructions, He do pass a Grant for the same to the said Alexander Lord Colville under the Seal of the said Province upon the following Terms, Conditions and Reservations—Viz^t.

That the Grantee do settle the Lands with Protestant Inhabitants within ten years from the date of the Grant, in the proportion of one person for every two hundred Acres, in failure whereof, the Land to revert to His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors.

That an Annual Quit Rent of one farthing per Acre be reserved to His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors payable on the Feast of S^t Michael in every year, one half of which to commence and become payable on the said Feast of S^t Michael which shall first happen after the expiration of five years from the date of the Grant, and to be payable on every ensuing Feast of S^t Michael or within fourteen days after and the whole to become payable in like manner at the expiration of ten years.

That there be a reservation in the said Grant to His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors of all those parts of the Land which the Surveyor shall upon the return of the Survey report to be proper for erecting Fortifications, Publick Wharfs and Naval Yards or for other Military purposes and a reservation of an entire liberty to all His Majesty's Subjects to Fish upon the Coast of the said Tract, where such Tract abuts upon the Sea Shore.

p. 2222

That there be a Reservation to His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors of all Mines of Gold, Silver, and Coals.

That if any part of the Land shall appear by the Surveyors Report to be well adapted to the growth of Hemp or Flax, it shall be a condition of the Grant, that the Grantee shall sow and continue annually to cultivate a due proportion of the Land, not less than one rood in every thousand Acres with that beneficial Article of produce.

Nova Scotia.
Order for Granting Lands to Charles Colville Esq^r and sundry others in this Province.

And the governor or Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia for the time being, and all others whom it may concern are required to carry His Majesty's commands hereby signified into execution.

Like Orders with the foregoing were issued for Granting the following quantities of Land in Nova Scotia to the following persons—Viz^t.

	Acres.
Charles Colville Esq ^r	10,000
Jonathan Belcher Esq ^r Lieutenant Governor of Nova Scotia	5,000
Benjamin Green Esq ^r	5,000
John Collier Esq ^r	5,000
Charles Morris Esq ^r	5,000
Joseph Gerrish Esq ^r	5,000
Edmund Crawley Esq ^r	5,000
Henry Newton Esq ^r	5,000
Sebastian Zouberbuhler Esq ^r	5,000
Jonathan Binney Esq ^r	5,000
Walter Sterling Esq ^r Captain in the Navy	5,000
Cha ^s . Lyell Esq ^r Secretary to Lord Colville	5,000
James Ferguson Esq ^r Captain in the Navy	5,000

[3 Dec., 1766.]

EXTRACT FROM PRIVY COUNCIL MINUTES OF
3 DECEMBER, 1766.

Nova Scotia.

Order for Granting
20,000^a of Land to John Tucker Esq^f.

P.C. 2, Vol. 112, p. 118.

Whereas Application hath been made to His Majesty at this Board by John Tucker Esquire praying for a Grant of Lands in His Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia in order to make a Settlement thereupon—His Majesty this Day took the same into Consideration, and having received the Opinion of the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations, and also of a Committee of the Lords of His Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council thereupon is hereby pleased with the advice of his Privy Council, to Order, That the Governor or Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia for the Time being do Immediately upon the receipt hereof cause twenty thousand Acres of Land to be Surveyed in one Contiguous Tract (conformable to the Directions of His Majesty's Instructions with regard to the manner of laying out Grants of Land) in such part on the Continent of the said Province as the said John Tucker or his Attorney shall choose, not already Granted or Surveyed to Others and not possessed nor Claimed by the Indians, and that upon a Return of such Survey Conformable to His Majesty's Directions in his General Instructions he do pass a Grant for the same to the said John Tucker under the seal of the said Province upon the following Terms Conditions and Reservations, viz^t.

That the Grantee do settle the Lands with protestant Inhabitants [sic] within ten years from the Date of the Grant, in the proportion of One person for every two hundred Acres, in failure whereof the Land to revert to his Majesty his Heirs and Successors.

That an Annual Quit Rent of one farthing per Acre be reserved to His Majesty his Heirs and Successors, payable on the Feast of S^t Michael in every Year, one half of which to commence and become payable on the said Feast of Saint Michael which shall first happen after the Expiration of five Years from the Date of the Grant, and to be payable on every ensuing Feast of S^t Michael or within fourteen Days after and the whole to become payable in like manner at the Expiration of ten years—

That there be a Reservation in the said Grant to His Majesty his Heirs and Successors of all those parts of the Land which the Surveyor shall upon the Return of the Survey, Report to be proper for Erecting Fortifications Publick Wharfs and Naval Yards or for other Military purposes, and a Reservation of an entire Liberty to all His Majestys Subjects to Fish upon the Coast of the said Tract where such Tract abuts upon the Sea Shore.

p. 2224

That there be a Reservation to his Majesty his Heirs and Successors of all Mines of Gold Silver and Coals.

That if any part of the land shall appear by the Surveyor's Report to be well adapted to the Growth of Hemp of Flax it shall be a Condition of the Grant, that the Grantee shall sow and Continue Annually to Cultivate a Due proportion of the Land not less than one Rood in every thousand Acres, with that beneficial Article of Produce.

And the Governor or Commander in Chief of His Majesty's province of Nova Scotia for the time being, and all others whom it may Concern are required to Carry his Majesty's Commands hereby signified into Execution.

Like Orders with the foregoing were Issued for Granting the following Quantities of Land in Nova Scotia to the following persons viz^t.

	Acres.
Major Gorham	10,000
George Edie Esquire	10,000
John Edie Esquire	2,000
David Edie Esquire	2,000
Claude Edie Esquire	2,000
Jabez Edie Esquire	2,000
Paul Edie Esquire	2,000
Alexander Campbell Esquire	10,000
Charles Shirreff Esq ^r	10,000
Andrew Watson Esquire	20,000
Augustin Oldham Esquire	10,000
John Phillips Esquire	10,000
Francis Millar Esquire	10,000
Norman M ^c Leod Esquire	10,000
Benjamin Gerrish Esquire	10,000
Joseph William Gorham Esquire	10,000
John Creighton Esquire	10,000
Charles Morris Gentleman	10,000
William Gorham Gentleman	10,000
Edward Crosby Gentleman	5,000
Benoni Danks Esquire	10,000

Joshua Loring Esquire 10,000

Quebec

1763.

Nov^r 22^dLetter to Montagu
Wilmot Esquire Gov^r of Nova Scotia.PRINCE EDWARD (FORMERLY ST. JOHN) ISLAND.

No. 941.INSTRUCTIONS, LORDS OF TRADE TO MONTAGU
WILMOT, GOVERNOR OF NOVA SCOTIA,re* ST. JOHN (PRINCE EDWARD) AND CAPE BRETON ISLANDS, 22 NOVEMBER, 1763.

B.T.N.S., VOL. 37, p. 248.

To Montagu Wilmot Esq^r., Governor of Nova Scotia.

Sir,

We have received your Letter to us of the 27th of September acquainting us with your arrival at Halifax, and with your having taken upon you the administration of Government as Lieutenant Governor and we are now to congratulate you, upon His Majesty's having appointed you to be His governor in Chief, and to acquaint you that your Commission and Instructions are preparing with all possible dispatch.

* * * *

We cannot close this letter without mentioning the Islands of St^t John and Cape Breton which being annexed to the Government of Nova Scotia are now become pressing objects of your Particular care and attention ; Their advantageous Situation in respect to the Fishery renders them of the greatest Importance to this Country and no measures should be left untryed that may tend to promote and encourage the carrying on this Fishery to the utmost extent it is capable of. We must desire therefore that you will forthwith cause an actual survey to be made of these Islands, reporting to us in the mean time every circumstance you can collect which may furnish us with any Information of the true State of them in respect to their Extent, the nature of the soil the Rivers and Harbours in each of them, and their particular productions and advantages, with your opinion in the fullest manner, not only what Establishment may be necessary for effectually uniting them to the Government of Nova Scotia, but also what plan of Settlement will be the most eligible & advantageous with respect to their situation in general and the advancement and convenience of the Fishery in particular, and until this is done, and you shall have received particular orders from home, you are upon no account to make grants in these Islands to any particular persons whatever ; but as much as possible to encourage and protect all temporary Establishm^{ts} for carrying on the Fishery, taking care that such Establishments, in respect to extent of Coast, are within the bounds of moderation ; and to discourage every attempt that may in its nature and consequence operate as a monopoly, or as a means of establishing any undue preference whatever.

p. 2226

We are,

Sir,

Your Most obedient humble Servants.

HILLSBOROUGH
SOAME JENYNS
GEO. RICE
BAMBER GASCOYNE.

Whitehall, }
Nov^r 22^d 1763. }

1764.
March 23^d.REPRESENTATION, LORDS OF TRADE TO THE KING,re* GRANTING LANDS ON THE ISLAND OF ST. JOHN (PRINCE EDWARD), 23 MARCH, 1764.

*sic.

[Enclosure in Order in Council of 9th May, 1764.]March 9, 1764.

B.T.N.S., VOL. 20. M : 108 ; ALSO IN B.T.N.S., VOL. 37, p. 394.

To the King's most Excellent Majesty.

May it please Your Majesty,

In Obedience to Your Majesty's Commands signified to Us by Your Order in Council, we have taken into consideration a *Memorial of John Earl of Egmont, on behalf of himself and his Nine Children, and of a great Number of Land and Sea Officers, a List of whose names is hereunto annexed, humbly praying for a Grant in Fee of the Island of St. John in the Gulph of St. Lawrence and in the Province of Nova Scotia, upon the terms and conditions therein proposed ; Whereupon we beg leave humbly to represent to your Majesty we are of Opinion it may be highly conducive to the speedy cultivation of Your Majesty's American Dominions, that the Nobility and other Persons of Rank and distinction in this Country should take the lead, and shew the example in the undertaking and carrying into execution the Settlement thereof, and that all due encouragement should be given to officers of Your Majesty's Fleet and Army to whose distinguished Bravery and conduct this Kingdom is so much indebted for the acquisitions made in the late War ; We therefore humbly recommend to your Majesty, that a proper distribution be made of Lands in this Island to the said Earl for himself and family, and to the other Memorialists conformable to such divisions and sub-divisions of the said Island as we shall humbly recommend to your Majesty, and in such proportions as may be suited to the particular purposes and intentions of the said several persons, so far as the same shall be found to be consistent with those principles of Settlement, Cultivation and Government, which have been adopted for many years past, and are founded upon the experience of former times.

To this end we beg leave to lay before your Majesty the Plan for the division and allotment of the Lands in this Island, which we had intended to submit to your Majesty, after having taken into our consideration the proposal of several Officers, Merchants and others for making Settlements therein ; which proposals were withdrawn upon the Earl of Egmont's having made his first application to your Majesty. The Propositions contained in this

p. 2228

Plan were : That the Island should be forthwith surveyed by Your Majesty's Surveyor for the Northern District. That it should be divided into Counties of five hundred thousand Acres each, so near as natural and proper Boundaries would admit. That the said Counties should be laid out into Parishes of One hundred thousand Acres each. That each Parish should be laid out in like manner into Townships of Twenty thousand Acres each. That each County, Parish, and Township should be laid out in such manner as to partake as much as possible of the natural advantages of the Country, especially those which arise from the Sea Coasts and from the sides of navigable Rivers. That there should be laid out in each County, a sufficient quantity of Land for the Scite and accommodation of a Town in the best and most Commodious part of the said County for the situation thereof, and that there should be reserved in each Parish a proper Scite for a Church, and a proper number of Acres near the same for a Glebe for a minister. And as this Plan is with great propriety applicable to .the proposals now under consideration and does we conceive, equally answer to the views and intentions of the Memorialists, We humbly beg. leave to recommend that it may be adopted upon the present occasion, and that when the Survey we have proposed, with the several Divisions and sub-divisions shall have been made and returned to your Majesty's Govt of Nova Scotia, regular Grants of such Divisions and sub-divisions be made under the Seal of the Province to the said Earl and his family and to each of the other Memorialists under the same Regulations and Conditions of Cultivation and Settlement, as' are prescribed by your Majesty's Instructions in respect to Grants of Lands in other parts of the said Province ; due regard being had to the intentions and abilities of the several Memorialists, as well as Your Majesty's Proclamation of the 7 of October last ; but We would humbly recommend, that (except in the Case of the said Earl, who proposes not only for himself, but for his Nine Children) no one person should possess more under such Grants than twenty thousand Acres, and that each should have a separate Grant ; for We beg leave to observe, that We do not see that any advantage whatever can arise to the public, or to the several Adventurers, by leaving the parcelling out of the lands to the said Earl, but on the contrary, experience has shown, in the Cases of the great and exorbitant Patents of Lands, in the Colonies, particularly in New York, that the making such Grants in joint Tenancy and Copartnership, and leaving the future distribution to be made by Deeds of Partition ; have been ever found to be attended with great inconveniencies and obstruction to Settlement, with endless litigation and dispute amongst the Proprietors, and have made it difficult to ascertain, and impossible to collect the Quit Rents reserved to the Crown. That with regard to the Grant Your Majesty shall think fitt to make to the Earl of Egmont. We humbly submit, whether, in consideration of His Lordship's extensive designs, and his abilities and zeal to carry them into execution, and that His Lordship proposes not only for himself but for his Nine Children. Your Majesty may not be pleased to Grant to his Lordship one whole Parish in the said Island for himself and his family ; but We beg leave to observe, to your Majesty that We do by no means recommend to Your Majesty the making grants of so large extent in general ; If therefore what we have proposed shall be approved by your Majesty and the several Memorialists shall be willing to accept Grants in the method we have recommended, We would further propose, that in order to prevent any delay in carrying the above mentioned plan into Execution, and to the end that your Majesty's Gov^r may be enabled in making the Grants, to Execute with Exactness and precision, Your Majesty's Royal Intentions, the Memorialists should severally make their proposals to this Board, that the proper directions may be transmitted to your Majesty's said Governor for making out Grants proportioned to the Intentions & abilities of the said several Memorialists as aforesaid. That as to the conditions which the said Earl mentions to have been already declared and agreed upon between his Lordship and the other Memorialists, We beg leave to represent, that every condition besides those of cultivation and Settlement, which Your Majesty usually inserts in Grants of Lands, will tend, as we apprehend, only to embarrass the Settlers, and to delay and discourage, or altogether prevent the Settlements. We have received no official information relative to these conditions, but if they are similar to, or partake of the nature of those which his Lordship proposed in his first Memorial to your Majesty for the Island of St. John. We beg leave to repeat our Opinion, that the Introduction of such Conditions of Settlement and Tenure is entirely impolitick, inexpedient and anticommercial. The Earl of Egmont proposes that the several intended Grantees of the Island should come under the, same Conditions of Quit Rent to your Majesty as are usual in the continental part of Your Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia ; whereupon we think it our duty to state to your Majesty that as this Island is particularly valuable from its soil as well as situation, We had it in our intention before his Lordship's proposals were made, to raise Your Majesty an higher Revenue of Quit Rent from this Island than from the other parts of Your Majesty's Province of Nova Scotia. And that certain Merchants had actually agreed to accept Grants of Townships at the rate of three shillings ^s hundred Acres, which Addition of one shilling ^s hundred Acres will make a difference in the Quit Rents of the whole Island of a sum not less than one Thousand two hundred and fifty pounds per Annum ; And we further submit to your Majesty upon this head, how far it may be reasonable, that the cleared Lands of the said Island, consisting as we are informed, of many thousand Acres, in the most fertile parts, should be exempted from Quit Rent for ten years, the policy of which encouragement is applicable only to such Lands as are not cleared at the time of Granting. That, if upon the whole Your Majesty shall be pleased to direct that Lands in the said Island should be granted in Townships of twenty thousand Acres and such sub-divisions thereof as may be found convenient, We have nothing further to recommend to your Majesty but that out of the said Grants there may be reserved to your Majesty according to the Instructions given to your Majesty's Governor of Novia [sic] Scotia, all Mines of Gold, Silver, Copper, Lead and Coals, and a sufficient breadth on the Sea Coast from High water mark for the free accommodation of all Your Majesty's Subjects in carrying on the

p. 2229

p. 2230

Fisheries, for which the Coasts of this Island are so advantageously situated, together with proper accommodation for the fishery of Sea Cows which we understand abound on some part of the said Island.

Which is most humbly submitted

HILLSBOROUGH
SOAME JENYNS
ED. ELIOT
GEO. RICE
ORWELL

Whitehall, }
March 23, 1764. }

No. 943.

EXTRACT FROM THE MINUTES OF THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

WEDNESDAY, 8 JULY, 1767.

[8 July, 1767.]

P.C. 2, Vol. 112, pp. 435-8.

AT A MEETING OF HIS MAJESTY'S COMMISSIONERS FOR TRADE & PLANTATIONS.

Present :

Lord Clare
Mr. Fitzherbert

Mr. Robinson

The Board took into Consideration the Merits and pretensions of such of the proponents for Lands in the Island of S^t John as had either personally or by their Agents appeared before their Lordships to Support their Petitions, and agreed to recommend to the Lords of the Committee of Council, to advise his Majesty, to cause the several Lots or Townships into which the said Island is divided, to be granted under the Seal of the province of Nova Scotia to the said proponents, according to the following Distribution, that is to say,—

.
William Fitzherbert Esq ^f M.P., Robert Campbell Merchant		Lot
William Matthew Burt Esq ^f M.P., John Callander Esq ^f ..		1
Alexander Fordyce Esq ^f , Robert Gordon Esq ^f ..		1
..		1
Gordon Graham L ^t . Col., Robert Porter Esq ^f ..		1
..

* * * *

Resolved that it be Recommended that the several Townships be Granted on the following Conditions and Reservations, that is to say,

1st—That the Quit Rents to be reserved on the several Lots, be, as near as may be, proportioned to the Value of the Lands, all Circumstances of Convenience and Advantage considered.

2nd—That a Quit Rent of Six Shillings  100 Acres be reserved to His Majesty His Heirs and Successors on Lots 5, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 24, 25, 26, 32, 33, 34, 35, 37, 39, 40, 54, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 63, 64.

3rd—That a Quit Rent of four Shillings per 100 Acres be reserved on Lots 6, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 21, 22, 23, 27, 28, 29, 31, 36, 38, 41, 42, 43, 44, 45, 46, 47, 48, 49, 50, 53, 61, 62, 65.

4th—That a Quit Rent of two Shillings per 100 Acres be reserved on Lots 1, 2, 3, 4, 7, 20, 30, 51, 60, 67.

p. 2232

5th—That the several foregoing Quit Rents be payable on the feast of S^t Michael, or within fourteen Days after, in every Year, to commence and become payable, upon one half of the Land, on the said Feast of S^t Michael which shall first happen after the expiration of five Years from the Date of the Grant, and to be payable on every ensuing Feast of S^t Michael, or within fourteen Days after and the whole Quantity to be Subject in like manner to the like Annual Quit Rent at the Expiration of ten Years.

6th—That there be a Reservation to His Majesty his Heirs and Successors of all such parts of each Township respectively as have already been set apart or shall hereafter be thought necessary to be set apart for erecting fortifications [sic], building Wharfs, Inclosing Naval Yards or laying our Highways for the convenience of Communication between one part of the Island and another.

7th—That there be also a Reservation in a proper part of each Township of one hundred Acres of Land for the Scite of a Church and as a Glebe for a Minister of the Gospel, and thirty Acres for a Schoolmaster.

8th—That in order to promote and Encourage the Fishery for which many parts of this Island are conveniently Situated, there be a Clause in the Grant of each Township that abuts upon the Sea Shore, containing a reservation of Liberty to all His Majesty's Subjects in general of carrying on a free Fishery on the Coast of the said Township, and of erecting Stages and other necessary Building for the said Fishery within the Distance of five hundred Feet from high water mark.

9th—That there be a reservation to His Majesty his Heirs and Successors of all Mines of Gold, Silver and Coals.

10th—That the Grantee or Grantees of each Township do settle the same within ten years from the Date of the Grant in the proportion of one person for every two hundred Acres.

11th—That if one third of the Land is not settled in the above mentioned proportion within four years from the Date of the Grant, the whole be forfeited to His Majesty his Heirs and Successors.

12th—That the Settlers so to be Introduced be Protestants from such parts of Europe, as are not within His Majesty's Dominions ; or such persons as have resided within His Majestys Dominions in America for two Years antecedent to the Date of the Grants.

* * * *

No. 944.

C

Queen vs. Cox

(1850-74) 1 P. E. I. REP.

Vide Page 2095, infra.

Privy Council
Documents

Volume V
Contents

PROVINCE OF QUEBEC

[10 Feby., 1764.]

No. 945.

Quebec.

EXTRACT FROM PRIVY COUNCIL MINUTES OF

10 FEBRUARY, 1764.

Order approving
Commee Report
upon the Petition of Mess^{rs} Price and Knutton Merchants praying for a Grant of Lands near Cape
Gaspee in this province.

P.C. 2, Vol. 110, p. 256.

*sic.

Whereas the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations have represented to His Majesty at this Board that a Memorial has been presented to them by Benjamin Price and William Knutton of Quebec Merchants, praying that a Grant may be made to the Memorialists of a Tract of Land in His Majesty's Province of Quebec between the River Aclaude and Gaspée Cape, with a View to the carrying on a Fishery there, and employing the Persons whom they intend to settle in several useful Works, which Request the said Lords Commissioners apprehend will be for His Majesty's Service to comply with. His Majesty this day took the said Representation together with a Report made thereupon by a Committee of the Lords of His Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council into His Royal Consideration, and being inclined to give all fitting Encouragement for the settling of Lands in the said Province, Is hereby pleased with the Advice of His Privy Council to order that the Governor or Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Province of Quebec for the time being do cause a Survey to be made, and a Township, consisting of Twenty thousand Acres to be laid out in a proper and convenient Situation between the said River Aclaude and *Caspee Cape, and to grant the said Township to the Memorialists Benjamin Price and Wm. Knutton under the Seal of the said Province upon the following Terms, Reservations and Conditions, Viz^t.

First—That the Grantees be obliged to settle the said Township with Protestant Inhabitants with Ten Years from the Date of the Grant in the Proportion of one Person to every hundred Acres.

Secondly—That if One third of the Township be not settled with Protestant Inhabitants in the above mentioned Proportion within three Years from the Date of the Grant, the whole to be void.

Thirdly—That all such Parts of the Land as shall not be settled with Protestant Inhabitants in the said Proportion at the Expiration of ten Years from the Date of the Grant do revert to the Crown.

p. 2234

Fourthly—That the Grantees do pay an Annual Quit Rent to the Crown of Two Shillings Sterling for every hundred Acres contained in the Grant, to commence at the Expiration of Ten Years from the Date thereof.

Fifthly—That there be Reservations in the Grant of all such Parts as the Person legally appointed to survey the said Lands shall report and mark out in a Map to be annexed to his Report, as proper for Erecting Fortifications for Publick Quays, Roads and all other Publick Uses whatsoever.

Sixthly—That there be a Reservation to the Crown of all Mines of Gold and Silver.

Seventhly—That after the Expiration of three Years from the Date of the Grant, the Grantees be obliged to Plant and cultivate annually Six Acres of Land with Hemp or Flax.

Eighthly—That One hundred Yards in Breadth above High Water Mark along the Sea Coast be reserved to the Crown for the use and Benefit of all His Majesty's Subjects.

And the Governor or Commander in Chief of His Majesty's Province of Quebec for the time being, and all others whom it may concern, are required to carry His Majesty's Commands hereby Signified into Execution.

EXTRACT FROM PRIVY COUNCIL MINUTES OF[3 Dec., 1766.]

3 DECEMBER, 1766.

Quebec.

Order for Granting 12,000 Acres of Land to Alexander
Maitland Esq^r.

P.C. 2, VOL. 112, p. 120.

Whereas Application hath been made to His Majesty at this Board by Alexander Maitland Esquire praying for a Grant of Lands in his Majesty's province of Quebec in Order to make a Settlement thereupon, His Majesty this Day took the same into Consideration, and having received the opinion of the Lords Commissioners for Trade and Plantations, and also of a Committee of the Lords of His Majesty's most Honourable Privy Council thereupon, is hereby pleased with the advice of his Privy Council to Order that the Governor or Commander in Chief of His Majesty's province of Quebec for the Time being, do Cause twelve thousand Acres of Land to be Surveyed in one Contiguous Tract in such part of the said Province as the said Alexander Maitland or his Attorney shall Choose not Already Granted or Surveyed to Others and that upon a Return of such Survey Conformable to his Majesty's Directions in his General Instructions he do pass a Grant for the same to the said Alexander Maitland under the Seal of the said province upon the following Terms Conditions and Reservations.

First.—That the Grantee be obliged to settle the said Lands with Protestant Inhabitants within ten Years from the Date of the Grant in the proportion of one person for every hundred Acres.

Secondly.—That if one third of the Lands be not settled with Protestant Inhabitants in the above mentioned proportion, within three Years from the Date of the Grant, the whole to be Void.

Thirdly.—That all such parts of the Land as shall not be Settled with Protestant Inhabitants in the said proportion at the Expiration of ten Years from the Date of the Grant do revert to the Crown.

Fourthly.—That the Grantee do pay an Annual Quit Rent to the Crown of two Shillings Sterling for every hundred Acres Contained in the Grant to Commence at the Expiration of ten Years from the Date thereof.

Fifthly.—That there be a Reservation in the Grant of all such parts as the person legally appointed to Survey the said Lands shall report and mark out in the Map to be annexed to his Report as proper for Erecting Fortifications, for Publick Quays, Roads and all other Publick Uses.

p. 2236

Sixthly.—That there be a reservation to the Crown of all Mines of Gold and Silver.

Seventhly.—That after the expiration of three Years from the Date of the Grant, the Grantee be obliged to plant and Cultivate Annually a due proportion of the Land not less than forty eight poles in every thousand acres with Hemp or Flax.

Eighthly.—That one hundred Yards in breadth above High Water Mark, along the Sea Coast be reserved to the Crown for the free Use and Benefit of all His Majesty's Subjects.

And the Governor or Commander in Chief of his Majesty's province of Quebec for the time being and all others whom it may Concern are required to Carry his Majesty's Commands hereby Signified into Execution.

No. 947.

[25 July,
1785.]ADDITIONAL INSTRUCTION,¹

DATED 25 JULY, 1785, PASSED UNDER THE ROYAL SIGN-MANUAL AND SIGNET, FOR FREDERICK HALDIMAND AS CAPTAIN GENERAL AND GOVERNOR IN CHIEF OF THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC, OR TO THE COMMANDER IN CHIEF OF THE SAID PROVINCE FOR THE TIME BEING.

[L.S.]

C.O. (QUEBEC 1768-1787, VOL. I.)

George R.

Additional Instruction To Our Trusty and Welbeloved Frederick Haldimand Esq^f Our Captain General and Governor in Chief of Our Province of Quebec in America, or to the Commander Chief of the said Province for the Time being. Given at Our Court at St. James's the Twenty fifth Day of July 1785. In the Twenty fifth year of Our Reign.

Whereas it will be for the General Benefit of Our Subjects carrying on the Fishery in the Bay of Chaleure in Our Province of Quebec, that such part of the Beach and Shore of the said Bay, as is ungranted, should be reserved to Us, Our Heirs and Successors ; It is therefore Our Will and pleasure, that you do not in future, direct any Survey to be made or Grant passed for any part of the ungranted Beach or Shore of the said Bay of Chaleure, except such parts thereof as by Our Orders in Council dated the 29th of June and 21th July 1785, are directed to be granted to John Shoolbred of London Merchant and Messrs Robin Pipon and Company, of the Island of Jersey Merchants, but that the same be reserved to Us, Our Heirs and Successors, together with a sufficient quantity of Wood-Land adjoining thereto necessary for the purpose of carrying on the Fishery ; The Limits of such Wood-Land so to be reserved, to be determined upon and ascertained by You and Our Council for Our said Province of Quebec, in such manner, as from the most Authentick Information shall appear to you and them most Convenient and proper for that purpose ; It is Nevertheless Our Intention, and We do hereby Signify to you Our Will and pleasure, that the Free Use of such Beach or

Shore, and of the Wood-Lands so to be reserved shall be allowed by you or any person Authorized by you, to such of Our Subjects as shall resort thither for the purpose of carrying on the Fishery, in such proportions as the Number of Shallops he or they shall respectively employ may require ; provided that if any Fisherman who shall have permission to Occupy any part of the said Beach or Shore and Wood-Land for the purpose of the said Fishery, shall not during any One Season, continue so to Occupy and Employ any part of the said Beach and Shore and Wood-Lands so allotted to him, you or any person authorized by you as above may and shall allow the Use of such part to any other Fisherman who shall apply for the same, for the purpose of carrying on the Fishery—

¹ Canadian Archives, Q. 26 B. p. 228.

p. 2238

And whereas it may be necessary to Establish local Regulations to prevent Abuses as well as disputes and Misunderstanding between the Fishermen resorting to the said Beach or Shore, It is Our Will and Pleasure that you by and with the Advice and Consent of Our said Council, do frame such Regulations as to you shall appear necessary to Answer those Salutary purposes, and transmit the same to Us thro' One of Our principal Secretaries of State for Our pleasure therein by the first Opportunity.¹

G. R.

[¹ The first Ordinance passed relating to these fisheries was that of 28 Geo. III., cap. 6, “For regulating the Fisheries in the River St. Lawrence in the Bays of Gaspe and Chaleurs, on the island of Bonaventure and the opposite shore of Percé” Ordinances Made and passed by the Governor and Legislative Council of the Province of Quebec, 1795. p. 153 also, Ordinances, 1763-91, p. 216.]

No. 948.

C

INSTRUCTIONS TO GOVERNORS OF QUEBEC (AND LOWER CANADA), 1786-1839.

Vide Vol. II, pages 850, 877, 882.

No. 949.

EXTRACT FROM MINUTES OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL OF QUEBEC,Re* PATENT OF LANDS TO JOHN SHOOLBRED.

Q. 38, p. 47.

Wednesday 23 July 1788.

[23 July, 1788.]
Mr. Shoolbred

Present:

His Excellency The Right Honourable Lord Dorchester

The Honble William Smith Esqr. Chief Justice

Hugh Finlay

Henry Caldwell

Thomas Dunn

William Grant

Edwd. Harrison

P. R. De St. Ours

John Collins

Francis Baby

Adam Mabane

Charles De

Lanaudiere

J. G. C. DeLery

Le Cte. Dupré,

Esquires

His Lordship and the Board resumed the consideration of the Report of the Deputy Surveyor General The Attorney General, The Solicitor General and the Clerk of the Kings Terrars and the Papers accompanying the same, and the Draft offered by the Chief Justice of the Patent off to Mr. John Shoolbred, as mentioned in the minutes of yesterday—Ordered by His Lordship with the advice of the Council that these papers be entered on the minutes for the clearer manifestation of the nature of the French Grants antecedent to the conquest, and that a Patent pass the seal to Mr. Shoolbred according to the form proposed by the Chief Justice.

Report of the Attorney & Solicitor
General.

The Council at the same time beg leave most humbly to suggest as the ground of the present resolution that the thirty ninth article of His Majesty's Instructions requiring Grants in Fief and Seigniorie in the manner practised, prior to the Conquest, appeared to leave them without Deliberation or choice for a Selection of the charges, Reservations and conditions introduced in the French Government, and that it will therefore as they conceive, be necessary to adopt them all in every future Grant, until His Majesty's further pleasure shall be further known.

My Lord,

“ In obedience to Your Lordship's order in Council on the thirteenth, day of June last, We have with the Assistance of the Clerk of the Terrars inspected that part of the public Records called Régistres des Concessions.

“ And we find that from the Year 1672 to the year 1755 the Grants have differed in their conditions and reservations in the manner stated at large in the papers Marked A, which, with an abstract thereof marked B, We beg leave to submit to Your Lordship, presenting at one view the general conditions under which the several Governors and Intendants granted the Kings Lands within those periods with the particular exceptions made from those general rules, which appear to have varied with the appointment of the Different Governors & Intendants, increasing the conditions upon the Grantees, and the reservations to the King as the Colony grew in importance and consideration.

“ We have prepared and have the Honour to present to Your Lordship such an amended Draft of the Patent to Mr. John Shoolbred as we conceive His Majesty's Order in His favour and the Royal Instructions to require ; and we beg leave to submit to Your Lordship in what respect a Draft made conformable to the Report of the Committee of the whole Council, laid before us, would differ from His Majesty's Instructions Art. 39, directing ' that all Lands be granted in Fief or Seignior, in like manner as was practised antecedent to the Conquest of the Province, omitting however, in any Grant that shall be passed of such Lands, the Reservations of any Judicial powers or privileges whatever.' And in the same article directing ` That all Grants in Fief or Seignior so to be passed shall be made subject to the Royal Ratification or disallowance, and a due Registry thereof within a limited time, in like manner as was practised in regard to Grants & Concessions held in Fief or Seignior under the French Government.

First—Grants of Land (after Canada was taken into the Government of the French King) were made in the name of the Governor General and Intendant, tho' there appear some exceptions to this Rule, by Grants being made by either of them Separately : They were all made subject to the King's Ratification, within the limited period of one Year ; and yet there are instances of Ratification being made by the French King some years after the date of the Grants in Canada.

The present Draft is prepared in the King's Name, and no condition is inserted for His Majesty's Ratification of the Grant ; under the idea that His Majesty's Royal order renders such condition unnecessary.

Second—The Report laid before us proposes that there be inserted in the Patent an express Reservation of all Judicial powers or privileges whatever.

It is our Duty to submit to Your Lordship's consideration our opinion that the Grant should stand as originally reported in that Respect (being conformable to His Majesty's Instructions) omitting that reservation.

It was a general rule observed by the Governors and Intendants to oblige

p. 2241

the Grantees of Lands to a Settlement thereon in one Year, who were to impose the like condition on their Tenants or Censitaires.

There will appear by the papers A and B, exceptions to this Rule, but there will likewise appear, that a limited period for Settlement was always expressed in the Grant.

The Honourable Committee have reported that the terms expressive of a limitation of the time for commencing a Settlement upon the premises should be left out of the Grant ; but we take the Liberty humbly to observe to Your Lordship and the Honourable Board of Council, that inasmuch as His Majesty has been graciously pleased to signify His royal will and pleasure in His Instructions to Your Lordship Art. 39 “ that Grants in Fief or Seigniory should be made in like manner as was practised antecedent to the Conquest. And as a limited period for Settlement and Improvement was during the French Government always express'd in the Grant ; it may not be improper to insert a like condition in this Grant, which is submitted in the present Draft.

Fourth—A Condition is inserted in the Draft page three, the last line to the fourth line of fourth page adopted by the Honourable Committee, founded in great part on the 37th Article of His Majesty's Instructions to Your Lordship, “ permitting all Fishermen to cut down and use all such wood and Timber growing on the premises ” (intended to be granted) “ as shall be necessary for their Fishing Establishments,” but we have omitted that part of the Resolve of the Honourable Committee which refers to the Act or ordinance passed in the last Session of the Legislative Council for regulating the Fisheries, &c. as being in our opinion unnecessary.

We perceive that from the local Situation of the premises intended to be granted, on account of the proximity of the Mountains to the Shore, His Majesty's Royal Pleasure for reservation of a Sufficient Quantity of woodland adjoining thereto, necessary for the purposes of carrying on the Fishery, cannot be ascertained and limited without impeding the Execution of His Majesty's gracious Intentions in favour of the Grantee ; By Your Lordship's adopting the Resolve of the Honourable Committee, The Grantee will embrace every benefit from the Grant, that the Nature and Situation of the Premises will admit of ; and at the same time His Majesty's Subjects, resorting thither for the purpose of carrying on the Fishery, will Freely enjoy the advantages graciously intended by His Majesty in respect thereof.

Fifth—His Majesty's Instructions Article 39 after directing that all Grants in Fief or Seigniorie should be made subject to the Royal Ratification or Disallowance, require that a due Registry thereof be made within a limited time, in like manner as was practised in regard to Grants and Concessions held in Fief or Seigniorie the French Government.

We learn that all original Grants made by the Governor and Intendant were registered in the Registres D'Intendance, before they were delivered to the Grantees ; and that the French Kings Ratifications of those Grants were registered by order of the Superior Council in their Registers des Insinuations to whom they were presented, for that purpose.

p. 2242

When the present Grant shall have been engrossed by the proper Officer, and passed by Your Lordship under the Great Seal of the province, that Officer may be commanded by Your Lordship to transmit it to the Clerk of the Inrollments to be registered and afterwards delivered to the Grantee.

The full examination of all the Registers, necessary to lay before Your Lordship an exact State of the several conditions upon which Lands were granted prior to the French King's taking the Colony and Government of Canada from the Company, would require considerable time, and which we shall proceed to do with all Diligence as Your Lordship may direct, but we humbly conceive the Extracts herewith submitted will be sufficient to enable Your Lordship to form a Resolution upon the object of our Reference.

All which is humbly submitted by

Your Lordship's Most obedient and most humble Servants

(signed)

J MONK, Attorney General
J. WILLIAMS Solicitor General.

His Excellency
The Right Honle Lord Dorchester.

No. 950.[24 July,
1788.]DRAFT OF LETTERS PATENT OF GRANT TO JOHN SHOOLBRED.

Q. 38, p. 92.

George the Third by the Grace of Great Britain France and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith &c.

To all to whom these presents shall come or may concern Greeting. Whereas we did lately give order for the granting divers parcels of Land, Benefits and Advantages, within our Province of Quebec to John Shoolbred of London, Merchant as by the said order bearing date the Twenty Ninth day of June in the Twenty Sixth Year of our Reign or the Record thereof reference being thereunto had may more fully appear. And whereas in pursuance of the Applications made to our Governor and Council of our said Province such proceedings have been had towards carrying our said order into Execution, that, on the Report of our Surveyor or deputy Surveyor General approved by our said Governor and Council of the said Province there hath been set off for the said John Shoolbred the following Tracts and Parcels of Lands in the Bay of Chaleurs, vizt. a certain Lot or tract of Land lying at Bonaventure beginning at the South Extremity of the public Road which leads from the Harbour of Bonaventure to the Settlement on the North Bank, thence running nearly North East to the extreme point of the said Bank, and bounded by the course of the Harbour, thence still bounded by the course of the said Harbour nearly North West two hundred and Sixty four feet, thence South West parallel to the first course, to the public Road, thence South East two hundred and Sixty four feet to the first Station. Also a Lot of Land and Space of Ground whereon was built a Store House situate four hundred and forty four feet from the North East point of the said Bank and East of the Public Road, which with an allowance of fifteen feet on each side, and behind the Space whereon the said Store stood containing five thousand and thirty five square links. Also the Lots of Land and Space of Ground whereon were built two other Store houses with fifteen feet on each side, and behind each of the spaces of Ground whereon the said Stores Stood ; the one situate two hundred and forty feet from the South end of the Bank and one hundred and Sixty feet West of the Public Road, containing three thousand Eight hundred and twenty two links square ; and the other situate twenty feet distant from the North West Corner of the last mentioned Ground whereon the said Store formerly stood, containing five thousand and thirty five square links ; the said Several Lots or Parcels

p. 2244

of Land above mentioned containing in the whole One Acre one rood and twenty one perches ; Also a certain other tract of Land lying at Percé, between the Bays of Chaleurs and Gaspé, adjacent to the Island of Bonaventure, being the last fishing Post at present Settled and Established on the North Beach leading to Mount Joli, at Percé aforesaid, bounded on the West by a Deep Gréve or Ditch adjoining to a fresh water Brook, thence running East seven Chains of Sixty Six feet each along the Bank, thence South ten Chains, thence West Seven Chains, thence North parallel to the second course unto the first Station containing Seven Acres. Also a certain other tract of land situate on the Westernmost Extremity of Chaleurs Bay running up the River Ristigouche about fifteen miles to the first point of Land below Battery Point, beginning at a boundary line one hundred and fifty Chains East of the bottom of the Eastermost bay of Nouvelle Bason running back North twenty two Degrees East to the Mountains thence bounded by their course at an average Depth of Forty Chains from High water mark to their base round Nouvelle Bason Westward to a small Cove three hundred Chains West of the said first mentioned Bay bearing from the Northermost extremity of Migoacha Point being a Sand bank. South eighty four Degrees East, and North eighty four Degrees West, the superficial content of the said last described lands is two thousand and Eighty Acres. Also a tract of Land beginning at the aforesaid Cove, and running the Several Courses of Point Migoacha to the Western Extremity of a Salt Marsh distant from a Point where the inaccessible Coast begins, about Eighty Chains, thence to the said Point containing one thousand Six hundred Acres. Also a certain Tract beginning at the first mentioned point below Battery Point North Nineteen Degrees and a half, East Eighty Chains, thence South Eighty Eight degrees East eighty nine Chains, thence North thirty three Degrees East Eighty Chains, thence North Eighty three Degrees East Sixty Nine Chains, thence North fifty Six Degrees East One hundred and Seven Chains, thence South Eighty Degrees East twenty three Chains, thence South fifty Degrees East fifty Eight Chains, thence South Sixty Seven Degrees East forty nine chains, thence North Sixty Eight Degrees East Eighty Eight Chains, thence South Sixty Six degrees East fifty Seven Chains, thence South Sixty five degrees East Eighty four Chains, thence South Seventy three Degrees East one hundred and fifty Six Chains, thence South thirty nine Degrees East ninety five Chains, thence South twelve Degrees East one hundred and Seventy five Chains, thence South Eleven Degrees East fifty five Chains, thence South Fifty six Degrees West forty five Chains to Yacta Point containing Six thousand five hundred and fifty Acres, more or less, as by the Minutes of our Council for the said Province Reference being thereunto had may more fully appear. And

Whereas by our Royal Instructions dated at St. James's the Twenty third day of August in the said twenty Sixth Year of our Reign we did command that in Executing the Power and Authority given by our Commission to our said Governor with the Advice and Consent of our said Council to settle and agree with the Inhabitants for such Lands Tenements and Hereditaments as we had power to dispose of, the same be granted in Fief or Seigniority in like manner as was

p. 2245

practised antecedent to the Conquest of the said Province, and on the Report made to our said Governor and Council by John Collins Esqr. our Deputy Surveyor General, James Monk Esqr. our Attorney General, Jenkin Williams Esqr. our Solicitor General & Francis Joseph Cugnet Esqr. Clerk of the Terrars of our Royal Domain it appeared to our said Governor and Council, that the Grants of Seigniorities, in the said Province had been made Subject tho' not in every instance with all the same Charges, conditions and Reservations yet with more or less of the Charges Conditions and Reservations following to wit of holding in Fief and Seigniority to bear Faith and Homage at the Castle of St. Lewis at Quebec and to be held of the same to the usual Duties and Dues according to the Custom of Paris practised in this Country, to preserve and to cause to be preserved by the Terretenants Oake and Wood fit for Masts and the construction of the King's Vessels, to give information to the King or the Governor of the Country of Mines, Minerals & Ores found in the Extent of the Granted Seigniority, to make Settlement and Residents thereon and by the Tenants thereof to clear the Land by various specific periods of Years, and in some instances with indefinite terms open to reasonable construction, to leave Roads and ways necessary for public Utility, to leave the Shores free to all fishermen with exception to such parts of the Shores which the Seigneurs shall have held of for their Fishing to oblige the Censitaires to erect Buildings and Stock their Concessions with Cattle, and the Seigneur to make Concessions at the accustomed Cens et Rentes and of one Arpent in front by forty Arpents in Depth, to resurrender to the Crown such Portions of the Land as might be wanted for Fortifications, Batteries, Magazines and public Works, to take Trees necessary for these Works, and firewood for the Garrison of such Forts without charge for compensation or Indemnity, and Red Firs or Pines for the making Tar and Pitch, which conditions were declared to be under the pain of Forfeiture Eviction and Expulsion from the Land so granted, with the further declaration in Express Terms of the Concession or Grants being subject to the King's Pleasure, and the Grantees being bound to sue out the Ratification or Confirmation within a Year from the date thereof. And Whereas our said Governor with the advice and consent of our said Council deeming it expedient until we shall see cause otherwise to command respecting the Disposition of our Lands and Territories in the said Province that our Patent to the said

John Shoolbred pass subject to all and every the Charges Conditions and Reservations at any time practised in the Grants of Seigniories within the same Province antecedent to the Conquest thereof and above particularly expressed. Know Ye therefore that of our special Grace certain knowledge and meer Motion we have given granted and confirmed and for us our Heirs and Successors we do give grant and confirm unto the said John Shoolbred his Heirs and Assigns for ever all and every the Lands Tenements and Hereditarnents herein before particularly Described together with the Right and Priviledge of Fishing and Hunting within the same Lands to which we give the name of To have and to hold the same to the said John Shoolbred his Heirs and Assigns to the only proper use and behoof of the said John Shoolbred His Heirs and Assigns for ever in fief and Seigniory with the Right and Priviledge of Fishing and Hunting throughout the whole of the Lands aforesaid—charged to bear faith and Homage at our Castle of St. Lewis in our City of Quebec, of which it shall be held to the accustomed Duties and Dues according to the custom of Paris practised antecedent to the Conquest in the said Province, Provided always and these Presents are upon this express condition that if the said John Shoolbred His Heirs or Assigns shall make Default in performing consenting to and complying with all or any of the Clauses above to be contained as Charges Reservations and Conditions used in any Grant or Grants of Seigniories within the said Province and antecedent to the Conquest thereof or shall by any ways or means impede withstand or obstruct the Execution of the said Clauses any or either of them or if the said John Shoolbred his Heirs or Assigns shall not at all times permit His Majesty's Good and faithfull Subjects employed in Fishing or in the Vicinity of the said Lands to have free ingress and egress to and from the Lands aforementioned for the purpose of fishing on the Beach or Shore and Cutting and carrying wood from the same Lands for fuel and other uses necessary and expedient for the better carrying on the Business of their said Fisheries, that then and in case of the Breach of any or either of the conditions above mentioned this our present Grant and every thing therein contained shall cease and be absolutely void, And the Lands and Premises hereby Granted shall revert to and revest in us our Heirs and Successors as if the same Grant had never been made any thing herein before contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

p. 2246

In Testimony whereof we have caused these our Letters to be made Patent and the Great Seal of our said Province to be thereunto affixed and the same to be registered and inrolled in one of the Books for the Recording or Inrollment of our Letters Patent in the Secretary's Office for the said Province remaining. Witness our Trusty and well beloved Guy Lord Dorchester our Captain General and Governor in Chief of our said Province, at our Castle of Saint Lewis in our City of

Quebec this Twenty fourth Day of July in the Year of our Lord
One Thousand Seven hundred and eighty eight, and of our Reign the Twenty eighth.

Privy Council
Documents

Volume V
Contents

[1756.]

Concerning Fishery in Scotland refer to 13
Geo. I. c. 30.

Act of the Third
Session of Queen
Anne in Scotland.

The use of Ports,
Harbours, and Shores, allowed for landing nets, erecting Stages and Tents, and curing fish.

GREAT BRITAIN.

No. 951.

IMPERIAL ACT 29 GEO. II. CAP. 23, 1756.

ENTITLED “AN ACT FOR ENCOURAGING THE FISHERIES IN THAT PART OF GREAT BRITAIN CALLED SCOTLAND.”

“Whereas the extending and improving of the British Fishery is “of great Importance to this Kingdom, as it not only adds “considerably to the national Wealth, but is moreover a fruitful “Nursery of able Seamen for the publick Service ; And Whereas the “same is greatly obstructed by certain Restrictions, Exactions and “Regulations, to which the Fishers and Curers of Fish in North “Britain are subject, either by Custom or the Laws now in Force ; “And whereas it further appears that it would be very advantageous “to Trade in general, as well as to the Fishery, if the said Exactions “and Restrictions were taken off, and such new Regulations made, “as are more accommodated to the present Circumstances of both : “And whereas by an Act made in the third Session of the first “Parliament of the late Queen Anne, in Scotland intituled, An Act for “advancing and establishing the Fishing Trade in and about that “Kingdom, all her Majesty's Subjects of that Kingdom are “authorised and impowered to take and cure Herring and White “Fish, in all and sundry the Seas, Channels, Bays, Firths, Lochs, “Rivers and so forth, of that her Majesty's Kingdom and Islands “thereto belonging, wheresoever Herring or White Fish are or can “be taken ; and for their greater conveniency, to have the free Use “of all Ports, Harbours, Shores, Forelands and others, for bringing “in, pickling, drying, unloading and loading the same, upon Payment “of the ordinary. Dues where Harbours are built, that is, such as are “paid for Ships, Boats and other Goods ; and discharges all other “Exactions, such as one Night's fishing in the Week, commonly “called Saturday's Fishing, Top-money, Stallage, and the like :” And for the further explaining, enforcing and amending the said Law ;

* * * *

II. And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all and every Person or Persons employed in the said Fishery, on the Coasts of that Part of Great Britain called Scotland, or on the said Coasts of Orkney, Shetland, or any of the said Islands, shall have and exercise the free Use of all Ports, Harbours, Shores and Forelands, in that Part of Great Britain called Scotland, or in Orkney, Shetland, or any of the said Islands, £100 Penalty, on demanding or taking such consideration money.

below the highest

p. 2248

High Water Mark, and for the Space of one hundred Yards on any Waste or uncultivated Land, beyond such Mark, within the Land, for landing their Nets, Casks, and other Materials, Utensils and Stores, and for erecting Tents, Huts and Stages, and for the landing, pickling, curing, drying, and reloading their Fish, without paying any Foreland or other Dues, or any other Sum or Sums of Money, or other Consideration whatsoever, for such Liberty, except as hereafter excepted ; any Law, Statute or Custom whatsoever to the contrary notwithstanding : And if any Person or Persons shall presume to demand or receive any Dues, Sums of Money, or other Consideration what-soever, for the Use of any such Ports, Harbours, Shores or Forelands, within the Limits aforesaid, so made Use of for the Purposes aforesaid, or shall presume to obstruct the Fishermen or other Persons employed in the taking, buying, or curing of Fish in the Use of the same, every Person so offending shall, for every such Offence, forfeit the Sum of one hundred Pounds Sterling, to be recovered in Manner herein after directed.

* * * *

No. 952.IMPERIAL ACT 11 GEORGE III. CAP. 31.

[1771.]

AN ACT FOR THE ENCOURAGEMENT OF THE WHITE HERRING FISHERY.

“ Whereas the carrying on and Improvement of the British “White Herring Fisheries are of great Importance to these “Kingdoms, by increasing the Trade and Navigation thereof ; and “being a Nursery for Seamen, and otherwise a Means of employing “and providing for great Numbers of industrious Poor provided that “reasonable Encouragement be given to such Persons as are willing “to carry on the said Fisheries : ”

* * * *

XI. And be it further enacted by the Authority aforesaid, That all and every Person or Persons employed in the said Fisheries may fish in any Part of the British Seas, and shall have and exercise the free Use of all Ports, Harbours, Shores, and Forelands in Great Britain, or the Islands belonging to the Crown of Great Britain, below the highest High-water Mark, and for the Space of one hundred Yards on any waste or uncultivated Land beyond such Mark, within the Land, for landing their Nets, Casks, and other Materials, Utensils, and Stores, and for erecting Tents, Huts, and Stages, and for the landing, pickling, curing, and reloading their Fish, and in drying their Nets, without paying any Foreland or other Dues, or any other Sum or Sums of Money, or other Consideration whatsoever, for such Liberty (except as herein after is excepted), any Law, Statute, or Custom, to the contrary notwithstanding : And if any Person or Persons shall presume to demand or receive any Dues, Sums of Money, or other Consideration whatsoever, for the Use of any such Ports, Harbours, Shores, or Forelands, within the Limits aforesaid, or shall obstruct the Fishermen, or other Persons employed in the taking or curing of Fish, or drying their Nets, in the Use of the same, every Person so offending shall, for every such Offence, forfeit the Sum of one hundred Pounds, to be recovered and levied in Manner herein after directed.

LABRADOR COAST.

No. 953.

[1774.

EXTRACT FROM "CONSIDERATIONS OF THE RIGHTS AND INTERESTS OF THE ADVENTURERS
IN THE LABRADOR FISHERY."¹

BY JOHN CARTWRIGHT.

Paragraph 108.

* * * *

5th —That all the land backwards through the whole extent of every sealing post, to the distance of one mile from high water

* 'Tis probable that it will rarely happen that cod-fishers should thus interfere with Sealers ; for, if a post be advantageously situated for both fisheries, the first occupant will undoubtedly erect works for, and carry on, both ; so that it may possibly be thought unnecessary to leave the posts open in this respect to any other than the first proprietor.

† Wood of a tolerable size is scarce in this country : so that 'tis reasonable he who has the property in the soil should not be obliged to accommodate the cod-fishers further than is necessary ; as they can repair to the unappropriated places for timber and plank for boat building, masts, oars, &c.

mark, shall be accounted as part of such post and belong in full right to the proprietor : except that a right be reserved of cutting wood for the use of His Majesty's Ships or Forts ; and a general right of free passage to all through every uninclosed part of the same ; and excepting also that a right be reserved to any *cod-fisher of erecting upon and adjoining to the same, every building and work necessary in the cod-fishery, and of cutting wood sufficient for such buildings and works upon the shore, and for fuel ; but nothing more.† But the Seal-fisher being proprietor of the soil, that his necessary works and erections shall not be encroached upon, or interfered with, by those of the cod-fisher ; nor he be any way obstructed by him in the execution of any part of his business.

* * * *

¹ This manuscript was enclosed in a letter by the author, dat [sic] 23 March, 1774, to the Earl of Dartmouth, Secretary of State for the Colonies, for his consideration in relation to the government of the coast of Labrador. (Can. Arch., Dartmouth Originals, Vol. XIII.)

[25 June,
1787.]EXTRACTS FROM MINUTES OF THE LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL OF QUEBEC, 1787-1788.

PRIVY COUNCIL D, p. 323.

MONDAY, 25 JUNE 1787.

Present

Captain Cartwright's
Application for the exclusive property of Touchstoke Bay.His Excellency The Right Honourable Guy Lord Dorchester, Governor.

The Honourable Henry Hope Esqr. Lt. Governor.

William Smith, C. Justice J. G. C. De Lery

Hugh Finlay

John Fraser

Thomas Dunn

Henry Caldwell

Edward Harrison

William Grant

Adam Mabane

Paul Roc De St Ours

George Pownall

Francis Baby

Le Comte Dupré

[20 March,
1788.]

His Excellency communicated to the Council a Letter from Lord Sidney [sic], dated “ Whitehall 5th April 1787 ” concerning Captain Cartwright's Application “ for a Grant, and the exclusive property of Touchstoke bay, on the Labrador Coast, for the purpose of a Fishery ” with several other papers upon that subject.—Referred to the Committee named the 31st of May for the Fisheries.

PRIVY COUNCIL E, p. 148.

THURSDAY, 20 MARCH 1788.

Present

His Excellency The Right Honourable Guy, Lord Dorchester, Governor.

The Honourable, Henry hope Esquire Lieutenant Governor.

William Smith Esquire, Chief Justice

Hugh Finlay

Henry Caldwell

Thomas Dunn

William Grant

Edwd. Harrison

Paul Roc De St. Ours

John Collins

Francis Baby

Adam Mabane

Jos. De Longueuil

Captn. Cartwright's application.

J. G. C. DeLery [sic]	Esquire
George Pownall	Sir John Johnson Bart.
Picotté De Bellestre	Chas. De La Naudiere
John Fraser	René Am. Boucherville
	Le Cte. Dupré—Esquires
*	*

Captain Cartwright's
Application for Touchstoke Bay.

p. 2252

The Report of the Committee on Captain Cartwright's application, for a Grant at Touchstoke Bay on the Coast of La Bradore, and an exclusive privilege of fishing in that Bay, with the translation, again read. Ordered—that it be referred to the consideration of the whole Council in Committee, to report upon with all convenient speed.

The Report of the Committee of the whole Council to whom was referred. The Report of the Special Committee upon Captain Cartwright's application for the exclusive Property of Touchstoke Bay, on the Coast of Labrador, and for a Grant of Lands there ; read as follows, viz,

To His Excellency The Right Honourable Guy Lord Dorchester, Captain General & Governor in chief of the Colonies of Quebec, Nova Scotia & New Brunswick and their dependencies ; Vice-Admiral of the same ; General and Commander in chief of all His Majesty's forces in the said Colonies and the Island of New Foundland, &c. &c.
&c.

Report of the whole Council, in Committee, to whom by Your Excellency's order in Council of the 20th of March last, was referred. The Report of the Special Committee upon Captain Cartwright's application for the exclusive property of Touchstoke bay, on the Labrador Coast, for the purpose of a Fishery, and for a Grant of Lands there

PRIVY COUNCIL E, p. 305.

The Committee met, at the Council Chamber Thursday the 3d of April 1788.

Present

The Honourable Henry Hope Esquire Lieut. Governor
William Smith Esquire Chief Justice

Edward Harrison	Paul Roc De St. Ours
John Collins	Francis Baby
Adam Mabane	Jos. De Longueuil
J. G. C. DeLery [sic]	George Davison—
George Pownall	Esquires
Picotté De Bellestre	Sir John Johnson Bart.
John Fraser	Chas. De La Naudiere
	René Am. De

Henry Caldwell
William Grant

Boucherville

&

Le Cte. Dupré—Esquires.

His Honour The Lieut. Governor in the Chair.

The Report of the special Committee was read in both Languages, by the Clerks.

The 36th Article of His Majesty's Instructions to Your Lordship dated at St. James's the 23d of August 1786 with a translation was read, whereof follows a Copy :

p. 2253

“ On all such parts of the Coast where there are no Canadian possessions, and more especially where a valuable Cod-fishery may be carried on, it will be your duty to make the interest of our British Subjects going out to fish there, in Ships fitted out from Great Britain, the first object of your care, and as far as circumstances will admit to establish on that Coast the regulations in favour of British Fishing ships which have been so wisely adopted by the Act of Parliament passed in the Reign of King William the Third, for the encouragement of the Newfoundland fishery ; and you are on no account to allow any possession to be taken, or Sedentary fisheries to be Established, upon any parts of the Coast, that are not already private property, by any persons whatsoever, except only such as shall produce annually a Certificate of their having fitted out from some port in Great Britain. And your Excellency's order of Reference to the Special Committee dated the 25th of June 1787, read in the following words, viz, “ 25th June 1787.

His Excellency communicated to the Council a Letter from Lord Sydney, dated Whitehall 5th April 1787 concerning Captain Cartwright's application for a Grant, and the exclusive property of Touchstoke bay, on the Labrador Coast, for the purpose of a fishery, with several other papers upon that subject.—Referred to the Committee named the 31st of May for the Fisheries.”

The Lieutenant Governor proceeded to read over, a second time, the Report of the special Committee, by paragraphs.

The first part read in the words following :

“At a Committee of Council appointed to consider the Subject of the Fisheries in the Province, and to whom was referred sundry papers, transmitted by Lord Sydney one of His Majesty's principal Secretaries of State, relative to an application made by Captain Cartwright for a Grant in Sandwich-bay and for the exclusive property of Touchstoke-bay, both on the Coast of Labradore,

“ Present

Messieurs Finlay

Dunn
Harrison, Pownall,
Grant
Baby &
Dupré

Who beg leave to report to His Excellency The Right Honourable Lord Dorchester,

That they have attentively perused the papers referred to them,

p. 2254

and beg permission to lay before Your Lordship a concise sketch of Captn. Cartwright's case, taken from his own statement.

In the year 1770 he embarked in England, and sailed for Charles River on the Coast of Labrador, on a scheme to prosecute very extensive fisheries on that shore.

In 1771 he established a Seal-Fishery at Cape Charles, a Salmon Fishery in Charles River, and Cod Fishery round Charles Harbour. He explored a considerable extent of Coast in order to discover the best Scites for Sedentary fisheries, and with a view to secure a friendly intercourse with the Esquimaux Indians.

He exerted himself by every means in his power, for thirteen years, to improve the Fisheries on the Labrador Coast ; but tho' his unwearied endeavours benefited the Mother Country they ended in his ruin ; for after struggling with unforeseen crosses, he and those concerned with him, sunk upwards of £20,000. He represents that repeated Shipwrecks, Depredations of the Enemy, Fire, and the Manœuvres of Messrs. Noble & Pinson (sedentary Fishers on that Coast) obliged him to abandon Labrador, and on his return to England he was made a Bankrupt.

He sets forth that the discoveries he made, extended the Fisheries on that coast for more than seventy leagues, and that by his success in gaining the confidence of the Esquimaux, and in bringing about a friendly intercourse between that Nation and the Mountaineers—the fur trade is greatly increased, and the King's Subjects frequenting that Coast, now pursue their business unmolested by the Natives.

Captain Cartwright seems to think that he is intitled to some recompence for the advantages he has procured to the Mother Country, and he wishes to have it in his power to look for a fortune on that Coast where he lost one, and with that intent he prays for a Grant in Sandwich bay which Noble & Pinson now possess, notwithstanding 'twas he who first Established a Seal fishery there. He say it would be but rendering him bare justice, and a merited punishment of that House for their reprehensible conduct towards him ; and he further prays to have the Exclusive right to Touchstoke-bay with all the Islands therein lying, and a tract of Land running half a mile back from high water mark, all round the Bay : his sole view in praying for this Grant is to carry on the seal Fishery, and a Trade with the friendly Indians, who reside chiefly in that bay. He pretends that if they are left open to the inroads of petty Adventurers, these people will be totally undone by getting nought in Exchange for their commodities but Rum, whilst they stand in need of coarse cloth, blankets, and other English manufactures.

Lord Sydney's Letter of the 5th of April last, notes that His Lordship would be very glad to favour Captain Cartwright's wishes, if it could be done without affecting the property of other people.

p. 2255

The Lieutenant Governor after having read the foregoing part of the Report of the special Committee, proceeded to read the following paragraph,

“ It is to be presumed that though Captain Cartwright may have been the first to establish a Seal-fishery in Sandwich-bay, Noble & Pinson could not have set themselves down there, whilst Capt. Cartwright occupied it, according to the rules established for regulating the Fisheries on that Coast.”

The Question was put “ Whether this Committee concur in opinion with the special Committee on the foregoing clause, or not ?” Debates arose. It was carried in the affirmative by 16 Ayes agst. 2 Naves.

Colonel Caldwell

and

Mr. Judge Mabane in the Negative.

The Lieutenant Governor then read the next paragraph in the words following,

“From the want of Information respecting the local situation of Touchstoke-bay, the Committee cannot with any accuracy ascertain whether the Canadian Grants extend so far, but they have understood that Cape Charles is the furthestmost establishment for the fishery of Seals, made under the antient Government. The Committee conceive from the Circumstances related in Captain Cartwright's case, of Canadians having wintered in Touchstoke-bay in 1785 and 1786, and of two Englishmen having been there in great distress, that it is an inlet of the Sea ten leagues deep, within the great Esquimaux bay, far North of Cape Charles, where a Canadian Crew, fitted out from hence, actually did winter, and where two Englishmen were cast on shore and suffered great hardship.”

The Question of concurrence was put on this paragraph, and it was carried unanimously in the affirmative.

The Lieutenant Governor read the following paragraph,

“ By the 36th Article of His Majesty's Instructions to Your Lordship bearing date the 23d of August 1786, the Committee find that possession is not to be taken or sedentary fisheries established, on any parts of the Coast of Labrador, except by such as shall produce a Certificate of their having fitted out from some port in Great Britain.”

Then the Lieutenant Governor proceeded to read the following paragraph,

“ The Committee therefore humbly conceive that if it shall be Your Excellency's desire to grant Captain Cartwright's prayer for the Touchstoke fishery, with an extent of Land half a mile in depth from High-water mark all around the Bay, with its Islands, the Possessor, whilst the 36th Article of His Majesty's Instructions is in force, could not exclude Adventurers fitted out in Britain from establishing fisheries in such parts of the Bay as might remain unoccupied by him, notwithstanding any grant of the shore made to him.”

And the Question of concurrence was put thereon. It was carried unanimously in the Negative, without a division.

The Lieutenant Governor read the next paragraph in the following words,

“ It seems to the Committee that the appointment of Justices of the peace (as Captain Cartwright wishes) on that extensive Coast, where there's no civil Officer to support the authority of a Magistrate, by executing his Warrants, nor places for holding Offenders in confinement, would answer but little purpose in checking improper proceedings in that distant part of the province.”

The Question of concurrence was put, and carried unanimously in the Affirmative.

The Lieutenant Governor then read the last paragraph of the Report in the words following,

“ They most humbly submit whether a small armed Vessel commanded by an Officer of Your Excellency's appointment, and in the Commission of the peace, might not be of service in cruising along that Coast, visiting each fishing post frequently in the course of the summer, punishing small offences according to Law, and bring up all atrocious Offenders in the Fall to be tried : And this mode might be followed until a better could be adopted for regulating the affairs of that Coast. At present the Committee are not sufficiently informed of the situation of things in that quarter to qualify them to propose a better plan than this temporary expedient, which would in the mean time shew the Fishermen and others, that Offenders will not escape unpunished.”

Council Chamber } The Question of concurrence was put, and 24th Jan. 1788 } carried unanimously in the Negative.—
Adjourned, May 1st.

The same Members except the Chief Justice, Judge Fraser and Sir John Johnson met & humbly submit the above to Your Excellency's consideration.

By order of the Committee

(signed) HENRY HOPE Lt. Govr. & Chairman.

No. 955.

[1906.]

EXTRACT FROM MINUTES OF THE EXECUTIVE COUNCIL OF NEWFOUNDLAND, 9 JUNE, 1906.

Minute Book.

April 1905 to October 1906, pp. 220-21-22.

The following applications for lease of the right to cut Timber over certain areas were approved, viz :

Chas. F. Taylor, over 150 sq. miles situate at St. Michael's Bay, Labrador ; Reg. Vol. 7, Fol. 130 ; a reservation of the land within five miles of the sea and main rivers to be made.

S.P. Benjamin, over 60 sq. miles, situate at Second Tilt Brook, Labrador ; Reg. Vol. 7, Fol. 146, reserving land within five miles of the sea and main rivers.

Alfred Dickie, over 250 sq. miles situate at Traverspine Brook, Labrador ; Reg. Vol. 7, Fol. 144, reserving land within five miles of the sea and main rivers.

Alfred Dickie, over 250 sq. miles situate at Otter Brook, Grand River, Labrador ; Reg. Vol. 7, Fol. 143, reserving land situate within five miles of the sea and main rivers.

Edward J. Sheldon, over 1,000 sq. miles, situate at Makkovik Bay, Labrador ; provided that the land granted to the Moravian Brethren by the Imperial Government is not interfered with and reserving the land within five miles of the sea and main rivers ; Reg. Vol. 7, Fol. 154.

No. 956.

AFFIDAVIT BY WILLIAM RALPH PARSONS.

IN THE PRIVY COUNCIL.

[14 July,
1924.]

IN THE MATTER OF THE BOUNDARY BETWEEN THE DOMINION OF CANADA AND THE COLONY OF NEWFOUNDLAND IN THE LABRADOR PENINSULA.

Between

THE DOMINION OF CANADA of the one part

— and —

THE COLONY OF NEWFOUNDLAND of the other part.

I, William Ralph Parsons, District Manager of St. Lawrence-Labrador District of the HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY, being duly sworn, depose and say that :

1o—For twenty-five years, that is, from 1898 to 1924, I occupied various positions for the HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY at various Posts on the Labrador Coast, extending from Blanc Sablon to Cape Chidley and Ungava Bay ;

2o—During this period, I became fully acquainted with the habits and customs of the fishermen who visited the Labrador Coast ;

3o—These habits and customs are, to-day, the same as have prevailed on the Coast for the last twenty-five years ;

4o—The fishermen land on the Coast for the purpose of curing, salting, drying and generally husbanding their fish ;

5o—The fishermen, for their general requirements, penetrate into the interior for an average depth of about one mile ;

6o—These requirements include wood, for fuel purposes, and timber for repairing stages, boats, and other necessities ;

7o—I know of no other reasons for the fishermen, in connection with the fisheries, to penetrate further than one mile within the Coast line.

And I have signed,

WILLIAM RALPH PARSONS.

Sworn before me at the City of Montreal, in the Province of Quebec, on
the 14th day of July 1924.

}

CLARENCE F. McCAFFREY,
Commissioner of the Superior Court for the District of Montreal.

L. S.

No. 957.

[15 Aug.,
1924.]EXTRACT FROM “LABRADOR FISHERIES, 1892-1924.”BY WILFRED T. GRENFELL, C.M.G., F.A.C.S., M.A., M.D., F.R.S.C., LL.D., MASTER MARINER AND JUSTICE OF THE PEACE.

Written at Capbreton, Landes, France.
Aug. 15, 1924.

* * * *

Concerning land needed to supply timber for fishery purposes.

There are no roads in Labrador, and no means for wheeled transportation. It has, therefore, never paid the Newfoundland fishermen to haul and cut their own timber needed for stages at any great distance from the high water mark.

The custom has been to buy it from Labrador men, who cut it in winter and haul it out to the landwash with dogs over snow.

This also applies to firewood, though schooners, while waiting to get north (for ice etc.) go long distances up bays to get timber which there still grows so near the landwash, that they can cut it for themselves.

Since the nearness of timber to the landwash recedes as one goes north, it is obviously impossible to draw any line that would be suitable for all regions. North of Cape Mugford, wood is not cut by Newfoundlanders at all ; north of Hebron there is none to cut.

So if a summer fisherman must cut wood during summer, he must cut it within a mile of the landwash for obvious reasons.

On the other hand he must be able to get wood, and those who cut it and sell it to him, must be allowed to go five miles from the landwash in search of timber for spars, or large frame work in almost any part of Labrador, if they are to find it.

On the distance from high water needed in Labrador for purposes other than obtaining wood, for fishermen.

There being no roads, it is obvious all buildings of fishermen for summer fisheries will be as near the water as possible. I know every building in Labrador, and I cannot think of one single one that is more than 250 yards from high water mark, or one that ever has been. With regard to spreading nets, and drying fish, it is perfectly obvious that the nearer the water the better, if clean rocks and safety from seas are provided. I do not remember anytime, anywhere, seeing either of these objects pursued over 250 yards from high water 500 yards would be quite sufficient. Even of our six hospitals, inclusive of the three in Newfoundland, not one is 250 yards from the high water mark.

p. 2260

Eskimo, Indians, natives are in an entirely different category. They must have winter houses, and these must be in, or near, woods. Distance from high water no longer matters, for good transportation is afforded by sledges over the snow and ice the bare ground is no longer their method of transportation, also, they may need houses, near their wood cutting work, or their fur paths.

Personal opinion on the distances from high water needed in Labrador for fishery purposes.

For spreading fish to dry, for buildings, for boats, and other storage, judging by experience, not more than 250 yards is needed, or is likely to be used if available.

For cutting timber for firewood, spars and frames for buildings and stages, the distance in a country like Labrador would vary very much, if it were possible in summer to get it out. Thus, north of Hebron no timber exists till the valley of the Georges river is reached,—say 50 miles, while in Lewis' bay and southern bays it still comes to the landwash at the heads of bays.

It would never, in my opinion, pay to hold up a fishing schooner to get spars from our Labrador forests in summer. I have known vessels dismasted many times, but I never knew this attempted. The only way is to buy spars from natives, or ship spars in by mail steamer from south. Our trees make miserable spars anyhow, being too full of knots.

As there has existed in Newfoundland a reserved limit of three miles above high water for the purposes of the fishery, it is fair to suppose that that as a general average is not excessive. Labrador timber is not so plentiful or near the water, and if timber cut by settlers of the Labrador for sale in summer, but cut during winter, is to be all cut on the reserve, then I am sure five miles from high tide mark is not excessive.

* * * *

PART XIII.

DOCUMENTS (OTHER THAN MAPS) SHEWING THE
GENERAL BELIEF AND REPUTATION AS TO
THE EXTENT OF THE JURISDICTION OF THE
GOVERNMENT OF NEWFOUNDLAND ON THE LABRADOR PENINSULA.

No. 958.

[17 Dec., 1829.]

“MAINE BOUNDARY” DISPUTE.

COLONIAL OFFICE RECORDS 47/27. THE QUEBEC GAZETTE.

Thursday, 17 Dec. 1829.

To the Editor of the Quebec Gazette.

SIR,

In my last letter I endeavoured to show that New Brunswick could claim no territory west of a line drawn due north from the source of the Ste. Croix as determined upon with the consent of both the parties interested, and that the boundary between Lower-Canada and the United States commences at the north-west angle of Nova Scotia [New Brunswick] where the northern boundary line of that Province strikes its western boundary above mentioned. This is the point to be ascertained and upon which the whole of the differences referred to the King of the Netherlands turns.

* * * *

The possession of the whole course of the River St. John by Great Britain since the peace of 1783, has however been uninterrupted, as was that of France, the former possessors of Canada, generally, since the arrival of Europeans on this continent. Great Britain, as representing France, had an undoubted right of discovery and possession to the whole of the waters of the river St. John, and whatever might be the inferences drawn from the treaty and the aforementioned documents, by a rigid interpretation, it is not probable that she ever really intended to cede them ; in fact to sever nearly all practical connection by land, between her remaining Provinces, bring a foreign State within a few leagues of her strongest hold in North America, and give that power a footing between it and the sea, almost on the very shore of the river St. Lawrence.

p. 2262

The equitable interpretation of the treaty would be, that it was intended that when no navigable river could be made a boundary consistently with the previously acknowledged limits of the new States, the high lands separating the waters that fall into the sea, within the limits of each party, should be the boundary between them, that interference might be avoided when it could not be attended with any mutual benefit. This was the proposal of France to Great Britain, respecting the very boundary in question, and I translate it from the Memoire of the Commissioners, dated Paris, 4th October, 1751.

“In such cases the usual and most convenient rule is to extend the inland boundary to the sources of the rivers that empty on the coast, that is to say, that each nation shall have the waters running on its own side : it was this course that was adopted at the peace of the Pyrenees for fixing the boundary between France and Spain : and if the Commissioners of the King knew a more equitable mode, they would readily propose it to the Commissioners of his Britannic Majesty.”

Whether an enlarged or more rigorous view of the subject will be taken by the umpire is uncertain. The result it will be seen is materially important to Canada ; important as relates to her connexion with Great Britain and the other maritime colonies, and important as it concerns the extension of the settlements of a numerous population now crowded within narrow limits on the southern shores of the River St. Lawrence.

* * * *

I am, Sir,
Your obedient servant,
AN OBSERVER.

Quebec, 15 December, 1829.

No. 959.THE INDIAN STREAM BOUNDARY.

MESSAGE OF W. BADGER, GOVERNOR OF NEW HAMPSHIRE.

[18 Dec.,
1835.]

COLONIAL OFFICE RECORDS 47/30. THE "QUEBEC GAZETTE."

Tuesday 18 Dec. 1835.

GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE AND GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

I believe it well established and I have not learned that the fact is attempted to be controverted, either by the British Government, inhabitants on that Territory, that the northern boundary of New-Hampshire, extends to the highlands, which divide the waters that fall into the St. Lawrence, from those that fall into the Atlantic Ocean, and extending westerly along the highlands to the north-westernmost head of the Connecticut river, thence down said river, to the 45th degree of north latitude. And it appears in the secret journals of the old Congress, 2 Vol. page 225, that Congress, in considering the instructions to be given to the Ministers to be appointed for negotiating a treaty of peace, among other things, unanimously agreed to the following draft of instructions :—

“ Sir, You will herewith receive a communication giving you full powers to negotiate a treaty of peace with Great Britain in doing which you will conform to the following information and instructions.”

[The third Article of the instructions is. “ The boundaries of this State are as follows, (viz.) these States are bounded north, by a line to be drawn from the northwest angle of Nova Scotia, along the highlands which divide those rivers which empty themselves into the river St. Lawrence, from those which fall into the Atlantic Ocean, to the northwestmost head of Connecticut river, thence down along the middle of that river to the 45th degree of north latitude,” etc: [And that in forming the treaty of 1783, these instructions were implicitly obeyed. The words of the treaty are—Art. 2]. “ And that all disputes which might arise in future on this subject of the boundaries of the said United States may be prevented, it is hereby agreed and declared, that the following are, and shall be, their boundaries, (viz.)

p. 2264

from the north-east angle of Nova Scotia, (viz.) that angle which is formed by a line drawn due north, from the source of St. Croix river, to the highlands, which divide those rivers that empty themselves into the Atlantic Ocean to the northwestmost head of Connecticut river, thence down along the middle of that river, to the 45th degree of north latitude," etc., Vol. 1, U.S. Laws, p. 203.

It is hereby evident that the United States, while struggling for independence, strenuously insisted on the above described boundary, and so instructed their Minister in negotiating with the British Government the treaty of peace ; and that the British Government did so acknowledge their right to the said boundary by ratifying the treaty, which seems to supersede the necessity of going back to the original grants or letters patent, to Mason, and to Georges, covering different tracts and under different names, as Mariana, Laconia, New-Hampshire, etc., or to the proclamations of the British King, describing the boundaries of the Provinces, or to the commissioners to the Provincial Governors of the Province of New Hampshire, wherein the boundaries were in some measure expressed.

After the conquest of Canada by the British in 1759, and upon the conclusion of the treaty of Paris, 1763, when the French surrendered the Canadas, the British King in forming the new Province of Quebec, described in his proclamation the southern boundary so far as relates to this question, as crossing the Champlain on and following the 45th degrees of north latitude, and so along the highlands which divide the waters that empty themselves into the river St. Lawrence, from those which fall into the sea." Vol. 6, Annual Register, p. 209, evidently the new United States.

WILLIAM BADGER.

Executive Department, June 8th, 1835.
2, N. H. Historical Soc. Col.

No. 960.[16 Aug.,
1836.]EXTRACT FROM SIR GEORGE SIMPSON'S LETTER TO GOVERNOR AND COMMITTEE, FROM MOOSE FACTORY.

HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY'S HEAD OFFICE RECORDS.

Moose Factory, 16th Aug., 1836.

“ . . . This has arisen from a variety of causes, but mainly from “the absence of a number of Indians who have crossed over “towards Ungava and others who have pushed their way across the “Height of Land (separating the waters that pass through the “Honble. Co.'s territory from those that fall into the St. Lawrence “and Esquimaux Bay), and traded their hunts with some of our own “people belonging to the King's Posts, and with the opposition at “Esquimaux Bay. And I regret to say that the upper parts of the “district suffer much from the encroachments of Abenikie trappers “and traders, who cross over from St. Maurice. . . . ”

No. 961.

SIR GEORGE SIMPSON TO THE EARL OF ELGIN
AND KINCARDINE.[16 Nov., 1848.]

HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY'S HEAD OFFICE RECORDS.

Copy. Hudson's Bay House,
Lachine, 16th Nov., 1848.

To : His Excellency, The Right Honourable, The Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, Governor
General of British North America, &c., &c.

MY LORD,

I have the honour to acknowledge Colonel Bruce's letter of 11th inst., forwarding to me, by your Lordship's direction, printed copies of two letters reflecting on the conduct of the Hudson's Bay Company, addressed to your Lordship by a person of the name of Kennedy, intimating your intention of forwarding those letters, in accordance with the author's request, to the Secretary of State, and at the same time expressing your willingness to transmit any observations upon them which I may have to offer.

I feel greatly obliged to your Lordship for the opportunity thus afforded me of, I trust, being enabled to remove any impression unfavourable to the Company and their management, which the various grave charges advanced by Mr. Kennedy might have left in your mind, had they remained unanswered. Before noticing the charges in question, it may be proper, as your Lordship appears to know nothing of the author, to state that Mr. Kennedy was a clerk in the service of the Hudson's Bay Company between the years 1833 and 1846, during which time he was stationed, for the first five years at one of the Company's posts in the Ottawa River, and for the remaining eight years at one or other of their posts on the coast and in the interior country of Labrador, and that he is the uncle of Alex. Kennedy Isbister of Landon [sic] (both being half-breed natives of Hudson's Bay), who last year brought charges against the Company in a memorial addressed to the Secretary of State for the Colonies, which was sent to your Lordship to be reported upon.

The charges made by Kennedy, I have no hesitation in saying, are the result of a conspiracy against the Company to which both he and Isbister are parties ; as will be seen by the connexion which exists between them,

p. 2267

as exhibited in the accompanying letters from both those persons to Dr. Rowand, dated respectively 3rd July and 11th January, 1848 (marked "A"). In enlisting the newspapers in the cause, Kennedy, it will be seen, is but following up the plan of agitation recommended by Isbister to be adopted in Canada, for the purpose, to use his own words : "of over-throwing the "Company," and it is very probable he will before long follow up the further suggestion of Isbister to "fish up retired servants of the Company" with a view to aid your Lordship in prosecuting your enquiry into the Company's Management, well known that, in so extensive a service, there must be many malcontents, arising from a variety of cause.

I beg to hand, for your Lordship's information, extracts from several letters addressed to me by Mr. Kennedy during a period of six years, say from 1841 to 1846 (marked "B"), wherein he expresses the deepest gratitude, both to the Company and myself for the kindness and favour he and his family have experienced at our hands and lauding the "admirable regulations" of the "venerable Company" in terms most fulsome. At length, however, in 1846, when refused by me on the part of the Company an advance of £2,000 for the purpose of prosecuting a trade on the coast of Labrador in opposition to the Moravian Missionaries, as will be seen by his letters of 22nd and 24th September, and my reply of 13th November, 1846 (marked "C"), he then, when out of the Company, seems for the first time, to have discovered that our management was in strict keeping with the Satanic motto of "Pro pelle cutem," and forthwith takes up arms, in connexion with his nephew Isbister, against the "benefactors" of himself and family, "the honour of whose service" he felt bound on the 28th August, 1884, to maintain "to the day of his death."

I shall now proceed to notice the charges, in the order in which they occur, in Mr. Kennedy's letters.

From the manner in which Mr. Kennedy speaks of a murder which he says was committed near the post of Nascopie by one Indian on another (the particulars of which did not reach me until three days ago), he evidently wishes it to be inferred that liquor is a staple article of our commerce with the Natives. This is not the fact ; as since the termination of the competition between the North West and Hudson's Bay Company, in 1821, liquor has been altogether in disuse through a great portion of Rupert's Land, and of the Indian territory held under license from the Crown, nor, as far as my knowledge goes, is liquor ever made a medium of barter for furs in other parts of these territories being only given in small quantities as an encouragement to supply our establishments with provisions and leather articles absolutely indispensable to our existence, and which could not otherwise be obtained, or as a "treat" to Indians over and above the prices paid for furs in those districts of country where competition in trade continues, without which the furs would, and I need scarcely add, very frequently do, fall into other hands. I have great satisfaction in saying that there is very little abuse of liquor in any part of the country, the quantity imported rendering such quite impossible as a general rule ; and no better proof can be given of this than that for the District of Ungava in which Mr. Kennedy was stationed for several years, I find on reference to the outfits that for the use of our officers and servants and the whites and Indians with whom we had dealings, the whole quantity supplied for three years' consumption was 201 gallons of Whiskey, 20 gallons of Brandy, and 42 gallons of Wine : viz. :

p. 2268

In 1840	129	gallons	Whiskey.
					34	"	Wine.
					16	"	Brandy.
In 1841			None.
In 1842	72	gallons	Whiskey.
					8	"	Wine.
					4	"	Brandy.

In speaking of the murder in question, Mr. Kennedy informs your Lordship that the Company's representative (meaning myself) "was told of it by him but took no notice of it." And he further says that "in a private letter to me he gave it as one among other reasons "for leaving the service."

The only allusion Kennedy ever made to this murder was under date 28th August, 1844—four years by his own shewing after it had happened—and then incidentally in the following words : "I take the liberty of giving an instance, it is that of giving rum to Indians, by which, while in soundest health they not infrequently lose their lives, an instance of which it has been my painful lot to witness" (see Paper B.N. 4). On reading this paragraph the impression on my mind was that this case might have occurred in the midst of the settlements on the Ottawa river (where Kennedy had been stationed for five years) as I know that there Indians had access to liquor at every village and lumbering establishment. But from information I received three days ago from a person who was upon the spot I, for the first time, learnt the following particulars of the case referred to that two Indians, while under the influence of liquor obtained at a post in the interior of Labrador, had, while crossing a lake, quarrelled and fought in the canoes, and that one of the unfortunate men had fallen in the conflict. But had even I been acquainted with the whole circumstances of the case, I could not have taken any cognizance of the matter, the murder having been committed within the jurisdiction of Newfoundland, where the Company have no exclusive rights of trade, but merely as one in the crowd of traders and settlers in that part of the Country, the only difference between the Company and the others, as regards our commercial dealings, being, that our means and better organization enable us to conduct our business on a more systematic and extended scale, penetrating to parts of the Country, which, to many others, are inaccessible.

With reference to the same story, Mr. Kennedy goes on to say he afterwards had charge of the same post, near which the murder was committed, and that his first care was to do away entirely with the use of intoxicating liquors, which is very creditable to him, as showing his desire to carry out the Company's regulations which he has quoted, but he goes on further to say that the attempt was "crushed in the birth," being told that if he persisted in it, he would abide by the consequences. Such intimation from any one of whom Mr. Kennedy could have stood in awe I am satisfied he never had certainly not from the Board of Direction in England, nor from the councils in the country, nor from myself, and to those authorities alone was he amenable.

p. 2269

Mr Kennedy next stated that a number of Indians had died in the neighbourhood of Nascopie, and quotes letters which he says he has received from that part of the country in confirmation of that melancholy fact It is perfectly possible Mr. Kennedy may have received such information, although I am not at all satisfied from his mere assertion that such was the fact. I have since the publication of Kennedy's letter learnt, in personal intercourse with Mr. Nourse, the gentleman superintending the affairs of that district, who arrived here about eight days ago, that there was some loss of life in that quarter, not arising, however, from the want of ammunition, but from the scarcity of game and the utter inability of the Company's people to afford the means of subsistence. Any one acquainted with the Moravian country and trade must be aware that the means of subsistence are at times very precarious, being dependent on the character of the seasons, the movements of game, the take of fish, and other causes beyond the control of man, it being impossible to raise agricultural produce or to convey inland imported supplies. Starvation, though not attended with all the horrors Mr. Kennedy describes, is of frequent occurrence in every part of the world, and occasionally among officers and servants of the Company as well as the natives. I myself, have been driven to the necessity of eating horse and dog flesh and other viands prohibited in the Mosaic code, and so have most of the gentlemen in our service ; on one occasion, within my recollection, twenty-seven of the Company's servants died of starvation in one encampment. These are melancholy facts, but what remedy is to be devised ? They are evils inseparable from the nature of the service. I have no doubt Mr. Kennedy would like very much to be appointed a Commissioner to investigate the Company's affairs, but I do not see that his investigation could be of any benefit in mitigating the rigour of the climate or rendering the means of subsistence more plentiful, and from the attitude he has assumed it may be inferred that his report would not bear the character of strict truth or impartiality.

Mr. Kennedy commences his second letter to your Lordship by bringing as a grave charge against the Company that twenty-two Indian families were encouraged to remove from one part of the country to another, without provision being made for them ; but he does not, because he cannot, state in words, the inference which he evidently wishes should be drawn from this statement, viz.: that those twenty-two families were, in consequence of such want of preparation exposed to an unusual degree of privation. On the contrary, by the extracts from Mr. Nourse's letter to me of 25th Sept.,

p. 2270

1843, and from Mr. Kennedy's letters of 16th January and 25th August, 1843 (marked "D"), you will perceive that the Indians passed the winter without any complaint being made that they endured privation ; so far from it that they altogether neglected fur hunting in order to proceed to a part of the country where deer were abundant. A narrative of the facts of the case will be sufficient to remove the implied censure on the Company.

The country bordering on Hudson's Bay known as the East Main Coast, more especially about Big River, having been closely hunted for many years, had become so much impoverished in game, that the Indians were subjected to privation. About the same time reports reached me, representing the Ungava Country, which was then new to us, as very rich in fur bearing animals, and abounding with deer, but so thinly inhabited that we could not benefit by the advantages it presented. As this promising region adjoined that occupied by the Big River Indians, it occurred to me that those natives by migrating thither might not only greatly improve their own condition and resources, but also promote the Company's interests. I therefore requested the gentleman in charge of the East Main Coast to represent the case to the Indians, but in reply I learnt they were disinclined to quit their own lands. In my letter to Mr. Miles dated 14th April, 1848 (marked, "E"), referring to this subject, I requested him to offer further inducement to the Indians, in the shape of a large premium on their hunts, but this offer had not the desired effect. Intimation was sent to Mr. McLean, the gentleman then in charge of Ungava district (see my letter to him of 1st March, 1840, marked "E"), of what had been done in reference to the removal of these Indians.

In 1843, the Indians, without any previous notice of their intention, proceeded to the Ungava Country. Mr. Kennedy, who had charge of Nascopie, one of the interior posts of that district, appears to have been taken by surprise by their arrival, and so also was Mr. Nourse, the gentleman then in charge of the district, who was at Esquimaux Bay, 300 miles distant.

When apprised thereof by Kennedy, Mr. Nourse under date 25th September, 1843 (marked "D"), reported to me the arrival of the Indians, and suggested the establishment of a post for their special accommodation, and an increase to the outfit in order to supply their wants ; both of which suggestions I complied with in my letter to Mr. Nourse dated 1st March, 1844 (marked "F"). If Mr. Nourse did not fall in with Mr. Kennedy's application for an additional supply of ammunition, etc., I can assert, without fear of contradiction, that it was because he had not the means to do so when the application was made ; and even if he had had the supplies, the transport whereof, a distance of 300 miles, through a rugged country in the winter season would have been almost impracticable.

I have the honour to be,

My Lord,

Your Excellency's

Most obedient and humble servant,

(Signed) G. SIMPSON.

No. 962.

[16 Jan.,
1843.][Enclosure 1 in No. 961.]EXTRACT FROM LETTER FROM WM. KENNEDY TO SIR GEORGE SIMPSON.

HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY'S HASTER MEAD OFFICE RECORDS.

Fort Nascope, 16th Jan. 1843.

“Whether the appearance at length in this quarter of a large “party of strange Indians, from Eastmain, consisting of twenty “families, be considered as an addition to good news is not for me “to say, for I even fear to inform your Excellency of my being “apprehensive lest it should prove to be the last and greatest of all “disappointments to which Ungava ever gave birth ; in any case this “Post, for such an unlooked-for call, could not possibly have been “less prepared, as so far from there having been the smallest “provision made in the Outfit of this year for such an unexpected “event, it was short in the most essential of all articles of trade by “300 lbs. powder! I have as yet seen but five of the above Party, “but all the fur they brought was 2 cross foxes and 7 martens, with a “few deerskins, this they said was all the entire party had. Ever since “having taken up their Station in this district, they have been hunting “in a body and never proceeded higher up south of Canniapiscaw “River than where it is united with Natauagamy, or that by which “they were led down to a distance of about 60 miles from Ft. “Chimo. I treated them with all the kindness in my power, and got “them to promise that they would come up and occupy the wooded “sections of the Country. Being strangers, and I suppose not over “confident of their neighbours, who look upon them with a jealous “eye, they are unwilling to scatter themselves over the Country for “the present; they therefore intend visiting this Post in a body before “the navigation opens, preparatory to which I am now about sending “every disposable hand to Esquimaux Bay for a supply of articles as “have already run out, most of which I know Mr. Nurse can “supply.”

No. 963.[25 Aug.,
1843.][Enclosure 2 in No. 961.]EXTRACT FROM LETTER FROM WM. KENNEDY TO SIR GEORGE SIMPSON.

HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY'S HEAD OFFICE RECORDS.

Esquimaux Bay, 25th August, 1843.

I am happy in being able to inform your Excellency that though many unforeseen and unexpected incidents took place in the quarter during the past year, the result of Trade for the year has more than kept pace with that of former years, at least at Nascopie, where the martens in particular have been on the increase, and I doubt not will in a great measure be attributed to the increased number of Indians attached to that Fort during the past year, and which I mentioned in my last as having come from the Eastmain quarter. As I then anticipated, these have done little or nothing in the way of hunting Fur, the sum of their collective fur hunts, being 62 Martens, 3 Beavers, 12 Otters with a very small variety of other fur. During the early part of last season these Indians occupied the barren parts of the Country, but towards spring moved towards the more wooded parts which they say they were too late in reaching, and hence the pooriness of their hunts, in order however that they may be able to direct their steps in time to the proper quarter this year, they promised to occupy the summer in examining the various parts of the wooded country lying between Forts Chimo and Nascopie, that being intended as the field of their next winter's operations, that being the only tract of country in which the few Beaver inhabiting the Ungava Country are said more frequently to be found. A post is to be established for their convenience midway between the above named posts, but though they have been told so, it has not had the smallest effect in preventing their unanimously giving this as their last word that next spring they will return to their own Country, having found this part of it much poorer than it appears to have been represented. I have and shall continue to do all that lies in my humble power to induce these Indians to remain, but after all I fear they will follow up their resolution to return.

No. 964.

[25 Sept.
1843.][Enclosure 3 in No. 961.]EXTRACT FROM LETTER FROM WM. KENNEDY TO SIR GEORGE SIMPSON.

HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY'S HASTER MEAD OFFICE RECORDS.

North West River, Esquimaux Bay,
25th September, 1843.

To add to our difficulties this year, with so few men at our disposal, the outfits taken to the interior of Ungava have been much increased by the unexpected arrival last fall at Fort Chimo of about 20 families of Indians sent from the Rupert's River district to hunt in the Ungava Country. These men were sent on to Mr. Kennedy's post at the Height of Land Fort Nascopie, where they arrived on the 8 January last with a letter from Chief Trader Corcoran informing us that they were transferred to this district as no preparation had been made for them in the interior, a very short supply could be given them. This summer an additional outfit has been sent for them, but as this will add annually to the quantity hitherto supplied for the Trade of that Country and an additional post is necessary in order to disperse these Indians over new hunting grounds—we would require a greater instead of a less number of men.

The Indent for 1844 is made out with reference to the expenditure of the past year the increased number of Indians from Rupert's River district, the increased trade with the Hunters all of whom have large credit Balances which we have to pay off this fall from current outfit and to provide for any increase hereafter. Nothing has been entered in the Requisition that can be easily dispensed with, and as far as the Fort Chimo stock of goods will supply our wants, deductions have been made. Allowance has also been made for an Outfit additional for the interior posts for the service of 1845 in case it may be inconvenient to continue sending the vessel from Quebec so early as last and present years. The outfits for those posts may in that case be forwarded inland without waiting the arrival of the vessel as it is necessary the people to winter inland should be there in good time for the fall fishing, else their only means of support fails. This Outfit is entered in the Indent in a separate column that it may be deducted if you do not approve of the measure.

I am informed by Mr. Kennedy that the Rupert's River Indians are much disappointed in the Ungava Country as they do not find it such as they expected. That Country is extensive ; but at least three-fourths is

p. 2274

unwooded, and the wooded Country is only a few narrow strips they found already in the possession of Indians who have long hunted in that quarter ; but who have only traded at the Ungava Country since 1837. They go by the name of Nascopies and are principally from Seven Islands and others of the Kings Posts. Their number is as follows :—

64 married men

73 Lads Boys (many growing up to be good hunters)

74 married women

65 girls &c.

As these range over the whole extent of the country from the neighbourhood of Ft. Chimo to the hunting grounds of the Indians of this Bay and those of Seven Islands Bay and also towards the post of Canniapiscaw—the most northern in Rupert's River district—they leave little scope for others. Although the trade this last year was the best that has been made there, yet of about 2400 Martens, only 62 were received from the Rupert's River Indians, and they give little more than Deerskins in addition to this. They killed only 3 Beavers and report that it is not the country for them. They found it difficult to live anywhere except in those parts where Deer abound, but where fur animals are scarce, Mr. Kennedy has instructions to do all in his power to disperse them over the best hunting grounds without interfering too much with those of the Nascopies and to prevail upon them to remain as he thinks they are inclined to return to their own Country. I hope until these have got properly settled that no more may be sent and that we may have previous notice of their coming, that provisions may be made for the trade with them.

No. 965.

[17 Jan., 1849.]

LETTER TO SIR J. TETLEY FORWARDING FROM EAR GREY, A DESPATCH FROM THE GOVERNOR—GENERAL OF CANADA WITH LETTERS FROM WM.
KENNEDY MAKING CHARGES AGAINST HUNDSON'S BAY COMPANY AND SIR GEORGE SIMPSON'S REPLY.

C.O. RECORDS 42/552.

SIR J. TETLEY
'49.

17 Jan.

SIR,—

I am directed by Earl Grey to transmit to you for your information the accompanying Copy of a Despatch from the Governor General of Canada enclosing copies of letters from M^r. Kennedy containing charges against the Hudson's Bay Company with Sir Geo. Simpson's reply. &c. . . .

(No signature)

[Enclosure 1 in No. 965.]

W. KENNEDY TO THE EARL OF ELGIN AND KINCARDINE GOVERNOR GENERAL OF BRITISH NORTH AMERICA.

MY LORD,

* * * * *

Having been, in June 1838 appointed by the Company to take up my station at one of the Posts situated on the Shores of Hudson's Straits, I had in compliance with this appointment, to travel 600 miles through the interior of Labrador. Two Indians were engaged to convey me this distance, in one of their Bark Canoes. I had not gone one third of this distance when quite accidentally falling in with a solitary family of Indians, I was handed over to them, (for as I could not then speak their language, I could not take part in the transaction,) to find my way as I best could. With these I managed to find my way safely to my destination, and what my Lord, do you think was the reward to this poor family, who had picked me up at the shores of one of Labrador's distant inland Lakes ? The head of it was murdered in a drunken revel, by a fellow Indian, at the very door at which little more than two years before he had safely landed me ; and so far from the Company taking the smallest cognizance of so clear a case of murder, occasioned through their own rum, the culprit who did it roams his native hills, alike unpunished as unconscious of guilt, bearing the distinguished appellation of being one of the “best Fur Hunters” at Fort Nascopie, which is seemingly a sufficient protection.

* * * * *

Signed. W. KENNEDY.

No. 966.[16 Nov.,
1848.][Enclosure 2 in No. 965.]

SIR G. SIMPSON TO THE EARL OF ELGIN AND KINCARDINE.

Hudson's Bay House
Lachine 16th. Nov. 1848.

MY LORD,—

I have the honor to acknowledge Colonel Bruce's letter of the 11th Instant forwarding to me, by your Lordship's direction, printed Copies of two letters reflecting on the conduct of the Hudson's Bay Company, addressed to your Lordship by a person of the name of Kennedy ; intimating your intention of forwarding those letters, in accordance with the author's request, to the Secretary of State, and, at the same time expressing your willingness to transmit any observations upon them which I may have to offer.

* * * * *

In speaking of the murder in question, M^r. Kennedy informs your Lordship that, “the Company's representative (meaning myself) was told of it by him but took no notice of it ;” and he further says that, “in a private letter to me he gave it as one among other reasons for leaving the service.” The only allusion M^r. Kennedy ever made to this murder was under date 28 August 1844, four years by his own showing after it had happened, and then incidentally, in the following words “I take the liberty of giving an instance, it is that of giving rum to Indians, by which, while in soundest health they not unfrequently lose their lives, an instance of which it has been my painful lot to witness.” . . . On reading this paragraph, the impression on my mind was that this case might have occurred in the midst of the settlements on the Ottawa River (where Kennedy had been stationed for five years,) as I knew that there Indians had access to liquor at every village and lumbering establishment. But from information I received three days ago, from a person who was on the spot, I, for the first time, learnt the following particulars of the case referred to ; that two Indians, while under the influence of liquor obtained at a post in the interior of Labrador, had, while crossing a Lake, quarrelled and fought in their canoes, and that one of the unfortunate men had fallen in the conflict. But even had I been acquainted with the whole circumstances of the case, I could not have taken any cognizance of the matter, the murder having been committed within the jurisdiction of Newfoundland, where the Company have no exclusive rights of trade, but are merely as one in the crowd of traders and settlers in that part of the Country, the only difference between the Company and the others, as regards our commercial dealings, being that, our means and better organization enable us to conduct our business on a more systematic and extended scale, penetrating to parts of the Country which, to many others, are inaccessible.

*

*

*

*

*

Signed:

G. SIMPSON.

[23 Mar.,
1854.]EXTRACT OF LETTER FROM SIR GEORGE SIMPSON TO DONALD A. SMITH.

HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY'S HEAD OFFICE RECORDS.

Lachine, 23 March 1854.

Owing to the unfortunate circumstances which have retarded our affairs at East Main, it is necessary to postpone for 2 or 3 years the re-establishment of Ungava Bay ; consequently no charges will at present be made in the arrangements connected with Fort Nascopie. We may possibly advance our Outposts from the Eastmain quarter in the direction of the height of land dividing it from Labrador, but our object will be not to draw the Nascopies from their present post, but to hunt a section of Country supposed to be productive in valuable furs which is not now visited by the Indians from either side

No. 968.

[15 Nov.,
1856.]LETTER FROM SIR GEORGE SIMPSON TO JOHN SHEPHERD, SECRETARY, HUDSON'S BAY CO.

[Confidential..]

HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY'S HEAD OFFICE RECORDS.

Lachine, 23 March 1854.

With reference to your enquiry respecting the boundaries of the Company's territory on the Canada side, and the nature of the intervening country, an attempt is now being made to deprive the Company of a part of their territory on the ground 'that it was in the possession of the French, and formed part of Canada, at the time the Company's charter was granted, from which are specially reserved all lands in the actual occupation of any Christian Prince. The boundary between Rupert's Land and Canada, as we have always understood it, is the range of hills or height of land, that divides the waters flowing into Hudson's Bay from those which find their outlet by the St. Lawrence. The most easterly extremity of that dividing ridge is near Cape Chudleigh at the entrance of Hudson's Straits from whence it runs southerly through Labrador, the rivers flowing from one side into the Atlantic and from the other into Ungava Bay and Eastmain. It then takes a westerly course parallel with, but from 200-300 miles north of, the St. Lawrence and its main tributary the Ottawa, near Temiscamigue, when it approaches Lake Hudson, and then runs round Lake Superior into United States territory, where it is unnecessary to follow it. All the rivers which take their rise on the North side of the line of hills above traced flow into Hudson's Bay, and we claim that the lands lying along all those rivers up to their very sources are embraced in the Company's Charter.

From Lake Superior westward we know but little of the line of hills dividing the waters of Hudson's Bay from those which are discharged through the Mississippi into the Gulf of Mexico, which is, however, of little consequence as the southern boundary of the Company's territory is in that part defined by Treaty.

* * * * *

[1857]

EXTRACT FROM EVIDENCE OF SIR GEORGE
SIMPSON,

GOVERNOR OF THE HUDON'S BAY COMPANY'S TERRITORIES < BEFORE THE SELECT COMMITTEE APPOINTED BY THE IMPERIAL HOUSE OF COMMONS
IN 1857, TO CONSIDER THE STATE OF THOSE BRITISH POSSESSIONS IN WHICH THEY HAD A LICENSE TO TRADE.*

1558. I have before me a letter of Mr. Kennedy : I suppose you have heard of Mr. Kennedy ?—There are several Kennedys ; which Kennedy do you mean ?

1559. He is a person who has quarrelled with your Company, I believe ; and he wrote a letter to Lord Elgin ?—William Kennedy.

1560. There is this passage in his letter ; and I want to ask you whether you are at all cognizant of the facts : quoting from a letter received by him, he says, “ You will be grieved to learn that the curse which had effect in the old country has extended here, though arising from causes of more frequent occurrence than even the failure of the crops. Starvation has, I learn, committed great havoc among your old friends the Nascopies, numbers of whom met their death from want last winter ; whole camps of them were found dead, without one survivor to tell the tale of their sufferings ; others sustained life in a way the most revolting, by using as food the dead bodies of their companions ; some even bled their own children to death, and sustained life with their bodies ! ” Quoting from another letter, he says, “ At Fort Nascopie the Indians were dying in dozens by starvation ; and, among others, your old friend, Paytabais.” A third he quotes as saying, “ A great number of Indians starved to death last winter ; and —— says it was ——'s fault in not giving them enough of ammunition.” Do any facts like that come within your knowledge ?—No ; that is an exaggerated statement.

1561. In your 37 years' experience in that territory, you have never heard of any transactions like that and deaths like that ?—Never, except in Mr. Kennedy's letter.

1562. Not in your own experience?—Certainly not.

1563. Mr. EDWARD ELLICE. in what part of the country is that ?—Upon the Labrador coast.

* Copied from Report from the Select Committee, ordered to be printed 17th August, 1857, pp. 83-84.

1564. Mr. ROEBUCK. Then you do not believe that statement ?—I do not.

1565. Where is For Nascopie ? (the same was pointed out.)—It is on the Labrador coast.

1566. EDWARD ELLICE That is in Canada, is it not ?—It is in Newfoundland.

1567. Mr. ROEBUCK. Does not the Hudson's Bay Company's territory extend over Labrador ?—No ; it is a part of Newfoundland.

1568. So that that northern peninsula does not belong to the Hudson's Bay Company ?—The whole does not.

1569. Mr. GROGAN. But is that fort which Mr. Roebuck is questioning you about, in Labrador or is it in Rupert's Land ?—It is in Labrador.

1570. Mr. ROEBUCK. It is pointed out as on the Green ; the it is in the Hudson's Bay Company's territory ?—I think not.

1571. Mr. EDWARD ELLICE. Have you examined that map ?—I have not attentively. I had not seen it till I came in just now.

1572. Do you know whether that fort belongs to the Hudson's Bay Company ?—It does ; it is a post or establishment called the Post of Nascopie.

1573. Mr. ROEBUCK. Can you remove a fort ?—A fort is half-a-dozen log huts, and may be erected by half a dozen men in about a week ; that is what we call a fort.

1574. It bears the same name wherever it travels ?—We call it either a post or a fort.

1575. Do you mean to say that you move a fort about ?—We call it an outpost, a trading post. I do not call it a fort.

1576. It is called a fort here ?—I may be so ; it is a misnomer.

1577. Do you mean to say that you have no Fort Nascopie ?—We have an outpost called Nascopie.

1578. You have no fort called Nascopie ?—We have not.

1579. Mr. GROGAN. It is a station ?—it is a station.

1580. Mr. EDWARD ELLICE. And those stations depend upon the time they are occupied ?—Exactly so.

1581. Mr. GROGAN. Has that station ever been abandoned ?—I really cannot tell ; I think it is very likely.

1582. But has it been abandoned ?—I really cannot tell ; we move an establishment according to circumstances. If the fish and the other means of subsistence are not sufficiently abundant, we move it to another point, 10, 20, or 30 miles distant.

1583. Mr. Roebuck put a question to you about the death of a great number of natives adjoining a fort, which at first you were under the impression was in Labrador ?—Yes.

1584. Now it appears that it is in the Hudson's Bay Company's territory ?—I am not quite sure that it is ; I am rather disposed to think it is not.

1585. Mr. ROEBUCK. You distinctly said that Nascopie was a station belonging to the Hudson's Bay Company ?—Yes.

1586. This account speaks of Nascopie ?—Yes.

1587. Therefore it belongs to the Hudson's Bay Company ?—It did belong to the Hudson's Bay Company.

1588. Mr. GROGAN. Has it ever been abandoned ?—I do not even know whether it is at present occupied or not.

1589. Mr. EDWARD ELLICE. It is still occupied ?—Yes.

1590. Mr. ROEBUCK. So that it still belongs to the Hudson's Bay Company ?—It always belonged to the Hudson's Bay Company, when it has been occupied.

1591. It just now belonged to Labrador ?—upon the coast of Labrador ; we have establishments upon the coast of Labrador.

1592. Mr. BLACKBURN. Are these posts sometimes in Labrador, and sometimes in the Hudson's Bay territory ?—They are moved as circumstances may render advisable.

1593. Mr. ROEBUCK. But they are always under the command of the Hudson's Bay Company ?—Yes.

1594. So that wherever they are moved to they belong to the Hudson's Bay Company ?—Hudson's Bay establishments are under the control of the Hudson's Bay Company, but there are other establishments in the immediate neighbourhood.

1595. CHAIRMAN. Is there any arrangement with the government of Labrador, by which you use that territory for your purposes ?—It is open for anybody.

1596. In truth it is practically unoccupied ?—Yes.

No. 970.

EXTRACTS FROM EVIDENCE OF SIR GEORGE
SIMPSON

BEFORE SELECT COMMITTEE OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS (IMPERIAL) APPOINTED TO CONSIDER THE STATE OF THOSE BRITISH POSSESSIONS IN NORTH AMERICA WHICH ARE UNDER THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY OR OVER WHICH THEY POSSESS A LICENSE TO TRADE.

(Ordered to be printed 17th August, 1857.)

Jovis, 26^o die Februarii, 1857.

Members Present.

Mr. ADDERLEY.	Mr. GROGAN.
Mr. BELL.	Mr. GURNEY.
Mr. BLACKBURN.	Mr. PERCY HERBERT.
Mr. EDWARD ELLICE.	Mr. KINNAIRD.
Mr. CHARLES FITZWILLIAM.	Mr. LABOUCHERE.
Mr. GLADSTONE.	Mr. LOWE.
Mr. GORDON.	Mr. ROEBUCK.
Mr. GREGSON.	Viscount SANDON.

The Right hon. HENRY LABOUCHERE, in the Chair.

Sir GEORGE SIMPSON, called in, and Examined.

702. CHAIRMAN : I believe you hold an important situation in the administration of the territories of the Hudson's Bay Company ?—I do.

703. What is it ?—I have been Governor of their territories for many years.

704. How long have you held that situation ?—Thirty-seven years I have been their principal representative.

705. Mr. EDWARD ELLICE : As governor the whole time ?—Yes ; I have held the situation of governor the whole time.

p. 2283

706. CHAIRMAN : What is the nature of your authority in that capacity ? —The supervision of the Company's affairs ; the presiding at their councils in the country, and the principal direction of the whole interior management.

707. Where do you generally reside ?—I have resided for several years at the Red River Settlement ; I have resided in Oregon ; I have resided in Athabasca, and latterly I have resided in Canada.

708. Is there any fixed seat of government within the territories of the Hudson's Bay Company ?—There is no fixed seat of government, but there is a seat of council for the northern and the southern departments ; one at Norway-house, at the northern end of Lake Winnipeg, and the other at Michipicoton, or Moose Factory, for the southern department.

709. Your authority extends, I imagine, as well over Rupert's Land as over the territory which the Company holds by license ?—Over the whole of the Company's affairs in North America.

* * * *

714. Of course, having administered the affairs of the Hudson's Bay Company during so long a period, you are well acquainted with every part of their territories ?—I have travelled through the greater part of the country ; I have not visited what are usually known as the Barren Grounds.

715. You are well acquainted with the western portion, as well as the eastern ?—Yes ; I have not been in Mackenzie's River, but I have been in nearly all the other parts of the country ; my usual route in going up the country is from Montreal by Rainy Lake and Lake Winnipeg to Red River ; I have crossed the Rocky Mountains at three different points to Oregon.

* * * *

993. What number of Indians do you calculate are living in the whole p.57. of the Hudson's Bay Territory ?—The Indian population of Rupert's Land we estimate at 42,840.

994. When was that calculation made ?—This season ; I collected from different data all the information within reach when I understood that I was required to leave Canada.

995. In the rest of the territory what are the numbers ?—In the Indian territory, east of the Rocky Mountains, 12,730 ; west of the Rocky Mountains, 80,000.

996. What is the whole amount of Indian population within the territories of the Hudson's Bay Company ?—139,000.

* * * *

1062. Mr. GREGSON : What mode have you of ascertaining the population of the Indians ?—We have lists of the Indians belonging to various posts ; we have compared and checked them with the report of the Government officers who went to Vancouver's Island some years ago, as regards the tribes to the west of the mountains, and with Colonel Lefroy's Lists, as regards those on the east side, and we have arrived at this estimate of the population.

* * * *

1066. Mr. KINNAIRD : You stated just now the population in rough ; would you have any objection to give in to the Committee a copy of the estimated census of the population which you have made. There are some other parts ; can you give us your census of the Red River population ; you have got it, I presume, in detail ?—I think I have ; I am not certain ; I took these notes previously to leaving Canada.

* * * *

1376. Mr. ADDERLEY : Is your appointment an appointment for life ?—No ; my appointment is by the Governor and Committee.

1377. Mr. ROEBUCK : I think it is a double government. You have a government in England and one in Hudson's Bay, have you not ?—The Governor and Company are the superiors ; they have the supreme direction.

1378. The Governor and Company in England appoint the Governor in Hudson's Bay ?—They do.

1379. According to their will and pleasure, and his appointment is revoked at their will and pleasure ?—It is so.

* * * *

1471. You were also asked to put in the census of the Indian population in detail over the whole territory ?—Yes. Here is the census of the Indian population. There is a list of the Company's trading posts, and the estimated number of Indians frequenting those posts. (The Witness delivered in the same.)

1472. Mr. ROEBUCK : Will you state the total ?—The Indians, east of the mountains, 55,000 ; west of the mountains, 80,000 ; Esquimaux, 4,000.

1473. What is the date of that census ?—Last year.

* * * *

LIST OF APPENDIX.

SESSION I.

* * * *

APPENDIX, No. 2.

Papers delivered in by Sir George Simpson and referred to in his evidence, 2 March, 1857 :

* * * *

(C.)—Indian Population

* * * *

p. 2285

(C)

INDIAN POPULATION.

It is a matter of great difficulty to obtain reliable information respecting the Indian population, their migratory habits, and the vast extent of country over which they are spread, misleading the calculations, and rendering it almost impracticable to prepare a satisfactory census. The following estimates have been compiled with great care, from a mass of documents and the actual personal knowledge of several of the Company's officers, tested by comparison with published statements, especially those presented to Government in 1846 by Messrs. Warre and Vavasour, and those of Colonel Lefroy, R.A., contained in a paper read before the Canadian Institute.

ESTABLISHMENTS of the HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY in 1856, and Number of INDIANS frequenting them.

POST.	Locality.	Department.	District.	Number of Indians frequenting it.
Fort Chipewyan . . .	Indian Territory . .	Northern	Athabasca	750
Dunvegan	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	400
Vermilion	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	250
Fond du Lac	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	150
Fort Simpson	" " " " " "	"	M'Kenzie's River . .	2,000
Fort aux Liards	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	400
Fort Halkett	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	300
Youcon	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	4,000
Peel's River	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	1,000
Lapierre's House	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	150
Fort Good Hope	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	700
Fort Rae	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	600
Fort Resolution	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	500
Big Island	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	80
Fort Norman	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	700
Ile à la Croise	Rupert's Land	"	English River	700
Rapid River	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	250
Green Lake	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	120
Deer's Lake	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	250
Portage la Loche	" " " " " "	"	" " " " " "	50

Larger HTML Version (20 kb)

POST.	Locality.	Department.	District.	Number of Indians frequenting it.
Edmonton	Rupert's Land	Northern	Saskatchewan	7,500
Carlton	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	6,000
Fort Pitt	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	7,000
Rocky Mountain House	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	6,000
Lac la Biche	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	500
Lesser Slave Lake	Indian Territory	"	" " " " " " " "	400
Fort Assiniboine	Rupert's Land	"	" " " " " " " "	150
Jasper's House	Indian Territory	"	" " " " " " " "	200
Fort à la Corne	Rupert's Land	"	" " " " " " " "	300
Cumberland House	" " " " " " " "	"	Cumberland	350
Moose Lake	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	200
The Pas	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	200
Fort Pelly	" " " " " " " "	"	Swan River	800
Fort Ellice	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	500
Qu'Appelle Lakes	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	250
Shoal River	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	150
Touchwood Hills	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	300
Egg Lake	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	200
Fort Garry	" " " " " " " "	"	Red River	7,000
Lower Fort Garry	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	including whites and half breeds.
White Horse Plain	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	1,000 ditto.
Pembina	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	200 ditto.
Manitoba	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	50
Reed Lake	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	1,500
Fort Frances	" " " " " " " "	"	Lac la Pluie	300
Fort Alexander	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	500
Rat Portage	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	100
White Dog	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	50
Lac de Bonnet	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	200
Lac de Bois Blanc	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	200
Shoal Lake	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	500
Norway House	" " " " " " " "	"	Norway House	180
Beren's River	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	400
Nelson's River	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	300
York Factory	" " " " " " " "	"	York	400
Churchill	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	250
Severn	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	250
Trout Lake	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	300
Oxford House	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	400
Albany Factory	" " " " " " " "	Southern	Albany	200
Marten's Falls	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	200
Omaburg	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	300
Lac Seul	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	250
Matawagamingue	" " " " " " " "	"	Kinogumisee	150
Kuckatoosh	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	300
Michipicoton	Canada	"	Lake Superior	100
Batchewana	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "	50
Mamainse	" " " " " " " "	"	" " " " " " " "

Larger HTML Version (34 kb)

ESTABLISHMENTS of the HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY in 1856,
and Number of INDIANS frequenting them.

POST.	Locality.	Department.	District.	Number of Indians frequenting it.
Fort Chipewyan	Indian Territory	Northern	Athabasca	750
Dunvegan	” ”	”	”	400
Vermilion	” ”	”	”	250
Fond du Lac	” ”	”	”	150
Fort Simpson	” ”	”	M'Kenzie's River	2,000
Fort aux Liards	” ”	”	” ”	400
Fort Halkett	” ”	”	” ”	300
Youcon	” ”	”	” ”	4,000
Peel's River	” ”	”	” ”	1,000
Lapierre's House	” ”	”	” ”	150
Fort Good Hope	” ”	”	” ”	700
Fort Rae	” ”	”	” ”	600
Fort Resolution	” ”	”	” ”	500
Big Island	” ”	”	” ”	80
Fort Norman	” ”	”	” ”	700
Ile à la Crosse	Rupert's Land	”	English River	700
Rapid River	” ”	”	” ”	250
Green Lake	” ”	”	” ”	120
Deer's Lake	” ”	”	” ”	250
Portago la Loche	” ”	”	” ”	50

[ESTABLISHMENTS of the HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY in 1856,
and Number of INDIANS frequenting them— continued].

POST.	Locality.	Department.	District.	Number of Indians frequenting it.
Edmonton	Rupert's Land	Northern	Saskatchewan	7,500
Carlton	" "	"	"	6,000
Fort Pitt	" "	"	"	7,000
Rocky Mountain House	" "	"	"	6,000
Lac la Biche	" "	"	"	500
Lesser Slave Lake	Indian Territory	"	"	400
Fort Assiniboine	Rupert's Land	"	"	150
Jasper's House	Indian Territory	"	"	200
Fort à la Corne	Rupert's Land	"	"	300
Cumberland House	" "	"	Cumberland	350
Moose Lake	" "	"	"	200
The Pas	" "	"	"	200
Fort Pelly	" "	"	Swan River	800
Fort Ellice	" "	"	" "	500
Qu'appelle Lakes	" "	"	" "	250
Shoal River	" "	"	" "	150
Touchwood Hills	" "	"	" "	300
Egg Lake	" "	"	" "	200
Fort Garry	" "	"	Red River	7,000
Lower Fort Garry	" "	"	" "	including
White Horse Plain	" "	"	" "	whites and half breeds
Pembina	" "	"	" "	1,000 ditto.

Manitobah	”	”	”	”	”	200 ditto.
Reed Lake	”	”	”	”	”	50
Fort Frances	”	”	”	Lac la Pluie		1,500
Fort Alexander	”	”	”	”	”	300
Rat Portage	”	”	”	”	”	500
White Dog	”	”	”	”	”	100
Lac de Bonnet	”	”	”	”	”	50
Lac de Bois Blanc	”	”	”	”	”	200
Shoal Lake	”	”	”	”	”	200
Norway House	”	”	”	Norway House		500
Beren's River	”	”	”	”	”	180
Nelson's River	”	”	”	”	”	400
York Factory	”	”	”	York		300
Churchill	”	”	”	”		400
Severn	”	”	”	”		250
Trout Lake	”	”	”	”		250
Oxford House	”	”	”	”		300
Albany Factory	”	”	Southern	Albany		400
Marten's Falls	”	”	”	”		200
Osnaburg	”	”	”	”		200
Lac Seul	”	”	”	”		300
Matawagamingue	”	”	”	Kinogumissee		250
Kuckatoosh	”	”	”	”		150
Michipicotou	Canada		”	Lake Superior		300
Batchewana	”		”	”	”	100
Mamainse	”		”	”	”	50

Back to Main Page

POST.	Locality.	Department.	District.	Number of Indians frequenting it.
Pic	Canada	Southern	Lake Superior . . .	100
Long Lake	Rupert's Land	"	" " " " . . .	80
Lake Nipigon	Canada	"	" " " " . . .	250
Fort William	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	350
Pigeon River	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	50
Lac d'Original	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	50
Lacloche	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	Lake Huron	150
Little Current	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	300
Mississaugie	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	150
Green Lake	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	150
Whitefish Lake	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	150
Sault St. Marie	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	Sault St. Marie	150
Moose Factory	Rupert's Land	"	Moose	180
Hannah Bay	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	50
Abitibi	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	350
New Brunswick	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	150
Great Whale River	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	East Main	250
Little Whale River	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	250
Fort George	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	200
Rupert's House	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	Rupert's River	250
Mistassinny	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	200
Temiskamay	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	75
Woswonaby	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	150
Mechiskan	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	75
Pike Lake	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	80
Nitchequon	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	80
Kaniapicow	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	75
Temiscamingue House	Canada	"	Temiscamingue	400
Grand Lac	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	200
Kakabegino	Rupert's Land	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	100
Lake Nepisingue	Canada	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	130
Hunter's Lodge	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	100
Temagamingue	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	100
Lac des Allumettes	" " " " " " " " . . .	Montreal	Fort Coulonge	200
Joachim	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	75
Matawa	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	100
Buckingham	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	Lac des Sables	50
Riviere Desert	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	100
Lachine House	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	Lachine	Whites.
Three Rivers	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	St. Maurice	Whites.
Weymontachingue	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	150
Kikandatch	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	130
Tadousac	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	King's Posts	100
Chicoutimie	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	100
Lake St. John's	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	250
Isle Jeremie	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	250
Godbout	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	100
Seven Islands	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	300
Mingan	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	Mingan	500
Musquarro	" " " " " " " " . . .	"	" " " " " " " " . . .	100

Larger HTML Version (34 kb)

POST.	Locality.	Department.	District.	Number of Indians frequenting it.
Natesquan	Canada	Montreal	Mingan	100
North West River	Newfoundland	"	Esquimaux Bay	100
Fort Nascoie	Rupert's Land	"	" " " "	200
Rigolet	Newfoundland	"	" " " "	100
Kibokok	" " " "	"	" " " "	100
Fort Vancouver	Washington Territory	Oregon	Columbia	200
Umpqua	Oregon Territory	"	" " " "	800
Cape Disappointment	Washington Territory	"	" " " "	100
Chinook Point	" " " "	"	" " " "	100
Caweean	" " " "	"	" " " "	100
Champoog	Oregon Territory	"	" " " "	150
Nisqually	" " " "	"	" " " "	500
Cowellitz	" " " "	"	" " " "	250
Fort Colvile	Washington Territory	"	Colvile	800
Pend Oreilles River	Indian Territory	"	" " " "	400
Flat Heads	Washington Territory	"	" " " "	500
Kootonais	" " " "	"	" " " "	500
Okanagan	" " " "	"	" " " "	300
Walla Walla	Oregon Territory	"	Snake Country	300
Fort Hall	" " " "	"	" " " "	200
Fort Boise	" " " "	"	" " " "	200
Fort Victoria	Vancouver's Island	Western	Vancouver's Island	5,000
Fort Rupert	" " " "	"	" " " "	4,000
Nanaimo	" " " "	"	" " " "	3,000
Fort Langley	Indian Territory	"	Fraser's River	4,000
Fort Simpson	" " " "	"	{North West Coast	10,000
			{Northern Tribes	35,000
			{Thompson's River	2,000
Kamloops	" " " "	"	New Caledonia
Fort Hope	" " " "	"	" " " "
Stuart's Lake	" " " "	"	" " " "
M'Leod's Lake	" " " "	"	" " " "
Fraser's Lake	" " " "	"	" " " "
Alexandria	" " " "	"	" " " "	12,000
Fort George	" " " "	"	" " " "
Babines	" " " "	"	" " " "
Connolly's Lake	" " " "	"	" " " "
Honolulu	Sandwich Islands	"	" " " "
				6,000
				4,000
			TOTAL	158,960

Larger HTML Version (27 kb)

p. 2289

The Indian Races shown in detail in the foregoing Census may be classified as follows :—

Thickwood Indians on the east side of the Rocky Mountains	35,000
The Plain Tribes (Blackfeet, &c.)	25,000
The Esquimaux	4,000
Indians settled in Canada	3,000
Indians in British Oregon and on the North-west Coast	80,000
Total Indians	147,000
Whites and half-breeds in Hudson's Bay Territory	11,000
Souls	158,000

Larger HTML Version (11 kb)

[ESTABLISHMENTS of the HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY in 1856,
and Number of INDIANS frequenting them— continued].

POST.	Locality.	Department.	District.	Number of Indians frequenting it.
Pic	Canada	Southern	Lake Superior	100
Long Lake	Rupert's Land	"	" "	80
Lake Nipigon	Canada	"	" "	250
Fort William	"	"	" "	350
Pigeon River	"	"	" "	50
Lac d'Original	"	"	" "	50
Lacloche	"	"	Lake Huron	150
Little Current	"	"	" "	500
Mississaugie	"	"	" "	150
Green Lake	"	"	" "	150
Whitefish Lake	"	"	" "	150
Sault St. Marie	"	"	Sault St. Marie	150
Moose Factory	Rupert's Land	"	Moose	180
Hannah Bay	" "	"	"	50
Abitibi	" "	"	"	350
New Brunswick	" "	"	"	150
Great Whale River	" "	"	East Main	250
Little Whale River	" "	"	" "	250
Fort George	" "	"	" "	200
Rupert's House	" "	"	Rupert's River	250
Mistasinny	" "	"	" "	200
Temiskamay	" "	"	" "	75
Woswonaby	" "	"	" "	150
Mechiskan	" "	"	" "	75

Pike Lake	”	”	”	”	”	80
Nitchequon	”	”	”	”	”	80
Kaniapiscow	”	”	”	”	”	75
Temiscamingue House	Canada		”	Temiscamingue		400
Grand Lac	”		”	”		200
Kakabeagino	Rupert's Land		”	”		100
Lake Nepisingue	Canada		”	”		130
Hunter's Lodge	”		”	”		100
Temagamingue	”		”	”		100
Lac des Allumettes	”		Montreal	Fort Coulonge		200
Joachim	”	”	”	”	”	75
Matawa	”	”	”	”	”	100
Buckingham	”	”	”	Lac des Sables		50
Rivière Desert	”	”	”	”	”	100
Lachine House	”	”	”	Lachine		Whites.
Three Rivers	”	”	”	St. Maurice		Whites.
Weymontachingue	”	”	”	”	”	150
Kikaudatch	”	”	”	”	”	130
Tadousac	”	”	”	King's Posts		100
Chicoutimie	”	”	”	”	”	100
Lake St. John's	”	”	”	”	”	250
Isle Jeremie	”	”	”	”	”	250
Godbout	”	”	”	”	”	100
Seven Islands	”	”	”	”	”	300
Mingan	”	”	”	Mingan		500
Musquarro	”	”	”	”		100

Back to Main Page

[ESTABLISHMENTS of the HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY in 1856,
and Number of INDIANS frequenting them— continued].

POST.	Locality.	Department.	District.	Number of Indians frequenting it.
Natosquan	Canada	Montreal	Mingan	100
North West River	Newfoundland	"	Esquimaux Bay	100
Fort Nascopie	Rupert's Land	"	" "	200
Rigolet	Newfoundland	"	" "	100
Kibokok	"	"	" "	100
Fort Vancouver	Washington Territory	Oregon	Columbia	200
Umpqua	Oregon Territory	"	"	800
Cape Disappointment	Washington Territory	"	"	100
Chinook Point	" "	"	"	100
Caweeman	" "	"	"	100
Champoog	Oregon Territory	"	"	150
Nisqually	" "	"	"	500
Cowelitz	" "	"	"	250
Fort Colvile	Washington Territory	"	Colvile	800
Pend Oreilles River	Indian Territory	"	"	400
Flat Heads	Washington Territory	"	"	500
Kootonais	" "	"	"	500
Okanagan	" "	"	"	300
Walla Walla	Oregon Territory	"	Snake Country	300
Fort Hall	" "	"	" "	200

Fort Boisé	”	”	”	”	”	200
Fort Victoria	Vancouver's Island		Western	Vancouver's Island		5,000
Fort Rupert	”	”	”	”	”	4,000
Nanaimo	”	”	”	”	”	3,000
Fort Langley	Indian Territory		”	Fraser's River		4,000
Fort Simpson	”	”	”	North West Coast		10,000
				Northern Tribes		35,000
Kamloops	”	”	”
Fort Hope	”	”	”	Thompson's River		2,000
Stuart's Lake	”	”	”	New Caledonia
M'Leod's Lake	”	”	”	”	”
Fraser's Lake	”	”	”	”	”
Alexandria	”	”	”	”	”	12,000
Fort George	”	”	”	”	”
Babines	”	”	”	”	”
Connolly's Lake	”	”	”	”	”
Honolulu	Sandwich Islands		”	”	”	—
	Add Whites and half breeds in Hudson's Bay Territory, not included					6,000
	Add Esquimaux not enumerated					4,000
				TOTAL		158,960

Back to Main Page

The Indian Races shown in detail in the foregoing Census may be classified as follows :—

Thickwood Indians on the east side of the Rocky Mountains	35,000
The Plain Tribes (Blackfeet, &c.)	25,000
The Esquimaux	4,000
Indians settled in Canada	3,000
Indians in British Oregon and on the North-west Coast	80,000
	<hr/>
Total Indians	147,000
Whites and half-breeds in Hudson's Bay Territory	11,000
	<hr/>
Souls	158,000

Back to Main Page

No. 971.

EXTRACTS FROM EVIDENCE OF HONOURABLE
WILLIAM H. DRAPER, C.B.,

BEFORE SELECT COMMITTEE OF HOUSE OF COMMONS -(IMPERIAL)
APPOINTED TO CONSIDER THE STATE OF THOSE BRITISH POSSESSIONS IN NORTH AMERICA WHICH ARE UNDER THE ADMINISTRATION OF THE HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY OR OVER WHICH THEY POSSESS A LICENC TO TRADE.

(Ordered to be printed 17th August, 1857.)

—————
Jovis, 28 die Maii, 1857.
—————

Mr. CHRISTY.	Mr. PERCY HERBERT
Mr. EDWARD ELLICE.	Mr. KINNAIRD.
Mr. CHARLES FITZWILLIAM.	Mr. LABOUCHERE.
Mr. GLADSTONE.	Mr. LOWE.
Mr. GREGSON.	Mr. MAHESON.
Mr. GROGAN.	Sir JOHN PAKINGTON.
Mr. J. H. GURNEY.	Lord JOHN RUSSELL.

—————
The Right Hon. HENRY LABOUCHERE, in the Chair.

—————
The Honourable WILLIAM DRAPER, C.B., called in, and examined.

4038. CHAIRMAN: What situation do you hold in Canada ?
—I am Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas of Upper Canada.

4039. How long have you held that situation ?—I have held the office of Chief Justice a little more than a year, but I have been upon the Bench of Upper Canada for nearly 10 years.

4040. What other public situations have you held in Canada ? —I was appointed to the Executive Council of Upper Canada in the year 1836. I was appointed Solicitor-general of Upper Canada in 1837. I was appointed Attorney-general of Upper Canada in 1840. I held that office until some time in the latter part of 1842 ; I as re-appointed in 1844, and I continued to be Attorney-general from that time until I was appointed to the Bench.

4041. How long have you been resident in Canada ? —I landed in Quebec on the 16th or 17th of May, 1820 ; I have been a continual resident in Canada since that period.

4042. Under that circumstances are you now visiting this country ? —I was requested by the Government of Canada, through the medium of two of its members, to undertake the duty of coming to England for the purpose of watching the investigation which it had been communicated to them, was to take place before a Committee of the House of Commons, with the view of pressing whenever I deemed it necessary for the interests of the province, certain views which the Government of the province adopted in reference to their rights and interests in this question. I had written instructions from the Government of Canada to that effect, which I can lay before the Committee, if they desire it. They were communicated to me through the provincial secretary, and emanating from the Government, giving me general directions what I was to do.

* * * *

4089. How far back do you think it would be desirable to throw the frontier to the north for the purpose of giving opportunities for settlement in the manner which you have described ?—I understand by that question how far there might be the exclusive right of trade which I have spoken of as that which should be reserved ; how far from the north it should extend to the south, leaving an intermediate space in which there should be no such exclusive right, but which should be open to settlement.

4090. Exactly so ?—I have no personal knowledge of the territory whatever ; all I know of it has been derived from books or other documents which I have consulted from time to time upon that subject. It has occurred to me that the line once proposed by the Hudson's Bay Company themselves, shortly after the peace of Ryswick, would reach about the extent of what would be the land desirable for settlement ; I suppose that the most valuable portion of the land for settlement would be found to lie in a parallel of latitude south of Norway House ; but I give that as a mere matter of opinion, not that I have any personal knowledge.

* sic.

4091. Where is Norway House ?—At the head of Lake Winnipeg, about the north-east corner of Lake Winnipeg ; I do not desire to attach any importance to my own answer, because I have no knowledge of the country of a personal character, and therefore may be very much mistaken as to its resources and capabilities of settlement.

4092. Mr. EDWARD ELLICE : In that answer do you contemplate including that portion of Labrador and James's Bay ?—I do not propose carrying the line straight through there, because it would be depriving the Hudson's Bay Company of control over the Indians in one portion of the territory ; I referred to the line proposed to* the Company themselves upon the negotiations for limits between Canada and the Hudson's Bay Company's territory shortly after the peace of Ryswick, in which they themselves proposed certain limits, which, although they were not willing to take, they nevertheless, as a pis aller, were ready to submit to if nothing better could be gained for them. With regard to the eastern portion of the territory, the limit which I should at present suggest would be rather that limit which was proposed under the Treaty of Utrecht, which was to start from Cape Perdrix in $58\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ of latitude, just below Cape Chudleigh on the Labrador coast. The Hudson's Bay Company themselves proposed that a line should be run from there (in one of the papers it is called $59\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ and in the other $58\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$), that it should come down through the island of* a lake called Lake Mistassinnie, and from there in a south-west direction extending to what they then required as the boundary to be given to them, namely, the 49th parallel of latitude directly through the continent. Grimmington Island, I think, was the name of the island, and Cape Perdrix the name of the cape.

4093. That proposition, I believe, was not agreed to ?—I believe nothing grew out of it ; it was propounded to the French, and they would not assent to it. (The Witness pointed out the position on the map.) Instead of that, my own suggestion would be that it should only come down in this direction, and come to the point which I have already referred to, across the country to the Rocky Mountains.

4094. Sir JOHN PACKINGTON : That would be your line to get to Norway House ?—I have only thought of it generally. The line must leave sufficient space here, so as not to interfere with the trade of St. James's Bay, on which some Indians are settled ; this country being at present, I believe, so far as white inhabitants are concerned, wholly unsettled.

4095. Still, I apprehend that your proposed line would pass considerably to the northward of the present boundary shown for Canada on that map ? —Yes. I wish to be understood as stating that I am suggesting merely the line suggested by the Hudson's Bay Company themselves.

4096. Mr. EDWARD ELLICE : In what year was that proposal made ; in 1719, was not it ?—The proposal that I speak of was renewed by the Hudson's Bay Company in the year 1750. On the 25th of July, 1750, the Company were called upon to lay before the Lords of Trade the limits which they proposed, and they replied in the month of October of that year, giving the boundary that I have just spoken of.

CORRESPONDENCE BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES RESPECTING THE BOUNDARY BETWEEN LABRADOR AND THE DOMINION OF CANADA, OCTOBER— NOVEMBER, 1874.

[Oct. 26,
1874.]

No. 972.

N

SIR E. THORNTON TO MR. FISH.

Washington, October 26th, 1874.

Sir,

[on what Information.]

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note on the 24th instant, and to express my great regret that it has been out of my power as yet to give a positive answer to your question with regard to the political position of Labrador. I can, however, assure you that the delay has not been caused by any neglect on the part of this Legislation.

From information which I have received this morning I am now enabled to state positively that the whole of Labrador outside the province of Quebec, the boundary of which is laid down in the Imperial Statute 6 Geo. IV., cap 59, is under the jurisdiction and Government of the Colony of Newfoundland, and is actually included in and forms part of the colony.

I have, etc.

(Signed) EDWD. THORNTON.

HAMILTON FISH, Esq.

No. 973.

N

[Oct. 27, 1874.]

Department of State,
Washington, October 20th, 1874.

Sir,

I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of yesterday's date in which you are pleased to state, in answer to the enquiry of this Department, that the whole of Labrador outside the province of Quebec is under the jurisdiction and Government of the Colony of Newfoundland, and is actually included in and forms a part of that Colony. Thanking you for this information.

I have, etc.,

HAMILTON FISH.

Sir E. THORNTON.

No. 974.SIR E. THORNTON TO MR. FISH.[Nov. 23, 1874.]

Washington, November 23rd, 1874.

Sir,

With reference to My note of the 26th Ultimo, I have the honor to enclose copies of a Despatch and of its enclosures which I have received from the Governor-General of Canada, giving more precise details as to the boundary between Labrador and the Dominion of Canada, and the position of the former possession in relation to the latter or to the Colony of Newfoundland.

[Nov. 16,
1874.]

A map showing the exact boundary of the coast and the assumed boundary in the interior, is also enclosed.

I have, etc.,

EDW. THORNTON.

HAMILTON. FISH, Esq.

No. 975.[Enclosure in No. 974.]LORD DUFFERIN TO SIR E. THORNTON.

Government House, Ottawa,
November 16th, 1874.

Sir,

With reference to your despatch of June 20th, and to subsequent correspondence making an inquiry on the part of the United States Government as to the position of Labrador in relation to the Dominion of Canada or Newfoundland, I have the honor to enclose, for the information of Mr. Fish, a copy of an order of the Privy Council which contains the views of my Government on the subjects.

[Nov. 12,
1874.]

Appended to the Minute are extracts from the Imperial Statutes bearing on the question, and a map showing the exact boundary on the coast and the assumed boundary in the interior.

I have, etc.,

DUFFERIN.

Sir E. THORNTON.

[Sub-Enclosure 1 in No. 974.]

EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL IN COUNCIL, ON THE 12TH DAY OF NOVEMBER, 1874.

In a despatch dated 20th June, 1874, from Sir Edward Thornton to Your Excellency, inclosing a communication from the Hon. Hamilton Fish, Secretary of State at Washington, desiring to be informed whether any part of Labrador is separated from the jurisdiction of either the Dominion of Canada or that of Newfoundland.

The Honourable the Secretary of State to whom this despatch, with enclosures, has been referred, reports that the boundary-line between the Dominion of Canada and Labrador is a line drawn due north and south from the Bay or Harbor of Ance au Blanc Sablon, near the Straits of Belle Isle as far as the 52nd. degree of north latitude; that Labrador eastward and north-ward from that point to Hudson's Straits.

That the division-line in the interior separating Labrador from the Dominion of Canada has only been defined as far north as the 52nd. degree of north latitude, but it has been assumed that the boundary-line in the interior would have taken the direction laid down on the accompanying map, which follows the height of land.

That Labrador, with the islands adjacent thereto, is annexed to Newfoundland, and under the Government of that Island.

Attached to the Report of the Secretary of State are extracts from the Imperial Statute bearing on the question, and a map showing the exact boundary on the coast and the assumed boundary in the interior.

The Committee recommend that a copy of this Minute with map and extracts from the Imperial Statute, above alluded to, be transmitted to Sir Edward Thornton for the information of the United States Government.

Certified:

W. A. HIMSWORTH,
Clerk Privy Council, Canada.

[Sub-Enclosure 2 in No. 974.]

IMPERIAL STATUTE 49, GEORGE III., CAP. 27, SECTION XIV.

And whereas His Majesty, by his proclamation of the 7th day of October, 1763, was pleased to declare that he had put the coast of Labrador from the river St. John to Hudson's Straits, with the islands of Anticosti and Madelaine, and all other smaller islands lying on the said coast under the care and

p. 2296

inspection of the governor of Newfoundland : and whereas, by an act passed in the 14th year of the reign of His present Majesty, entitled " An act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec in North America," all such territories, islands, and countries as since the 10th day of February, 1763, had been made part of the government of Newfoundland, were, during His Majesty's pleasure, annexed to and made part of the province of Quebec, as created by the said proclamation : and whereas, in pursuance of an act passed in the 31st year of His present Majesty's reign, entitled " An act to repeal certain parts of an act passed in the 14th year of His Majesty's reign, entitled 'An act for making more effectual provision for the government of the province of Quebec, in North America, and to make further provisions for the government of the said province,' " the said province of Quebec was divided into two provinces of Upper and Lower Canada, the latter including the parts of the coast of Labrador and the said islands so formerly annexed to the government of Newfoundland : and whereas it is expedient that the said coast of Labrador and the adjacent islands (except the islands of Madelaine) should be re-annexed to the government of Newfoundland :

[1809.]

Be it therefore enacted, that such parts of the coast of Labrador from the River St. John to Hudson's Straits, and the said island of Anticosti, and all other smaller islands so annexed to the government of Newfoundland by the said proclamation of the 7th day of October, 1763, (except the said islands of Madelaine,) shall be separated from the said government of Lower Canada, and be again re-annexed to the government of Newfoundland. Anything in the said act passed in the 31st year of His present Majesty's reign or any other act to the contrary notwithstanding.

[Sub-Enclosure 3 in No. 974.]

IMPERIAL ACT 6, GEORGE IV., CHAPTER 59, A.D. 1825.

IX. And whereas, under and by virtue of a certain act passed in the forty-ninth year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, entitled " An act for establishing courts of judicature in the island of Newfoundland and in the islands adjacent and for re-annexing part of Labrador and the islands lying on the said coast to the government of Newfoundland ;— and of the act passed in the fifth year of the reign of His present Majesty, entitled " An act for the better administration of Justice in Newfoundland, and for other purposes," the coast of Labrador, from the River St. John to Hudson's Straits, and the island of Anticosti, and all the islands adjacent to the said coast, except the islands of Madelaine, are annexed to and form part of the government of Newfoundland, and it is expedient that certain parts of the said coast of Labrador should be re-annexed to and form, part of, the province of Lower Canada :

p. 2297

C

Be it therefore enacted, that so much of the said coast as Canada.

Secret.

[21 Dec., 1874.]
F.O. 10 Nov.
'74.
C.O. 26 ,,
F.O. 1 Dec. '74.
C.O. 5 ,,
C.O. 15 ,,

lies westward of a line to be drawn due north and south from the bay or harbor of Ance Sablon, inclusive, as far as the fifty-second degree of north latitude, with the island of Anticosti, and all other islands adjacent to such part as last aforesaid, of the coast of Labrador, shall be, and the same are hereby, re-annexed to and made a part of the said province of Lower Canada, and shall henceforward be subject to the laws of the said province, and to none other ; and so much of the said recited acts passed in the forty-ninth year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, and in the fifth year of the reign of His present Majesty, as relates to such part of the coast of Labrador as last aforesaid, and the said island of Anticosti, and other adjacent islands shall be, and the same is hereby repealed.

No. 976.

C

LORD CARNARVON TO LORD DUFFERIN.

Copy.

Downing Street,
21st December 1874.

My Lord,

I transmit to you, for your information, copies of correspondence with the Foreign Office, respecting a question raised by the United States Government as to whether cargoes of fish from Labrador are entitled to be admitted into the United States free of duty under the Treaty of Washington.

I have the honor to be
My Lord
Your Lordship's most obedient humble servant

(sd) CARNARVON.

Governor General
The Right Honble.
The Earl of Dufferin,
K.P., K.C.B.,
&c. &c. &c.

NOTE.—This Despatch and its enclosures are taken from file No. 64, Governor General's Office, Ottawa, Canada.

[10 Nov., 1874.]
No. 291.

No. 977.

[Enclosure in No. 975.]

THE FOREIGN OFFICE TO THE COLONIAL OFFICE.

Copy.

Foreign Office,
November 10th 1874.

Sir,

I am directed by Her Majesty's Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs to transmit to you to be laid before the Earl of Carnarvon a copy of a despatch from Her Majesty's Minister at Washington upon the subject of the political position of Labrador.

I have, &c.

(sd) TENTERDEN.

The Under Secretary of State
Colonial Office.

No. 978.

[Enclosure in No. 976.]

SIR E. THORNTON TO THE EARL OF DERBY.

Copy.

Washington,
Oct. 26th 1874.

My Lord,

On the 19th of June last Mr. Fish addressed me a note enquiring whether Labrador formed part of the Dominion of Canada, although he was under the impression that it was politically attached to Newfoundland. He also asked whether any part of Labrador was separated either from the Dominion of Canada or from Newfoundland.

Without knowing what might be the precise object of this enquiry, I forwarded it to the Governor General of Canada. During His Excellency's absence from Ottawa, Mr. Watson, H.M. Charge d'Affaires received on the 11th of July a telegram from Mr. Scott, Canadian Secretary of State, to the effect that the Boundary Line between Labrador, is a line drawn due North and South from the Bay or Harbour of Ance Sablon inclusive as far as the 52nd degree of North Latitude. The telegram referred to the Imperial Statutes 6 Geo. IV, Cap 59 and further stated that Labrador is under the jurisdiction of Newfoundland.

As the above mentioned Statute was not to be found at this Legation, and as Mr. Watson was led to expect a further written communication upon the subject he deferred answering Mr. Fish's enquiry.

But on the 27th of July Mr. Fish addressed a note to Mr. Watson expressing his anxiety to receive an answer as to the exact political relations of Labrador to the Dominion of Canada on account of cases that had arisen in the Treasury Department, the decision of which would depend in a measure upon Mr. Watson's reply.

The latter then at once communicated to Mr. Fish the contents of Mr. Scott's above mentioned telegram informing him at the same time that he would also convey to him the contents of a Despatch which he expected from Lord Dufferin as soon as he received it.

But no such despatch reached Mr. Watson and on the further application of Mr. Cadwalader, Acting Secretary of State, the former addressed another Despatch to Lord Dufferin on the 15th instant asking that the necessary information might be forwarded without delay so that it might be communicated to the United States Government.

It was only on my arrival at Washington that I learned from

Mr. Cadwalader that these enquiries had reference to cargoes of fish which were arriving from Labrador and with respect to which the Treasury Department doubted whether they could be admitted free of duty under the Treaty of May 8, 1871, as coming either from the Dominion of Canada or the Colony of Newfoundland. I must however acknowledge that there seemed to be a desire on the part of Mr. Cadwalader at least to receive some statement from me which would enable the Treasury Department to decide that fish from the Coast of Labrador should be admitted duty free.

Fortunately Lord Dufferin yesterday paid a visit of a few hours to Washington when I stated the case to him. In reply His Excellency authorized me to inform Mr. Fish that Labrador is under the jurisdiction of Newfoundland and is included in and forms part of that Colony. I at once communicated this statement to Mr. Fish in a note and the latter subsequently told me that he had forwarded my note to the Secretary of the Treasury, to whom he did not doubt that it would be satisfactory. I trust therefore that no further difficulty will be raised as to the free admission of fish from Labrador, one cargo of which is at this moment waiting for entry at New York.

I have &c.

(sd) EDWARD THORNTON.

The Earl of Derby
&c. &c. &c.

[26 Nov.,
1874.]No. 979.*THE COLONIAL OFFICE TO THE FOREIGN OFFICE.Downing Street
26 November 1874

Sir,

I am directed by the Earl of Carnarvon to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 10th instant enclosing a copy of a Despatch from the British Minister at Washington respecting a question raised by the United States Government as to whether cargoes of fish from Labrador were entitled to be admitted into the United States free of duty under the Treaty of Washington of May 1871, as coming either from the Dominion of Canada or the Colony of Newfoundland.

2. It appears from Sir E. Thornton's despatch that on the authority of the Governor General of Canada he has informed the United States Secretary of State that Labrador is under the jurisdiction of Newfoundland and is included in and forms part of that Colony, but I am to point out for the Earl of Derby's information said to have been given by Lord Dufferin (as it would seem in conversation and without having referred to His Government) does not appear to be altogether correct.

3. The Act 6 Geo IV Cap 59 settles the boundaries between Newfoundland and Canada on the Labrador Coast, and Lord Derby will perceive on reference to the 9th sect. of the Act, a copy of which I am to enclose, that part only of Labrador belongs to Newfoundland and the rest to Canada.

4. Lord Carnarvon apprehends, however, that the inaccuracy in Lord Dufferin's alleged statement is of no practical consequence so far as regards the particular question at issue inasmuch as the whole of Labrador belongs either to Newfoundland or to Canada and the produce of the fisheries both of Canada and of Newfoundland are entitled to be admitted free into the United States under the 21st and 32nd Articles of the Treaty of Washington.

I am, &c.

(sd) W. R.

MALCOLM.
The Under Secretary of State
Foreign Office.

Privy Council
Documents

Volume V
Contents

[1 dec. 1874.]
No. 312.

No. 980.

THE FOREIGN OFFICE TO THE COLONIAL OFFICE.

Copy.

Foreign Office
December 1, 1874.

Sir,

With reference to my letter of the 10th ulto. I am directed by the Earl of Derby to transmit to you to be laid before the Earl of Carnarvon a copy of a despatch from Sir Edward Thornton respecting a complaint made to him by Messrs. Brigham and Company, American Merchants at Boston in consequence of their having been called upon to pay import duty on a shipment of salmon from the Coast of Labrador.

I am to add that Sir Edward Thornton's note to Mr. Fish on the subject has been approved.

I am, &c.,
(sd) TENTERDEN.

The Under Secretary of State
Colonial Office.

Privy Council
Documents

Volume V
Contents

No. 312.

[16 Nov., 1874.]

No. 981.

[Enclosure in No. 980.]

SIR E. THORNTON TO THE EARL OF DERBY.

Copy.

Washington,
Novr. 16th 1874.

Mr Lord,

I have the honor to enclose copies of a letter and of its enclosures which I have received from Messrs. Brigham and Co., American Merchants at Boston. They state that they received in July last a shipment of Salmon from the Coast of Labrador, and that to their surprise they were called upon to pay import duty. This they paid but under protest and have since made application that it should be refunded. The Treasury Department, however, has informed the Collector of Customs at Boston that it has as yet come to no decision upon the subject.

I have therefore thought it right to address to Mr. Fish the note, of which a copy is enclosed, referring to the note which I transmitted to him on the 26th ultimo, and a copy of which accompanied my Despatch No. 291 of the 26th ultimo, and enquiring whether the Treasury Department has as yet come to a decision on the subject in favor of the Importers of fish from the Coast of Labrador.

I have, etc.

(sd) EDWARD THORNTON.

The Earl of Derby
&c. &c. &c.

[13 Nov.
1874.]

No. 982.

[Enclosure in No. 981.]

MESSRS. BRIGHAM & CO. TO SIR EDWARD THORNTON, K.C.B.

Copy.

Boston, Novr. 13th 1874

Mr Lord,

We beg to enclose copy of a letter received at our Customs from the Treasury Department in relation to the refund of duty on a shipment of salmon received from the Coast of Labrador July last. We paid the duty under protest and appeal. The fish were caught in that part of Labrador which has always been considered a part of the Dominion of Canada and even the property of a Montreal Merchant. They were shipped here without the slightest idea that any duty would be imposed. We consider the action of the Treasury Department an injustice to our citizens as well as those of Canada. We trust you will pardon us for troubling you in this matter as we esteem it one which should be brought to your notice.

Very respectfully,
(sd)J. R. BRIGHAM & CO.

Sir E. Thornton, K.C.B.
&c. &c. &c.

[7 Nov.
1874.]

No. 983.

[Enclosure in No. 981.]

THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, TO THE COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS, BOSTON.

Copy.

Washington, Treasury Department,
Nov. 7, 1874.

Sir,

Your communication of Oct. 31st is received transmitting application of J. B. Brigham & Co., asking refund of certain duties collected by you on importation of Salmon from Labrador per Alhambred July 15, 1874.

As this case has been the subject of due protest and appeal protecting the interest of the Importer, the Department at present reserves its decision on the point whether such refund is authorized by law, the conditions under which the Treaty actually took effect as respects to the different provinces and parts of the British dominions in America rendering such decision difficult.

(sd) CHARLES P. COURANT
Actg. Sec^y.

W. A. Simmons,
Collector of Customs, Boston.

Privy Council
Documents

Volume V
Contents

[16 Nov., 1874.]

No. 984.

[Enclosure in No. 981.]

SIR E. THORNTON TO THE HONBLE. HAMILTON FISH.

Copy.

Washington,
Novr. 16th 1874.

Sir,

I have the honor to inform you that I have received a letter from Messrs. J. B. Brigham & Co., Merchants of Boston, to the effect that in July last they received a shipment of Salmon from the Coast of Labrador, and that they were called upon to pay duty upon it, though it was shipped without the slightest idea that any duty would be imposed upon it. It was however paid and an appeal was made against the payment. But the Treasury Department has not yet given orders that the duties in question should be refunded.

I therefore take the liberty of enquiring whether in consequence of the note which I had the honour to address you on the 26th ulto. a decision has not yet been taken upon that subject in favor of the Importer of fish from the Coast of Labrador by the Secretary of the Treasury.

I have, &c.

(sd) E. THORNTON.

The Honble. Hamilton Fish,
&c. &c. &c.

No. 985.THE COLONIAL OFFICE TO THE FOREIGN OFFICE.[5 Dec., 1874.]

Copy.

Downing Street,
5 December 1874.

Sir,

I am directed by the Earl of Carnarvon to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 1st inst. enclosing a copy of a despatch from the British Minister at Washington respecting a complaint made to him by a firm of American Merchants at Boston of their having been called upon to pay import duty on a shipment of Salmon from the Coast of Labrador.

In reply I am to request that you will call the Earl of Derby's attention to the letter from this office of the 26th Novr. in which Lord Carnarvon expressed his opinion that as the whole of Labrador belongs either to Newfoundland or to Canada the produce of the fisheries of that region are entitled to be admitted free of duty into the United States under the Treaty of Washington.

Lord Carnarvon will be glad to be informed whether Lord Derby concurs in this opinion, and also of any steps he may have taken for obtaining a settlement of the question now in dispute with the United States Government.

I am, &c.,

(sd) K. H. MEADE.

The Under Secretary of State
Foreign Office.

No. 986.

THE FOREIGN OFFICE TO THE COLONIAL OFFICE.

[15 Dec., 1874.]

Copy.

Foreign Office,
December 15th 1874.

Sir,

I am directed by the Earl of Derby to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 5th instant relative to the question of the Import Duty levied by the United States Custom Authorities at Boston on shipment of Salmon from the Coast of Labrador.

I am now to state to you for the information of the Earl of Carnarvon that a copy of your letter of the 26th ultimo, upon this subject has already been sent to Her Majesty's Minister at Washington to whom a copy of your present letter will likewise be sent, and he will at the same time be instructed to explain the matter further to the United States Government if requisite and to obtain from them a recognition of the right of free entry of Labrador fish under the provisions of the Treaty of Washington.

I am, &c.,

(sd) TENTERDEN.

The Under Secretary of State
Colonial Office.

[12 Dec.,
1876.]No. 987.*LETTER FROM GEO. GOSCHEN TO THE HON. R. W.
SCOTT.

HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY'S HEAD OFFICE RECORDS.

Hudson's Bay House, London,
12th Dec., 1876.

I enclose a Map No. 1 showing the territories claimed by the Company in virtue of the charter granted to them by King Charles the Second. The map in question was prepared by Mr. John Arrowsmith, and was ordered by the House of Commons to be printed 31st July and 11th August 1857.

I also enclose a statement, No. 2, prepared for the Company in 1867 with reference to the Parliamentary enquiry which took place in that year. The boundaries were then asserted to be, on the side of the United States by the 49th parallel of latitude ; on the side of Canada by the height of land whose waters flow into Hudson's Bay ; and on the North by the Arctic Ocean.

At the time of the passing of the Quebec Act 1774 the Company had not extended their posts and operations far from the shore of Hudson's Bay. Journals .of the following trading stations have been preserved bearing that date namely Albany, Henley, Moose, Eastmain, York, Severn, and Churchill.

These Journals give no information upon the subject of the boundaries between Canada and the Territory of the Company. Nor was the question raised in 1748, when the House of Lords held an enquiry with reference to the Company's affairs as at that time conducted. A map, No. 3, no doubt prepared for that occasion, and sent herewith, shows the extent of country to which their operations were then confined.

At a subsequent period, namely in 1777, a Map was published in London by John Andrews, giving the height of land near Abitibi and other quarters, and showing certain boundaries for the province of Upper Canada.

I am to request that the maps and documents accompanying this letter be returned to the Company when the enquiry to which you refer has been completed.

I shall be glad if you find them useful for the purpose of defining the boundary line between the Dominion and Ontario.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

(Sgd.) GEORGE J. GOSCHEN.

[3 May, 1879.]

No. 988.JOHN BIGNELL TO HON. PIERRE FORTIN, M.P.

THE NORTHERN BOUNDARY OF THE PROVINCE OF QUEBEC.

Quebec, 3rd May, 1879

To the Honorable Pierre Fortin, M.P.,
President of the Quebec Geographical Society.

Sir,

I beg to bring under your notice a subject interesting to all Quebecers, viz. : the defining of the northern boundary of the province of Quebec.,

Last year the north-east boundary of the province of Ontario was defined and fixed by a commission, thereby adding very largely to the area of that province ; this boundary is the former boundary from the head of Lake Temiscamingue to the height of Land prolonged on a meridian to James' Bay, and being the north-east boundary of Ontario, should naturally be (for that extent) a portion of the north-east boundary of Quebec. Now the question arises : Where should be our northern boundary ?

On looking at the map, one would naturally decide that all the territory lying to the north of us, extending as far as Hudson's Straits (and bounded on the east by Labrador), should belong to Quebec ; but, if it were thought inexpedient to assume the jurisdiction of so large, so distant and uninhabited a territory, then the boundary might be fixed from the northern extremity of the above-mentioned meridian line, along James' Bay, northerly as far as the 52nd parallel of latitude, thence easterly along the same parallel to the Height of Land or Otish Mountains at the head-waters of the rivers aux Outardes, Perinbonks and Moos-a-u-lagan (west branch of the Manicougan) thence north-east along same Height of Land to the west outline of Labrador ; or, if a natural boundary were preferred, the East Main River might be adopted from its mouth to source and from its source or head-waters north-easterly to the west line of Labrador or Height of Land dividing the waters flowing easterly into the Atlantic from those flowing westwardly into Hudson's Bay.

If, in the future, any question should arise (such for instance as the fishery award) which possibly might be decided by area, an immense advantage would accrue to us from the greatly increased extent of the province.

I have thrown these few remarks together as a suggestion, possibly the Society may take action in the matter.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your obedient servant,

(Signed) JOHN BIGELL.

Privy Council
Documents

Volume V
Contents

No. 989.

[10 June,
1889.]

10th June, 1889—MEMORANDUM FROM J. JOHNSTON TO MR. BURGESS.

[16 Aug., 1909.]

—————
Vide Vol. II, p. 347.

—————
No. 990.

N

16th August, 1909—AFFIDAVIT OF HENRY WEBB.

—————
Vide Part VIII F, No. 608, p. 1556.

No. 991.

AFFIDAVIT OF ABRAM FINGER.[17 Aug.,
1909.]IN THE MATTER OF the Enquiry into Newfoundland Territorial Rights on the Labrador.

District of Labrador, Nain, to wit :

I, ABRAM FINGER, at present of Nain aforesaid, make oath
and say as follows :

I was born on the Labrador, and have lived at Nain all my life and my father before me. I am forty-three years of age. I have hunted and fished since I was ten years of age going in over one hundred miles into the interior. I have been in the interior almost as much as I have been in Nain, spending part of the winter and part of the spring in there. I have always lived under the laws of Newfoundland and have always recognized the Governor and Government of Newfoundland. I have never had anything to do with the laws of Canada or Quebec, and do not know anything about them. I claim to be a subject of Newfoundland and nobody from any other country has ever interfered with me or objected.

his
(Sgd) ABRAM x FINGER.
mark.

SWORN before me at Nain aforesaid this 17th day of August A.D. 1909, having been first read over and explained.

(Sgd) F. J. MORRIS,
Judge of the Court of Labrador.

[17 Aug.,
1909.]

AFFIDAVIT OF ADAM KOPEK.

IN THE MATTER OF the Enquiry into Newfoundland Territorial Rights on the Labrador.

District of Labrador, Nain, to wit :

I, ADAM KOPEK, at present of Nain aforesaid, make oath
and say as follows :

I am fifty six years of age. I have lived in Nain all my life and my father before- me. I have been in the interior of the country summer and winter, trapping and hunting. I have gone in over a hundred miles, living in snowhouses in the winter and in tents in the summer. Nobody has ever interfered with, me or been up there. I have always obeyed Newfoundland laws and have recognized Newfoundland authority as being over us.

(Sgd) ADAM KOPEK.

SWORN before me at Nain aforesaid, this 17th day of August A.D. 1909,

(Sgd) F. J. MORRIS,
Judge of the Court of Labrador.

AFFIDAVIT OF CHRISTIAN SCHMIDT.[17 Aug.,
1909.]IN THE MATTER OF the Enquiry into Newfoundland Territorial Rights on the Labrador.

District of Labrador, Nain, to wit :

I, CHRISTIAM SCHMIDT, at present of Nain aforesaid, Trade Superintendent of the Unitas Fratrum Mission Store, make oath and say as follows : —

1. I have been resident in Nain for the past 19 years, and am well acquainted with the habits and customs of the Esquimeaux and natives of the Labrador, some of whom, in winter-time, go as far as three hundred miles into the interior for the purpose of hunting, trapping, &c.

2. As far as I know the natives have always obeyed the laws of Newfoundland, and have always considered themselves to be under Newfoundland Jurisdiction.

3. We have never paid duties to any Canadian authorities and have never been required to do so. We have been exempted from duties by the Government of Newfoundland. So far as I know, the Government of the Dominion of Canada or the Province of Quebec have never made any attempt to claim jurisdiction on this portion of Labrador.

4. Two years ago, when in conversation with Captain Bernier, an Official of the Canadian Government, and Mr. Duncan, a Customs Officer, they stated that “ they were willing enough to enforce Canadian laws on the Ungava side of the Bay, but they did not wish to interfere with anything on the Labrador Coast.”

(Sgd) CHR. SCHMIDT.

SWORN before me at Nain aforesaid, this 17th day of August A.D. 1909,

(Sgd) F. J. MORRIS,

Judge of the Court of Labrador.

No. 994.

AFFIDAVIT OF WILLIAM FORD.[24 Aug.,
1909.]IN THE MATTER OF the Enquiry into Newfoundland Territorial Rights on the Labrador.

District of Labrador, Nain, to wit :

I, WILLIAM FORD, of Black Island aforesaid, make oath and say as follows :—

I am 65 years of age and reside at Black Island. I have been residing on the Coast all my lifetime. My father came from Devonshire, England. He came here at the age of about 16, and lived at Paul's Island most of his life. He has been dead over 30 years. Sometimes he visited England and came out again. He fished, trapped and hunted on the Coast, and had five or six English servants. He used to go into the interior about 150 miles trading with the Indians. I often went hunting for my father during his lifetime. I have been inland over 150 miles hunting deer. I have always recognized the Newfoundland Government and Newfoundland Laws, and have always obeyed them as far as I know. I purchase my provisions and necessaries of life, sometimes from the Mission Stores, sometimes from the traders, sometimes from the Hudson Bay Co. stores. I remember when the Newfoundland revenue cruiser was on the Coast. I have never been interfered with in my rights as a fisherman, hunter and trapper, and nobody representing Canada ever came to me to claim any right, or to say that I was subject to their laws. I have never heard of any laws save those of Newfoundland. During my lifetime I have exercised the rights of citizen-ship on the Coast as a British subject and a citizen of Newfoundland under its laws and jurisdiction, and my father did before me.

his
(Sgd) WILLIAM x FORD.
mark.

SWORN before me at Black Island aforesaid, this 24th day of August A.D. 1909. Having been first read over and explained.

(Sgd) F. J. MORRIS,
Judge of the Court of Labrador.

No. 995.

25th August, 1909—AFFIDAVIT OF SAMUEL JAMES BROMFIELD.

[25 Aug.,
1909.]

Vide Vol. VIII, F, No. 609, p. 1557.

[26 Aug., 1909.]

No. 996.

26th August, 1909—AFFIDAVIT OF EDWARD MITCHELL.

Vide Part VIII F, No. 610, p. 1558.

No. 997.

[26 Aug., 1909.]

26th August, 1909—AFFIDAVIT OF JOHN WINTER

IN THE MATTER OF the Enquiry into Newfoundland Territorial Rights on the Labrador.

Labrador, Hopedale, to wit :

I JOHN WINTER, of Hopedale, aforesaid, make oath and say
as follows :

I am seventy two years of age. I was born on Labrador and have lived here practically all my life. My father was an Englishman, he came to live on Labrador nearly ninety years ago. I am a fisherman, hunter and trapper, and in winter time go into the interior hunting and trapping. I usually go in about a hundred miles. I have always considered myself a subject of Newfoundland and have always obeyed its laws as far as I know. Nobody from Canada has ever interfered with me and I never heard that Canada had any claim here at all.

his
(Sgd) JOHN X WINTER.
mark.

SWORN before me at Hopedale aforesaid this 26th day of August A.D. 1909. Having been first read over and explained.

[10 Sept.,
1909.]

(Sgd) F. J. MORRIS,
Judge of the Court of Labrador.

No. 998.

N

10th September, 1909—AFFIDAVIT OF THOMAS BLAKE.

[10 Sept., 1909.]

Vide Part VIII F, No. 611, p. 1559.

No. 999.

N

10th September, 1909—AFFIDAVIT OF JOSEPH GOUDY.

Vide Part VIII F, No. 612, p. 1560.

No. 1000. N

[10 Sept.,
1909.]

10th September, 1909—AFFIDAVIT JOSEPH MICHELIN.

[19 March,
1926.]

Vide Part XX.

[8 June,
1926.]

No. 1001. N

19th March, 1926—AFFIDAVIT OF THOMAS WINTER.

Vide Part VIII F, No. 616, p. 1564.

No. 1002. N

8th June, 1926—AFFIDAVIT OF AFFIDAVIT OF F. C.
BERTEAU.

[1925.]

Vide Part VIII E, No. 547, p. 1485.

No. 1003. N

EXTRACT FROM CHAMBER'S ENCYCLOPEDIA, 1925.

VOL. VI, p. 487.

ARTICLE "LABRADOR."

The part draining to the St. Lawrence belongs to Quebec ; that draining to the Atlantic belongs (since 1809) to Newfoundland ; the rest, the former territory of Ungava, was added in 1912 to Quebec.

[24 Nov.,
1923.]PART XIV.

REPORTS AND DOCUMENTS RELATING TO THE
LOCATION OF THE SEACOAST LINE WITH
RELATION TO THE ESTUARY OF THE HAMILTON
RIVER SYSTEM.

No. 1004.
REPORT OF W. J. STEWART, CHIEF
HYDROGRAPHER, CANADA,

ON THE DETERMINATION OF THE SLOPE OF THE NARROWS BETWEEN LAKE MELVILLE AND LESTER POINT.

Two Haskell automatic gauges, one a mile east of Lester Point (hereinafter referred to as the Lester Point gauge) in the outer part of the Narrows, the outlet from Lake Melville of the Hamilton River system, and the other at what may be called the lower end of Lake Melville, were maintained in operation continuously from August 5th to October 2nd, 1923, or for two complete lunar months.

The records were compiled from half-hourly readings taken to the nearest hundredth of a foot for height, and the time to the nearest minute.

The vertical scale of the gauge records was to inches to one foot, the hundredth of a foot on the record being represented to one and a quarter of a sixty-fourth of an inch, quite a measurable quantity.

Each gauge was referred to a bench mark in close proximity to it, and the two bench marks were connected by precise levels undertaken by the Geodetic Survey of Canada.

From the analysis of the records the following information was obtained :

At the Lester Point gauge the range of the tide was found to vary from 5.1 feet at springs to 2.02 feet at neaps, with a mean range of 3.46 feet.

At the lake Melville gauge, the range varied from 1.12 feet at springs to .54 of a foot at neaps, with, a mean range of .83 of a foot.

Thus in a distance of about 13 miles between the two gauge locations, there is a decrease in range of about 75 per cent.

At Lake Melville, as an average, high water occurred 3 hours 33 minutes and low water 3 hours later than at Leslie Point, showing a considerable retardation in the progress of the tidal wave for so short a distance, the channel between these two points is deep and extends nearly the whole width of the inlet, so that this retardation cannot be ascribed to friction against a rapidly rising bed.

Mean tide level, obtained at each gauge location, from over 2,800 simultaneous half-hourly readings, shows a mean tide level slope of .419 of a foot or 5 inches, between the Jake Melville and the Lester Point gauges.

At each instant of time there is a definite slope of the surface of the water 10 between the two gauge points. The mean slope was calculated at springs and neaps and showed that at springs the outgoing mean slope was 40 per cent. or 6 inches greater than the incoming slope, its duration being one hour more.

At neaps when there is less influx from the sea, the difference is still more pronounced ; the outgoing slope being double or 8 inches more than the incoming slope, with three hours more duration.

The inference to be drawn from this is that on the ebb there is a considerably greater volume of water discharging through the Narrows than can be accounted for by the influx of flood tide.

Apart from the actual mean tide slope found between the two gauges, the considerable retardation in progress of the wave through a deep channel in a short distance and the considerable reduction in range of the tide, are distinct characteristics that are most generally found in river tides.

(signed) WM. J. STEWART,

Chief Hydrographer.

Department of Marine and Fisheries,
Ottawa, Can.

No. 1005.

SUMMARY OF RESULTS ESTABLISHED BY AUTOMATIC TIDE GAUGE RECORDS.

(TWO LUNAR MONTHS OBSERVATIONS, 5 AUGUST TO 2 OCTOBER, 1923.)

Lester Point (The Narrows) and Lake Melville. Two lunar months observations. (August 5th to October 2nd, 1923.)

SUMMARY.
10	Dates.	Number of Readings each day.	Lester Point (at gauge location) Sums of half-hourly readings below Geodetic Survey of Canada, Bench Mark 66k.	Lake Melville (at gauge location) Sums of half-hourly readings below Geodetic Survey of Canada, Bench Mark 72k.
	August 5	48	265.88	506.31
	6	48	272.75	515.60
20	7	48	269.24	514.82
	8	48	244.82	487.73
	9	48	284.24	472.75
	10	48	252.28	490.60
	11	48	267.42	507.12
	12	48	278.88	510.93
	13	48	267.77	504.24
	14	48	257.29	495.67
	15	48	267.99	499.85
	16	48	274.61	509.14
30	17	48	266.29	498.39
	18	48	278.00	497.02
	19	48	290.22	511.40
	20	48	264.77	502.78
	21	48	255.82	489.81
	22	48	250.88	480.44
	23	48	215.78	457.59
	24	48	257.71	488.02
	25	48	274.77	509.64
40	26	48	278.51	506.76
	27	48	266.43	500.93
	28	48	267.61	497.89
	29	48	262.83	496.21
	30	48	262.49	488.68
	31	48	272.37	496.16

Mean level of the water surface at the automatic gauge location in the Narrows (Lester Point) below the Geodetic Survey of Canada, Bench Mark 66k, as determined by 2832 half-hourly readings from the automatic gauge records 5.521 Feet
Bench Mark 66k below Bench Mark 72k, as determined by the Geodetic Survey of Canada 5.501 Feet

Mean level of the water surface at the automatic gauge location on the Narrows (Lester Point) below the Geodetic Survey of Canada, Bench Mark 72k, as determined by 2882 half-hourly readings from the automatic gauge records and the precise levelling by the Geodetic Survey of Canada in 1923 10.822 Feet

Mean level of the water surface at the automatic gauge location on Lake Melville below the Geodetic Survey of Canada, Bench Mark 72k, as determined by 2832 half-hourly readings from the automatic gauge records 10.463 Feet

Mean level of the water surface at the automatic gauge location on the Narrows (Lester Point) below the mean level of the water surface at the automatic gauge location on Lake Melville as determined by 2832 simultaneous readings from the automatic gauge records419 Feet

Interval between the times tides occur, at the automatic gauge location on the Narrows (Lester Point) and the automatic gauge location on Lake Melville, as determined from 114 observations at each location.
Mean interval at High Water 3 hours and 33 minutes.
Mean interval at Low Water 3 hours and 1 minute.

2033

13 x 2

Larger HTML Version (18 kb)

SUMMARY—continued.

Dates.	Number of Readings each day.	Lester Point (at gauge location) Sums of half-hourly readings below Geodetic Survey of Canada, Bench Mark, 992.	Lake Melville (at gauge location) Sums of half-hourly readings below Geodetic Survey of Canada, Bench Mark, 722.
September 1	48	270.37	497.66
2	48	278.15	506.29
3	48	249.79	485.19
4	48	252.62	480.33
5	48	257.16	499.74
6	48	256.51	487.57
7	48	268.76	498.73
8	48	270.35	507.24
9	48	257.32	492.56
10	48	252.96	498.56
11	48	267.09	502.07
12	48	279.78	510.27
13	48	282.14	514.30
14	48	278.57	507.92
15	48	283.85	504.61
16	48	298.19	523.39
17	48	284.77	521.91
18	48	264.90	501.25
19	48	246.11	482.08
20	48	259.67	486.08
21	48	274.82	511.13
22	48	276.71	512.57
23	48	289.57	508.91
24	48	280.42	491.69
25	48	269.26	501.64
26	48	269.46	502.13
27	48	266.98	499.65
28	48	258.57	496.68
29	48	250.25	490.37
30	48	259.60	496.81
October 1	48	264.16	506.84
2	48	235.41	483.55
Sums .	2832	15,625.68	29,460.94
Means		5.521 Feet	19.403 Feet

Range of tides as determined from 114 observations at each location—
 At the automatic gauge location on the Narrows (Lester Point)—
 Mean Range 2.46 Feet
 Range at Spring Tides 5.20 Feet
 Range at Neap Tides 2.02 Feet

At the automatic gauge location on Lake Melville—
 Mean Range83 Feet
 Range at Spring Tides 1.12 Feet
 Range at Neap Tides54 Feet

Instantaneous slopes—from 96 half-hourly readings at spring and neap tides—Springs :—
 Outgoing mean slope 1.87 feet with duration of 124 hours.
 Incoming mean slope 1.83 feet with duration of 114 hours.

Neaps—
 Outgoing mean slope 1.22 feet with duration of 134 hours.
 Incoming mean slope .69 feet with duration of 104 hours.

At spring tides the outgoing slope is about forty per cent. greater than the incoming slope, and continues one hour longer.

At neap tides the outgoing slope is about double the incoming slope and continues three hours longer.

Memo.—
 The automatic gauges were operated, at the locations shown on the accompanying sketch,* on a vertical scale of two inches to the foot, and a horizontal scale of two inches to the hour.
 The records were compiled by half-hourly readings to the nearest one hundredth of a foot, and the time of tides to the nearest minute.
 All computations are based on the automatic gauge records during the two lunar months, August 5th to October 2nd, 1923.

*See map entitled "Hamilton River at Rigolet" on next page.

Larger HTML Version (19 kb)

WM. J. STEWART,
 Chief Hydrographer Dept. of Marine
 and Fisheries, Ottawa, Canada.
 November 24th, 1923.

No. 1005.

SUMMARY OF RESULTS ESTABLISHED BY AUTOMATIC TIDE GAUGE RECORDS.

(TWO LUNAR MONTHS OBSERVATIONS, 5 AUGUST TO 2 OCTOBER, 1923.)

Lester Point (The Narrows) and Lake Melville. Two lunar months observations. (August 5th to October 2nd, 1923.)

Dates.	Number of Readings each day.	Lester Point (at gauge location) Sums of half-hourly readings below Geodetic Survey of Canada, Bench Mark, 66k.	Lake Melville (at gauge location) Sums of half-hourly readings below Geodetic Survey of Canada, Bench Mark, 72k.	SUMMARY.
August 5 6 7 8 9 10	48 48 48 48 48 48	265.83 272.75 269.24 244.82 234.34 252.28	506.31 515.60 514.82 487.73 472.76 490.60	Mean level of the water surface at the automatic gauge location in the Narrows (Lester Point) below the Geodetic Survey of Canada, Bench Mark 66k, as determined by 2832 half-hourly readings from the automatic gauge records 5.521 Feet Bench Mark 66k below Bench Mark 72k, as determined by the Geodetic Survey of Canada 5.301 Feet
11 12 13 14 15	48 48 48 48 48	267.42 273.38 267.77 257.29 267.99	507.12 510.93 504.24 495.67 499.85	Mean level of the water surface at the automatic gauge location on the Narrows (Lester Point) below the Geodetic Survey of Canada, Bench Mark 72k, as determined by 2832 half-hourly readings from the automatic gauge records and the precise levelling by the Geodetic Survey of Canada in 1923 10.822 Feet Mean level of the water surface at the automatic gauge location on Lake Melville below the Geodetic Survey of Canada, Bench Mark 72k, as determined by 2832 half-hourly readings from the automatic gauge records 10.403 Feet
16 17 18 19 20	48 48 48 48 48	274.61 266.29 273.00 280.22 264.77	509.14 498.39 497.02 511.40 502.78
21 22 23 24 25	48 48 48 48 48	255.82 250.83 215.78 257.71 274.77	489.81 490.44 457.29 488.02 509.64
26 27 28 29 30 31	48 48 48 48 48 48	273.51 266.43 267.61 262.83 262.49 272.27	509.76 500.93 497.82 496.21 488.68 498.16
					Mean level of the water surface at the automatic gauge location on the Narrows (Lester Point) below the mean level of the water surface at the automatic gauge location on Lake Melville as determined by 2832 simultaneous readings from the automatic gauge records 1.419 Feet
					Interval between the times tides occur, at the automatic gauge location on the Narrows (Lester Point) and the automatic gauge location on Lake Melville, as determined from 114 observations at each location. Mean interval at High Water 3 hours and 33 minutes. Mean interval at Low Water 3 hours and 1 minute.

Back to Main Page

Lester Point (The Narrows) and Lake Melville. Two lunar months observations. (August 5th to October 2nd, 1923.)

Dates.	Number of Readings each day.	Lester Point (at gauge location) Sums of half-hourly readings below Geodetic Survey of Canada, Bench Mark, 66k.	Lake Melville (at gauge location) Sums of half-hourly readings below Geodetic Survey of Canada, Bench Mark, 72k.	SUMMARY— continued.
September 1 2 3 4 5	48 48 48 48 48	270.37 278.15 249.79 252.62 267.16	497.56 506.29 485.19 480.53 499.74	Range of tides as determined from 114 observations at each location— At the automatic gauge location on the Narrows (Lester Point)— Mean Range 3.46 Feet Range at Spring Tides 5.10 Feet Range at Neap Tides 2.02 Feet At the automatic gauge location on Lake Melville—
6 7 8 9 10 <hr/> 11 12 13 15 15	48 48 48 48 48 <hr/> 48 48 48 48 48	256.51 268.76 270.35 257.32 262.26 <hr/> 267.09 279.78 282.14 278.57 283.85	487.57 498.73 507.24 492.56 498.56 <hr/> 502.07 510.27 514.30 507.92 504.61	Mean Range83 Feet Range at Spring Tides 1.12 Feet Range at Neap Tides54 Feet Instantaneous slopes—from 96 half-hourly readings at spring and neap tides— Springs :— Outgoing mean slope 1.87 feet with duration of 12½ hours. Incoming mean slope 1.33 feet with duration of 11½ hours. Neaps— Outgoing mean slope 1.22 feet with duration of 13½ hours. Incoming mean slope .60 feet with duration of 10½ hours.
16 17 18 19 20	48 48 48 48 48	298.19 284.77 264.90 264.11 259.67	523.39 521.91 501.25 482.08 486.08	At spring tides the outgoing slope is about forty per cent greater than the incoming slope, and continues one hour longer. At neap tides the outgoing slope is about double the incoming slope and continues three hours longer.
21 22 23 24 25 <hr/> 26 27 28 29 30 <hr/> October 1 2 <hr/> Sums . Means	48 48 48 48 48 <hr/> 48 48 48 48 48 <hr/> 2832	274.82 276.71 269.57 260.42 269.26 <hr/> 269.46 266.98 258.57 250.26 259.60 <hr/> 264.16 235.41 <hr/> 15,625.63 5.521 Feet	511.13 512.57 508.91 491.69 501.64 <hr/> 502.13 499.65 496.68 490.37 496.81 <hr/> 506.84 483.55 <hr/> 29,460.94 10.403 Feet	Memo.— The automatic gauges were operated, at the locations shown on the accompanying sketch,* on a vertical scale of two inches to the foot, and a horizontal scale of two inches to the hour. The records were compiled by half-hourly readings to the nearest one hundredth of a foot, and the time of tides to the nearest minute. All computations are based on the automatic gauge records during the two lunar months, August 5th to October 2nd, 1923.

No. 1006. MAP SHOWING BENCH MARKS ESTABLISHED IN THE NARROWS IN 1923 BY THE GEODETIC SURVEY OF CANADA.

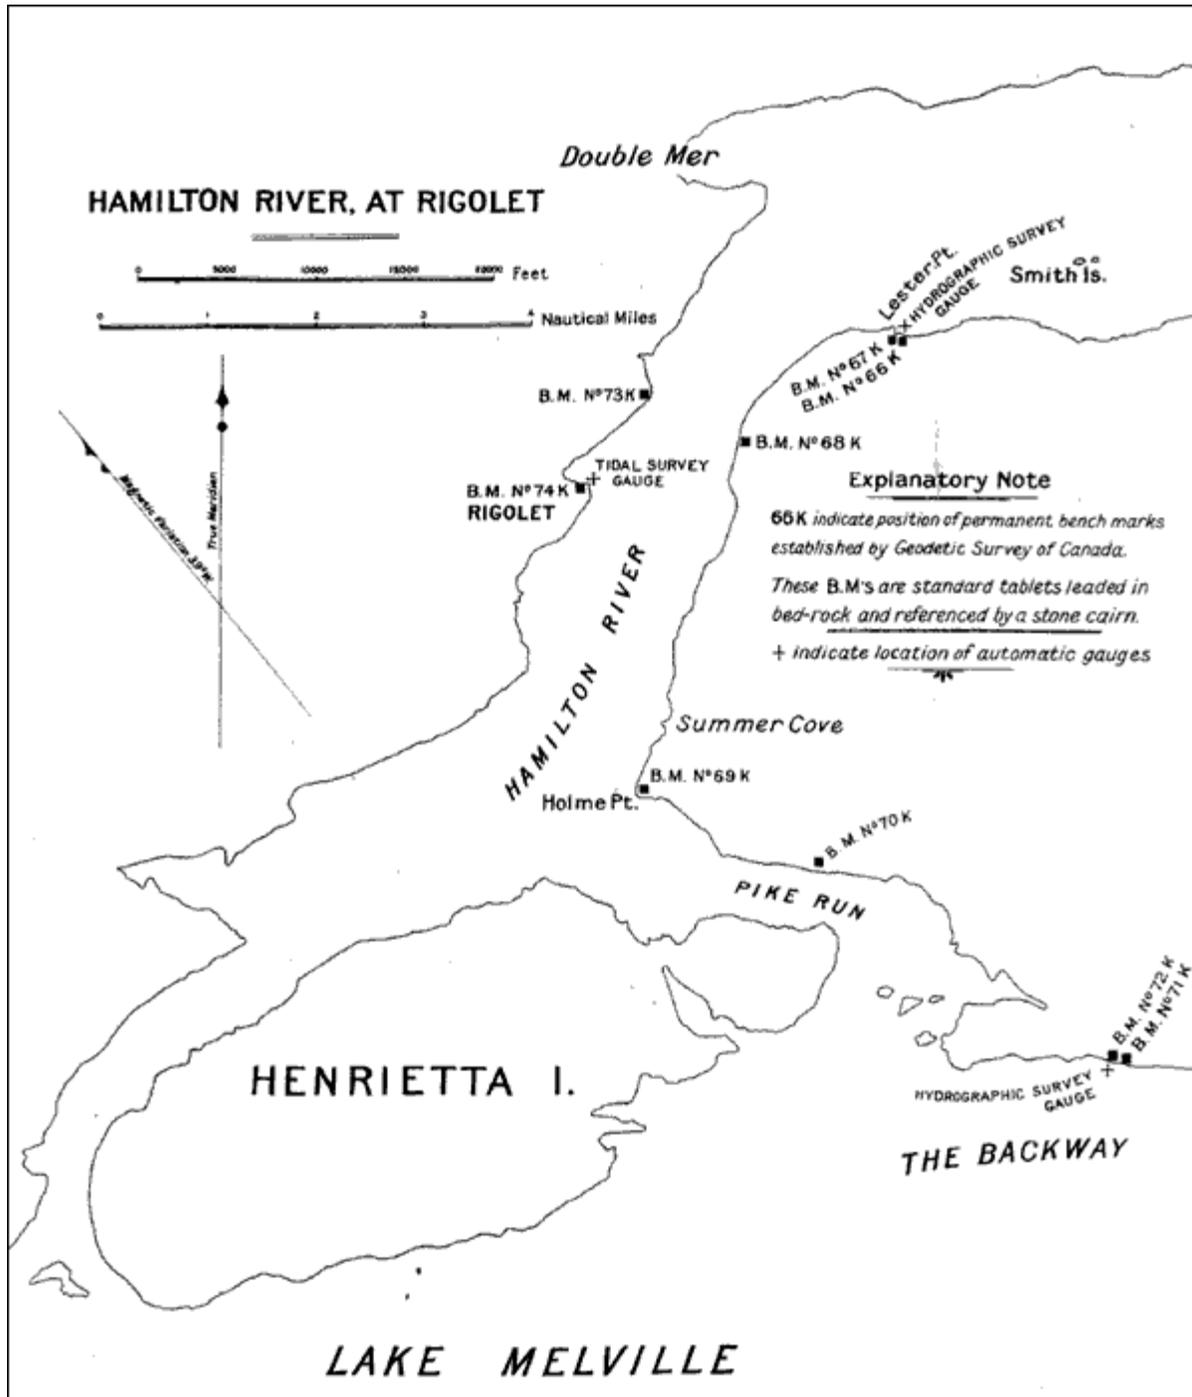

[26 Nov., 1923.]

Larger Version (32 kb)

p. 2323

No. 1006.
MAP SHOWING BENCH MARKS ESTABLISHED IN THE NARROWS IN 1923 BY THE GEODETIC SURVEY OF CANADA.

Back to Main Page

No. 1007.
REPORT OF PRECISE LEVELLING IN THE NARROWS (HALIMTON RIVER) BETWEEN LAKE
MELVILLE AND LESTER POINT.

By R. H. MONTGOMERY, D.T.S.

The definite object of these operations was to ascertain by direct measurement whether lake Melville was above mean sea level. To determine the exact elevation of lake Melville on mean sea datum was not attempted. Time was not sufficient, nor did the purpose that actuated this expedition require this more exact information.

Available knowledge regarding tide ranges and currents in the Narrows at Rigolet somewhat favoured the supposition that lake Melville was higher than the sea proper. Still it was apparent that the difference would be small and would require levels of the highest order to ascertain it. The very rugged nature of the country adjacent to the Narrows made it extremely doubtful whether such levels could be successfully carried out. However, on account of the urgency of the request, we were warranted in making the attempt at least.

To accomplish this object the work naturally divided itself into two distinct operations, the establishment of automatic gauges at two points and subsequently obtaining the two simultaneous records extending over at least a full lunar period, and, secondly, the connection of the two gauge stations by precise levels. The gauge work was undertaken and carried out by the Hydrographic Survey of the Marine Department. C. A. Price of that Survey, with his assistant, J. R. Dupuis, joined our party at Gaspé and looked after that side of the work. The levelling was undertaken and carried out by the Geodetic Survey. The exact location of the gauge stations and the route between which had to be levelled, were to be selected after a reconnaissance had been first made on the ground.

The north polar expedition sent out by the Dominion Government was due to leave Quebec on July 7th on "SS. Arctic" and our instructions were to expedite the organization of our party to enable us, if possible, to leave on the same ship and to be taken by it to Rigolet, Labrador. A launch lying at Gaspé, Quebec, was loaned by the Hydrographic Survey for our use in Labrador and had to be picked up at that point. In spite of the shortness of time, our party and equipment was on board the "Arctic" when she sailed on July 9th. On the 13th our launch was taken on board at Gaspé. Our party consisted of the writer, in charge, H. S. Mussell, geodetic engineer, as assistant, a captain and engineer for the launch, two rodmen, umbrellaman, cook and also the two members of the

On July 19th the " Arctic " reached Grady, a small island off the coast of Labrador, about 100 miles from Rigolet, and here it was decided by the officials of the " Arctic " that our party should disembark consequently during the night of the 19th and 20th our equipment and supplies were unloaded. On the 22nd we were picked up by the Newfoundland Government mail steamer " Sagona " and were landed at Rigolet on the 23rd. Our launch proceeded under its own power from Grady and reached there on the 22nd.

The first two weeks were spent in the erection of the two gauge stations, and August 5th marked the beginning of the simultaneous records of the water level of Lake Melville and the lower part of the Narrows. Various considerations decided the location of these stations probably the most important was the time factor, as the original request required that our records should be in Ottawa by October 1st. To accomplish this meant that only one lunar period could be obtained and the stations were so separated as to assure that in the lunar period the precise levelling connecting them could be accomplished. If more time had been at our disposal, the stations could have been more widely separated and, for reasons stated later, a greater slope would have probably been found.

As soon as the stations were operating the actual levelling was commenced. Our permanent camp was established at Summer Cove, a point on the east side of the Narrows, midway between the gauges and it proved a very convenient location, for, by arranging our work on different sides of camp on alternate working days, the hydrographers were able to visit the gauges regularly. The levelling followed the shore line, except near the Melville gauge, where it was carried over a neck of land, thereby lessening the length of the line of levelling. Bench marks were established near each gauge stations and at prominent points between, as shown on the attached blue print.* These bench marks are of a very permanent nature, being the Geodetic Survey of Canada standard tablet, leaded in bed rock and, in general, referenced by a stone cairn.

The Tidal and Current Survey of the Marine Department also sent a party of six men, in charge of H. W. Jones, to investigate the tides and currents in the Narrows. This party established an automatic gauge at Rigolet and located a permanent bench mark near it. In order to connect their gauge with our levels, we carried our line across the Narrows by a series of reciprocal readings between bench marks 68-K and 73K, as shown on the attached blue print, and tied in with their bench mark at Rigolet, which we designated as 74-K. By making this connection it became possible to co-ordinate the records of their gauge with those obtained by the Hydrographic Survey gauges.

As a result of our levelling we ascertained the elevation of bench mark 72-K, near the Melville gauge, to be 5.301 feet higher than bench mark 66-K, near the Lester Point gauge, and 14.517 feet higher than the zero mark on the Tidal Survey staff gauge at Rigolet. To deduce the relation between the

*See Map on page 2323 (following Stewart's Report).

p. 2326

mean water levels at the different gauges, the above information will have to be used in conjunction with the information contained in the reports emanating from the Hydrographic and Tidal Surveys. A list of the permanent bench marks and their elevations, on an assumed datum, is appended hereto.*

The instrument used on this work was the Zeiss level No. 3, being the same as adopted by the British Ordnance Survey for their precise levelling. The staffs were divided into yard, tenths and hundredths of a yard and the rod readings were recorded in thousandths of a yard. In recording and reducing the rod readings, the English practice was followed rather than the American, in that, while the three wire readings were recorded, only the reading of the medial was utilized for determining the differential elevations of the turn points. In the levelling procedure, the same rigorous tests and methods were followed as specified for standard precise levelling on this continent. The discrepancy between the forward and backward line over a section did not exceed ± 0.015 feet M where M is the length of the section in miles. Owing to the nature of the work no external evidence could be obtained as to the accuracy, such as a circuit closure would indicate, still there is no reason to suspect, had a circuit closure been possible, that the standard would have been found wanting.

The levelling was completed by the 1st of September and on the 2nd our party boarded the "SS. Sagona" for our return trip. Mr. Mussell remained at Rigolet to look after our launch which had been disabled and which was later brought to Halifax by the "SS. Nascopie." Mr. Dupuis remained to look after the gauges in order to get a record of a second lunar period. The "SS. Sagona" arrived at St. John's, Newfoundland, on September 13th and the party proceeded overland by rail to Quebec, reaching there on the 17th, when it was disbanded.

We stated in our opening paragraph the elevation of lake Melville, resulting from our operations, is not the true elevation on mean sea level datum. To substantiate this we would advance the following hypothesis.

The peculiar formation of the upper end of the Narrows undoubtedly is the cause of the unusual currents and tide rips for which the Narrows are noted. The outflow of a watershed of roughly 70,000 square miles, has to pass through this channel. Referring to the attached blue print, it may be seen that Henrietta Island divides the Narrows into two channels. The flood tide coming up the Narrows naturally follows the western channel, entering lake Melville near Caravalla cove. This channel has a comparatively wide entrance from the sea and has a shallow and restricted entrance from lake Melville. Our observations revealed that this channel exhibited the same reversing currents and followed the same laws as the Narrows proper near Rigolet. The currents reversed about midtime between the peaks of the tides thus, with neap tides, if high tide occurred at noon, the current would begin to run in about three hours later. Referring to the eastern channel, known as Pike Run, it may be noticed that Holme point has a tendency to deflect the flood tide from this channel, and the wide deep entrance presents

* See Map on page 2323.

p. 2327

an easy outlet for the waters of lake Melville. As our work kept us in the vicinity of Pike Run, it was noticeable how rarely we found the current running into lake Melville by this channel. For these reasons we expect that there is a decided circulatory movement counterclockwise of the waters around Henrietta, or there should be a prevailing east current along the south shore of the island. On this account we are led to believe that, if an automatic gauge had been established on lake Melville west of Caravalla cove, the mean water level at such a point would be appreciably higher than at the Hydro-graphic Survey gauge near Pike Run.

At the lower end of the Narrows the geographical formation would tend to place the head of the Inlet somewhere in the neighbourhood of a line joining Ticoralak and Bloomfield island, and it is probable if a gauge station had been established near Bloomfield island that an ascertainable slope would be found to exist between it and our gauge near Lester point.

The prevailing wind during our stay in Labrador was from the north-east or east. This would have the effect of piling up the waters at the head of Hamilton Inlet and conversely the lowering of the waters at the east end of Lake Melville. Should it be established that the prevailing wind throughout the year is easterly, then the slope in the Narrows ascertained by our operations may be presumed to be the normal slope, but should the above supposition as to the wind's direction not be correct, a more extended series of observations would naturally reveal a greater difference of elevation than was ascertained.

Thus it would appear that the slope which we ascertained was not the true elevations of lake Melville on mean sea datum but was rather the difference of the elevation of that portion of the Narrows lying between the gauges.

(Sgd.) R. H. MONTGOMERY.

Ottawa, Nov. 26th, 1923.

LIST OF BENCH MARKS ESTABLISHED IN 1923 BY THE GEODETIC SURVEY OF CANADA NEAR RIGOLET, LABRADOR, GIVING

DESCRIPTION AND ELEVATION ON ASSUMED DATUM (BENCH MARK 66-K—100 FEET.)

Description of Permanent Bench Marks.

- 66-K On south side of the Narrows and 1 mile east of Lester Point and 4 miles east of Rigolet. On top of first gray granite outcrop above high water, 30 yards from tree line and 210 yards west of small creek, and marked by a stone cairn. Elevation 100·000 feet.
- 67-K 130 Yards west of 66-K, on gray granite outcropping, 75 yards from high water mark and at tree line.
Elevation 100·435.
- 68-K On south side of Narrows, 2 miles east of Rigolet, and 1¼ miles west of Lester Point, and on red granite outcropping 10 feet from tree line and 100 yards west of Hydrographic Survey signal “ Pinch,” marked by a stone cairn. Elevation 102.652.
p. 2328
- 69-K On east side of Narrows, 4 miles south of Rigolet and 150 yards north of Holme Point—on outcropping of red granite, 20 yards from high water mark and marked by a store carin. Elevation 104·765.
- 70-K On north shore of Pike run, 3 miles southeast of Holme Point, at east end of steep outcropping of red granite, 10 feet from high water mark and marked by a store cairn. Elevation 102·337.
- 71-K On north shore of lake Melville, 1½ miles east of unnamed point, at east side of beginning of Pike Run, on outcropping of red granite, 150 yards east of Hydrographic Survey station “ Run,” 10 yards from high water mark and marked by a store cairn.
Elevation 113·558.
- 72-K On outcropping of red granite, 50 feet west of 71-K, 10 feet from high water mark. Elevation 105·301.
- 73-K At Hydrographic Survey station Burnt, on west side of Narrows, 14 miles northeast from Rigolet, and 500 yards southeast of Burnt-wood Cove, 10 yards from high water mark and marked by a stone cairn.
Elevation 103·704.
- 74-K At Rigolet, copper bolt embedded vertically in grey granite out-cropping, 100 yards northwest from Hudson Bay Company’s wharf, 20 yards from high water mark. This bench mark was established by the Tidal and Current Survey. Elevation 103·352.

Zero mark of Tidal and Current Surveys gauge at Rigolet. Elevation 90.784.

[14 Nov.,
1923.]No. 1008.*REPORTS OF THE TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY OF CANADAON INVESTIGATION OF TIDAL CONDITIONS OF WATER IN THE NARROWS AND THE HAMILTON INLET.

(Tidal and Current Survey of Canada.)

General explanation by W. Bell Dawson, M.A., D.Sc., M.E.I.C., superintendent of Tidal and Current Survey, Canada, of results established by investigation of tidal conditions in the Narrows and Hamilton inlet.

The Hamilton River enters a large lake (Lake Melville) which in turn connects with the ocean through the Narrows at Rigolet. The lake is practically fresh water at the surface, although sea water at the freezing temperature penetrates below this, at the greater depths.

Regarding the Rigolet Narrows and the bay opening eastward from them towards the ocean, the question from the physical standpoint is whether they resemble an ordinary inlet of the sea, or show the characteristics of an estuary or river mouth, as indicated by the tidal conditions.

(I.) In an ordinary estuary, the rise of the tide increases until the tidal undulation reaches the mouth of the river proper, when the rise begins to be cut off and decreased by the river slope. In the case of Hamilton inlet, our investigations show that in the outer bay with shores which converge from the open ocean towards the Narrows, the tide maintains the same rise from Indian harbour at the mouth of this bay, almost to the Narrows ; notwithstanding the inflow into the large expanse of Lake Melville.

This indicates a resemblance between the outer bay east of the Narrows, and an ordinary estuary. The tendency of the tide to increase its range in its progress up the bay, is counteracted by the inflow during its rise, into the immense expanse immediately within the Narrows. The estuary conditions in this respect thus manifest themselves as far as the configuration permits ; for the tide is able to maintain its full range to the head of the bay (at Ticoralak island) notwithstanding the adverse influence of the inflow through the Narrows. In Lake Melville itself, the rise of the tide falls to a small amount, as may naturally be expected in the circumstances.

(II.) It is usual in river mouths for the sea water to find its way along the bottom, especially during the rise of the tide ; whereas the fresher water of the river itself keeps to the surface. When the tide begins to rise, there is thus inflow along the bottom while the surface flow is still outward ; and it takes some time before the surface flow is checked and reversed. When the tide is falling, the undercurrent is the first to be checked and reversed, because of the bottom friction and its greater density.

p. 2330

This inflow of an undercurrent of salter water in river mouths whenever the tide begins to rise, has been verified by the investigations of the Tidal Survey in St. John Harbour at the mouth of the St. John river, and in the delta of the Fraser River on the Pacific coast ; and it appears to be a general feature of river mouths. This is what occurs here in the Rigolet Narrows. During the fall of the tide, the conditions are more apt to be modified, as in the case of a river in freshet as contrasted with its summer behaviour ; or as at Rigolet where there is a large expanse above the Narrows. The behaviour during the rise of the tide, however, is very typical and characteristic.

(III.) In both estuaries and tidal rivers, the outward flow or “ ebb stream ” during the fall of the tide, is stronger and continues for a longer time than the inward flow or “ flood stream,” which is weaker and of shorter duration because opposed to the current of the river. As a rule, also, the vertical movement of the tide shows the same inequality between the duration of rise and the duration of fall, as the horizontal movement does.

In the observations obtained by the Tidal Survey at Rigolet, special efforts were made to verify these features ; and although a steamer was not available for the work, a scow was moored in the middle of the Narrows (where much exposed) to avoid any local disturbance of the main current if nearer shore. The observations were frequently continued day and night to obtain balanced observations. A spar-buoy placed near the north side, also afforded more extended observations to supplement those in mid-channel.

The three features of a tidal river were thus made manifest ; (1) The longer duration of the outward flow, (2) the much greater strength of the current on the ebb than on the flood, and (3) the longer period in the fall of the tide than in the rise. To make the verification complete, the observations were taken under all the various phases of tidal conditions during the lunar month.

(IV.) The longer duration and greater strength of the flow during the ebb than during the flood, make it clear that the average level of Lake Melville must be at a higher elevation than the average or mean tidal level of the bay to the eastward of the Rigolet Narrows. The amount of the flow is one of the surest indications of difference of leve, even where a direct measurement of the difference may be difficult to determine.

The details of the observations with illustrative diagrams, as well as explanation of their bearing on the questions which here arise, are given in the Report herewith, by Mr. H. W. Jones of this Survey.

W. BELL DAWSON,
Superintendent of Tidal Surveys.

Ottawa, November 14, 1923.

No. 1009.

TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY—CANADA, 1923.[2 Nov.
1823.]INVESTIGATIONS IN HAMILTON INLET AND IN THE NARROWS OFF RIGOLET.

LABRADOR.

TECHNICAL REPORT. By H. W. Jones.

The shores of Hamilton Inlet converge from the outer coast line of Labrador (in latitude $54^{\circ} 8'$ to $54^{\circ} 30'$) until about forty miles to the westward they almost meet, with Ticoralak Point, on the one hand, and Turner Head, on the other. These headlands are only about two miles apart, and from the general appearance of the map form the head of the Inlet. Beyond there is a slight expansion or basin off which a long narrow arm, Double Mer, opens to the westward while into it from the south west enters the short river which flows from Lake Melville. Here, in "the Narrows" off Rigolet, the behaviour of the current and the character of the water was investigated by the Tidal and Current Survey.

From Battle Harbour to Indian Harbour on the way north, and from Indian Harbour to St. Johns, Newfoundland, returning, the salinity or density of the sea water was determined in order to obtain a basis for comparison with ocean water, of all the samples taken during the season.

The density of the water was determined between Rigolet and Indian Harbour (fifty miles to the eastward at the outer extremity of the inlet) on five different runs, and on two more part way, to Ticoralak Island; numerous samples were taken from the narrows off Rigolet at the surface and at a depth of 18 fathoms, at the times of slack water after the flood and ebb streams, during the progress of the season; and the water of Lake Melville was tested at several points on the surface, at different depths up to 80 fathoms near the western end. The temperature of the water was frequently taken also at the same time.

Tide gauges were erected at Rigolet, at Ticoralak Island and at Indian Harbour, to secure record that would determine the nature of the tidal fluctuation and be of use in conjunction with the rest of the work.

The width of the Narrows is one and half miles, and the depth of the water is twenty to twenty-four fathoms, excepting close to the shores. A small scow was moored from both ends in mid-stream, as a fixed point from which to observe and meter the current. Thus the reversal of flow, or times of slack water could be determined with precision, which would be impossible on dark nights were the craft moored from one end only. The accuracy of the periods of flood and ebb flow, as found, depend on this.

p. 2332

Observations during a month, day and night, with some days lost because of storms, form the basis of the following data.

Strength of Current.—While the currents vary in strength under different tidal conditions, the ebb was found to be always stronger than the flood. A gale from the east may possibly reverse this order, but only while it lasts. The flood stream begins and ends more gradually than the ebb stream, which at the spring tides begins with a rush. The latter too, shows much greater fluctuations in velocity while running strongly, corresponding with the swirling of the water as in a swift river. (See Appendix “ a,” two diagrams.)

The meter for measuring velocities of the current was kept at a constant depth of 12 feet below the surface throughout the observations.

The flood stream never equalled the ebb stream in velocity while the ebb on one day was as much as five times the strength of the flood.

At spring tides the average velocities were, flood 3.37 knots and ebb 5.03 knots per hour. At neap tides the average velocities were, flood 1.89 knots and ebb 3.53 knots per hour.

(It happened that weather conditions prevented observations being taken on the exact days that the range of the spring tides was greatest, but those obtained were very close to being at the maximum of range in rise and fall.)

The velocity of the ebb was 80% greater than the flood, on the average of all the tidal streams measured.

Duration of Flow.—(1) In mid-channel. On three occasions the flood stream was noticed to run as long a time as the ebb stream preceding, or following ; but on the whole, the preponderance of the duration of the ebb over the flood on the surface was 1 hour and 7 minutes.

The under-current in mid-channel reversed its direction from ebb to flood and from flood to ebb, somewhat before the surface turned ; and it also flowed for a longer period of time outward to the sea than inwards, though not to so great an extent as did the surface current. (See Appendix “ b. ”)

On the surface the average period of the flood stream was 5 hours 37 minutes and the ebb 6 hours 44 minutes ; and for the under-current the periods were, respectively, 6 hours 00 minutes and 6 hours 21 minutes.

(2) Off the North shore. A spar buoy was anchored in ,15 fathoms of water about three cables from the shore at Square Rock Point in the narrows 40 just above Rigolet, and the turn of the current was observed by means of it, from July 5 to August 31, during daylight, and for periods during night time as well.

It will be seen from a glance at the chart that there is a curve to the south-ward in the direction of the shores of the Narrows from Double Mer Point to

p. 2333

Rigolet. This causes the flood stream as it moves inward to sweep along the north shore first, before extending across the whole width of the channel ; so that the current turns from ebb to flood earlier on this side. The other turn from flood to ebb is also earlier but not as much. Thus the duration of the ebb current is necessarily less on the Rigolet shore. The observations by means of the spar show this to be the case, and give evidence that the duration of the ebb stream, though diminished relatively, is yet longer than the flood ; the average periods being 6 hours 17 minutes and 6 hours, respectively.

(3) No observations of the current were taken near the south shore ; but the behaviour of the flood stream, going in along the north shore first, crowds the last of the ebb stream over to the south side so that it must persist there later than in mid-stream. From the direction of the channel above, and the suddenness with which the ebb stream begins, the reversal from mid-stream over, must be about simultaneous. Therefore, with the ebb beginning as in mid-stream, and ending later than it does there, the duration of the ebb stream on the south shore must be even longer than in other places across the channel.

From the foregoing facts regarding the current, its strength and duration of flow in the two directions, it is evident that the mean level of the water in Lake Melville must be appreciably above mean sea level. Also from the same observations, the effect of the rivers flowing into the lake is apparent at the outlet through the narrows, and this is also shown later by a comparison of the water densities after flood and after ebb currents.

DENSITY OF THE WATER.

The density of the water as determined, is its actual specific gravity.

The numerous tests taken on the voyage from Indian Harbour to St. Johns (September 8 to 15) show that well off the coast of Newfoundland the density of the water is 1.0240, while in the vicinity of the coast from Hamilton Inlet almost to Belle Isle Strait, a lower density than of the open sea is found due to the effect of the numerous adjacent rivers. This density of 1.0240 is taken as standard sea water for all comparisons made.

Samples taken in the same locality in June and early July with the drifting ice about, and again in September when all ice with the exception of occasional ice-bergs had disappeared, indicated a less density for the early part of the summer, the difference being nearly 0.0010. Thus Indian Harbour water in the early part of the season may be as low as 94% of the density taken as standard sea water.

The samples were all brought to the standard temperature of 60° F., within half a degree, before being tested. This method avoided the need of applying any correction for temperature.

Between Rigolet and Indian Harbour.—The course taken by small open boats making this run is to the north of the middle of the estuary in its outer reaches, because precautions have to be taken with regard to the weather. Prevailing North-east winds doubtless drift the fresh water from the river above to the south shore ; but it was impossible to go for samples along this coast in the time at our disposal. The results of the tests taken on our trips to Indian Harbour are best shown on the accompanying map. It is to be seen that evidence of river water is noticeable all the way down the inlet. (See appendix “c.”)

p. 2334

The last of the series of tests on September 2–3 show a distinctly fresher state of the water for twenty miles below Rigolet. This may be due to heavy rains which may have fallen a short time previously in the back country, or to the general freshening of the water in Lake Melville with the progress of the season, and the last sample taken opposite Rigolet on August 27, compared with the earlier ones, seem to bear this out.

In the Narrows off Rigolet.—Samples were taken during the slack at the end of the ebb and flood, from July 13 to August 27, at the surface and at a depth of 18 fathoms, with the following results.

Average density of surface water after flood stream, 1.0182 or 76% of the standard sea water. Average density of surface water after ebb stream 1.0139 or 58% of standard sea water.

The water as it comes from the lake above is thus 18% less in density than when the current is inwards.

Average density at depth of 18 fathoms, after flood current is 1.0241 or the same as sea water. Average density at depth of 18 fathoms after ebb current, is 1.0208 or 87% of sea water.

It is thus apparent that the sea water flows in along the bottom towards the end of the flood tide, while at the end of the ebb tide it is 13% less salt.

On August 11 tests were made at the end of the flood, at 5 fathoms, 10 fathoms and 18 fathoms showing densities of 1.0200, 1.0219 and 1.0241, respectively.

Immediately below Henrietta Island.—Samples taken at 29, 30 and 38 fathoms after the ebb stream gave densities of 1.0221, 1.0226 and 1.0228 or 92%, 94% and 95% of standard sea water. After the flood stream the full saltness of the sea must prevail here, at the lower-depths, as already it is found to do opposite Rigolet, near the bottom.

In Lake Melville.—Tests were made on August 21 and 22 as follows :

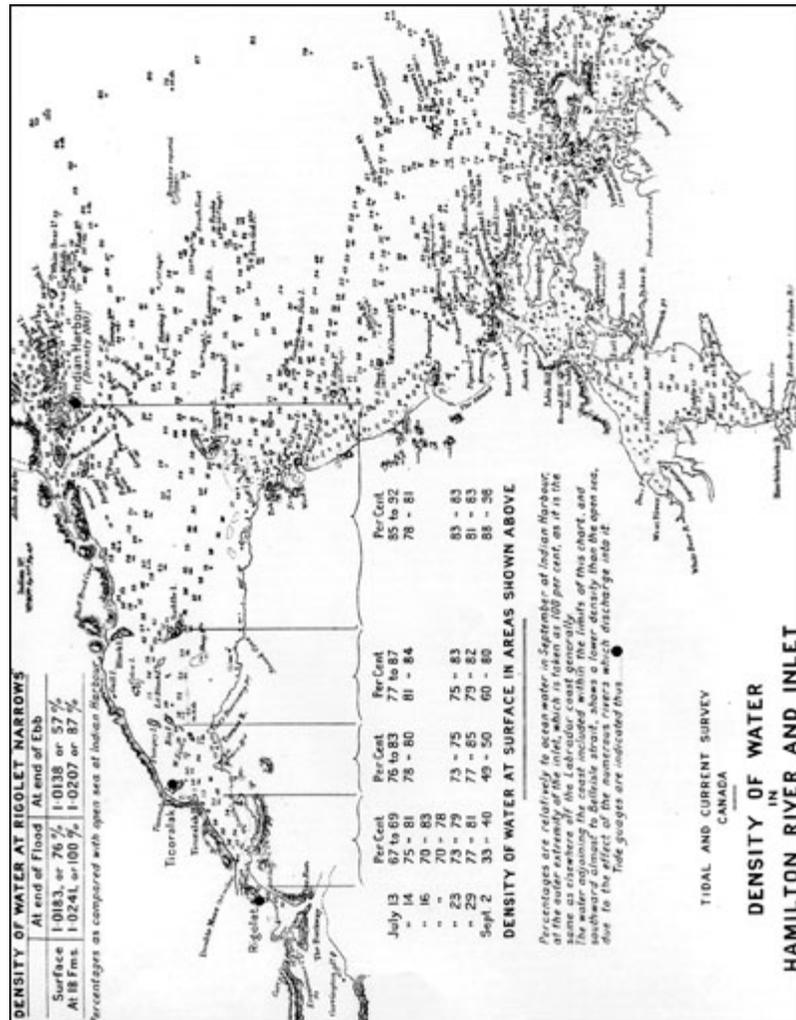

Two miles of St. Johns Island on course to westward ; surface density 1.0050 or 21% of sea density.

One and a half miles off Mulligans Head to the south ; surface density, 1.0031 or 13% of sea density.

At about three miles northward off Epinette Point after crossing the 8 fathom shoal, on which we sounded, on course from Mulligans Head, samples were taken at depths to 80 fathoms approximately. The results of the densities graduated from 1.00184 or 7 $\frac{1}{2}$ % to 1.0211 or 88% of sea salinity at 34 fathoms, and from that down they were practically the same.

The water in this region, when taken from the surface of course is considered fresh enough for drinking. (See detail in appendix “ c.”)

p. 2334a

Much Larger Version \(Rotated\) 1000x779 pixels (159 kb)

TEMPERATURE OF THE WATER.

Perhaps the only data with regard to the water temperatures that have a bearing on the question at issue, is the difference found in the narrows when the temperature after the flood stream from the direction of the sea has run its course, is compared with that after the ebb running from the lake above.

On the surface, temperatures were 4° to 6° warmer after the ebb stream than after the flood stream.

At 18 fathoms similarly the difference was 1° to 3°.

The notes of temperature found are given in the appendix along with the details regarding densities.

Duration of rise and fall of the Tide at Rigolet.—In river estuaries the tide takes a longer time to fall than it does to rise for the simple reason that during the period of rise the water of the river has been held back or the current even reversed, and consequently the river water of both tidal periods has to flow out perhaps entirely during the fall of the tide, which is thus prolonged.

This feature, common to all estuaries, is characteristic of this river, as shown by the tidal record obtained from the gauge placed at Rigolet. On the average for the lunar month, the period of rise of tide was 5 hours 56 minutes and of fall 6 hours 29 minutes.

The rate of progress of the Undulation in the Estuary.—The nature of the progress and recession of the tide as indicated by the times of high water and low water at Indian Harbour, Ticoralak Island and Rigolet is also note worthy. (Appendix “d” first part.)

The summit of the tidal undulation progresses from Indian Harbour to Ticoralak Island, a distance of forty miles, in 17 minutes, while to Rigolet it takes 47 minutes ; or 30 minutes additional for the upper eleven miles. This is in accord with the behaviour of the tide in estuaries, although the retardation is greater than is usually the case.

The trough of the tidal undulation progresses from Indian Harbour to Ticoralak Island in 21 minutes, and to Rigolet in 61 minutes, or 40 minutes additional for the upper eleven miles. This retardation is also greater than in ordinary estuaries. The point of importance is that the time of low water is delayed relatively to the time of high water, which corresponds with the shorter period of rise and longer fall which the figures above clearly indicate. This feature is well exemplified on the St. Lawrence, and it is a characteristic which is common to all estuaries.

AMPLITUDE OF THE TIDAL UNDULATION.

Very little change occurs in the amplitude of the tide up to Ticoralak Island, but between there and Rigolet it drops off to 78% of what it is at Indian Harbour, as the best mean value that could be deduced from the observations obtained. Such a change may take place in the upper part of the estuary where the tidal undulation in its progress up the river is reduced in range by the river slope, but this explanation would be only partial. As the tide rises at Rigolet, the water flows off into the areas of Double Mer and Lake Melville, which prevents it from rising so high as it otherwise would. Also during the fall of the tide, the immense volume of water flowing out of the expanse above, tends to prevent the tide from falling as low as it otherwise would, which has a further effect in decreasing the range.

p. 2336

The usual behaviour of the tide in estuaries is to increase its rise so long as the shores are converging, and to attain greatest proportions at the true head of the estuary where the river begins. In Hamilton Inlet the shores converge towards Turner Headland on one side, and Ticoralak Point or island on the other, and the tide here has its greatest amplitude. To be more explicit, the tides of most amplitude, i.e., perigee spring tides, are greater than at Indian Harbour ; mean spring tides are equal or slightly greater, while neap tides are nearly 10% less. This may therefore be considered a crucial point representing the head of the estuary for the tide here reaches a maximum in amplitude, notwithstanding the adverse conditions against its rising as already explained in the last paragraph.

In the great expanse of Lake Melville the amplitude of the tidal undulation is reduced to a small amount as might be expected. A table showing the change that takes place in this respect from Indian Harbour to the far end of the lake is given in the appendix. (Appendix “ d ” second part.)

A COMPARISON WITH THE ST. LAWRENCE RIVER.

To draw an analogy with the St. Lawrence river and its mouth, the locality of Turner Headland and Ticoralak Point, described as “ crucial ” may be compared with the region at the lower end of Orleand Island where the tide reaches its maximum rise, and where the river may be properly considered to begin.

Continuing the comparison, the following points of similarity and other-wise may be noted. A diagram to assist in following the purports of the statements is included in the appendix as sheet “ e.”

In the St. Lawrence the tide reverses the current regularly up to Cape Roche and sometimes up to Batiscan, within 25 miles of, but never up to Lake St. Peter the undulation however, does reach the lake causing a variation in level roughly from one quarter to half a foot when the river is not in its freshet stage. In the case of the waterway to Lake Melville, the tide reverses the current all the way, and it flows quite strongly back into the lake, where there is a continuous and regular undulation.

OTHER INFORMATION.

Enquiries were made with regard to the fishing of cod-fish and it was learned that occasionally, and late in the fall only, they were caught in the vicinity of Double Mer Point, presumably for food supply, and not as an industry. The strength of the current makes fishing difficult, and it is not customary to make the attempt. Thus, one party said that three years ago

p. 2337

cod-fish were caught here, and another said that none to his knowledge had been caught in the last five years.

A fisherman who had spent the last eleven seasons on the Labrador coast, said the farthest up the Inlet that he had known cod-traps to be set was at Black Island on the north side and at Turners Bight on the opposite shore. These places are twenty-five and thirteen miles respectively, below Rigolet.

No boundary line between the waters of the sea fishery, and of the inland fishery, in this locality was known to anybody so far as I could find out.

The foregoing facts regarding the nature of the tidal flow, and character of the water in Hamilton Inlet and Lake Melville and the connecting river, are the results of the work of the Tidal and Current Survey party during the season of 1923. In 1921 data was also obtained by the Hydrographic Survey and this is included partially in the appendix, where the information supplements the greater detail obtained in 1923.

Respectfully submitted,

H. W. Jones,

(B.Sc. : M.E.I.C.)

Senior Tidal and Current Surveyor.

2nd November, 1923.

Copied

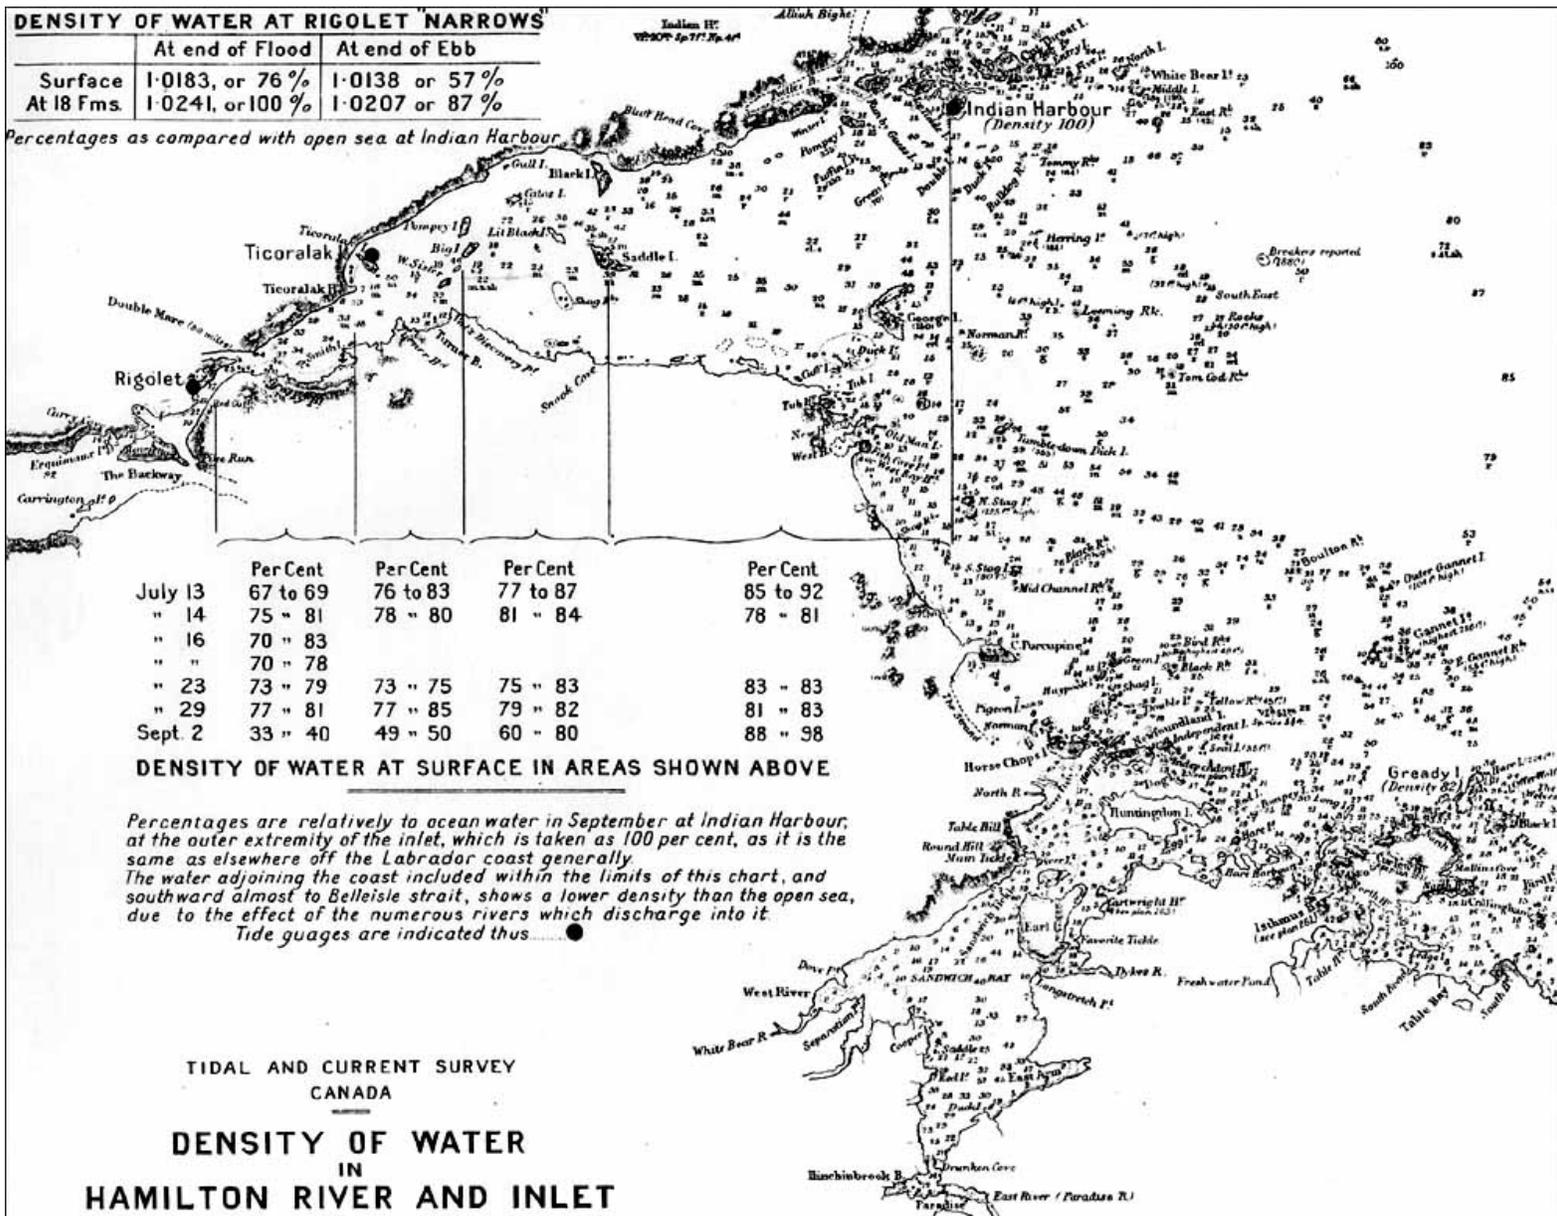

29.2.24.

by B.C.

DENSITY OF WATER AT RIGOLET NARROWS

	At end of Flood	At end of Ebb
Surface	1.0183, or 76 %	1.0138 or 57 %
At 18 Fms.	1.0241, or 100 %	1.0207 or 87 %

Percentages as compared with open sea at Indian Harbour

APPENDICES TO MR. JONES' REPORT (TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY, CANADA.)

INVESTIGATIONS IN THE NARROWS OF RIGOLET, 1923.

[Enclosure 1 in No. 1011.]

APPENDIX A.—TIDAL STREAM VELOCITIES IN THE NARROWS AT RIGOLET.

Average values of Maximum Flood and Ebb Streams during each of the periods indicated ; at a depth of 12 feet.
Velocities and knots per hour.

Period—1923.	Maximum Velocity on the Flood.	Maximum Velocity on the Ebb.	Percentage.
July 30 to Aug. 1 . . .	3·21	4·98	1·59
Aug. 1 " " 2 . . .	2·79	4·39	1·57
" 6 " " 7 . . .	1·57	3·18	2·03
" 11 " " 13 . . .	3·37	4·95	1·46
" 15 " " 16 . . .	3·54	5·15	1·46
" 17 " " 19 . . .	2·63	4·56	1·73
" 20 " " 22 . . .	2·22	3·88	1·74
" 26 " " 28 . . .	3·57	5·14	1·44

Larger HTML Version (15 kb)

DURATION OF FLOOD AND EBB TIDAL STREAMS IN MID CHANNEL OF THE NARROWS AT RIGOLET.

Period.	Duration of Flood Stream.	Duration of Ebb Stream.
July 30 to Aug. 2. 3 days and nights continuous . . .	5·32½	6·44
Aug. 6-7-8 . . . 2 " " uninterrupted . . .	4·34	7·41½
" 11-12 . . . 1 day " night " . . .	6·09	6·22
" 15-16 . . . 1 " " " " . . .	6·03½	6·11½
" 17-19 . . . 2 days " nights " . . .	5·43½	6·44
" 21-22 . . . 1 day " night " . . .	5·32½	6·50½
" 26-27 . . . 1 " " " " . . .	5·42	6·33
Mean . . .	5·37	6·44

Larger HTML Version (14 kb)

APPENDIX A (continued.)

DURATION OF FLOOD AND EBB TIDAL STREAMS OFF SQUARE ROCK POINT—RIGOLET.

NOTE.—On account of interruption in the observations, the best mean values are obtained by taking groups from opposite sides of the month, which are thus balanced, and omitting others.

Period.	Duration of Flood Stream.	Duration of Ebb Stream.
July 12-July 18 Average . . .	6·03	6·15
" 27-July 31 " . . .	6·00	6·20
Aug. 11-Aug. 16 " . . .	6·11	6·03
" 30-Sept. 2 " . . .	5·48	6·30
	6·00	6·17

(13 kb)

Larger Version (Rotated) (37 kb)

TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY—CANADA.

INVESTIGATING THE NARROWS OFF RIGOLET, 1923.

[Enclosure 2 in No. 1009.]

APPENDIX B.—DURATION OF FLOW OF THE UNDERCURRENT IN THE NARROWS AT RIGOLET MID-CHANNEL.

To obtain this information a vane of sheet metal weighted, and suspended by a small wire, was lowered from a reel towards the end of the flood and ebb streams. Thus the direction of the stream at any depth was indicated by the direction of the slope of the suspending wire. Lowering the vane to various depths, careful notes were made of the direction of the current ; and the time of change of flow from flood to ebb or ebb to flood near the bottom carefully determined, and compared with the turn on the surface. The current always turned below first at the beginning of the flood and also at the beginning of the ebb with three exceptions as shown in the table below.

TIME OF TURN OF UNDERCURRENT COMPARED WITH THE TURN ON THE SURFACE.

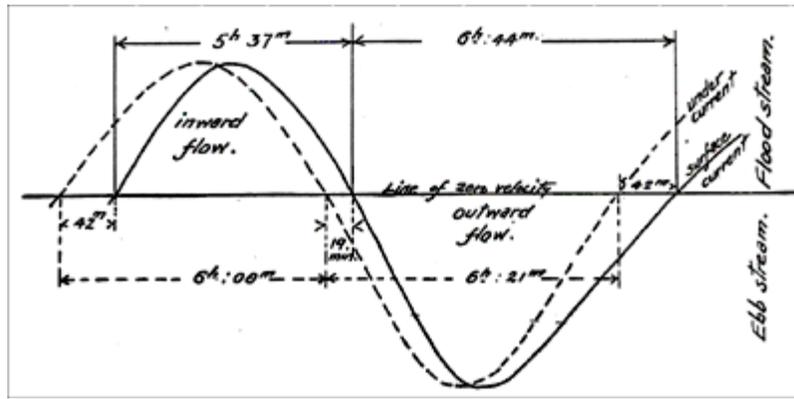

Turn Ebb to Flood				Turn Flood to Ebb
Earlier (-)		Later (+)		Earlier (-)		Later (+)
July 30	.	.	- 60 m.	---	July 30	.	- 10 m.	---
" 31	.	.	- 45 "	---	Aug. 1	.	- 15 "	---
Aug. 1	.	.	- 30 "	---	" 6	.	---	+ 10 m.
" 1	.	.	- 62 "	---	" 7	.	---	+ 30 m.
" 2	.	.	- 25 "	---	" 11	.	- 25 "	---
" 6	.	.	- 75 "	---	" 13	.	- 47 "	---
" 7	.	.	- 75 "	---	" 12	.	- 28 "	---
" 11	.	.	- 55 "	---	" 15	.	- 42 "	---
" 12	.	.	- 32 "	---	" 17	.	- 37 "	---
" 13	.	.	- 40 "	---	" 18	.	- 08 "	---
" 15	.	.	- 45 "	---	" 19	.	- 00 "	---
" 16	.	.	- 07 "	---	" 18	.	- 30 "	---
" 17	.	.	- 28 "	---	" 21	.	- 10 "	---
" 17	.	.	- 25 "	---	" 22	.	---	+ 24 m.
" 18	.	.	- 40 "	---	" 26	.	- 30 "	---
" 19	.	.	- 35 "	---	" 27	.	- 27 "	---
" 21	.	.	- 36 "	---	" 27	.	- 30 "	---
" 26	.	.	- 42 "	---
" 27	.	.	- 55 "	---
" 27	.	.	- 38 "	---
Average - 42 minutes.					Average - 19 minutes.

Larger HTML Version (20 kb)

APPENDIX B (continued).

The relation of the turn of the undercurrent to the turn on the surface thus determined, affords the means of calculating the duration of flow of the former in the flood and ebb periods, with the advantage of more extensive observations taken of the surface streams.

As observed, the average durations of the flood and ebb periods on the surface were 5 hours 37 minutes and 6 hours 44 minutes as laid out in the diagram below. The full line represents the curve of the surface current, and the dotted line that of the undercurrent. As the undercurrent flood began 42 minutes earlier, and the ebb 19 minutes earlier, the duration of the 10 flood period is thus 5 h. 37 m. + 42 m. - 19 m., or 6 hours 00 minute, and of the ebb period 6 h. 44 m. + 19 m. - 42 m., or 6 hours 21 minutes.

(NOTE.—Theoretically a flood and an ebb period equals half of a lunar day or 12 hours 25 minutes. Since the periods, as observed, added together give 6 hours 21 minutes, a good check on the accuracy of the determination is afforded.)

Larger Version (16 kb)

APPENDICES TO MR. JONES' REPORT (TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY, CANADA.)

INVESTIGATIONS IN THE NARROWS OF RIGOLET, 1923.

[Enclosure 1 in No. 1011.]

APPENDIX A.—TIDAL STREAM VELOCITIES IN THE NARROWS AT RIGOLET.

Average values of Maximum Flood and Ebb Streams during each of the periods indicated ; at a depth of 12 feet.

Period—1923.	Maximum Velocity on the Flood.	Maximum Velocity on the Ebb.	Percentage.
July 30 to Aug. 1	3 . 21	4 . 98	1 . 59
Aug. 1 to Aug. 2	2 . 79	4 . 39	1 . 57
Aug. 6 to Aug. 7	1 . 57	3 . 18	2 . 03
Aug. 11 to Aug. 13	3 . 37	4 . 95	1 . 46
Aug. 15 to Aug. 16	3 . 54	5 . 15	1 . 46
Aug. 17 to Aug. 19	2 . 63	4 . 56	1 . 73
Aug. 20 to Aug. 22	2 . 22	3 . 88	1 . 74
Aug. 26 to Aug. 28	3 . 57	5 . 14	1 . 44

Back to Main Page

DURATION OF FLOOD AND EBB TIDAL STREAMS IN MID CHANNEL OF THE NARROWS AT RIGOLET.

Period.	Duration of Flood Stream.	Duration of Ebb Stream.
July 30 to Aug. 2. 3 days and nights continuous	5 . 32½	6 . 44
Aug. 6-7-8 2 days and nights uninterrupted	4 . 34	7 . 41½
Aug. 11-12 1 day and night uninterrupted	6 . 09	6 . 22
Aug. 15-16 1 day and night uninterrupted	6 . 03½	6 . 11½
Aug. 17-19 2 days and nights uninterrupted	5 . 43½	6 . 44
Aug. 21-22 1 day and night uninterrupted	5 . 32½	6 . 50½
Aug. 26-27 1 day and night uninterrupted	5 . 42	6 . 33
Mean	5 . 37	6 . 44

Back to Main Page

APPENDIX A (continued).

DURATION OF FLOOD AND EBB TIDAL STREAMS OFF SQUARE ROCK POINT—RIGOLET.

Note.— On account of interruption in the observations, the best mean values are obtained by taking groups from opposite sides of the month, which are thus balanced, and omitting others.

Period.		Duration of Flood Stream.	Duration of Ebb Stream.
July 12-July 18	Average	6 . 03	6 . 15
July 27-July 31	Average	6 . 00	6 . 20
Aug. 11-Aug. 16	Average	6 . 11	6 . 03
Aug. 30-Sept. 2	Average	5 . 48	6 . 30
		6 . 00	6 . 17

Back to Main Page

Back to Main Page

TIME OF TURN OF UNDERCURRENT COMPARED WITH THE TURN ON THE SURFACE.

Turn Ebb to Flood Earlier (-) Later (+)			Turn Flood to Ebb Earlier (-) Later (+)
July 30	- 60 m.	—	July 30	- 10 m.	—
July 31	- 45 m.	—	Aug. 1	- 15 m.	—
Aug. 1	- 30 m.	—	Aug. 6	—	+ 10 m.
Aug. 1	- 62 m.	—	Aug. 7	—	+ 30 m.
Aug. 2	- 25 m.	—	Aug. 11	-25 m.	—
Aug. 6	- 75 m.	—	Aug. 13	- 47 m.	—
Aug. 7	- 75 m.	—	Aug. 12	- 28 m.	—
Aug. 11	- 55 m.	—	Aug. 15	- 42 m.	—
Aug. 12	- 32 m.	—	Aug. 17	- 37 m.	—
Aug. 13	- 40 m.	—	Aug. 18	- 08 m.	—
Aug. 15	- 45 m.	—	Aug. 19	- 00 m.	—
Aug. 16	- 07 m.	—	Aug. 18	- 30 m.	—
Aug. 17	- 28 m.	—	Aug. 21	- 10 m.	—
Aug. 17	- 25 m.	—	Aug. 22	—	+ 24 m.
Aug. 18	- 40 m.	—	Aug. 26	- 30 m.	—
Aug. 19	- 35 m.	—	Aug. 27	- 27 m.	—
Aug. 21	- 36 m.	—	Aug. 27	- 30 m.	—
Aug. 26	- 42 m.	—
Aug. 27	- 55 m.	—
Aug. 27	- 38 m.	—
Average - 42 minutes.			Average - 19 minutes

Tidal and Current Survey. Canada.

Hamilton River, Rigolet “Narrows”—Current Velocities at mid-flow, at 12 feet depth.

p. 2343

TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY—CANADA.

INVESTIGATIONS IN HAMILTON INLET AND THE NARROWS OFF RIGOLET, 1923.

[Enclosure 3 in No. 1009.]

APPENDIX C.—DENSITIES AND TEMPERATURES OF THE WATER.

1 On steamer's course Battle Harbour to Indian Harbour	June 20- July 2
2 On run from Rigolet to Indian Harbour	July 13
3 On run from Indian Harbour to Rigolet	July 14
4 On run from Rigolet to Ticoralak Island and return	July 16
5 On run from Rigolet to Indian Harbour	July 24
6 On run from Indian Harbour to Rigolet	July 29

- 7 Observations taken in mid-channel of Narrows at Rigolet during season —
- 8 Observations taken below Henrietta Island Aug. 28
- 9 Observations taken in Lake Melville, including some taken by the Hydrographic Survey in 1921 —
- 10 Rigolet to Indian Harbour on steamer's course Sept. 2-3
- 11 Indian Harbour to St. Johns. September 6-14 from steamer —
- 12 Difference in the density of water caused by the presence of drift ice —

C. 1.
TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY—CANADA.

HAMILTON INLET, 1923.

SURFACE TEMPERATURES AND DENSITIES TAKEN FROM STEAMER BATTLE HARBOUR TO INDIAN HARBOUR.

Date.	Locality.	Surface Temperature.	Density.	Percentage with sea-water as 1·0240.
Fri. June 29	Battle Harbour, drift ice all about and bergs . . .	35·2°	1·0222	93
" "	Taken in open on course to Spear Point . . .		1·0221	92
" "	Taken in open on course to Spear Point . . .		1·0221	93
Mon. July 2	Taken at Greasy Island		1·0213	89
" "	North of Huntingdon Island		1·0194	81
Tues. July 3	5 a.m. about 15 miles before Indian Harbour coming to George's Island.		1·0214	89
" "	Just after leaving Indian Harbour on way to Rigolet.		1·0210	88

NOTE.—Samples were tested when within half a degree of the standard temperature of 60°F.

Larger HTML Version (14 kb)

p. 2344

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 2.

Run from Rigolet to Indian Harbour by motor boat, course in the open until Bluff Head was reached then near the North Shore.

Friday, July 13.

	Surface Tempera- ture.	Density.	Percentage.
Left Rigolet 12:57, Surface temperature $\frac{1}{2}$ mile below .	39.7°	1.0165	68 $\frac{1}{2}$
13.15 (L. W. Rigolet at 13.00) between Lesters Point and Double Mer.		1.0163	"
13.25 Double Mer bears N.W. Lesters Point West Smiths Island S.E.		1.0162	67 $\frac{1}{2}$
13.45 Opposite Ticoralak Mountain before reaching the point.		1.0166	69
13.57 Off Little Ticoralak Island		1.0182	76
14.45 East end of Big West Sister Island	45°	1.0196	83
14.57 Off Little West Sister Island		1.0194	83
15.20 Little Black Island or rock at end of Little Black Island S.S.E.		1.0185	77
15.47 N.W. end of Little Black Island abeam. Calm warm afternoon. (Flood begins 15.57 Rigolet.)	45°	1.0187	78
16.25 E. end Black Island, N.N.E. some ice about .		1.0208	87
17.35 Off Bluff Head (18.10-19.05 landed for supper) .		1.0219	91
20.10 Off Pompey Island, much ice about	35°	1.0204	85
Arrived Indian Harbour 21.45.

NOTE.—Samples were tested when within half a degree of the standard temperature of 60°F.

Larger HTML Version (17 kb)

p. 2345

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 3.

Run from Indian Harbour to Rigolet by motor boat, course as taken by the steamers.

Saturday, July 14.

SURFACE TEMPERATURES AND DENSITIES.

Saturday, July 14, left Indian Harbour at 15.05, plenty of drift ice, but not packed ; necessary to deviate from course going in and out around the cakes, Ebb began 10.40 at Rigolet and ended 17.00.

	Surface Temperature.	Density.	Percentage.
15.30	Opposite Run by Guess Island, west end of Island at outskirts of ice.	41°	1·0193	80
15.52	Off Little Pompey Island		1 0196	81
17.00	Off the more westerly of the un-named islands . (Flood begins at Rigolet.)	40·2°	1·0189	79
17.50	About one-third way between Bluff Head and Black Island. Still a little ice. This point about on line Bluff Head and E. end Saddle Island.	39·8°	1·0188	78
18.15	S.E. end Saddle Island bears S.W.½S. S.E. end Black Island N.N.E. (Current seems to be outward.)	39·6°
18.45	S.E. end of Black Island S.S.W. Almost opposite Little Black Island.	39·6°	1·0194	81
19.15	Catos Island centre N.E. Little Black Island Rock (at W. end) Sh. E.½E.	37°	1·0202	84
19.45	Half mile before coming to Big Island	37°	1·0199	83½
20.00	A Big Island current still outward
20.15	Half a mile above Big Island, opposite the upper of other two on starboard side.	37°	1·0189	78½
20.45	Abreast of Mullins Cove, or a little above it	37°	1·0192	80
JUST BELOW TICORALAK ISLAND.
21.15	Just below Double Mer	37°	1·0188	78
21.45	Just above Double Mer	37°	1·0180	75
22.05	Off Rigolet Point H.W. at Rigolet was at 20.05, near end of Flood, which was at 22.30 at Rigolet.		1·0195	81

Larger HTML Version (17 kb)

p. 2346

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 4.

Rigolet to Ticoralak Island and back.

July 16.

	Surface Temperature.	Density.	At 18 Fm. Density.	Percentage.
Left Rigolet wharf at 14.20 at middle of Ebb Tide				(Surface.)
14.30	Opposite Porters	39·8°	1·0168	70
14.45	Below Lesters Point and above Double Mer (Undercurrent is in.)	39·6°	1·0239	99½
15.20	Just above Ticoralak Point (End of Ebb current at Rigolet 17.00.)	37·8°	1·0202	84
19.20	Off Ticoralak Head, mid-channel (Undercurrent towards D.M.)	37·0°	1·0187	78 ^{18 Fm} / ₇₆
	Second sample		1·0239	79
20.15	Above Smith Island and below Double Mer (Mid-flood current.)		1·01685	70
WEATHER CONDITIONS.
Calm, and somewhat cloudy.

NOTE.—Samples were tested when within half a degree of the standard temperature of 60°F.

Larger HTML Version (15 kb)

p. 2343

C. 1.
TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY—CANADA.

HAMILTON INLET, 1923.

SURFACE TEMPERATURES AND DENSITIES TAKEN FROM STEAMER BATTLE HARBOUR TO INDIAN HARBOUR.

Date.	Locality.	Surface Temper- ature.	Density.	Percentage with sea-water as 1 . 240.
Fri. June 29	Battle Harbour, drift ice all about and bergs	35 . 2°	1 . 0222	93
Fri. June 29	Taken in open on course to Spear Point		1 . 0221	92
Fri. June 29	Taken in open on course to Spear Point		1 . 0221	93
Mon. July 2	Taken at Gready Island		1 . 0213	89
Mon. July 2	North of Huntingdon Island		1 . 0194	81
Tues. July 3	5 a.m. about 15 miles before Indian Harbour coming to George's Island		1 . 0214	89
Tues. July 3	Just after leaving Indian harbour on way to Rigolet.		1 . 0210	88

Back to Main Page

p. 2344

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 2.

Run from Rigolet to Indian Harbour by motor boat, course in the open until Bluff Head was reached then near the North Shore.

Friday, July 13.

—	Surface Tempera- ture.	Density.	Percentage.
Left Rigolet 12:57, Surface temperature ½ mile below	39 . 7°	1 . 0165	68½
13 . 15 (L. W. Rigolet at 13.00) between Lesters Point and Double Mer.		1 . 0163	”
13 . 25 Double Mer bears N.W. Lesters Point West Smiths Island S.E.		1 . 0162	67½
13 . 45 Opposite Ticoralak Mountain before reaching the point.		1 . 0166	69
13 . 57 Off Little Ticoralak Island		1 . 0182	76
14 . 45 East end of Big West Sister Island	45°	1 . 0196	83
14 . 57 Off Little West Sister Island		1 . 0194	83
15 . 20 Little Black Island or rock at end of Little Black Island S.S.E.		1 . 0185	77
15 . 47 N.W. end of Little Black Island abeam. Calm warm afternoon. (Flood begins 15.57 Rigolet.)	45°	1 . 0187	78
16 . 25 E. end Black Island, N.N.E. some ice about		1 . 0208	87
17 . 35 Off Bluff Head (18.10-19.05 landed for supper)		1 . 0219	91
20 . 10 Off Pompey Island, much ice about	35°	1 . 0204	85
Arrived Indian Harbour 21 . 45.

Note.—Samples were tested when within half a degree of the standard temperatures of 60°F.

Back to Main Page

p. 2345

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 3.

Run from Indian Harbour to Rigolet by motor boat, course as taken by the steamers.

Saturday, July 14.

SURFACE TEMPERATURES AND DENSITIES.

Saturday, July 14, left Indian Harbour at 15.05, plenty of drift ice, but not packed ; necessary to deviate from course going in and out around the cakes, Ebb began 10.40 at Rigolet and ended 17.00.

	Surface Tempera- ture.	Density.	Percentage.
15 . 30 Opposite Run by Guess Island, west end of Island at outskirts of ice.	41°	1 . 0193	80
15 . 52 Off Little Pompey Island		1 . 0196	81
17 . 00 Off the more westerly of the un-named islands (Flood begins at Rigolet.)	40.2°	1 . 0189	79
17 . 50 About one-third way between Bluff Head and Black Island. Still a little ice. This point about on line Bluff Head and E. end Saddle Island.	39.8°	1 . 0188	78
18 . 15 S.E. end Saddle Island bears S.W.½S. S.E. end Black Island N.N.E. (Current seems to be outward.)	39.6°
18 . 45 S.E. end of Black Island S.S.W. Almost opposite Little Black Island	39.6°	1 . 0194	81
19 . 15 Catos Island centre N.E. Little Black Island Rock (at W. end) Sh. E.½E.	37°	1 . 0202	84
19 . 45 Half mile before coming to Big Island	37°	1 . 0199	83½
20 . 00 A Big Island current still outward
20 . 15 Half a mile above Big Island, opposite the upper of other two on starboard side.	37°	1 . 0189	78½
20 . 45 Abreast of Mullins Cove, or a little above it	37°	1 . 0192	80
JUST BELOW TICORALAK ISLAND.
21 . 15 Just below Double Mer	37°	1 . 0188	78

21 . 45	Just above Double Mer	37°	1 . 0180	75
22 . 05	Off Rigolet Point H.W. at Rigolet was at 20.05, near end of Flood, which was at 22.30 at Rigolet.		1 . 0195	81

Back to Main Page

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 4.

Rigolet to Ticoralak Island and back.

July 16.

—	Surface Tempera- ture.	Density.	At 18 Ftm. Density.	Percentage.
Left Rigolet wharf at 14.20 at middle of Ebb Tide				(Surface.)
14 . 30 Opposite Porters	39.8°	1 . 0168		70
14 . 45 Below Lesters Point and above Double Mer (Undercurrent is in.)	39.6°		1 . 0239	99½
15 . 20 Just above Ticoralak Point (End of Ebb current at Rigolet 17.00.)	37.8°	1 . 0202		84
19 . 20 Off Ticoralak Head, mid- channel (Undercurrent towards D.M.)	37.0°	1.0187	1.0235	78 76 79
Second sample			1.0239
20 . 15 Above Smith Island and below Double Mer (Mid-flood current.)		1 . 01685		70
WEATHER CONDITIONS.
Calm, and somewhat cloudy.

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 5.

On H.B. Co. Schooner "Thistle." Run from Rigolet to Indian Harbour by motor vessel, course in the open to Rattlers Bite, 15m. W. of Indian Harbour on July 23rd, thence out around Puffin Island, tacking to the Harbour, July 24th, 1923.

—	Surface Tempera- ture.	Density.	Percentage.
Left Rigolet at 10.30.
11.00	Opposite Hydrographic Survey, a station W. of Lesters Point, 1500 ft. off shore.	37° F.	1·0175	73
11.15	Midway between Johns Point and Double Mer Point, about 1500 ft. off shore.	37·5°	1·0175	73
12.22	S. of Ticoralak Point, about two-thirds distance towards S. shore.	36°	1·0189	79
12.50	Mid-channel S. of Ticoralak Island	40·5°	1·0180	75
13.15	Mid-channel half way between Ticoralak Island and Big Island.	41·5°	1·0176	73
13.45	1000 ft. S. of W. end of Big Island	41·5°	1·0175	73
14.05	About 800 ft. S. of E. end of Big Island	42°	1·0180	75
14.30	About 1½ mile S. of E. end of Pompey Island, half way between Big Island and Saddle Island.	46°	1·0181	75
15.17	About 1000 ft. N.W. of and tang. to W. extreme of Little Black Island.	41°	1·0185	77
15.30	Intersection of Tang. Saddle Island and centre of Tumble-down Dick Island and Tang. N. from W. extreme of Saddle Island	41°	1·0195	81
16.00	Mid-channel between E. extreme of Black Island and centre of Saddle Island.	40°	1·0201	83
16.30	Mid-channel between Bluff Head and end of Saddle Island.	41·5° F.	1·0200	83
17.05	One mile S. from Bluff Point	42°	1·0199	83
17.50	Mid-channel N. from W. end of Green Island	41°	1·0200	83
18.15	2 miles N.W. of Puffin Island	42°	1·0200	83

NOTE.—Samples were tested when within half a degree of the standard temperature of 60°F.

Larger HTML Version (18 kb)

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 6.

Run from Indian Harbour to Rigolet by motor boat.
Sunday, July 29th, 1923.

Time.	Locality.	Density.	Percentage.
	Left Indian Harbour at 7.00.
8.00	One mile N. from Puffin Island	1.0195	81
8.25	About 500 ft. S. from Bluff Head	1.0195	81
9.00	Midway between Bluff Head and S. extreme of Big Black Island.	1.0193	80
9.30	About 300 ft. S. of S. extreme of Big Black Island . .	1.0196	81
10.00	Mid-channel N.N.W. of W. extreme of Little Black Island.	1.0197	82
10.30	S. of W. extreme of Catos Island, about two miles off island.	1.0202	84
11.00	About two miles S. of E. extreme of Pompey Island . .	1.0192	79½
11.30	About 1000 ft. S. from E. extreme of Big Island . . .	1.0204	85
12.00	About 2000 ft. S. from W. extreme of Big Island . . .	1.0203	84
12.25	About half a mile N. from W. extreme of W. Sister Island	1.0200	83
12.50	Mid-channel S. from E. extreme Ticoralak Island . . .	1.0184	77
13.15	Mid-channel S. on tan. to E. end Ticoralak Island . . .	1.0194	81
13.50	Mid-channel N. of E. extreme Broomfield Island . . .	1.0193	80
14.15	About 1000 ft. N. of E. end of Smith Island	1.0189	79
14.50	Mid-channel between Lister and Double Mer Points . .	1.0182	76

NOTE.—Samples were tested when within half a degree of the standard temperature of 60°F.

Larger HTML Version (17 kb)

p. 2349

APPENDIX C (continued).

TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY—CANADA.

C. 7.

DENSITY AND TEMPERATURE OF THE WATER IN THE NARROWS OFF RIGOLET.

(NOTE.—All samples were brought to within half a degree of the standard temperature of 60°F. when tested, hence no corrections need be applied.)

AT THE END OF FLOOD CURRENT.					AT THE END OF EBB CURRENT.
At Surface.			At 18 Fathom.		At Surface.			At 18 Fathom.
Time.	Temp. at Surface.	Density.	Temp. at 18 Fm.	Density.	Time.	Temp. at Surface.	Density.	Temp. at 18 Fm.	Density.
July 13.					July 13.
10.15	—	1·0176	—	—	16.05	—	1·0147	—	—
10.10	—	—	—	1·0240	—	—	1·0142	—	—
10.10	—	—	—	1·0240	16.07	—	—	—	1·0204
					16.10	—	—	—	1·0204
July 14.
22.05	—	1·0195	—	—	July 16.
					17.50	—	1·0155	—	1·0204
July 16.					17.50	—	—	—	1·0205
12.00	—	1·0198	—	1·0240
12.05	—	—	—	1·0239
12.10	—	—	—	—	July 18.
July 18.					14.00	—	—	33°	—
16.00	—	—	31·8°	—	19.30	—	1·0120	—	1·0200
July 19.
14.25	—	1·0190	—	1·0241	July 19.
14.25	—	—	—	1·0239	8.37	—	—	39·3°	1·0204
					8.43	45·2°	1·0142	—	1·0204
July 20.					8.41	—	—	39·7°	1·0206
15.30	39°	1·0190	—	1·0242	21.00	45·0°	1·0138	—	1·0214
15.35	—	—	31·8°	1·0242	21.00	—	—	35°	1·0212
July 23.
19.20	37·5°	1·0190	32·0°	—	July 30.
20.40	—	heavy rains	—	1·0243	19.00	—	—	—	1·0203
20.40	—	Sat. & Sun.	—	1·0240
July 31.					31.8.30	42°	—	—	1·0213
13.20	38°	1·0182	—	1·0243	19.40	44°	1·0132	—	1·0207

Larger HTML Version (31 kb)

AT THE END OF FLOOD CURRENT.					AT THE END OF EBB CURRENT.
At Surface.			At 18 Fathom.		At Surface.			At 18 Fathom.
Time.	Temp. at Surface.	Density.	Temp. at 18 Fm.	Density.	Time.	Temp. at Surface.	Density.	Temp. at 18 Fm.	Density.
Aug. 1. 14.30	—	1·0179	—	1·0242 1·0240	Aug. 1. 7.20	46°	1·0130	—	—
Aug. 6. 19.15 (3. Fm)	— —	1·0170 1·0176	— 2nd Samp.	1·0247 1·0244	Aug. 6. 12.30 12.30 19.15	47° — 45·0°	1·0128 —	— —	1·0232 1·0234
Aug. 8. 8.30	44°	1·0142	—	1·0243	Aug. 7. 14.05	45·8°	—	—	—
Aug. 11. 10.05	—	—	—	1·0240	Aug. 8. 14.30	46·5°	1·0100	—	1·0239
Aug. 13. 13.45 11.28	— 36·3° & 37°	1·0196 —	—	1·0243	Aug. 11. — Aug. 13. 18.15	40·5° — —	— 1·0145	— —	— 1·0201
Aug. 17. 15.00	—	—	31·3°	1·0233	Aug. 15. 20.00	38°	1·0176	—	1·0195
Aug. 18. 3.00	36·5°	1·0205	33·7°	1·0240	Aug. 16. 7.50 6.30 14.00	38·5° 38·5° —	1·0168 —	— 33°	1·0188
Aug. 26. 23.15	38°	1·0170	31·8°	1·0242	Aug. 17. 9.00 9.00 9.08	— — 38·5°	1·0168 —	36·4° —	1·0194 1·0201
Aug. 27. 11.50 23.45	38° —	1·0177	33·2° 34°	1·0240	Aug. 26. 17.05	43°	1·0125	34·8°	1·0207
Aug. 28. 24.09	38·5°	—	—	—	Aug. 27. 6.00 17.50	44° 45°	1·0123 1·0119	34·2° 35·5°	1·0204 1·0206
Average of season	—	1·0182	—	1·0241	Average of season	—	1·0139	—	1·0208

Larger HTML Version (32 kb)

p. 2351

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 8.

DENSITIES TAKEN JUST BELOW HENRIETTA ISLAND, AUGUST 28.

(End of Ebb.)

I.	30	Sextant is Strathoona Point and Station "Chalk"	75° 50'
		Chalks House and Chickwaughs House (near Chalk Station)	115° 15'
		Chickwaughs House and Summer Cove (tents)	48° 25'
				Time 17 . 20	Density 95% 1.0227
II.	29	Chickwaughs House and Summer Cove (tents)	66° 00'
		Chickwaughs House and Chalks House	102° 21'
				Time 17 . 30	Density 92% 1.0221
III.	38	Chickwaughs House and Summer Cove (tents)	90° 45'
		Chickwaughs House and Chalks House	74° 15'
				Time 17 . 45	Density 95% 1.0228

NOTE.—Samples were tested when within half a degree of the standard temperature of 60°F.

LAKE MELVILLE.

C. 9.

DENSITIES DETERMINED BY THE TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY IN 1923.

		Surface Temperature.	Density.
Tues.	12.35 .. 2 miles off St. John's Island	53°	1.0050
Wed.	6.00 .. 1½ miles off Mulligan's Head	52½°	1.0031
"	In deepest water about 3 miles off } Surface Epinette Point after crossing 8 Fm. } 8.30 Began shoal from Mulligan's Head		1.0018
Ditto 10 Fm.		1.0178
" 20 "		1.0191
" 35 "		1.0208
" 34 "	Deep temperatures	1.0211
" 43 "	Temp. 31.2°	1.0211
" 67 "		1.0210
" 67 "	2nd sample	1.0210
" 50 "		1.0210
" 85 "	Temp. 31.2°	1.0211

Line had a 28.16 sounding lead on end

Larger HTML Version (15 kb)

p. 2347

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 5.

On H.B. Co. Schooner "Thistle." Run from Rigolet to Indian Harbour by motor vessel, course in the open to Rattlers Bite, 15m. W. of Indian Harbour on July 23rd, thence out around Puffin Island, tacking to the Harbour, July 24th, 1923.

	Surface Tempera- ture.	Density.	Percentage.
Left Rigolet at 10.30.
11 . 00	Opposite Hydrographie Survey, a station W. of Lesters Point, 1500 ft. off shore.	37°F	1 . 0175 73
11 . 15	Midway between Johns Point and Double Mer Point, about 1500 ft. off shore.	37.5°	1 . 0175 73
12 . 22	S. of Ticoralak Point, about two-thirds distance towards S. shore.	36°	1 . 0189 79
12 . 50	Mid-channel S. of Ticoralak Island	40.5°	1 . 0180 75
13 . 15	Mid-channel half way between Ticoralak Island and Big Island.	41.5°	1 . 0176 73
13 . 45	1000 ft. S. of W. end of Big Island	41.5°	1 . 0175 73
14 . 05	About 800 ft. S. of E. end of Big Island	42°	1 . 0180 75
14 . 30	About 1½ mile S. of E. end of Pompey Island, half way between Big Island and Saddle Island.	46°	1 . 0181 75
15 . 17	About 1000 ft. N.W. of and tang. to W. extreme of Little Black Island.	41°	1 . 0185 77
15 . 30	Intersection of Tang. Saddle Island and centre, of Tumble-down Dick Island and Tang. N. from W. extreme of Saddle Island	41°	1 . 0195 81
16 . 00	Mid-channel between E. extreme of Black Island and centre of Saddle Island.	40°	1 . 0201 83
16 . 30	Mid-channel between Bluff Head and end of Saddle Island.	41.5°	1 . 0200 83
17 . 05	One mile S. from Bluff Point	42°	1 . 0199 83
17 . 50	Mid-channel N. from W. end of Green	41°	1 . 0200 83

Island

18 . 15 2 miles N.W. of Puffin Island

42°

1 . 0200

83

Back to Main Page

p. 2348

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 6.

Run from Indian Harbour to Rigolet by motor boat.

Sunday, July 29th, 1923.

Time.	Locality.	Density.	Percentage.
	Left Indian Harbour at 7.00.
8.00	One mile N. from Puffin Island .	1 . 0195	81
8.25	About 500 ft. S. from Bluff Head	1 . 0195	81
9.00	Midway between Bluff Head and S. extreme of Big Black Island.	1 . 0193	80
9.30	About 300 ft. S. of S. extreme of Big Black Island	1 . 0196	81
10.00	Mid-channel N.N.W. of W. extreme of Little Black Island.	1 . 0197	82
10.30	S. of W. extreme of Catos Island, about two miles off island.	1 . 0202	84
11.00	About two miles S. of E. extreme of Pompey Island	1 . 0192	79½
11.30	About 1000 ft. S. from E. extreme of Big Island	1 . 0204	85
12.00	About 2000 ft. S. from W. extreme of Big Island	1 . 0203	84
12.25	About half a mile N. from W. extreme of W. Sister Island	1 . 0200	83
12.50	Mid-channel S. from E. extreme Ticoralak Island	1 . 0184	77
13.15	Mid-channel S. on tan, to E. end Ticoralak Island	1 . 0194	81
13.50	Mid-channel N. of E. extreme Broomfield Island	1 . 0193	80
14.15	About 1000 ft. N. of E. end of Smith Island	1 . 0189	79
14.50	Mid-channel between Lister and Double Mer Points	1 . 0182	76

Back to Main Page

APPENDIX C (continued).

TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY—CANADA.
C. 7.

DENSITY AND TEMPERATURE OF THE WATER IN THE NARROWS OFF RIGOLET.

(Note.— All samples were brought to within half a degree of the standard temperature of 60°F. when tested, hence no corrections need to be applied.)

AT THE END OF FLOOD CURRENT.					AT THE END OF EBB CURRENT.
At Surface.			At 18 Fathom.		At Surface.			At 18 Fathom.
Time.	Temp. at Surface.	Density.	Temp. at 18 Fm.	Density.	Time.	Temp. at Surface.	Density.	Temp. at 18 Fm.	Density.
July 13.					July 13.
10.15	—	1.0176			16.05	—	1.0147
10.10	—	—	—	1.0240		—	1.0142
10.10	—	—	—	1.0240	16.07	—	—	—	1.0204
					16.10	—	—	—	1.0204
July 14.
22.05	—	1.0195			July 16.
July 16.
					17.50	—	1.0155	—	1.0204
12.00	—	1.0198			17.50	—	—	—	1.0205
12.05	—	—	—	1.0240
12.10	—	—	—	1.0239	July 18.
July 18.
					14.00	—	—	33°
16.00	—	—	31.8°		19.30	—	1.0120	—	1.0200
July 19.					July 19.
14.25	—	1.0190	—	1.0241	8.37	—	—	39.3°	1.0204
14.25	—	—	—	1.0239	8.43	45.2°	1.0142	—	1.0204

July 20.				8.41	—	—	39.7°	1.0206
15.30	39°	1.0190	—	1.0242	21.00	45.0°	1.0138	—	1.0214
15.35	—	—	31.8°	1.0242	21.00	—	—	35°	1.0212
July 23.
19.20	37.5°	1.0190	32.0°		July 30.
20.40	—	heavy rains	—	1.0243	19.00	—	—	—	1.0203
20.40	—	Sat. & Sun.	—	1.0240
July 31.					31.8.30	42°	—	—	1.0213
13.20	38°	1.0182	—	1.0243	19.40	44°	1.0132	—	1.0207

Back to Main Page

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 7. (continued).

AT THE END OF FLOOD CURRENT.					AT THE END OF EBB CURRENT.
At Surface.			At 18 Fathom.		At Surface.			At 18 Fathom.
Time.	Temp. at Surface.	Density.	Temp. at 18 Fm.	Density.	Time.	Temp. at Surface.	Density.	Temp. at 18 Fm.	Density.
Aug. 1.					Aug. 1.
14.30	—	1.0179	—	1.0242	7.20	46°	1.0130
				1.0240
Aug. 6.					Aug. 6.
19.15	—	1.0170	—	1.0247	12.30	47°	1.0128	—	1.0232
(3. Fm)	—	1.0176	2nd Smp.	1.0244	12.30	—	—	—	1.0234
					19.15	45.0°
Aug. 8.					Aug. 7.
8.30	44°	1.0142	—	1.0243	14.05	45.8°
Aug. 11.					Aug. 8.
10.05	—	—	—	1.0240	14.30	46.5°	1.0100	—	1.0239
Aug. 13.					Aug. 11.
13.45	—	1.0196				40.5°		—
11.28	36.3° & 37°	—	—	1.0243	Aug. 13.
					18.15		1.0145	—	1.0201
Aug. 17.					Aug. 15.
15.00	—		31.3	1.0233	20.00	38°	1.0176	—	1.0195
Aug. 18.					Aug. 16.
3.00	36.5°	1.0205	33.7°	1.0240	7.50	38.5°	1.0168	—	1.0188
					6.30	38.5°		—
					14.00	—		33°
Aug. 26.					Aug. 17.

23.15	38°	1.0170	31.8°	1.0242	9.00	—	1.0168	36.4°	1.0194
					9.00	—		—	1.0201
Aug. 27.					9.08	38.5°
11.50	38°	1.0177	33.2°	1.0240
23.45	—		34°		Aug. 26.
					17.05	43°	1.0125	34.8°	1.0207
Aug. 28.					Aug. 27.
24.09	38.5°				6.00	44°	1.0123	34.2°	1.0204
					17.50	45°	1.0119	35.5°	1.0206
		_____		_____			_____		_____
Average	of season	1.0182	—	1.0241	Average	of season	1.0139		1.0208

Back to Main Page

p. 2351

LAKE MELVILLE.

C. 9.

DENSITIES DETERMINED BY THE TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY IN 1923.

		Surface Temperature.	Density.
Tues.	12.35 ..2 miles off St. John's Island	53°	1 . 0050
Wed.	6.00 ..1½ miles off Mulligan's Head	52½°	1 . 0031
„	In deepest water about 3 miles off Epinette point after crossing 8 Fm. shoal from Mulligan's Head.	Surface 8.30 Began	1 . 0018
Ditto.
„	10 Fm.		1.0178
„	20 „		1.0191
„	35 „		1.0208
„	34 „		1.0211
„	43 „		1.0211
„	67 „		Deep temperatures
„	67 „		Temp. 31·2°	1.0210
„	50 „		2nd sample	1.0210
„	85 „		Temp. 31·2°	1.0211

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 9. (continued).

LAKE MELVILLE.

DENSITIES DETERMINED BY THE HYDROGRAPHIC SURVEY IN 1921.

Place.	Date. 1921.	Surface Tempera- ture.	Specific Gravity.		State of the Tide.
			Top.	Bottom.
E. Side Henrietta Island	July 20	42° F.	1·0185
Back way, 6 miles up	July 18	47° F.	1·0149		Low tide
Back way, 6 miles up	July 19	56° F.	1·0066		$\frac{1}{2}$ Flood
Back way, 15 miles up	July 19	57° F.	1·0097
Back way, near head	Aug. 15	53° F.	1·0095		Low tide
W. of Caravalla Point, 8 miles	July 26	56° F.	1·0096
Pelter's Cove	Aug. 14	54° F.	1·0094
Mulligan's Bay, 1½ miles off mouth of river	July 28	53° F.	1·0063	1·0211
E. side of Long Point in bay	Aug. 13	54° F.	1·0003
Epinette Point	Aug. 12	50° F.	0·9995

NOTE.—Samples were tested when within half a degree of the standard temperature of 60°F.

Larger HTML Version (17 kb)

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 10.

Rigolet to Indian Harbour.

September 2 and 3.

Time.	Place.	Surface Temperature.	Density.	Percentage.
	Left Rigolet on "Sagona" 23.40 Sun. night, September 2.
23.45	Off Porters	49½°	1·0081	33½
	Off Double Mer (opposite Smiths Island)	48½°	1·0096	40
	Off Ticoralak Point	48°	1·0095	39½
24.30	Below Ticoralak Point	46°	1·0117	49
	Off West Sister Island (N. of it)	45·8°	1·0118	49
Sept. 3. 1.30	Off East Sister Island (N. of it), steamer anchored.	45·6°	1·0121	50
4.50	Left anchorage.
5.05	South of Big Island (West end)	45·5°	1·0146	61
5.30	Heading to pass to south of Little Black Island		1·0140	58
5.45	Heading to pass to south of Little Black Island	45°	1·0184	77
6.00	Heading to pass to south of Little Black Island	40·8°	1·0182	77
6.15	Off Little Black Island	40·2°	1·0193	80
6.55	Off Bluff Head	39½°	1·0211	88
7.15	On course to Indian Harbour	39½°	1·0207	86
7.30	On course to Indian Harbour	40°	1·0206	86
7.50	Just past Puffin Island	39·9°	1·0211	88
8.10	Near Indian Harbour	40°	1·0224	94
8.20	Dropped anchor outside Indian Harbour.
Sept. 5	Sample taken in Indian Harbour		1·0238	99
Sept. 6	Sample taken in Indian Harbour		1·0236	98

NOTE.—Samples were tested when within half a degree of the standard temperature of 60°F.

Larger HTML Version (20 kb)

p. 2354

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 11.

Indian Harbour to St. John's No. 1.

September 6 to 14.

Time.	Place.	Surface Temperature.	Density.	Percentage.
Sept. 6 .	Indian Harbour samples previous page . . .		1·0236	98
Sat. 8 .	Near Greedy Island		1·0196	81½
Sat. 8 .	After Black Island near Flat Island . . .		1·0209	87
Sun. 9 .	Off Red Point	46°	1·0213	88½
Sun. 9 .	Just before Comfort Bight		1·0221	92
Mon. 10	Before Spear Point		1·0229	95
Mon. 10	Before Battle Harbour	45½°	1·0232	96½
Tues. 11	9.15 a.m. Off N.W. end Belle Isle Island . .	45°	1·0225	94
Tues. 11	About 8 m. before Cape St. Anthony . . .	50°	1·0238	99
Tues. 11	Off Croix Island 17.10	46·8°	1·0238	99
Wed. 12	Open coast before Stinking Island, 9 a.m.. .	50¼°	1·0240	100
Wed. 12	14.15. Middle of Bona Vista Bay.	51°	1·0242	100½
Wed. 12	16.20. Cape Bona Vista Light abeam . . .	51¼°	1·0242	100½
Thurs. 12	6.15 a.m. Crossing Trinity Bay. (End of Island abeam 7.15).	50°	1·0245	102
Thurs. 13	Off Cape St. Francis	49·5°	1·0245	102

NOTE.—Samples were tested when within half a degree of the standard temperature of 60°F.

Larger HTML Version (18 kb)

p. 2355

APPENDIX C (continued).

TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY—CANADA.
C. 12.

HAMILTON INLET.

DIFFERENCE IN THE DENSITY OF WATER CAUSED BY THE PRESENCE OF DRIFT ICE.

(Samples taken in the same locality in July and September.)

Date, 1923.	Locality.	Density.	Date.	Density.	Difference.
June 29	Battle Harbour . . .	1·0223	September	1·0232	0·0009
June 29	On course to Spear Point . .	1·0222	"	1·0229½	0·0007½
July 3 .	Just after leaving Indian Harbour on way to Rigolet	1·0210	"	1·0224	0·0014
July 13	Near Pompey Island . . .	1·0203	"	1·0211	0·0008
				Average .	·0010

Larger HTML Version (14 kb)

p. 2356

TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY—CANADA.

[Enclosure 4 No. 1011.

APPENDIX D.—INVESTIGATIONS IN HAMILTON INLET
AND IN THE NARROWS OFF RIGOLET, 1923.

1.—TABLE SHOWING TIME AND RISE OF TIDE AT VARIOUS LOCATIONS.

Locality.	For H.W.	For L.W.	Spring Rise.	Neap Rise.
			From Chart Datum.
			Feet.	Feet.
Indian Harbour—Subtract from time of tide at Halifax	1.20	1.47	6½	4½
Ticoralak Island	1.03	1.26	6½	4½
Broomfield Island—Subtract from time of tide at Halifax	1.00	1.10	6½	4½
Rigolet—Subtract from time of tide at Halifax . . .	0.33	0.46	5½	4
Caravalla Cove— Add to time of tide at Halifax . . .	1.55	1.15	2½	1½
Epinette Point—Later than Caravalla	1.40	1.55	2½	1½
Rabbit Island—Later than Caravalla	2.10	2.55	3	1½

Larger HTML Version (16 kb)

2.—TABLE SHOWING THE ALTERATION IN THE AMPLITUDE OF THE TIDAL UNDULATION IN ITS PROGRESS FROM INNER EXTREMITY OF LAKE MELVILLE.

Locality.	Spring Tides.	Neap Tides.
	Feet.	Feet.
Indian Harbour, on the sea coast	5.32	2.25
Ticoralak Island	5.35	2.05
Broomfield Island	5.05	1.93
Rigolet, in the narrows	4.34	1.53
Caravalla, in the narrows	1.30	0.67
Epinette Point, in Lake Melville	1.33	0.70
Rabbit Island, in Lake Melville (Goose Bay)	1.63	0.90

Larger HTML Version (13 kb)

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 9. (continued).

LAKE MELVILLE.

DENSITIES DETERMINED BY THE HYDROGRAPHIC SURVEY IN 1921.

Place.	Date. 1921.	Surface Temperature.	Specific Gravity.		State of the Tide.
			Top.	Bottom.
E. Side Henrietta Island	July 20	42° F.	1.0185
Back way, 6 miles up	July 18	47° F.	1.0149		Low Tide
Back way, 6 miles up	July 19	56° F.	1.0066		3/4 Flood
Back way, 15 miles up	July 19	57° F.	1.0097
Back way, near head	Aug. 15	53° F.	1.0095		Low tide
W. of Caravalla Point, 8 miles	July 26	56° F.	1.0096
Pelter's Cove	Aug. 14	54° F.	1.0094
Mulligan's Bay, 1½ miles off mouth of river	July 28	53° F.	1.0063	1.0211
E. side of Long Point in bay	Aug. 13	54° F.	1.0003
Epinette Point	Aug. 12	50° F.	0.9995

p. 2353

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 10.

Rigolet to Indian Harbour.

September 2 and 3.

Time.	Place.	Surface Tempera- ture.	Density.	Percentage.
	Left Rigolet on " Sagona " 23.40 Sun. night, September 2.
23.45	Off Porters	49½°	1.0081	33½
	Off Double Mer (opposite Smiths Island)	48½°	1.0096	40
	Off Ticoralak Point	48°	1.0095	39½
24.30	Below Ticoralak Point	46°	1.0117	49
	Off West Sister Island (N. of it)	45.8°	1.0118	49
Sept. 3
1.30	Off East Sister Island (N. of it), steamer anchored.	45.6°	1.0121	50
4.50	Left anchorage
5.05	South of Big Island (West end)	45.5°	1.0146	61
5.30	Heading to pass to south of Little Black Island		1.0140	61
5.45	Heading to pass to south of Little Black Island	45°	1.0184	77
6.00	Heading to pass to south of Little Black Island	40.8°	1.0182	77
6.15	Off Little Black Island	40.2°	1.0193	80
6.55	Off Bluff Head	39½°	1.0211	88
7.15	On course to Indian Harbour	39½°	1.0207	86
7.30	On course to Indian Harbour	40°	1.0206	86
7.50	Just past Puffin Island	39.9°	1.0211	88
8.10	Near Indian Harbour	40°	1.0224	94
8.20	Dropped anchor outside Indian Harbour

Sept. 5	Sample taken in Indian Harbour	1.0238	99
Sept. 6	Sample taken in Indian Harbour	1.0236	98

Back to Main Page

p. 2354

APPENDIX C (continued).

C. 11.

Indian Harbour to St. John's No. 1.

September 6 to 14.

Time.	Place.	Surface Tempera- ture.	Density.	Percentage.
Sept. 6	Indian harbour samples previous page		1.0236	98
Sat. 8	Near Gready Island		1.0196	81½
Sat. 8	After Black Island near Flat Island		1.0209	87
Sun. 9	Off Red Point	46°	1.0213	88½
Sun. 9	Just before Comfort Bight		1.0221	92
Mon. 10	Before Spear Point		1.0229	95
Mon. 10	Before Battle Harbour	45½°	1.0232	96½
Tues. 11	9.15 a.m. Off N.W. end Belle Isle Island	45°	1.0225	94
Tues. 11	About 8 m. before Cape St. Anthony	50°	1.0238	99
Tues. 11	Off Croix Island 17.10	46.8°	1.0238	99
Wed. 12	Open coast before Stinking Island, a.m.	50¼°	1.0240	100
Wed. 12	14.15. Middle of Bona Vista Bay	51°	1.0242	100½
Wed. 12	16.20. Cape Bona Vista Light abeam	51¼°	1.0242	100½
Thurs. 13	6.15 a.m. Crossing Trinity Bay. (End of Island abeam 7.15).	50°	1.0245	102
Thurs. 13	Off Cape St. Francis	49.5°	1.0245	102

Note.—Samples were tested when within half a degree of the standard temperature of 60°F.

Back to Main Page

APPENDIX C (continued).

TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY—CANADA.

C. 12.

HAMILTON INLET.

DIFFERENCE IN THE DENSITY OF WATER CAUSED BY THE PRESENCE OF DRIFT ICE.

(Samples taken in the same locality in July and September.)

Date. 1923.	Locality.	Density.	Date.	Density.	Difference.
June 29	Battle Harbour	1.0223	September	1.0232	0.0009
June 29	On course to Spear Point	1.0222	”	1.0229½	0.0007½
July 3	Just after leaving Indian Harbour on way to Rigolet	1.0210	”	1.0224	0.0014
July 13	Near Pompey Island	1.0203	”	1.0211	0.0008
				Average	.0010

TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY—CANADA.

[Enclosure 4 in No. 1011.]

APPENDIX D.—INVESTIGATIONS IN HAMILTON INLET, AND IN THE NARROWS OFF RIGOLET, 1923.

1.—TABLE SHOWING TIME AND RISE OF TIDE AT VARIOUS LOCATIONS.

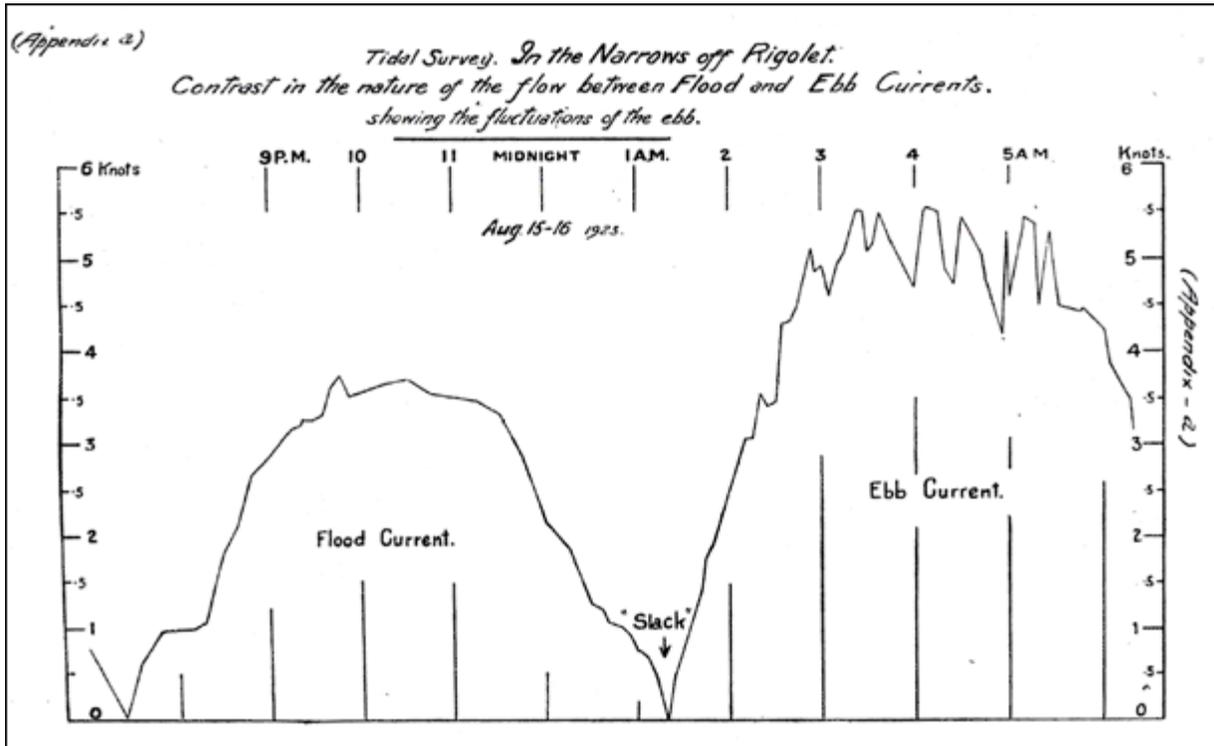

Locality.	For H.W.	For L.W.	From Chart Datum.
			Spring Rise.	Neap Rise.
			Feet	Feet
Indian Harbour—Subtract from time of tide at Halifax	1.20	1.47	6½	4¾
Ticoralak Island	1.03	1.26	6½	4½
Broomfield Island—Subtract from time of tide at Halifax	1.00	1.10	6¼	4¼
Rigolet—Subtract from time of tide at Halifax	0.33	0.46	5¼	4
Caravalla Cove—Add to time of tide at Halifax	1.55	1.15	2¼	1½
Epinette Point—Later than Caravalla	1.40	1.55	2½	1½
Rabbit Island—Later than Caravalla	2.10	2.55	3	1½

Back to Main Page

2.—TABLE SHOWING THE ALTERATION IN THE AMPLITUDE OF THE TIDAL UNDULATION IN ITS PROGRESS FROM INNER EXTREMITY OF LAKE MELVILLE.

Locality.	Spring Tides.	Neap Tides.
	Feet.	Feet
Indian Harbour, on the sea coast	5.32	2.25
Ticoralak Island	5.35	2.05
Broomfield Island	5.05	1.93
Rigolet, in the narrows	4.34	1.53
Caravalla, in the narrows	1.30	0.67
Epinette Point, in Lake Melville	1.33	0.70
Rabbit Island, in Lake Melville (Goose Bay)	1.63	0.90

Back to Main Page

TIDAL AND CURRENT SURVEY CANADA.

[11 April,
1924.]INVESTIGATIONS IN HAMILTON INLET AND IN THE NARROWS AT RIGOLET.SUPPLEMENT TO APPENDIX D ” OF REPORT ; BEING AN EXPLANATION REGARDING THE INCREASE IN THE RANGE OF TIDE AT THE INNER END OF LAKE MELVILLE.

In making a minute comparison between the amount of tide at different places, the “ range ” and not the “ rise ” of tide must be examined, and this must be done preferably with simultaneous tides. The “ rise ” is unsuitable because it is a height measured from the chart datum plane at each place and these planes may be slightly at variance one with another relatively to the tide by an amount quite inappreciable with regard to the purposes of a chart, but preventing a true comparison being made when we are considering such small differences as we have under discussion in this instance. By “ range of tide ” is meant the amplitude of the tidal undulation.

The tidal record at Caravalla, Epinette Point and Rabbit Island was simultaneous, and thus the figures in the second table of the appendix “ d ” to the report, referring to the amplitude of the tidal undulation at these places, are strictly comparable. The first table of “ rise ” is one to use for practical purposes the height being given only to the nearest quarter foot from the datum plane of the chart, and the slight exaggeration of the figures for Epinette Point and Rabbit Island given in this table for rise, is due to the fact that these datum planes, from which the rise is measured are a little lower at these places than at Caravalla.

To explain this greater amplitude at the inner end of the lake we can refer to the fact that tidal waves progressing between converging shores develop in this manner for the reason that the water is crowded by the narrowing confines, causing it to mount up and when a decrease occurs in the depth of water through which the wave is travelling the same effect is produced. The fact that the spring tides increase more than the neaps is significant because this is according to the behaviour of confined tides generally, and substantiates the explanation. In Lake Melville the width is much less at Epinette Point, and the depth is much less as well in Goose Bay, where the observations were taken at Rabbit Island, so this characteristic is to be expected. The apparent increase at Epinette Point as shown by the figures, can scarcely be regarded as indicating that the change begins here the amount is so small but being near the end of the lake it probably does.

p. 2358

Lake Melville is hardly large enough to have any noticeable tide of its own, but the oceanic undulation entering the lake has an amplitude of 1.30 feet for springs and 0.67 feet for neaps, at Caravalla. It may be that this flattens out somewhat in the expanse of the lake (there is no record in the central part of the lake to show this), but certain it is that when the undulation nears the inner end, the water piles up slightly giving a range of 1.63 feet and 0.90 feet at Rabbit Island, an increase of 0.33 feet and 0.23 feet at springs and neaps respectively over the amount at Caravalla. (It may be pointed out that the difference in rise from the mean tide level of the lake is only half this amount.)

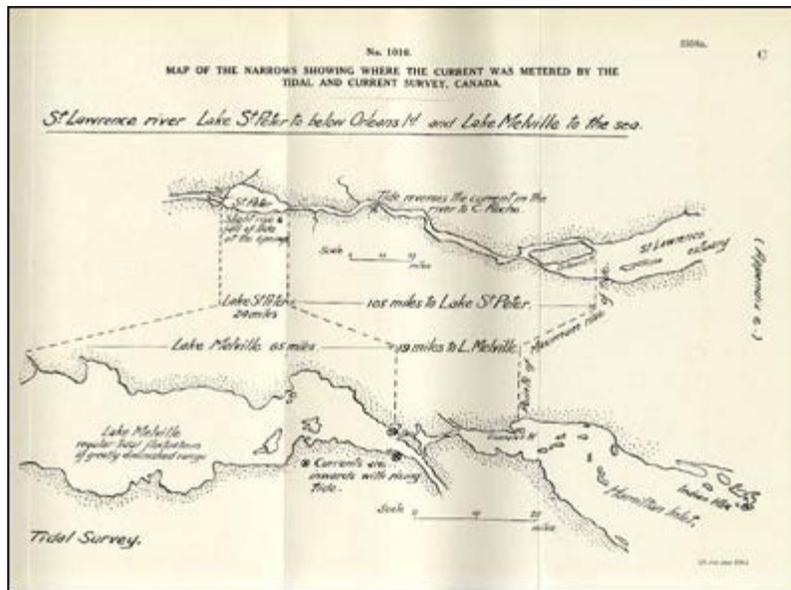

H.W. JONES,

Senior Tidal and Current Surveyor.

Ottawa, 11th April, 1924.

[Map follows as page 2358A]

[11 April, 1924.]

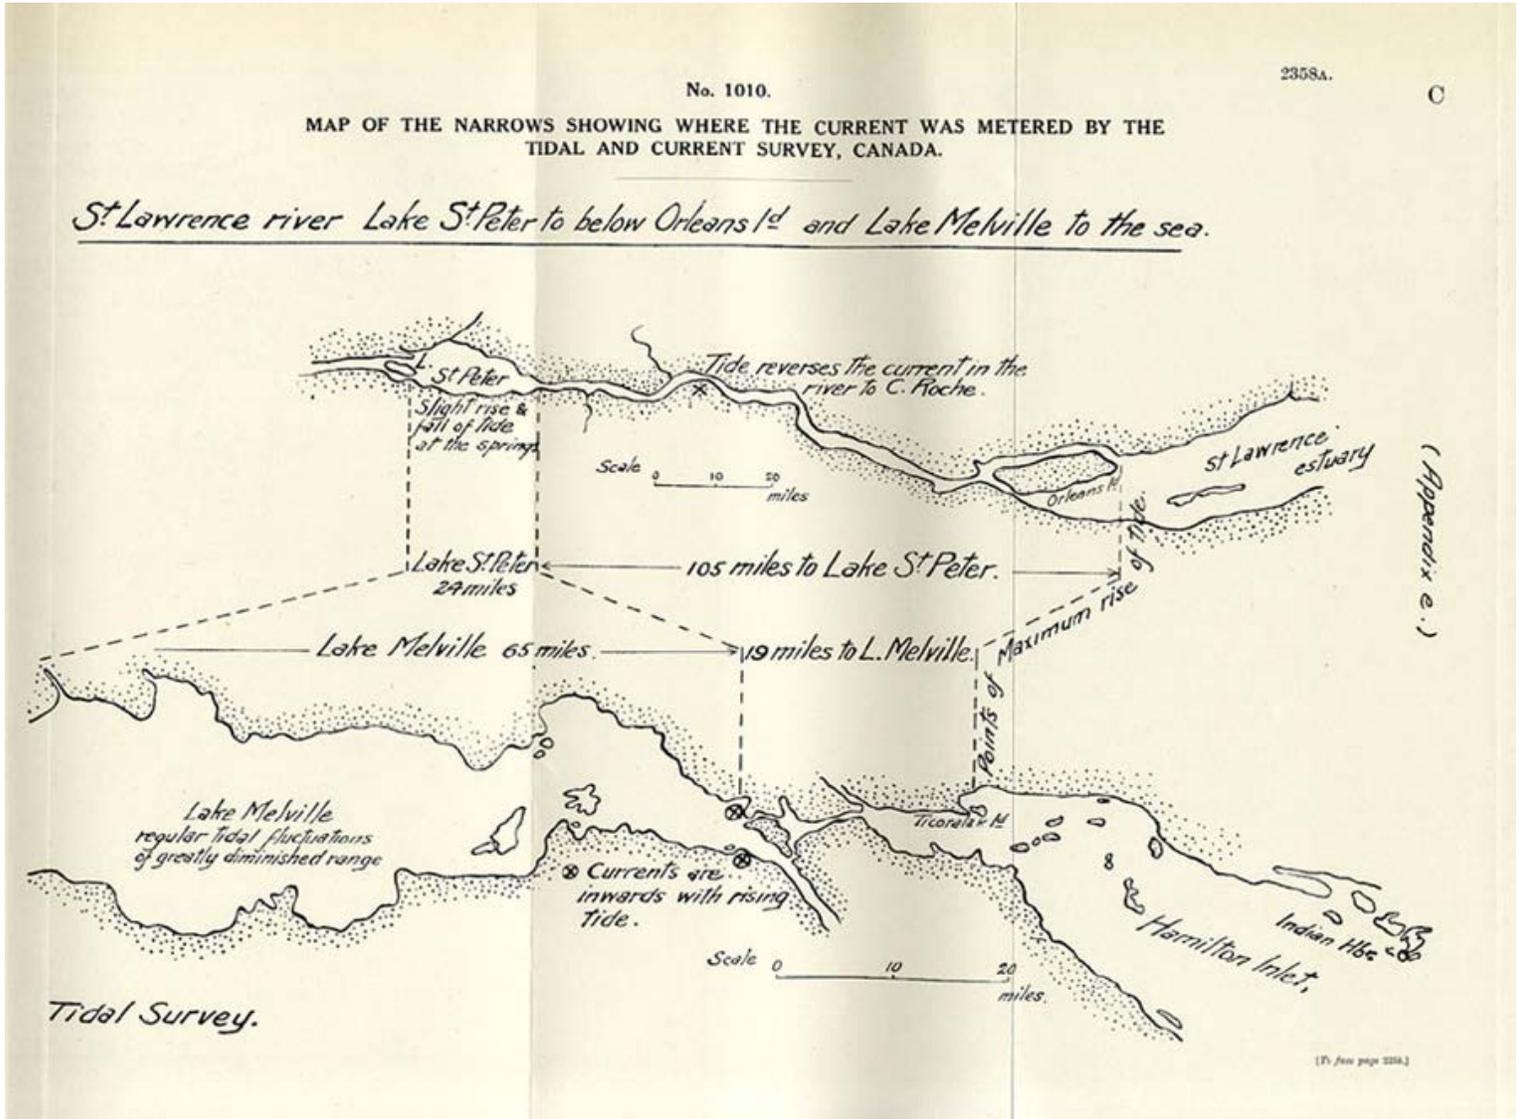

Much Larger Version 900x667 pixels (133 kb)

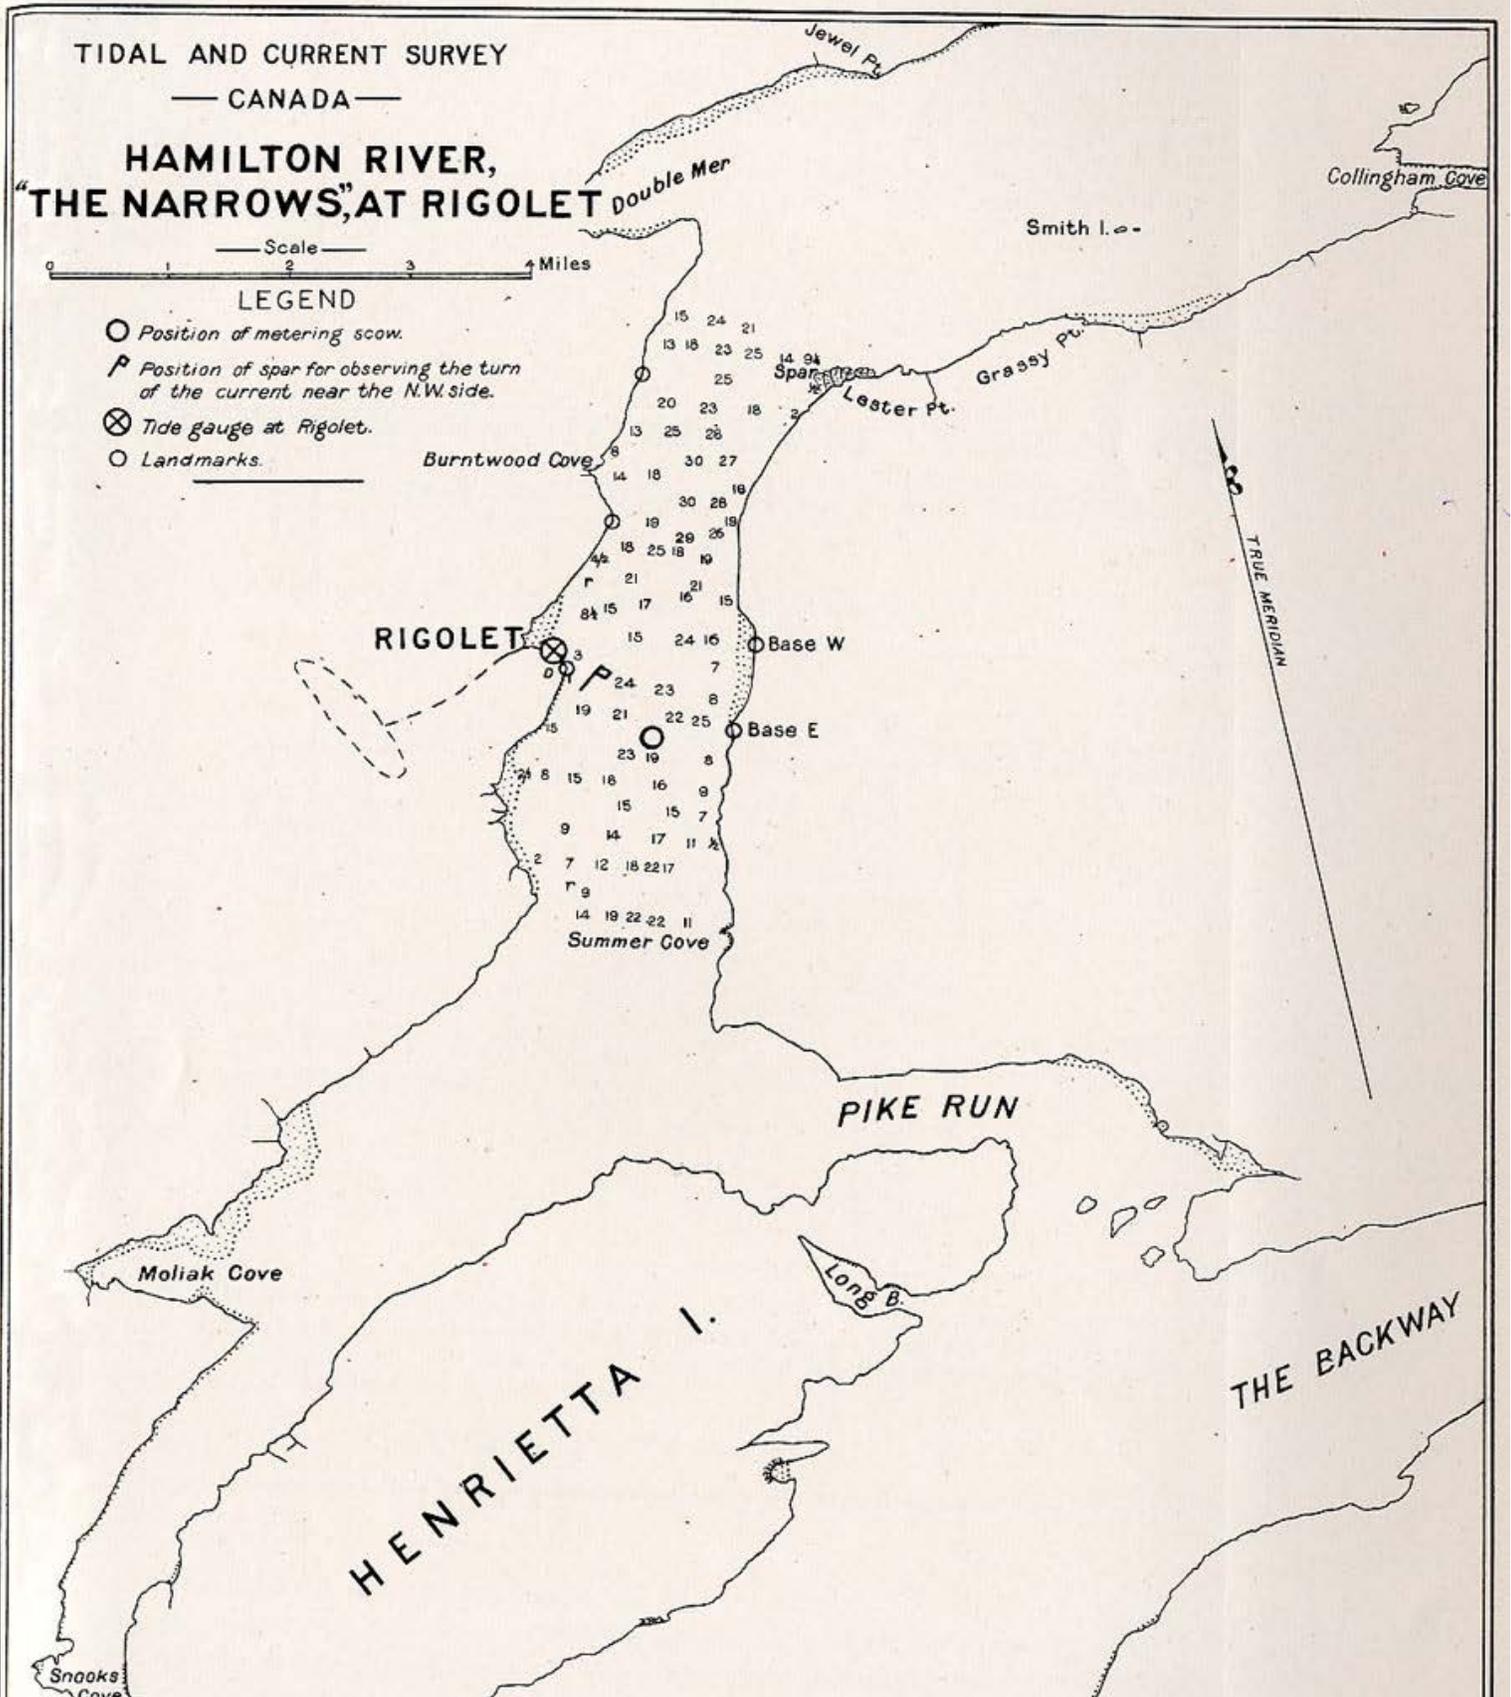

Much Larger Version 900x1184 pixels (220 kb)

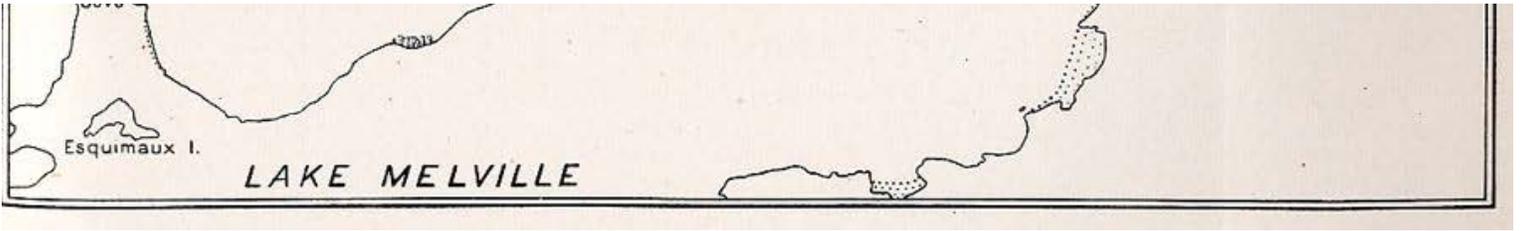

Back to p. 2358

Back

2358B

Back

No. 1011.
RIVER SLOPE ON OTTAWA AND ST. LAWRENCE RIVERS.

TO ESTIMATE THE SLOPE THROUGH RIGOLET HARBOUR.

Narrows :—1m wide, 4M long. Centre depth, 24 to 30 fathoms.

	High Stage (Elevation).	Low Stage (Elevation).	Total Fall. (Mean).	Distance in Miles.	Actual Slope per Mile.
	Feet.	Feet.	Feet.	Miles.	Feet.
OTTAWA RIVER.
Ottawa Harbour, to	{ 132.00	{ 127.00
Granville Canal: Lock No. 1	{ 145.22	{ 125.18
Difference	6.78	0.82	3.80	59 ^M	.06
Carillon to	{ 83.28	{ 68.28
Ste. Annee	{ 81.07	{ 68.27
Difference	2.21	0.01	1.11	15 ^M	.07
St. LAWRENCE RIVER.
Longueuil to	{ 34.48	{ 19.04
Sorel	{ 27.94	{ 12.72
Difference	6.54	6.32	6.43	41 ¹ / ₂ ^M	.15

Rigolet Narrows :—Assuming the slope to be half the amount of the St. Lawrence River, or the whole of the amount of the Ottawa, because of the very much greater depth, the total fall from Lake Melville to the open, through the narrow passages and the Narrows proper (distance 8 miles, would be

Total Fall.
Feet.
0.50

(per mile—0.07 + 8^M = 0.56 ft.)

Larger HTML Version (14 kb)

26 April, 1923.

The above is an estimate of the probable amount of “ slope ” in Rigolet Narrows, based on the nearest similar conditions elsewhere. It was made before the expeditions. of 1923 went to Hamilton Inlet, for observations and levelling.

W. BELL DAWSON,

Superintendent of Tidal Surveys.

No. 1011.
RIVER SLOPE ON OTTAWA AND ST. LAWRENCE RIVERS.
 TO ESTIMATE THE SLOPE THROUGH RIGOLET HARBOUR.

Narrows :—1^M wide, 4^M long. Centre depth, 24 to 30 fathoms.

	High Stage (Elevation).	Low Stage (Elevation).	Total Fall. (Mean).	Distance in Miles.	Actual Slope per Mile.
OTTAWA RIVER.	Feet.	Feet.	Feet.	Miles.	Feet.
Ottawa harbour to Granville Canal :	152.00	127.00
Lock No. 1	145.22	126.18
Difference	6.78	0.82	3.80	59 ^M	.06
Carillon to Ste. Annes.	83.28	68.28
	81.07	68.27
Difference	2.21	0.01	1.11	15 ^M	.07
ST. LAWRENCE RIVER.
Longueil to Sorel	34.48	19.04
	27.94	12.72
Difference	6.54	6.32	6.43	41½ ^M	15
Rigolet Narrows :—Assuming the slope to be half the amount of the St. Lawrence River, or the whole of the amount of the Ottawa, because of the very much greater depth, the total fall from Lake Melville to the open, through the narrow passages and the Narrows proper (distance 8 miles, would be					Total Fall.
					Feet. 0.50
(per mile—0.07 + 8 ^M = 0.56 ft.)

No. 1012.
TIDAL INFORMATION HAMILTON INLET, THE NARROWS, AND LAKE MELVILLE.
DIFFERENCES WITH HALIFAX TIDE TABLES.

(Compiled by the Tidal Survey Branch of the Department of the Naval Service.)*

Locality.	Differences.		Rise of Tide.		Range of Tide.
	For H. W.	For L. W.	Springs.	Noaps.	Springs.	Noaps.
	h. m.	h. m.	Feet.	Feet.	Feet.	Feet.
Indian Harbour	Sub. 1 20	Sub. 1 30	6½	4½	5·4	2·0
Broomfield I. .	" 1 00	" 1 10	6	4½	5·2	2·0
Rigolet . . .	" 0 50	" 0 48	5½	3¾	4·5	1·6
Caravalla Cove .	Add 1 55	Add 1 15	2¼	1½	1·6	0·6
Epinette Point .	" 3 35	" 3 10	2½	1½	1·7	0·6
Rabbit Island .	" 4 05	" 4 10	3	1½	2·2	0·8

* This table embodies the results of gauging operations carried out during a period of two full months in the summer of 1921.

*This table embodies the results of gauging operations carried out during a period of two full months in the summer of 1921.

Larger HTML Version (16 kb)

p. 2360

No. 1012.
TIDAL INFORMATION—HAMILTON INLET, THE NARROWS, AND LAKE MELVILLE.

DIFFERENCES WITH HALIFAX TIDE TABLES.

Compiled by the Tidal Survey Branch of the Department of Naval Service.)*

Locality.	Differences.		Rise of Tide.		Range of Tide.
	For H.W.	For L.W.	Springs.	Neaps.	Springs.	Neaps.
	h. m.	h. m.	Feet.	Feet.	Feet.	Feet.
Indian Harbour	Sub. 1 20	Sub. 1 30	6 ½	4 ¼	5.4	2.0
Broomfield I.	" 1 00	" 1 10	6	4 ¼	5.2	2.0
Rigolet.	" 0 50	" 0 48	5 ½	3 ¾	4.5	1.6
Caravalla Cove.	Add 1 55	Add 1 15	2 ¼	1 ½	1.6	0.6
Epinette Point.	" 3 35	" 3 10	2 ½	1 ½	1.7	0.6
Rabbit Island.	" 4 05	" 4 10	3	1 ½	2.2	0.8

* This table embodies the results of gauging operations carried out during a period of two full months in the summer of 1921.

Back to Main Page

No. 1013.
SALINITY DETERMINATION OF WATER SAMPLES
FROM LAKE MELVILLE AND VICINITY,
NORTHERN QUEBEC, 1921.*

Station.	Position.	Date.	Time.	Temperature.	Depth.	Salinity.
1 Lake Melville	1½ miles N.E. Mag. Epinette Point	Sept. 27th	3.00 P.M.	0-42° C.	55 fms.	25-29
2 " "	5½ miles N.E. Mag. Kinriakak Point	" 28th	7.15 A.M.	43° F.	Surface	10-27
2 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	0-6° C.	5 fms.	11-53
2 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	0-18° C.	83 "	20-60
3 " "	3 miles off Eskimo Paps. N. Mag.	" "	8.25 "	0-6° C.	Surface	11-33
3 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	2-77° C.	10 fms.	22-23
3 " "	3 miles off Eskimo Paps. N. Mag.	" "	" "	1-05° C.	108 "	28-01
4 " "	4 miles N.W. Mag. Etaganlet Point	" "	10.00 "	6-6° C.	Surface	13-98
4 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	3-2° C.	10 fms.	21-91
4 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	0-9° C.	50 "	27-65
4 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	1-13° C.	120 "	28-01
5 " "	½ mile S. Mag. from S.W. point Neveisik Island.	" "	2.00 P.M.	6-6° C.	Surface	14-58
5 " "	Ditto " " " "	" "	" "	4-18° C.	10 fms.	21-89
5 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	0-4° C.	50 "	27-52
5 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	1-1° C.	143 "	23-01
6 " "	1 mile W. Mag. Henrietta Island	Sept. 30th	8.30 A.M.	43-8° F.	Surface	15-27
6 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	4-78° C.	10 fms.	20-10
6 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	0-3° C.	50 "	27-68
6 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	0-72° C.	172 "	27-90

Locality and Place.	Date.	Time.	Tide.	Wind.	Depth.	Salinity.
A. Carter Basin, Kenemich River, 150 feet off wharf.	July 20	9.15 P.M.	H.W. Springs	Southerly	3½ fms.	4-25
A. Carter Basin, Kenemich River, 200 feet off wharf.	July 21	7.35 P.M.	L.W. starting to rise	West (2)	3½ fms.	3-55
A. Carter Basin, Kenemich River, off wharf shed.	Aug. 5	11.30 A.M.	H.W. Springs	S.W. (5)	2½ fms.	3-84
B. Carter Basin, Kenemich River, 1 mile off mill bldg.	July 21	8.00 P.M.	L.W.S. rising	West (2)	13 feet	2-90
B. Carter Basin, Kenemich River, 1 mile outside from wharf.	Aug. 5	11.30 A.M.	H.W. Springs	S.W. (5)	2½ fms.	3-98
C. Kenemich River, at mouth of river	Aug. 5	12.30 P.M.	H.W. Springs	S.W. (5)	6 feet	Fresh
D. Hamilton River, entrance to river	Aug. 4	2.53 P.M.	H.W. Springs	North (4)	4 fms.	"
E. Hamilton River, Mud Lake entrance 1 mile up from mouth.	Aug. 4	3.09 P.M.	H.W.S. ebbing	North (4)	15 feet	"
F. Northwest River about 1½ miles up river from mouth.	Sept. 13	1.45 P.M.	Low tide nearly	N.E. (3)	7 feet	"
G. Northwest River, opposite H.B. Company's wharf.	Sept. 13	2.45 P.M.	Low tide just past	N.E. (2)	13 feet	"
G. Northwest River, opposite H.B. Company's wharf.	Sept. 15	1.00 P.M.	2 hours before low water	N.W. (3)	Surface	"
H. Rapids at the foot of Grand Lake	Sept. 15	3.00 P.M.	Low water	N.W. (2)	4 fms.	"

*This table gives in tabular form the result of salinity tests in Lake Melville made by the Canadian Hydrographic and Tidal Survey of Canada during the summer of 1921.

Larger HTML Version (25 kb)

p. 2361

No. 1013.

SALINITY DETERMINATION OF WATER SAMPLES FROM LAKE MELVILLE AND VICINITY, NORTHERN QUEBEC, 1921.

Station.	Position.	Date.	Time.	Temperature.	Depth.	Salinity.
1 Lake Melville	1½ miles N.E. Mag. Epinette Point	Sept. 27th	3.00 P.M.	0.42°C.	88 fms.	26.29
2 " "	5½ miles N.E. Mag. Kinriakak Point	" 28th	7.15 A.M.	43° F.	Surface	10.57
2 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	6.6° C.	5 fms.	11.53
2 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	0.18° C.	33 "	26.60
3 " "	3 miles off Eskimo Paps. N. Mag.	" "	8.25 "	6.6° C.	Surface	11.33
3 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	2.77° C.	10 fms	22.23
3 " "	3 miles off Eskimo Paps. N. Mag.	" "	" "	1.05° C.	103 "	28.01
4 " "	4 miles N.W. Mag. Etagaulet Point	" "	10.00 "	6.6° C.	Surface	13.98
4 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	3.2° C.	10 fms.	21.91
4 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	0.9° C.	50 "	27.68
4 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	1.13° C.	120 "	28.01
5 " "	¾ mile S. Mag. from S.W. point Neveisik Island.	" "	2.00 P.M.	6.6° C.	Surface	14.58
5 " "	Ditto.	" "	" "	4.18° C.	10 fms.	21.89
5 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	0.4° C.	50 "	27.52
5 " "	" " " "	" "	" "	1.1° C.	143 "	28.01
6 " "	1 mile W. Mag. Henrietta Island	Sept. 30th	8.30 A.M.	43.8° F.	Surface	15.57

6	”	”	”	”	”	”	”	”	”	4.78° C.	10 fms.	20.10
6	”	”	”	”	”	”	”	”	”	0.3° C.	50 ”	27.68
6	”	”	”	”	”	”	”	”	”	0.72° C.	172 ”	27.90

	Locality and Place.	Date.	Time.	Tide.	Wind.	Depth.	Salinity.
A.	Carter Basin, Kenemich River, 150 feet off wharf	July 20	9.15 P.M.	H.W. Springs	Southerly	3½ fms.	4.25
A.	Carter Basin, Kenemich River, 200 feet off wharf	July 21	7.35 P.M.	L.W. starting to rise	West (2)	3¼ fms.	3.55
A.	Carter Basin, Kenemich River, off wharf shed	Aug. 5	11.30 A.M.	H.W. Springs	S.W. (5)	2½ fms.	3.84
B.	Carter Basin, Kenemich River, 1 mile off mill bldgs.	July 21	8.00 P.M.	L.W.S. rising	West (2)	13 feet	2.90
B.	Carter Basin, Kenemich River, 1 mile outside from warf.	Aug. 5	11.30 A.M.	H.W. Springs	S.W. (5)	2½ fms.	3.98
C.	Kenemich River, at mouth of river	Aug. 5	12.30 P.M.	H.W. Springs	S.W (5)	6 feet.	Fresh
D.	Hamilton River, entrance to river	Aug. 4	2.58 P.M.	H.W. Springs	North (4)	4 fms.	”
E.	Hamilton River, Mud Lake entrance 1 mile up from mouth.	Aug. 4	3.09 P.M.	H.W.S. ebbing	North (4)	15 feet	”
F.	Northwest River about 1½ miles up river from mouth.	Sept. 13	1.45 P.M.	Low tide nearly	N.E. (3)	7 feet	”
G.	Northwest River, opposite H.B. Company's wharf.	Sept. 13	2.45 P.M.	Low tide just past	N.E. (2)	12 feet	”

G.	Northwest River, opposite H.B. Company's wharf.	Sept. 15	1.00 P.M.	2 hours before low water	N.W. (3)	Surface	”
H.	Rapids at the foot of Grand Lake	Sept. 15	3.00 P.M.	Low water	N.W. (2)	4 fms.	”

* This table gives in tabular form the results of salinity tests in Lake Melville made by the Canadian Hydrographic and Tidal Survey of Canada during the summer of 1921.

Back to Main Page

	Locality and Place.	Date.	Time.	Tide.	Wind.	Depth.	Salinity.
A.	Carter Basin, Kenemich River, 150 feet off wharf	July 20	9.15 P.M.	H.W. Springs	Southerly	3½ fms.	4.25
A.	Carter Basin, Kenemich River, 200 feet off wharf	July 21	7.85 P.M.	L.W. starting to rise	West (2)	3¼ fms.	3.55
A.	Carter Basin, Kenemich River, off wharf shed	Aug. 5	11.30 A.M.	H.W. Springs	S.W. (5)	2½ fms.	3.84
B.	Carter Basin, Kenemich River, 1 mile off mill bldgs.	July 21	8.00 P.M.	L.W.S. rising	West (2)	13 feet	2.90
B.	Carter Basin, Kenemich River, 1 mile outside from warf.	Aug. 5	11.30 A.M.	H.W. Springs	S.W. (5)	2½ fms.	3.98
C.	Kenemich River, at mouth of river	Aug. 5	12.30 P.M.	H.W. Springs	S.W (5)	6 feet.	Fresh
D.	Hamilton River, entrance to river	Aug. 4	2.58 P.M.	H.W. Springs	North (4)	4 fms.	''
E.	Hamilton River, Mud Lake entrance 1 mile up from mouth.	Aug. 4	3.09 P.M.	H.W.S. ebbing	North (4)	15 feet	''
F.	Northwest River about 1½ miles up river from mouth.	Sept. 13	1.45 P.M.	Low tide nearly	N.E. (3)	7 feet	''
G.	Northwest River, opposite H.B. Company's	Sept. 13	2.45 P.M.	Low tide just past	N.E. (2)	12 feet	'' wharf.

G.	Northwest River, opposite H.B. Company's wharf.	Sept. 15	1.00 P.M.	2 hours before low water	N.W. (3)	Surface	”
H.	Rapids at the foot of Grand Lake	Sept. 15	3.00 P.M.	Low water	N.W. (2)	4 fms.	”

Back to Main Page

[1924.]

No. 1014.

EXTRACTS FROM REPORT ON “GEOGRAPHY AND GEOLOGY OF LAKE MELVILLE DISTRICT, LABRADOR PENINSULA.”

BY DR. E. M. KINDLE, OF THE GEOLOGICAL SURVEY OF CANADA.
(Ottawa, 1924 : Memoir 141, No. 120, Geol. Ser.)

INTRODUCTION.

The great peninsula which lies between Hudson bay and the Atlantic ocean has long been known as Labrador peninsula. The name Labrador, signifying as it does in this connexion one of the great natural physical divisions of the continent, has a definite meaning. The precise significance of the name as used in this way is in sharp contrast with the vague meaning which attaches to “ the coast of Labrador ” as the name of a political sub-division of the Labrador peninsula subject to the authority of Newfoundland. No agreement has ever been reached between the Canadian and Newfoundland governments regarding the western boundary of Newfoundland Labrador. Some maps showing this western boundary of “ the coast of Labrador,” as claimed by Newfoundland,¹ place it in the Hamilton River basin about 350 miles west of the boundary claimed by Canada² in Hamilton inlet.

Among geographers the impression has been rather general that only the eastern seashore of Labrador peninsula is under the jurisdiction of Newfoundland, and the region to the west of it under the control of Canada. It is, therefore, a matter of considerable importance and some complexity to ascertain precisely how far inland the seashore extends along the waterways known as Hamilton inlet, The Narrows, and Lake Melville. Careful attention was given during the progress of the field work to the biological and geological data which appear to have a bearing on this problem, both on account of their application to a question of political geography and their general scientific interest. The highly interesting biological problems of distribution, which every river with a gradually expanding estuary presents in the modification of the marine and terrestrial forms of life associated with it as the transition is made from typical marine to brackish and freshwater conditions, are found here. But they are modified and complicated by the interpolation of a large lake between the sea and the drainage system of a considerable part of eastern

¹ Century “ Atlas of the World.” Edition of 1899, No. 59.

² Rand McNally Co.'s “ Indexed Atlas of the World,” vol. II, p. 317. The boundary shown on this map is assumed to be only approximately the same as that claimed by Canada.

Labrador. As a result of this unusual feature of the drainage the region is a peculiarly inviting one in which to study the influence of salinity in controlling the distribution of plants and animals and even the indigenous human races of the region the—Indian and Eskimo.

* * * *

During the field work the writer traversed the north and south shores of Lake Melville. The Backway and Double Mer were traversed, and some of the streams entering Lake Melville ascended to the head of canoe navigation. Hamilton river was ascended to Muskrat falls. The entire length of Grand lake was traversed, and Naskaupi river, which enters this lake near its head, was ascended to the junction with the Red. A short canoe trip was made up the latter stream. The general geographic relations of the region examined are indicated on Figure 1. The areal relations of the formations recognized in the course of the writer's work, and the earlier work of Low in the interior and Packard on the coast are shown on Figure 4.

Numerous soundings and hydrometer readings were taken, and dredging was done at a number of points.

A list of plants collected by Mr. R. H. Wetmore, botanist of the expedition, representing the flora of the district, is included in this paper.

* * * *

Lakes and Sea-Connected Valleys.—The interior of Labrador peninsula “ is covered with myriads of lakes that occupy at a moderate estimate at least one-quarter of the total area.”^s Nearly all these are shallow lakes, the product of glacial damming, or rock basins. A few, however, are more than 400 feet deep, like lake Winikapau, an expansion of Hamilton river, 100 miles west of lake Melville. Small lakes are numerous in Lake Melville region ; nearly every brook flows into or out of one.

The very deep, fiord-like lakes connected with or near Hamilton inlet constitute one of the most prominent geographical features (Plate I and Figure 4). There are four of these deep waterways known respectively as Grand lake, lake Melville, The Backway, and Double Mer (Figure 4). All the rivers and streams of the region flow through or empty into these deep, narrow waterways. Grand lake, which is entirely fresh, has a depth of 90 fathoms, and a length of about 40 miles. Lake Melville, into which Grand lake empties, is a tidal lake and shows a maximum depth of 160 fathoms. The Backway, at least 80 fathoms deep, is a narrow arm connected with the eastern end of lake Melville. Double Mer approaches more closely than the others the fiord type (See Plate I), but the maximum depth found is only 46 fathoms.

The great depth of lake Melville allies it on the one hand with the fiords of Norway and on the other with the deep inland lakes and rivers of Quebec. The lake extends nearly 1,000 feet below sea-level and with its steep mountain ¹ Low, A.P., "Report on Explorations in the Labrador Peninsula along the East Nain, Koksoak Hamilton, Manicouagan, and Portions of Other Rivers," Geol. Surv., Can., Ann. Rept., vol. 8, p. 23 L, 1895.

p. 2365

DRAINAGE DEVELOPMENT.

The drainage system of this region, as it existed at the close of the Tertiary period, was the result of subaerial erosion directed or controlled by the structural features of the district. Nearly all the bolder and more fundamental features of the present drainage system probably developed during the Tertiary period. The old valleys of Tertiary date were, however, profoundly modified by the work of the ice during the Glacial period and by marine deposits still later. Re-elevation has given, as the product of this complex threefold ancestry, the present drainage system.

The valley of the Hamilton and its wide expansion, lake Melville, is the dominant or trunk valley of the region. The valleys that join the northwest and southwest sides of this great valley are of surprisingly contrasted types. On the northwest side occur wide, mature valleys like Grand Lake-Naskaupi valley, whereas the hanging valley descending the steep slopes by a series of cascades is the common type on the southeast side. The Kenamu, the largest southern tributary, enters Hamilton valley through a deep gorge. Double Mer, the only large valley outletting to the sea independently of the Hamilton system, duplicates in a smaller way on its northern and southern sides the contrasted types of valley shown by the two sides of lake Melville. Its streams, however, except the one at its head, are of rather insignificant size.

The explanation of these and some other features of the drainage is to be found in structural features of Pre-Tertiary origin. The steep, scarp-like, northwest face of Mealy Mountain highland and the equally steep mountain face which borders much of the south side of Double Mer are considered to be fault scarps which are probably of Pre-Tertiary age. The lowlands cut in the sandstone which floors the north sides of both of these valleys are terminated on the north by abruptly rising mountains of Precambrian rocks. The contact between these Precambrian mountains and the sandstone in both cases is believed to be a fault-plane. The wider parts of both Double Mer and Lake Melville basins are believed to be defined by fault-planes which have dropped down two large blocks (See Figure 5 A and C). On the relatively soft Palæozoic beds of these younger rocks have been cut the Double Mer and Lake Melville lowlands which are considered to be limited in part at least by fault-planes, as indicated in Figure 5 A and C. The effect of the downfaulting of these blocks was to bring in contact two strongly contrasted types of rock—the Double Mer sandstone and the Precambrian schists. Differential erosion in Tertiary and earlier times developed on these sandstones and other superposed and probably softer beds now entirely vanished, the relatively wide valleys which came in late Quaternary times to be occupied by lake Melville and Double Mer waterways.

In the bed of lake Melville the soundings made by the hydrographic engineers show clearly the location of three distinct valleys which occupied the broad western half of this basin in Preglacial time. Two of the three depressions representing them (Figure 5 A) can be followed by the soundings to the mouths of Mulligan and Sebaskachu rivers. The third, which is near the south side of the lake, corresponds to the original valley of Hamilton river. These three old Preglacial valleys which the lake soundings disclose in the widest part of the lake draw together in a seaward direction after the usual style of river valleys, and where the lake grows narrower, east of Long point, unite into a single valley a few miles west of St. John island. This represents the old Preglacial trunk stream of Hamilton river. A cross-section of this part of the lake is shown in Figure 5 B.

p. 2366

The three valleys recognizable in the soundings of lake Melville referred to above may be more precisely described as modified Preglacial valleys. Details of these valleys have been changed by lake deposits since, and by ice erosion before, the departure of the glacial ice-cap. For long periods during the early and late stages of the glacial epoch, valley glaciers were undoubtedly active in deepening these three valleys as their separate ice streams flowed into the main trunk valley. While Lake Melville valley was completely ice filled, differential deepening of these individual valleys probably ceased and differential deepening probably then occurred chiefly at certain points in the main valley.

The valley occupied by Grand lake and the lower part of Naskaupi river is, after that of Hamilton river, the largest valley in the region, and trends nearly at right angles to Hamilton River and Lake Melville valley. Its direction corresponds in a general way with the strike of the gneissic rocks which the valley traverses. The northwesterly strike and south-westerly dip of the rocks appear very clearly to have controlled the trend of Grand Lake. All the promontories on the west side of the lake present distinctly steeper profiles than the slopes of those on the opposite side, as would be expected in such a strike valley.

The major features of the drainage system of this region, which were developed in Preglacial time as outlined above, were modified in many details by the covering of the Labrador ice-sheet. During the period when the region was covered by an ice-sheet and in the intervals between possible withdrawals and re-advances of the great ice-sheet of eastern North America, many modifications and minor changes occurred in that valley. These changes in the old Tertiary drainage system included the local deepening of valleys by glacial scour and the partial filling of valleys with glacial debris elsewhere. This cut-and-fill process, which the great valley glaciers continued for long periods both before and after maximum glaciation, transformed, in the interior, the normal rivers of Tertiary time into streams with numerous lake-like expansions. Other profound modifications of the valleys were produced during Pleistocene time when the whole region was depressed about 300 feet. It was at this time that the great system of sand-terraces and marine and freshwater clays was added to the valleys.

In spite of the extensive character of the changes locally developed in the drainage system which Tertiary and earlier erosion has impressed on the region, the wide, mature valleys of preglacial origin are easily distinguished as to age from the narrow V-shaped gorge of Kenamu river, which has been developed in Quaternary time. There can be no doubt that Naskaupi and Hamilton valleys within the limits of the accompanying map (Figure 4) are preglacial valleys and that Grand Lake and Lake Melville basins are parts of the old valleys of these two major rivers and their tributaries. The Naskaupi flows through a broad, mature valley for 18 or 20 miles above its mouth, which is as far as the writer traversed it. This old valley, and the valley formed by the junction of Susan and Beaver rivers at the western end of Grand lake, unite near the upper end of Grand lake, forming Grand Lake valley, which is comparable in width with Naskaupi valley and represents its continuation. The preglacial Naskaupi river joined the Hamilton in late Tertiary time somewhere near Goose bay. These two, combined probably with the Kenamu, whose Pre-Quaternary valley is unknown, formed the preglacial Hamilton. This stream, which was the main trunk river of eastern Labrador, flowed through the wide, deep valley of Lake Melville basin and reached the sea via The Backway valley. The inference that the preglacial Hamilton flowed seawards by The Backway instead of by The Narrows, as it now does, is based on the much greater width and depth of The Backway, and the fact that the land is very low between the seashore and the eastern end of The Backway. The Narrows was probably developed either in late Tertiary time or during some stage of the Glacial period as a through valley connecting Double Mer and Hamilton valleys just as they are connected by a through valley which joins the upper end of Double Mer and Mulligan bay (See Figure 4). When the final retreat of great valley glaciers which marked the late stages of glaciation began it may be presumed that the high mountains southwest of The Backway, together with the mountain ridge immediately north of the western half of it, supplied an abundance of glacial ice to the terminal end of Hamilton valley, which kept it blocked for a long period after the ice-sheet had vanished from much of the adjacent parts of the valley. This situation would have compelled the restored river to seek a new outlet to the sea by any low divide or through any valley which it found free of ice. It is the writer's opinion that a pre-existing valley, corresponding in position with the present Narrows and the waterways on the northern and southern sides of Henrietta island, was appropriated by Hamilton river while the original terminal section of the stream was ice-dammed. When the ice finally withdrew from The Backway its outlet was blocked with glacial debris, and the new channel had been sufficiently deepened to prevent the river from resuming its old outlet to the sea.

When Hamilton river returned to its old channel after the valley glaciers had finally disappeared it was not the graded channel it had left at the beginning of the Ice age, but a basin irregularly deepened and widened by the scouring work of the ice (See Figures 4 and 5 A and B). Near Henrietta island this basin has a depth of nearly 1,000 feet. It seems most probable that much of this great depth represents glacial overdeepening. If it represented the original depth of the old Preglacial Hamilton valley cut when the land stood 1,000 feet higher than at present, comparable soundings should be found in the broad, shallow sea zone in Hamilton inlet, or south of it. But

p. 2368

no depths approaching this have been found either here or elsewhere between the coast-line and the margin of the continental shelf. The navigation sheet shows that the prevailing depths of the sea within 2 miles of the shore range as a rule between 20 and 50 fathoms. Along the axis of lake Melville and Grand lake, for a distance of 125 miles, soundings are found ranging from 80 to 160 fathoms. Since no comparable depths are known outside the shallow sill of The Narrows, which separates Lake Melville and Grand Lake basins from the sea, the great depths of these waterways appear to be referable mainly to over-deepening by glacial erosion.

This glacial erosion has doubtless been most intense and profound in those parts of the valley where structural features have resulted in valley floors of relatively soft or easily eroded rocks. In Double Mer and Lake Melville basins the Double Mer sandstone and possibly other softer and now completely removed formations have supplied this factor leading to overdeepening. The convergence of valley ice streams at certain angles may have added locally to their erosive power.

The Labrador coast has all the characteristics of a drowned shore-line. The islands forming a belt nearly 50 miles wide at Hamilton inlet and rising from a shallow sea, and the numerous indentations of the coast-line represent the subsidence of an old land surface which left only the higher points projecting as islands. This subsidence truncated the seaward ends of many rivers. The converging trends of Sandwich Bay, The Backway, and the south shore of Hamilton inlet suggest that the streams which these several shore-lines represented previous to the depression of the coast may have united into a single stream somewhere east of Stag islands. The late Pleistocene re-elevation of the coast, amounting to a little more than 300 feet, has caused a retreat of the valley arms of the sea from their earlier extension far up Hamilton and Naskaupi valleys. If there should be a further coastal elevation of 200 feet or more, the mouth of the Hamilton will again approximate its preglacial location somewhere in the eastern part of Hamilton inlet or farther south.

CLIMATE.

The coastal strip and the interior of Labrador present surprising climatic contrasts, resulting chiefly from the influence of the Labrador current which carries an Arctic climate southward along the entire eastern coast of Labrador. In passing through the strait of Belle Isle in July a stream of floating ice and bergs is met with, which increases in volume as one proceeds up the coast (Plate IV B). Throughout most of July the vast ice fields move steadily southward under the influence of the Labrador current, dispensing a polar temperature over the western side of Davis bay and the adjacent coast. The summer climate on the Labrador coast is notably colder than that of the west coast of Greenland even, according to Professor Tarr.¹ This results

¹ Tarr, R. S., "Difference in the Climate of the Greenland and American Sides of Davis and Baffin's Bay." Am. Jour. Sci., vol. III, pp. 315-320, 1897.
p. 2369

from a northward-moving current on the Greenland side and a polar current on the Labrador side of Davis bay.

The sub-Arctic climate which the southward-moving ice fields bring as far south as the strait of Belle Isle extends only a short distance inland from the coast. In going inland by way of The Narrows and lake Melville one finds that there are two Labrador climates. One is a sub-Arctic climate which characterizes a narrow coastal zone of islands and sea-facing mainland called "the Labrador" by the cod fisherman. This strand and island zone is chilled by ice-floes and is nearly or quite treeless. Inside this seashore strip is the heavily forested interior Labrador, where a summer climate replaces the ice-chilled coastal climate and forests cover the valleys and much of the mountains.

Holme concisely summed up the great contrast between the interior and coastal climate in the statement that "A journey of 20 or 30 miles in summertime up the country from the sea is like passing from winter to summer."¹

Small berg fragments and ice-cakes were seen in Hamilton inlet, 18 miles west of Indian Harbour, on August 20, 1921, but the floe-ice had all disappeared before that date. No floe-ice was seen during the summer at or near Rigolet.

Around the western end of lake Melville, potatoes, rhubarb, and other hardy vegetables do well. Mr. Leroy Bowes found that potatoes had been killed by frost before September 10 at Mud Lake on lower Hamilton river. Midsummer frosts are reported to occur at Northwest River, about one year in four or five.

* * * *

In the summer of 1921 there was no snow on the mountains about lake Melville during July and August, except very small patches at elevations above 2,000 feet. On the outer islands near Indian Harbour a few small patches of snow still persisted near sea-level as late as the last week in August. It is reported that some snow is seen in midsummer during exceptional seasons at Rigolet.

* * * *

PLANT GEOGRAPHY.

Contrasts between the Coastal and Interior Floras. The most conspicuous feature in the plant geography of the region is the sharp contrast between the flora of the interior and the flora of the seashore. The general absence of forest trees from the flora of the seacoast and their abundance in the interior, cannot escape the notice of even the most superficial observer. Randle F. Holme has stated clearly the impression which this contrast makes on the visitor.² “ The Arctic current, with its icebergs and icy waters, freezes the coast, but has no effect on the inland. At a distance of not more than

¹“ A Journey in the Interior of Labrador, July to October, 1887,” Roy. Geog. Soc., vol. X, p. 189, 1888.

²Proc. Roy. Geog. Soc., vol. X, p. 189, 1888.

p. 2370

12 miles from the coast there commences a luxuriant forest- growth, which clothes the whole of the country, with the exception of a few spots, chiefly towards the north, called 'barrens.' These barrens are what we should call moors, and are the homes of vast herds of caribou. The climate a few miles inland is totally different from that on the coast.” The nature of these contrasts is suggested by Plates IV and V.

A great number of plants other than trees which are abundant inland are absent from the seashore flora. The relative poverty of the seacoast flora, as represented by the island flora near Indian Harbour, is clearly illustrated in the following list of the plants of the region in which the species found respectively in the Interior and Island floras are checked in parallel columns.

Provisional List of Plants Found in Lake Melville and Hamilton Inlet District.¹

	Interior or mainland flora	Island flora
	Lake Melville basin and Double Mer	Indian Harbour
Thelypteris Phegopteris (L.) Slosson	x
T. Dryopteris (L.) Slosson	x
T. spinulosa (O. F. Muell.) Nieuwl.	x
Athyrium angustum (Willd.) Presl.	x
Osmunda Claytoniana L.	x
Equisetum sylvaticum L., var. pauciramosum Mille	x
E. palustre L.	x
Lycopodium annotinum L.	x
L. annotinum L., var. acrifolium Fernald	x
L. annotinum L., var. puugens (La Pylsie) Desv	x
L. alpinum L.	x
L. obscurum L.	x
L. complanatum L.	x
Abies balsamea (L.) Mill	x
Juniperus communis L., var. montana Ait	x
Sparanium angustifolium Michx	x
Potamogeton heterophyllus Schreb., var. graminifolius (Fries) Morong	x
Triglochin maritima L.	x
Hierochloa alpina (Sw.) R. and S.	x
Phleum pratense L.	x
P. alpinum L.	x	x
Agrostis hyemalis (Walt.) BSP.	x

¹Nomenclature and numbers are as found in Gray's “ New Manual of Botany,” seventh edition by Robinson and Fernald ; names not in this manual are those validated in recent revisions, chiefly by Prof. Fernald.

The plants in this list were collected by R. H. Wetmore. Determinations were made by R. H. Wetmore under directions of Prof. M. L. Fernald of Harvard University.

See also checklist of plants of the region, by R. H. Wetmore “Plants of the Hamilton Inlet and Lake Melville Region, Labrador,” Rhodora, vol. 25, Jan. 1923, pp. 4-12.

Provisional List of Plants Found in Lake Melville and Hamilton Inlet District—Continued

	Interior or mainland flora	Island flora
	Lake Melville basin and Double Mer	Indian Harbour
A. alba L., var. vulgaris (With.) Thurb.	x
Calamagrostis canadensis (Michx.) Beauv., var. Langsdorfi (Link) Inman	x
C. neglecta (Ehrh.) Gaertner, Meyer, and Scherbius	x
Cinna latifolia (Trev.) Griseb.	x
Deschampsia flexuosa (L.) Trin., var. montana (L.) Parl.	x
Poa emmonsii J. S. Presl.	x
P. pratensis L.	x
Glyceria nervata (Willd.) Trin., var. stricta Scribn.	x
G. borealis (Nash) Batchelder	x
Festuca rubra L.	x
Hordeum jubatum L.	x
Elymus arenarius L., var. villosus E. Meyer	x	x
Eleocharis palustris (L.) R. and S.	x
E. acicularis (L.) R. and S.	x
Scirpus caespitosus L. var. callosus Bigel	x
S. rubrotinctus Fernald	x
S. atrocinctus Fernald, var. brachypodus Fernald	x
Eriophorum Chamissonis C. A. Meyer	x
E. callitrix Cham	x	x
E. gracile Roth	x
E. angustifolium Roth	x	x
E. Scheuchzeri Hoppe		x
Carex protracta Mackenzie (Carex tribuloides Wahlenb. var. reducta Bailey)	x
C. echinata Murr. var. angustata (Carey) Bailey	x
C. canescens L.	x
C. brunneocens Poir	x
C. Macloviana D'Urv	x
C. glareosa Wahlenb. var. ampigosa Fernald	x
C. stipata Muhl	x
C. maritima O. F. Mueller	x
C. solida Wahlenb. var. antegutensis (Fries) Almq.	x
C. lenticularis Michx.	x
C. rigida Good	x
C. rariflora Smith	x
C. missilis Michx.	x
C. vesicaria L.	x
C. rostrata Stokes	x
Juncus trifidus , L.		x
J. balticus Willd., var. littoralis Engelm	x
J. filiformis L.	x
J. alpinus Vill., var. insignis Fries	x
Luzula spicata (L.) DC.		x
Clintonia borealis (Ait.) Raf.	x
Smilacina trifolia (L.) Desf.	x

Larger HTML Version (22 kb)

*Provisional List of Plants Found in Lake Melville and Hamilton Inlet District.*¹

—	Interior or mainland flora	Island flora
	Lake Melville basin and Double Mer	Indian Harbour
Thelypteris Phegopteris (L.) Slosson	x
T. Dryopteris (L.) Slosson	x
T. spinulosa (O.F. Muell.) Nieuwl.	x
Athyrium angustum (Willd.) Presl.	x
Osmunda Claytoniana L	x
Equisetum sylvaticum L., var. pauciramosum Milde	x
E. palustre L.	x
Lycopodium annotinum L	x
L. annotinum L., var. acrifolium Fernald	x
L. annotinum L., var. pungens (La Pylaie) Desv	x
L. alpinum L	x
L. obscurum L	x
L. complanatum L	x
Abies balsamea (L.) Mill	x
Juniperus communis L., var. montana Ait	x
Sparganium angustifolium Michx	x
Potamogeton heterophyllus Schreb., var. graminifolius (Fries) Morong	x
Triglochin maritima L.	x
Hierochloë alpina (Sw.) R. and S.	x
Phleum pratense L.	x
P. alpinum L.	x
Agrostis hyemalis (Walt.) BSP.	x

¹ Nomenclature and numbers are as found in Gray's "New Manual of Botany," seventh edition, by Robinson and Fernald; names not in this manual are those validated in recent revisions, chiefly by Prof. Fernald.

The plants in this list were collected by R. H. Wetmore. Determinations were made by R. H. Wetmore under direction of Prof. M. L. Fernald, of Harvard University.

See also checklist of plants of the region, by R. H. Wetmore “ Plants of the Hamilton Inlet and Lake Melville REgion, Labrador,” Rhodora, vol. 25, Jan. 1923, pp. 4-12.

Back to Main Page

Provisional List of Plants Found in Lake Melville and Hamilton Inlet District—Continued

—	Interior or mainland flora	Island flora
	Lake Melville basin and Double Mer	Indian Harbour
A. alba L., var. vulgaris (With.) Thurb.	x
Calamagrostis canadensis (Michx.) Beauv., var. Langsdorfii (Link) Inman	x
C. neglecta (Ehrh) Gaertner, Meyer, and Scherbius	x
Cinna lotifolia (Trev.) Griseb.	x
Deschampsia flexuosa (L.) Trin., var. montana (L.) Parl.	x
Poa eminens J.S. Presl.	x
P. pratensis L.	x
Glyceria nervata (Willd.) Trin., var. stricta Scribn.	x
G. borealis (Nash) Batchelder	x
Festuca rubra L.	x
Hordeum jubatum L.	x
Elymus arenarius L. var. villosus E. Meyer	x	x
Eleocharis palustris (L.) R. and S.	x
E. acicularis R. and S.	x
Scirpus caespitosus L. var. callosus Bigel	x
S. rubrotinctus Fernald	x
S. atrocinctus Fernald, var. brachypodus Fernald	x
Eriophorum Chamissonis C.A. Meyer	x
E. callitrix Cham	x	x
E. gracile Roth	x
E. angustifolium Roth	x	x
E. Scheuchzeri Hoppe	x

Carex projecta Mackenzie (Carex tribuloides Wahlenb. var. reducta Bailey)	X
C. echinata Murr. var. angustata (Carey) Bailey	X
C. canescens L.	X
C. brunnescens Poir	X
C. Macloviana D'Urv	X
C. glareosa Wahlenb, var. amphigena Fernald	X
C. stipata Muhl.	X
C. maritima O. F. Mueller	X
C. salina Wahlenb, var. kattogatensis (Fries) Almq.	X
C. lenticularis Michx.	X
C. rigida Good	X
C. rariflora Smith	X
C. miliaris Michx.	X
C. vesicaria L.	X
C. rostrata Stokes	X
Juncus trifidus , L.	X
J. balticus Willd., var., littoralis Engelm	X
J. filiformis L.	X
J. alpinus Vill., var. insignis Fries	X
Luzula spicata (L.) DC.	X
Clintonia borealis (Ait.) Raf.	X
Smilacina trifolia (L.) Desf.	X

Back to Main Page

Provisional List of Plants Found in lake Melville and Hamilton Inlet District—Continued.

	Interior or mainland flora	Island flora
	Lake Melville basin and Double Mer	Indian Harbour
Maianthemum canadense Desf.	x
Streptopus amplexifolius (L.) DC.	x
Iris setosa Pall., var., canadensis Foster	x	x
Sisyrinchium angustifolium Mill	x
Habenaria hyperborea (L.) R. Br.	x
H. dilatata (Pursh) Gray	x
Spiranthes Romanzoffiana Cham.	x
Goodyera repens (L.) R. Br., var., ophioides (Fernald)	x
Listera cordata (L.) R.B.	x
Salix lucida , Muhl.	x
S. lucida Muhl., var. intonsa Fernald	x
S. planifolia Pursh.	x
S. angiorum Cham.	x
Populus tremuloides Michx.	x
Myrica Gale L.	x
Betula glandulosa Michx.	x	x
B. microphylla Bunge	x
Alnus crispa (Ait.) Pursh	x
Comandra livida Richards	x
Rumex occidentalis Wats.	x
R. acetosella L.	x
Polygonum aviculare L.	x
P. viviparum L.	x	x
Chenopodium album L.	x
Arenaria lateriflora L.	x
A. peploides L.	x
A. groenlandica (Retz.) Spreng.	x
Stellaria borealis Bigel.	x
S. crassifolia Ehrh.	x
S. humifusa Rottb.	x
S. longipes Goldie, var. laeta (Richards.) Wats.	x
S. media (L.) Cyrill.	x
Cerastium arvense L.	x
C. alpinum L., var. lanatum Hegetschw.	x
Silene acaulis L., var. exscapa (All.) DC.	x
Ranunculus reptans L.	x
R. pennsylvanicus L. f.	x
R. acris L.	x
R. hyperboreus Rottb.	x
R. lapponicus L.	x
Thalictrum polypnagum Muhl.	x
Coptis trifolia (L.) Salisb.	x
Actaea rubra (Ait.) Willd.	x
Draba incana L.	x
Thlaspi arvense L.	x

Larger HTML Version (22 kb)

Provisional List of Plants Found in lake Melville and Hamilton Inlet District—Continued.

	Interior or mainland flora	Island flora
	Lake Melville basin and Double Mer	Indian Harbour
Capsella bursa-pastoris (L.) Moench.	x
Cochlearia sp. (undetermined)	x
C. sp. (undetermined)	x
C. sp. (undetermined)	x
Sarracenia purpurea L.	x
Sedum roseum (L.) Scop.	x
Parnassia palustris L.	x	x
Ribes prostratum L'Her.	x
Pyrus durossus (Greene) Fernald	x
Amelanchier Bartramiana (Tausch.) Roem.	x
Potentilla montpeliciensis L.	x	x
P. palustris (L.) Scop.	x
P. tridentata Ait.	x	x
P. pacifica Howell	x	x
Geum macrophyllum Willd.	x
Rubus idaeus L.	x
S. Chamaemorus L.	x	x
R. triflorus Richards	x
Rangisorbis canadensis L.	x
Prunus pennsylvanica L.f.	x
Dryas integrifolia Vahl.	x
Trifolium pratense L.	x
T. repens L.	x
T. agrarium L.	x
Astragalus alpinus L.	x
Oxytropis campestris DC. var. caerulea Koch.	x
Vicia Cracca L.	x
Lathyrus maritimus (L.) Bigel	x	x
Geranium pratense L.	x
Callitriche palustris L.	x
Empetrum nigrum L.	x	x
Viola labradorica Schrank.	x	x
Epilobium angustifolium L.	x	x
E. latifolium L.	x
E. palustre L.	x
E. palustre L., var. longirameum Fernald and Wiegand	x
E. plandulosum Lehm., var. adenocaulon (Haussk.) Fernald	x
Hippuris vulgaris L., var. maritima (Hellen.) Wahlenb	x
Coriopleurum lucidum (L.) Fernald	x	x
Angelica atropurpurea L.	x	x
Cornus canadensis L.	x
C. suecica L.	x	x
C. stolonifera Michx.	x
Pyrola minor L.	x
P. secunda L., var. obtusata Turcz.	x

Larger HTML Version (22 kb)

	Interior or mainland flora	Island flora
	Lake Melville basin and Double Mer	Indian Harbour
P. chlorantha Sw.	x
Moneses uniflora (L.) Gray	x
Ledum groenlandicum Oeder	x
L. palustre L.	x	x
Kalmia angustifolia L.	x
K. polifolia Wang.	x	x
Phyllocladus caerulea (L.) Bab.	x
Chamaedaphne calyculata (L.) Moench.	x
Arctostaphylos alpina (L.) Spreng.	x
Chiogenes hispidula (L.) T. and G.	x
Vaccinium pennsylvanicum Lam. var. myrtilloides (Michx.) Fernald	x
V. pennsylvanicum Lam., var. angustifolium (Ait.) Gray	x
V. uliginosum L.	x
V. Vitis-Idaea L., var. minus Lodd.	x	x
V. Ozycoceus L.	x
Diapensia lapponica L.	x
Statice labradorica Hubbard and Blake	x
Primula farinosa L.	x
P. farinosa L., var. macropoda Fernald	x
Trientalis borealis Raf.	x	x
Gentiana Amarella L.	x
Mertensia maritima (L.) S. F. Gray	x	x
Galeopsis tetrahit L.	x
Mentha arvensis L., var. glabrata Fernald	x
Veronica scutellata L.	x
Castilleja pallida (L.) Spreng., var. septentrionalis (Lindl.) Gray	x
Euphrasia atetica Lange	x
Pedicularis flammula L.	x
P. groenlandica Retz.	x
P. euphrasioides Stephen.	x
Rhinanthus Crista-galli L.	x
Pinguicula vulgaris L.	x
P. villosa L.	x
Plantago decipiens Barneoud	x
Galium trifidum L.	x
G. labradoricum Wiegand	x
G. triflorum Michx.	x
Linnaea borealis L., var. americana (Forbes) Rehder	x
Viburnum pauciflorum Raf.	x
Solidago lepida DC.	x
S. macrophylla Pursh.	x
S. macrophylla Pursh., var. thyrsoides (E. Meyer) Fernald	x
Aster foliaceus Lindl.	x
Erigeron acer L., var. asteroides DC.	x
Aphanalis margaritacea (L.) B. and H., var. occidentalis Greene	x

Larger HTML Version (23 kb)

Provisional List of Plants Found in Lake Melville and Hamilton Inlet District—Continued

	Interior or mainland flora	Island flora
	Lake Melville basin and Double Mer	Indian Harbour
Achillea Millefolium L., var. nigrescens E. Meyer	x
Chrysanthemum Leucanthemum L., var. pinnatifidum Lecoq. and Lamotte	x	x
Artemisia canadensis Michx.	x
Petasites palmatus (Ait.) Gray	x
Senecio palustris (L.) Hook	x
S. pseudo-arnica Less.	x
Cirsium muticum Michx.	x
Leontodon autumnalis L.	x
Taraxacum ceratophorum DC.	x
T. officinale Weber	x
Lactuca spicata (Lam.) Hitchc.	x

Larger HTML Version (15 kb)

Water-loving Plants.

It is well known that certain plants, such as spanish moss, bougainvillea, the orange, or the palm are dependable exponents of the climatic conditions where they are found. It is perhaps not so well known that certain plants afford equally infallible evidence regarding the salinity of the waters in or near which they grow. Everyone knows that cat-tails flourish only in fresh water, and anyone familiar with the tropical seashore is aware that the mangrove tree can grow only where its roots reach sea-water. A host of plants show a love for, or antipathy to, a salt water habitat quite comparable with that exhibited by the mangrove of the tropics.

It is proposed in this section to consider the Hamilton Inlet and Lake Melville plants from this point of view of indices of the salinity of the water of the region. Harold St. John, describing the plants of the north shore of the gulf of St. Lawrence, states that “ within reach of the influence of salt water, whether the shore be marshy, sandy, or rocky, is a characteristic assemblage of plants commonly known as halophytes because they grow where salt water is the governing factor. On a stretch of coast of this length a certain number of these plants are as certain to be present throughout its extent as is salt water itself.”¹ St. John recognizes on the coast studied by him 66 true halophytes.

A complete list of the known shore-plants of this region, which includes.>

¹“ A Botanical exploration of the North Shore of the Gulf of St. Lawrence Including an Annotated List of the Species of Vascular Plants,” Geol. surv., Can., Mem. 126, 1922, p. 11.

the halophytes, follows. The list includes only those plants of Lake Melville and Hamilton Inlet region which are believed to be adjusted to a coastwise, lakeshore, or river habitat.

The list, it will be noted, includes a few species like Juncus balticus Wind. var. littoralis Engelm and Poa eminens L., which seem to be equally well adapted to fresh or saline water habitats. Others are confined strictly to a freshwater habitat. Several species are associated with slightly brackish water conditions.

But the species of chief interest in this connexion are those confined to parts of the shoreline where the water is strongly saline or typical sea-water. The species adjusted to this kind of habitat include such plants as Iris setiosa var. canadensis, Polygonum viviparum L., and Ranunculus lapponicus. These species do not extend west of The Narrows. The list includes seven such species which do not appear to extend their range west of the head of The Narrows. The inability of these salt-loving plants to extend their range west of the head of the Narrows affords very clear botanical evidence of the change that takes place in the salinity of the water west of The Narrows.

There is, probably, no better criterion for recognizing the points on the shore where the marine waters merge into the brackish waters of lake Melville than the distribution of the marine alga, Fucus cf. evanescens. This plant, which covers much of the surface of the inter-tidal zone about Rigolet and eastward, as well as the large kelp, disappears from the shore west of The Narrows.

The following list includes only those plants found growing on or near the shores of Hamilton inlet or its islands and The Narrows connecting lake Melville with this inlet, together with those found on the margins of the lake itself or its tributaries. The indication marks are used as follows : litt. for littoral or marine shore plants ; fr. for plants growing on the banks of freshwater bodies ; and br. for those of brackish bodies of water, as lake Melville, The Backway, or Double Mer. Combinations of these will be self-explanatory, meaning that the plant is found in both areas mentioned.

*List of Plants with a Salt, Freshwater, or Brackish Habitat.*¹

Plant	Habitat	Remarks
Spartanion angustifolium Michx. ..	fr.	In and around stagnant pools. (Only found in small lake back of houses at the mouth of Mulligan river)
Potamogeton heterophyllus Schreb. var. graminifolius (Fries.) Morong.	fr.	In running fresh water. (Naskaupi river, above mouth of Red river)
Triglochin maritima L.	br.	Only found in weak, brackish waters, e.g. shallow tidal rivers, near the headwaters of the salt water. (Tidal stream at Caravalla bay. Only in salt water at high tide)

¹This list has been prepared by R. H. Wetmore, the author's assistant.

Larger HTML Version (15 kb)

*Provisional List of Plants Found in Lake Melville and Hamilton Inlet
District—Continued*

—	Interior or mainland flora Lake Melville basin and Double Mer	Island flora Indian Harbour
Maianthemum canadense Desf.	x
Streptopus amplexifolius (L.) DC.	x
Iris setosa Pall., var. canadensis Foster	x	x
Sisyrinchium angustifolium Mill	x
Habenaria hyperborea (L.) R. Br.	x
H. dilatata (Pursh) Gray	x
Spiranthes Romanzoffiana Cham.	x
Goodyera repens (L.) R. Br., var., ophioides (Fernald)	x
Listera cordata (L.) R.B.	x
Salix lucida , Muhl	x
S. lucida Muhl., var. intonsa Fernald	x
S. planifolia Pursh.	x
S. anglorum Cham.	x
Populus tremuloides Michx.	x
Myrica Gale L.	x
Betula glandulosa Michx.	x	x
B. microphylla Bunge	x
Alnus crispa (Ait.) Pursh	x
Comandra livida Richards	x
Rumes occidentalis Wats.	x
R. acetosella L.	x
Polygonum aviculare L.	x
P. viviparum L.	x	x
Chenopodium album L.	x

Arenaria lateriflora L.	X
A. peploides L.	X
A. groenlandica (Retz.) Spreng.	X
Stellaria borealis Bigel	X
S. crassifolia Ehrh	X
S. humifusa Rottb	X
S. longipes Goldie, var. laeta (Richards.) Wats.	X
S. media (L.) Cyrill.	X
Cerastium arvense L.	X
C. alpinum L., var. lanatum Hegetschw.	X
Silene acaulis L., var. exscapa (All.) DC.	X
Ranunclulus reptans L.	X
R. pennsylvanicus L. f.	X
R. acris L.	X
R. hyperboreus Rottb.	X
R. lapponicus L.	X
Thalictrum polygamum Muhl.	X
Coptis trifolia (L.) Salisb.	X
Actaea rubra (Ait.) Willd.	X
Draba incana L.	X
Thlaspi arvense L.	X

Back to Main Page

*Provisional List of Plants Found in Lake Melville and Hamilton Inlet
District—Continued*

—	Interior or mainland flora	Island flora
	Lake Melville basin and Double Mer	Indian Harbour
Capsella bursa-pastoris (L.) Moench.	x
Cochlearia sp. (undetermined)	x
C. sp. (undetermined)	x
C. sp. (undetermined)	x
Sarracenia purpurea L.	x
Sedum roseum (L.) Scop.	x
Parnassia palustris L.	x
Ribes prostratum L'Her.	x
Pyrus dumosus (Greene) Fernald	x
Amelanchier Bartramiana (Tausch.) Roem	x
Potentilla monspeliensis L.	x	x
P. palustris (L.) Scop.	x
P. tridentata Ait.	x	x
P. pacifica Howell	x	x
Geum macrophyllum Willd	x
Rubus idaeus L.	x
S. Chamaemorus L.	x	x
R. triflorus Richards	x
Ranguisorba canadensis L.	x
Prunus pennsylvanica L.f.	x
Dryas integrifolia Vahl.	x
Trifolium pratense L.	x
T. repens L.	x
T. agrarium L.	x
Astragalus alpinus L.	x

Oxytropis campestris DC. var. caerulea Koch.	X
Vicia Cracca L.	X
Lathyrus maritimus (L.) Bigel	X
Geranium pratense L.	X
Callistriche palustris L.	X
Empetrum nigrum L.	X	X
Viola labradorica Schrank	X	X
Epilobium angustifolium L.	X	X
E. latifolium L.	X
E. palustre L.	X
E. palustre L., var. longirameum Fernald and Wiegand	X
E. plandulosum Lehm., var. adenocaulon Haussk.) Fernald	X
Hippuris vulgaris L., var. maritima (Hellen.) Wahlenb	X
Coelopleurum lucidum (L.) Fernald	X	X
Angelica atropurpurea L.	X	X
Cornus canadensis L.	X
C. suecica L.	X	X
C. stolonifera Michx.	X
Pyrola minor L.	X
P. secunda L., var. obtusata Turcz.	X

Back to Main Page

*Provisional List of Plants Found in Lake Melville and Hamilton Inlet
District—Continued*

—	Interior or mainland flora	Island flora
	Lake Melville basin and Double Mer	Indian Harbour
P. chlorantha Sw.	x
Moneses uniflora (L.) Gray	x
Ledum groenlandicum Oeder	x
L. palustre L.	x	x
Kalmia angustifolia L.	x
K. polifolia Wang.	x	x
Phyllodoce caerulea (L.) Bab.	x
Chamaedaphne calyculata (L.) Moench.	x
Arctostaphylos alpina (L.) Spreng.	x
Chiogenes hispidula (L.) T. and G.	x
Vaccinium pennsylvanicum Lam., var. myrtilloides (Michx.) Fernald	x
V. pennsylvanicum Lam., var. angustifolium (Ait.) Gray	x
V. uliginosum L.	x
V. Vitis-Idaea L., var. minus Lodd.	x	x
V. Oxycoccus L.	x
Diapensia lapponica L.	x
Statice labradorica Hubbard and Blake	x
Primula farinosa L.	x
P. farinosa L., var. macropoda Fernald	x
Trientalis borealis Raf.	x	x
Gentiana Amarella L.	x
Mertensia maritima (L.) S.F. Gray	x	x
Galeopsis tetrahit L.	x

Mentha arvensis L., var glabrata Fernald	X
Veronica scutellata L.	X
Castilleja pallida (L.) Spreng., var. septentrionalis (Lindl.) Gray	X
Euphrasia arctica Lange	X
Pedicularis flammae L.	X
P. groenlandica Retz.	X
P. euphrasioides Stephen.	X
Rhinanthus Crista-galli L.	X
Pinguicula vulgaris L.	X
P. villosa L.	X
Plantago decipiens Barneoud	X
Galum trifidum L.	X
G. labradoricum Wiegand	X
G. triflorum Michx.	X
Linnaea borealis L., var. americana (Forbes) Rehder	X
Viburnum pauciflorum Raf.	X
Solidago lepida DC.	X
S. macrophylla Pursh.	X
S. macrophylla Pursh., var thyrsoides (E. Meyer) Fernald	X
Aster foliaceus Lindl.	X
Erigeron acris L., var. asteroides DC.	X
Aphanalis margaritacea (L.) B. and H., var. occidentalis Greene	X

Back to Main Page

Provisional List of Plants Found in Lake Melville and Hamilton Inlet District—Continued

—	Interior or mainland flora	Island flora
	Lake Melville basin and Double Mer	Indian Harbour
Achillea Millefolium L., var. nigrescens E. Meyer	x	x
Chrysanthemum Leucanthemum L., var. pinnatifidum Leccoq. and Lamotte	x
Artemisia canadensis Michx.	x
Petasites palmatus (Ait.) Gray	x
Senecio palustris (L.) Hook	x
S. pseudo-arnica Less.	x
Cirsium muticum Michx.	x
Leontodon autumnalis L.	x
Taraxacum ceratophorum DC.	x
T. officinale Weber	x
Lactuca spicata (Lam.) Hitchc.	x

Back to Main Page

*List of Plants with a Salt, Freshwater, or Brackish Habitat.*¹

Plant	Habitat	Remarks
Sparganium angustifolium Michx.	fr.	In and around stagnant pools. (Only found in small lake back of houses at the mouth of Mulligan river)
Potamogeton heterophyllus Schreb. var. graminifolius (Fries.) Morong.	fr.	In running fresh water. (Naskaupi river, above mouth of Red river)
Triglochina maritima L.	br.	Only found in weak, brackish waters, e.g. shallow tidal rivers, near the headwaters of the salt water. (Tidal stream at Caravalla bay. Only in salt water at high tide)

¹ This list has been prepared by R. H. Wetmore, the author's assistant.

List of Plants with a Salt, Freshwater, or Brackish Habitat—
Continued.

Plant	Habitat	Remarks
Hierochloa alpina (Sw.) R. and S. ..	litt.	On high banks near the shores on the islands in Hamilton inlet. Not found inland at all. Indian Harbour and neighbouring islands
Phleum alpinum L.	litt.	Found only on rocky banks near the shore on the islands of Hamilton inlet, Indian Harbour, and neighbouring islands
Calamagrostis neglecta (Ehrh.) Gaertner, Meyer and Scherbius	fr.	On the banks of Naskaupi river and on the shores of The Narrows near Rigolet, and on many other places along lake Melville; grows almost ubiquitous along shores
C. canadensis (Michx.) Beauv., var. Langsdorffii (Link) Inman.	fr. and br.	Found only at inner end of lake Melville and on the banks of rivers flowing into it.
Cinna latifolia (Trev.) Griseb. ..	fr.	Not found except on rivers and on the shores of the brackish waters near their mouths; Muskrat falls; and small lake at Northwest River; common
Deschampsia flexuosa (L.) Trin. var. montana (L.) Parl.	fr.	Found near fresh or slightly brackish water, e.g. head of Double Mer and on shores of strongly brackish water along both sides of The Narrows around Rigolet
Poa eminenis J. S. Presl.	br. and fr.	Found both near strongly brackish and fresh water. The Narrows near Rigolet and small pond at mouth of Mulligan river
Glyceria nervata (Willd.) Trin., var. stricta Scribn.	fr.	Not seen near any trace of salt or brackish water. Head of Grand lake and on Naskaupi river
G. borealis (Nash) Batchelder ..	fr.
Festuca rubra L.	br.
Hordeum jubatum L.	fr.	Only on banks of Naskaupi river, near Grand lake
Elymus arenarius L., var. vulgaris B. Meyer	br. and litt.	Not found near head of lake Melville, but gets more and more plentiful as one gets nearer Hamilton inlet
Eleocharis palustris (L.) R. and S. ..	fr.	18 miles up Naskaupi river
E. acicularis (L.) R. and S.	fr.
Scirpus rubrotinctus Fernald	fr.
S. atrocinctus Fernald var. brachypodus Fernald	fr.
Carex projecta Mackenzie (Carex tribuloides Wahlenb. var. reducta Bailey)	fr.	Head of Grand lake and along Naskaupi river Naskaupi river
Carex canescens L.	fr. and br.	On lake shore where water is brackish. Small lake at Northwest River
C. brunnescens Poir	br.	Where water is strongly brackish, as along The Narrows, and at portage at Muskrat falls
C. stipata Muhl.	fr.	Only on river bank, Naskaupi river
C. glareosa Wahlenb. var. amphigena Fernald	br.	Where water is strongly brackish. Rigolet shores
C. maritima O. F. Mueller	br.	Found wherever a salinity content is apparent in the water, even to the head of lake Melville
C. salina Wahlenb., var. kattegatensis (Fries.) Almq.	br. or fr.	Found on river banks and around the head of lake Melville, where water is only slightly brackish

Larger HTML Version (19 kb)List of Plants with a Salt, Freshwater, or Brackish Habitat—
Continued.

Plant	Habitat	Remarks
C. lenticularis Michx	br.	Only found where water was slightly brackish. Small lake at Northwest River
C. rigida Good	fr.	Banks of freshwater lake. Head of Grand lake
C. variflora Smith	br.	Banks of The Narrows near Rigolet, Labrador
C. miliaris Michx.	fr.	River banks, Naskaupi river
C. vesicaria L.	br.	Only seen on shores where water was slightly brackish. Small lake at Northwest River. Islands in Sebaskachu bay
C. rostrata Stokes	fr.	River banks, Naskaupi river
Juncus balticus Willd., var. littoralis Engelm	fr. and br.	Found on shores where water is entirely fresh and also strongly brackish. Head of Muskrat falls. Islands in Sebaskachu bay
Juncus filiformis L.	fr. and br.	Found where water was fresh as well as where slightly brackish; not seen around lake Melville except near head of lake. Naskaupi river and Grand river also
J. alpinus Will., var. insignis Fries. ..	fr.	Only along a river bank and head of lake. Naskaupi river and Grand lake
Iris setosa Pall., var. canadensis Foster	br. and fr.	Common where water is strongly saline. Not seen above The Narrows
Salix lucida Muhl.	fr.	On freshwater shores, Grand lake
S. lucida Muhl., var. intonsa Fernald	fr.	On sandy shore of freshwater lakes and rivers, Grand lake and Naskaupi river
S. planifolia Pursh.	br.	Seen along shores of brackish water, e.g. common along lake Melville, The Backway, etc.
S. anglorum Cham.	Depressed on shores and heights above at Indian Harbour
Myrica Gale L.	fr.	On shores of ponds, rivers, etc., usually around stagnant water, slow-moving brooks, etc.
Alnus crispa (Ait.) Pursh.	fr.	On shores of rivers; common. Mulligan river, and lake near mouth; the only alder noticed
Comandra lucida Richards	br.	Very common along The Narrows, diminishing as the interior is reached along lake Melville. None seen above Mulligan bay
Rumex occidentalis Wats.	br.	On shores where water is variable in brackish content, as on shores of lake Melville, as well as on Naskaupi river; not seen below The Narrows
Polygonum viviparum L.	br. and litt.	Very plentiful wherever a strong saline content is in the water. Not found common west of The Narrows
Arenaria lateriflora L.	br.	At mouth of a tidal river, where water is only slightly brackish. Near mouth of stream at Caravalla bay
A. peploides L.	br.	Common on shores of strongly brackish water. Along shores at Rigolet
Stellaria borealis Bigel.	fr.	On river bank—Mulligan river, about 5 miles up
S. crassifolia Ehrh.	br.	On muddy shore near headwaters of tide in a shallow tidal river. At Caravalla bay, lake Melville
S. humifusa Rottb.	br.	Growing with Stellaria crassifolia

Larger HTML Version (19 kb)

p. 2379

List of Plants with a Salt, Freshwater, or Brackish Habitat—Continued.

Plant	Habitat	Remarks
S. longipes Goldie, var. laeta (Richards.) Wats.	br. and litt.	Found from Indian Harbour to head of The Narrows. Only an occasional plant in Lake Melville region
Ranunculus reptans L.	fr.	Growing on bottom of shallow pool, at head of Grand lake
R. pennsylvanicus L.f.	fr.	Common on banks of Naskaupi river
R. hyperboreus Rottb.	fr.	In shallow pool on Indian Harbour island, up back of hospital
R. lapponicus L.	br.	Common on the shores at The Narrows near Rigolet. Not seen elsewhere
Draba tucana L.	br.	On shores of The Narrows. Seen also at eastern end of lake Melville, but not beyond Long point, on the south shore
Parnassia palustris L.	litt. and br.	Common on south shore of lake Melville east of Epinette point. Found also at Indian Harbour
Potentilla monspeliensis L.	br. and litt.	Found at Indian Harbour, and also along shores of The Narrows as well as of lake Melville to its head. Not so common in the latter region
P. palustris (L.) Scop.	br.	Common along The Narrows and eastern end of lake Melville
P. tridentata Ait.	br.	Along The Narrows and eastern end of lake Melville
P. pacifcos Howell	litt. and br.	Very common around the inlet and on the shores of the islands, and westerly into the lake as far as Northwest River. Not seen west of this place
Geum macrophyllum Willd.	fr.	On Kenemich river only
Lathyrus maritimus (L.) Bigel.	litt. and br. also fr.	Probably the commonest plant on all salt and brackish shores. Not seen west of Northwest River, and not as plentiful here as farther east. A few seen on freshwater shores
Callitriche palustris L.	fr.	An albino of next above. Under water in Naskaupi river
Epilobium latifolium L.	fr.	On gravelly shores of rivers, Mulligan river
Epilobium glandulosum Lehm., var. adenocaulon (Hausk.) Fernald	fr.	On river banks. Naskaupi river
Hippuris vulgaris L., var. maritima (Hellen.) Wahlenb.	br.	In water of stream, Canavalla bay near head of tidal influence
Coclopleurum lucidum (L.) Fernald	br.	Common on all brackish shores. More plentiful around The Narrows than inland
Angelica atropurpurea L.	fr., br., and litt.	Found on river banks (Kenemich river), banks of lake Melville wherever travelled, and also on the shores of the islands of Hamilton inlet. Commoner farther from shores from last, on the alluvial soils
Cornus canadensis L.	br. and fr.	Common on rocky shores everywhere and particularly common within The Narrows and westward
C. stolonifera Michx.	fr.	Found common on river banks—Kenemich river, Naskaupi river, etc.

Larger HTML Version (18 kb)

p. 2380

List of Plants with a Salt, Freshwater, or Brackish Habitat—Continued.

Plant	Habitat	Remarks
Primula farinosa L., var. macropoda Fernald	fr.	Only seen on sandy beach at head of Grand lake
Gentiana Amarilla L.	br.	Common along the shores of Double Mer. Not seen elsewhere
Mertensia maritima (L.) S. F. Gray	br. and litt.	Found only on very brackish or coastal shores, viz., on shores of The Narrows in Double Mer and at Indian Harbour. Not seen elsewhere.
Mentha arvensis L., var. glabrata Fernald	fr.	Shores of Naskaupi river only
Castilleja pallida (L.) Spreng, var. septentrionalis (Lindl.) Gray	fr.	Only seen on sandy beach at head of Grand lake
Galium trifidum L.	br.	Only seen on brackish shore of small lake at Northwest River
G. labradoricum Wiegand	br.	Only seen on west shore of small lake at Northwest River
Solidago lepida DC.	fr.	Found only on Kenemich river
Aster foliaceus Lindl.	fr.	Only found on shores of freshwater lakes—Grand lake. Common on shores of The Narrows and lake Melville
Achillea Millefolium L., var. nigrescens E. Meyer	br. and fr.	Very common everywhere. Only one plant found on Naskaupi river
Artemisia canadensis Michx.	fr.	Found only on gravelly shores of Grand river
Senecio Pseudo-Arnica Less	br. and litt.	Common on Hamilton inlet and westward into lake Melville as far as Sebaskachu bay. None seen west of this

Larger HTML Version (15 kb)

FORESTS.

Barren Zone. The sub-Arctic climate, which the southward-moving ice-fields bring as far south as the strait of Belle Isle, extends only a short distance inland from the coast. When crossing the eastern threshold of Labrador peninsula by way of lake Melville, it is found that there are two Labrador—"the Labrador" of the cod fisherman, chilled by the ice-floes and nearly or quite treeless, is the one best known. Farther inland where salmon and trout fishing take the place of cod fishing, a pleasant summer climate replaces the ice-chilled coastal climate, and forests cover both mountains and valleys.

Along the eastern coast of Labrador, bare, rocky slopes without timber form the background of the southward-moving procession of bergs and floe-ice which continues throughout most of July.

The bleak, time-eaten, rocky shores of the islands, and mainland to which the mirage often gives a variety of aspects are, with a few trifling exceptions, barren of trees from the western end of the strait of Belle Isle to the vicinity of Sandwich bay. A few islands in or near Sandwich bay have considerable patches of black spruce on shores which do not face the open sea. In general, however, forests are either absent on the sea-coast or confined to the sides of ravines or small valleys where the topography affords some protection to the timber, which is always dwarfed.

p. 2381

Even in the more protected areas near the seacoast, where the forests have become established, the trees are invariably small. The dwarfed character of some of the forests nearest the seacoast is very clearly indicated by the following quotation from Townsend which refers to the Cape Charles region in southeastern Labrador "Our passage through these rugged woods is slow and painful. The stiff and crooked branches of the trees interlock for self-protection. One great advantage in many of these regions is that when one is uncertain about the way, by standing on tiptoes one can generally overlook the forest."¹

Hamilton Inlet. Probably nowhere on the coast of Labrador can the transition from the barren outer islands to the forested interior be better seen than on Hamilton inlet. This bay has a length of about 40 miles in an east-west direction, and is dotted with numerous rocky islands. The eastern or outermost of these are clothed only with lichens, emerald green moss, and a variety of flowering plants. Trees are entirely absent, if we except a variety of arctic willow and a dwarfed birch, which grow prostrate upon the ground, their branches seldom rising more than 2 or 3 inches above the rock crevices that protect their roots.

At Indian Harbour the small islands are entirely destitute of forest. Fifteen miles to the westward the shores of the mainland and the islands begin to show patches of black spruce of a dwarfed type. These show at a distance on the hill-slopes as blotches of dark green on the light green of the moss-covered surrounding areas. The stunted spruce becomes somewhat larger and the areas covered by it are more extensive as the head of the inlet is approached.

It is clear that floating ice is the main factor in keeping the outer shores deforested. Great fields of ice persist in the outer parts of the inlet until the latter part of July. The ice, however, is seldom, if ever, seen in mid-summer within many miles of Rigolet.

At the head of Hamilton inlet the trees, though small, make up dense forests that clothe a large part of the land surface.

Interior. The dwarfed spruce forests about the head of Hamilton inlet (Plate IV A), with trees 15 to 35 feet high, give way to forests with much larger trees in the area around lake Melville. At Rigolet, squared timbers used for hauling out vessels were observed which would be considered creditable representatives of any Canadian forest. One of these pieces measured : length, 59 feet butt dimensions, 1 foot 4 inches by 9 inches ; dimensions at small end, 9½ inches by 6½ inches. The log was cut near the head of the lake and is much larger than any seen near the seashore.

Black spruce (Picea mariana) is the dominant tree throughout the Lake ¹Townsend, C. M., "Along the Labrador Coast," 1907, p. 26.

List of Plants with a Salt, Freshwater, or Brackish Habitat—Continued

Plant	Habitat	Remarks
Hierochloë alpina (Sw.) R. and S.	litt.	On high banks near the shores on the islands in Hamilton inlet. Not found inland at all. Indian Harbour and neighbouring islands.
Phleum alpinum L.	litt.	Found only on rocky banks near the shore on the islands of Hamilton inlet, Indian Harbour, neighbouring islands.
Calamagrostis neglecta (Erhrh.) Gaertner, Meyer and Scherbius	fr.	On the banks of Naskaupi river and on the shores other of The Narrows near Rigolet, and on many places along lake Melville ; grows almost ubiquitous along shores.
C. canadensis (Michx.) Beauv., var. Langsdorfii (Link) Inman.	fr. and br.	Found only at inner end of lake Melville and on the banks of rivers flowing into it.
Cinna latifolia (Trev.) Griseb.	fr.	Not found except on rivers and on the shores of the brackish waters near their mouths ; Muskrat falls ; and small lake at Northwest River ; common.
Deschampsia flexuosa (L.) Trin. var. montana (L.) Parl.	fr.	Found near fresh or slightly brackish water, e.g. head of Double Mer and on shores of strongly brackish water along both sides of The Narrows around Rigolet.
Poa eminens J.S. Presl.	br. and fr.	Found both near strongly brackish and fresh water. The Narrows near Rigolet and small pond at mouth of Mulligan river.
Glyceria nervata (Willd.) Trin., var. stricta Scribn. G. borealis (Nash) Batchelder	fr. fr.	} Not seen near any trace of salt or brackish water. Head of Grand lake and on Naskaupi river.
Festuca rubra L.	br.
Hordeum jubatum L.	fr.	Only on banks of Naskaupi river, near Grand lake.
Elymus arenarius L., var. villosus E. Meyer	br. and litt.	Not found near head of lake Melville, but gets more and more plentiful as one gets nearer Hamilton inlet.
Eleocharis palustris (L.) R. and S.	fr.

E. acicularis (L.) R. and S.	fr.	18 miles up Naskaupi river. Head of Grand lake, only found on banks of rivers and freshwater lakes.
Scirpus rubrotinctus Fernald	fr.
S. atrocinctus Fernald var. brachypodus Fernald	fr.
Carex projecta Mackenzie (Carex tribuloides Wahlenb. var. reducta Bailey)	fr.
Carex canescens L.	fr. and br.	On lake shore where water is brackish. Small lake at Northwest River.
C. brunnescens Poir	br.	Where water is strongly brackish, as along The Narrows, and at portage at Muskrat falls.
C. stipata Muhl.	fr.	Only on river bank, Naskaupi river.
C. glareosa Wahlenb. var. amphigena Fernald	br.	Where water is strongly brackish. Rigolet shores.
C. maritima O.F. Mueller	br.	Found wherever a salinity content is apparent in the water, even to the head of lake Melville.
C. salina Wahlenb., var. kattogatensis (Fries.) Almq.	br. or fr.	Found on river banks and around the head of lake Melville, where water is only slightly brackish.

Back to Main Page

List of Plants with a Salt, Freshwater, or Brackish Habitat—Continued

Plant	Habitat	Remarks
C. lenticularis Michx.	br.	Only found where water was slightly brackish. Small lake at Northwest River.
C. rigida Good	fr.	Banks of freshwater lake. Head of Grand lake.
C. rariflora Smith	br.	Banks of The Narrows near Rigolet, Labrador.
C. miliaris Michx.	fr.	River banks, Naskaupi river.
C. vesicaria L.	br.	Only seen on shores where water was slightly brackish. Small lake at Northwest River. Islands in Sebaskachu bay.
C. rostrata Stokes	fr.	River banks, Naskaupi river.
Juncus balticus Willd., var. littoralis Engelm	fr. and br.	Found on shores where water is entirely fresh and also strongly brackish. Head of Muskrat falls. Islands in Sebaskachu bay.
Juncus filiformis L.	fr. and br.	Found where water was fresh as well as where slightly brackish ; not seen around lake Melville except near head of lake. Naskaupi river and Grand river also.
J. alpinus Willd., var. insignis Fries.	fr.	Only along a river bank and head of lake. Naskaupi river and Grand lake.
Iris setosa Pall., var. canadensis Foster	br. and fr.	Common where water is strongly saline. Not seen above The Narrows.
Salix lucida Muhl.	fr.	On freshwater shores, Grand lake.
S. lucida Muhl., var. intonsa Fernald	fr.	On sandy shores freshwater lakes and rivers, Grand lake and Naskaupi river.
S. planifolia Pursh.	br.	Seen along shores of brackish water, e.g. common along lake Melville, The Backway, etc.
S. anglorum Cham.	..	Depressed on shores and heights above at Indian Harbour.
Myrica Gale L.	fr.	On shores of ponds, rivers, etc., usually around stagnant water, slow-moving brooks, etc.

Alnus crispa (Ait.) Pursh.	fr.	On shores of rivers ; common. Mulligan river, and lake near mouth ; the only alder noticed.
Comandra livida Richards	br.	Very common along The Narrows, diminishing as the interior is reached along lake Melville. None seen above Mulligan bay.
Rumex occidentalis Wats.	br.	On shores where water is variable in brackish content, as on shores of lake Melville, as well as on Naskaupi river ; not seen below The Narrows.
Polygonum viviparum L.	br. and litt.	Very plentiful wherever a strong saline content is in the water. Not found common west of The Narrows.
Arenaria lateriflora L.	br.	At mouth of a tidal river, where water is only slightly brackish. Near mouth of stream at Caravalla bay.
A. peploides L.	br.	Common on shores of strongly brackish water. Along shores at Rigolet.
Stellaria borealis Bigel	fr.	On river bank - Mulligan river, about 5 miles up.
S. crassifolia Ehrh.	br.	On muddy shore near headwaters of tide in a shallow tidal river. At Caravalla bay, lake Melville.
S. humifusa Rottb.	br.	Growing with Stellaria crassifolia

Back to Main Page

List of Plants with a Salt, Freshwater, or Brackish Habitat—Continued

Plant	Habitat	Remarks
S. longpipes Goldie, var. laeta (Richards.) Wats.	br. and litt.	Found from Indian Harbour to head of The Narrows. Only an occasional plant in Lake Melville region.
Ranunculus reptans L.	fr.	Growing on bottom of shallow pool, at head of Grand lake.
R. pennsylvanicus L.f.	fr.	Common on banks of Naskaupi river.
R. hyperboreus Rottb.	fr.	In shallow pool on Indian Harbour island, up back of hospital.
R. lapponicus L.	br.	Common on the shores at The Narrows near Rigolet. Not seen elsewhere.
Draba incana L.	br.	On shores of The Narrows. Seen also at eastern end of lake Melville, but not beyond Long point, on the south shore.
Parnassia palustris L.	litt. and br.	Common on south shore of lake Melville east of Epinette point. Found also at Indian Harbour
Potentilla monspeliensis L.	br. and litt.	Found at Indian Harbour, and also along shores of The Narrows as well as of lake Melville to its head. Not so common in the latter region.
P. palustris (L.) Scop.	br.	Common along The Narrows and eastern end of lake Melville.
P. tridentata Ait.	br.	Along the Narrows and eastern end of lake Melville.
P. pacifica Howell	litt. and br.	Very common around the inlet and on the shores of the islands, and westerly into the lake as far as Northwest River. Not seen west of this place.
Geum macrophyllum Willd.	fr.	On Kenemich river only.
Lathyrus maritimus (L.) Bigel.	litt. and br. also fr.	Probably the commonest plant on all salt and brackish shores. Not seen west of Northwest River, and not as plentiful here as farther east. A few seen on freshwater shores.
Callitriche palustris L.	fr.	An albino of next above. Under water in Naskaupi river.
Epilobium	fr.	On gravelly shores of rivers, Mulligan river.

latifolium L.
Epilobium glandulosum Lehm., var. adenocaulon (Hausk.) Fernald	fr.	On river banks. Naskaupi river.
Hippuris vulgaris L., var. maritima (Hellen.) Wahlenb.	br.	In water of stream, Caravalla bay near head of tidal influence.
Coelopleurum lucidum (L.) Fernald	br.	Common on all brackish shores. More plentiful around the Narrows than inland.
Angelica atropurpurea L.	fr., br., and litt.	Found on river banks (Kenemich river), banks of lake Melville wherever travelled, and also on the shores of the islands on Hamilton inlet. Commoner farther from shores from last, on the alluvial soils.
Cornus canadensis L.	br. and fr.	Common on rocky shores everywhere and particularly common within The Narrows and westward.
C. stolonifera Michx.	fr.	Found common on river banks—Kenemich river, Naskaupi river, etc.

Back to Main Page

List of Plants with a Salt, Freshwater, or Brackish Habitat—Continued

Plant	Habitat	Remarks
Primula farinosa L., var. macropoda Fernald	fr.	Only seen on sandy beach at head of Grand lake.
Gentiana Amarella L.	br.	Common along the shores of Double Mer. Not seen elsewhere.
Mertensia maritima (L.) S.F. Gray	br. and litt..	Found on on very brackish or coastal shores, viz., on shores of The Narrows in Double Mer and at Indian Harbour. Not seen elsewhere.
Mentha arvensis L., var. glabrata Fernald	fr.	Shores of Naskaupi river only.
Castilleja pallida (L.) Spreng, var. septentrionalis (Lindl.) Gray	fr.	Only seen on sandy beach at head of Grand lake.
Galium trifidum L.	br.	Only seen on brackish shores of small lake at Northwest River.
G. labradoricum Wiegand	br.	Only seen on west shore of small lake at northwest River.
Solidago lepida DC.	fr.	Found only on Kenemich river.
Aster foliaceus Lindl.	fr.	Only found on shores of freshwater lakes—Grand lake. Common on shores of The Narrows and lake Melville.
Archillea Millefolium L., var. nigrescens E. Meyer	br. and fr.	Very common everywhere. Only one plant found on naskaupi river.
Artemisia canadensis Michx.	fr.	Found only on gravelly shores of Grand river.
Senecio Pseudo-Arnica Less	br. and litt.	Common on Hamilton inlet and westward into lake Melville as far as Sebaskachu bay. None seen west of this.

Melville district, but white spruce becomes increasingly common inland (Plate V). The white birch (Betula alba var. papyrifera) is a very common tree, and in tracts that have been burned over it has taken possession of the ground to the exclusion of all other trees. The largest specimens were seen where they occurred sparingly in forests of black and white spruce.

Where the birch constitutes the whole of the forest, as it commonly does in burned-over tracts, its light-green foliage distinguishes it at considerable distances from the darker evergreens. The forest colour effects vary greatly with light and distance. Under a grey sky the black spruce forests are nearly black in the middle distance, dark green in the foreground, shading off into deep dark blue in the distance. Under a half-clouded sky the forested mountain slopes are marked with blotches of dark blue on a field of light green, the colour scheme changing constantly with the shifting of the clouds. In some cases at the finish of a shower a spruce-covered island, rainbow arched, will furnish a picture not easily forgotten. Labrador has been described as a land of rainbows ; the dozen or more showers a day experienced on many days during the summer of 1921 seem to justify the title, and in such seasons protect the forests against forest fires.

Any traveller in a Labrador forest soon becomes aware of a carpet of sphagnum moss into which he sinks, in many places to his knees. If the sphagnum moss be absent, it is commonly replaced by caribou moss. Where the trees are not too closely spaced the ash-grey of the caribou moss gives a colour contrast with the dark green of the black spruce, visible at a considerable distance. The rolls of partly detached bark which hang about the trunks of the large birch trees give them a curiously shaggy appearance. The white or dun-coloured trunks of the birches, which are sprinkled sparingly through many of the spruce forests, relieve the monotony of these sombre-hued trunks. Where the spruce trees have their maximum development they reach a height of from 75 to 100 feet. These forests " are of the very darkest hue of green and down their hoary, moss-floored isles " sunlight has little chance to penetrate.

Nearly everywhere the white blossom of the Labrador tea is seen during July. As its blossoms fade the dark pink Lambskill takes its place, decorating the woods with a profusion of delicate colour throughout the latter part of the summer. About the first of August the half-ripe, low-bush cranberries begin to show rosy cheeks above the moss, and a little later the rich, dark purple bearberries spread a feast of delicious fruit and ravishing colour on the grey, rocky summit of every hill and mountain. The wild currant, crowberry, and bake-apple are among the other refreshments which the forests set before their visitors. Alder and willows generally form the forest 40 border along the streams. The fragrant-leaved sweetgale is also frequently seen about the margin of the forests.

The principal trees in the approximate order of their abundance in Lake Melville district are :

Black spruce (Picea mariana BSP)

White or canoe birch (Betula alba var. papyrifera)

p. 2383

Tamarack (Larix laricina Koch.)

Balsam fir (Abies balsamea Mill.)

White spruce (Picea canadensis BSP)

Balsam poplar (Populus balsamifera L.)

Yellow or grey birch (Betula lutea Michx. f.)

Aspen poplar (Populus tremuloides Michx.)

White and black spruce, and fir are the trees which have been used for lumber in the region. Both the white and black spruce reach a large size in many localities. The following figures indicate the character of some of the larger trees in these forests. On Mulligan river a black spruce 5 feet 6 inches in circumference 20 inches above the ground was measured. Another black spruce on Kenemich river measured 9 feet 10 inches in circumference. Its fine, straight trunk appeared to be 100 feet high. The black spruce here probably reaches a greater average size than in Nova Scotia. At the head of Grand lake a spruce which had a diameter of 25 inches was noticed in the driftwood. A white birch on the Kenemich measured 5 feet 1 inch in circumference. These figures represent a few of the largest trees, but many others nearly or quite as large were seen. A large proportion of the forest trees approach these figures sufficiently closely to furnish a large supply of logs suitable for lumber. There are vast quantities of smaller timber on the mountain slopes, which will no doubt be used eventually for pulpwood.

The shores of lake Melville are bordered by a considerable area of relatively flat or slightly rolling land on which the best timber is found. On the mountain slopes much smaller trees occur.

Grand lake, which is about 40 miles long, lies northwest of lake Melville and empties into it. It is without any lowland border, the mountain slopes descending precipitately on the west and by gentle slopes on the east. Extensive forests of fine timber about this lake are reported to have been destroyed by fire about 35 years ago. Considerable areas of birch furnish the only conspicuous evidence of these fires at present. At Cape Blanc, which is a steep-sided mountain rising from the lake side, the scars of old avalanches are plainly visible. In some of these the timber and soil have both been stripped completely from the mountain face. In others the succession of birch in the midst of a black spruce forest, bounded sharply by perfectly straight lines, tells the story of an old avalanche.

On Naskaupi river and Red river the broad sand and clay terraces support a better forest growth than Grand Lake basin. Mrs. Hubbard, who traversed the entire length of the Naskaupi, reports one of the trees on the Naskaupi to have a circumference of 9 feet. She states that ¹ “the valley is mostly well wooded with spruce and balsam as far as Mabelle island and here the spruce reaches splendid size.”

The best forest in Lake Melville region is reported to be located back of Mud lake on the south side of Hamilton river. A considerable amount of lumber was cut around the west side of Goose bay a few years ago when ¹ Hubbard, Mrs. Leonidas, “Labrador from Lake Melville to Ungava Bay,” Bull. Am. Geog. Rev., vol. 38, 1906, p. 533.

p. 2384

sawmills were in operation. Fairly large trees grow along both banks of the Hamilton as far up as Muskrat falls.

The writer’s observations did not extend above Muskrat falls, but according to Low, a good forest growth is found up Hamilton river as far as Hamilton falls. He states ¹ that 150 miles from the mouth of the river “the trees on the slopes about the falls are largely white spruce upwards of 70 feet in height.”

* * * *

Upper Limit of Trees. Elevation is only one of the factors controlling the upper limit of trees on the mountain slopes. Steepness of slope, relative amount of soil, and the direction towards which a particular mountain side faces are other factors (Plate VI). The size of the trees invariably decreases with elevation and near their upper limit many of those which persist maintain their positions only by taking an attitude approaching closely to the horizontal. In the heavy forests that border English river on the south shore of lake Melville, the upper limit of upright trees is 815 feet. Horizontal trees continue up to 900 feet, but above this the mountain is barren.

* * * *

Future Development. Examination of a map ² of the distribution of North American forests will show the very important rôle which Labrador will probably play in supplying forest products for the world market of the future. Lake Melville and Double Mer waterways are of peculiar importance in this connexion, because they afford about 200 miles of navigable waters which are usable by sea-going vessels. These water-ways include lake Melville, Grand lake, Double Mer, and The Backway. This penetration of the heart of the best of the Labrador forests by deep waterways must become an important element in keeping transportation costs at a low figure.

Canada is destined by its geological and geographical features to remain permanently the great forest country of North America. Compared with the area of the great forest belt extending from the Labrador coast to the Pacific, the widely scattered forest areas to the south of it appear insignificant in size. Lake Melville may reasonably be expected to become in the future one of the important eastern outlets for the forest products of the eastern part of this vast forest zone.

FAUNA.

Only a few of the more conspicuous or better known animals can be mentioned in a report having the scope of the present one. Most of those observed belong either to the seashore fauna or the fauna of the forested interior. The majority belong to the latter fauna.

By far the most abundant mammal in the region is the Labrador lemming. This ubiquitous little creature is equally abundant on the islands of ¹ Grenfell, W. T. and others, "Labrador: The Country and the People," 1910, p. 153.

² Zon, Rapheal, and Sparhawk, W. N., "Forest Resources of the World," vol. II, 1923.

p. 2385

Hamilton inlet and in the interior. It may be seen in numbers everywhere darting rapidly along its tunnel-like runways, as a rule more or less open at the top, from one bit of cover to another. It no doubt affords an important source of food supply to the predatory birds and some of the fur-bearing animals.

Sharply contrasted with the general distribution of the lemming is the coastal distribution of the polar bear. Though reported to be rare in the region, a few are taken along the coast. Its distribution seems to be sharply limited to the coast. The writer has heard of no cases where the polar bear has been taken west of Rigolet. The skull of a specimen taken during the season of 1921 on one of the islands in the eastern part of Hamilton inlet was seen by the writer at Indian Harbour.

Practically all the fur-bearing animals, with the exception of the seals and white foxes, are confined to the forested interior, where nearly all the trapping is done. These include the mink, marten, muskrat, weasel, beaver, otter, lynx, and fox. The red, white, cross, and silver varieties of the fox are taken.

The otter, beaver, and groundhog were observed during the summer, and a specimen of the latter was killed near the head of Double Mer.

Ducks were seen in The Backway in flocks numbering thousands. Loons and gulls are common on lake Melville, but characteristic sea birds like the guillemot are not found on the waters of lake Melville.

Toads were seen at Northwest River and green frogs were taken at Mud lake. Specimens collected were identified by C. L. Patch as Bufo americanus (American toad) and Rana pipiens (Leopard frog).

The harbour or freshwater seal (Phoca vitulina) is abundant in the river, lake, and sea waters of the region as far west as Muskrat falls. The largest number of individuals seen at any one locality was just below Hamilton falls, where about fifty were observed at one time.

The cod is unknown in The Narrows and the waters west of them. Cod fishing is confined to the waters adjacent to the islands in the eastern part of Hamilton inlet. Commercial fishing in lake Melville and the western part of Hamilton is confined to salmon fishing.

The grampus whale may be seen daily near Rigolet. In many places two or three were seen together and at times the caplin on which they feed were observed in numbers shooting out of the water just before the surface was broken by the curved back of a grampus following the school. This whale, although very conspicuous east of Henrietta island, was not seen west of that island, during the summer. It no doubt at times extends its range for short periods into lake Melville, but the normal habitat seems to be in the saline waters east of the lake.

It will be seen from these notes that typical marine animals like the guillemot, grampus whale, and cod are unknown west of The Narrows, the cod not even extending into The Narrows.

p. 2386

INHABITANTS.

The people of “ the coast of Labrador ” and the adjacent interior belong to four groups. These are the Newfoundland fishermen, who spend only the summer on the Labrador coast, the Eskimo, the Indians, and the “ liviers.” It is the cod fishermen from Newfoundland, and his picturesque shack always located on the shore, that first catch the eye of the visitor from the south. The largest group of these fishermen is located at Indian Harbour, the headquarters of the cod fishing industry.

The salmon fishing industry which is, after cod fishing, the most important summer occupation, is carried on chiefly by the “ liviers ” in the waters of lake Melville and The Narrows. The salmon catch is shipped from the interior posts, Rigolet and Northwest River (Plates VIII and IX).

The region was divided originally between the Indian and the Eskimo, the former holding the interior, the latter the coastal strip. The Eskimo (Plate IV A) are now nearly extinct in Hamilton Inlet region and south-ward, although Holme ¹ reported in 1887 that they were “numerous ” in Hamilton inlet. The territory formerly held by the Eskimo was approximately the same narrow shore zone now occupied by the Newfoundland and French-Canadian fishermen, but all the vast interior river and lake region belonged to the Indian. When the white man first came to the gulf of St. Lawrence, the Eskimo held the narrow seacoast strip as far west as Mingan, opposite the western part of Anticosti island. The acquisition of firearms from the French enabled the Indians, in 1600, to drive the Eskimo eastward to the strait of Belle Isle. Since then he has retreated very slowly to his present southern limit at Hamilton inlet.

The Labrador Indians belong to two tribes, the Montagnais of the south and the Naskaupis of the north (Plates X and XI A). Hamilton River and lake Melville form in a general way the boundary between the hunting grounds of these two Indian groups. About seventy-five Indians, representing both tribes, came under the writer's observation during the summer of 1921. In religion all the southern and eastern Indians appear to be Roman Catholics. They were encamped in their dome-shaped canvas tents at Northwest River and pendant crosses were much in evidence on some of them. The following observations on the Indians who were encamped for a few days near the trading post at Northwest River are quoted from Mr. William B. Cabot,² who has unequalled knowledge of the psychology and customs of these people.

“ The group I was with last summer, known as the Northwest River Indians, have at any rate a good deal of Naskaupi blood, and some membership of actual Naskaupis. Their affiliation is quite with the latter, the regular Montagnais not mixing with them. You may have noticed that

¹ “ A Journey in the Interior of Labrador ” : Proc. Roy. Geog. Soc., vol. X, p. 190, 1888. This statement is open to question, since Davies, writing in 1842, states that “ they (the Eskimo) are now reduced to eight families, though they had numbered upwards of 300 ” as late as the beginning of the present century. (Trans. Lit. and Hist. Soc., Quebec, p. 89, 1843.)

² Personal letter, Nov. 21, 1921.

the Montagnais Indians camped by themselves far down the beach last summer. They hold themselves above the Northwest River people.

It is as well if one is having to do with the people there to know that the name Naskaupi is a term of contempt applied by the southern Indians and not to be used to a person's face. At best it means an ignorant person, and probably includes the idea of dirtiness and general indecency. I have never heard a dignified Indian use it. The general Montagnais name for the Naskaupis is Big People, the Montagnais being small themselves. The actual name is Pakquockanun or Pakquockamus, I am not sure of my own writing of the word. The boy I had to come back with me, Gilbert Blake, and who spoke Indian fluently, called them Crees, which by their own account they are, having come north from the region southwest of Hudson Bay, within historic time, to get away from the Iroquois."

According to the estimate of the Dominion Department of Indian Affairs, the total number of Montagnais Indians who came to the southern coast of Labrador in 1908 was six hundred and ninety-four. All these, with the exception of the few too decrepit to travel, spend the greater part of the year in the interior. The summer journeys in search of caribou and other game in many cases take them a very considerable distance along the rivers and lakes. All of them make a spring or summer trip to the coast, where they dispose of the winter's catch of fur and secure supplies from the traders.

Samuel Robertson ¹ estimated the number of Montagnais Indians on the coast in 1841 "from the Saguenay downwards" at about 700 and including those about lake St. John, at 1,000. The latter estimate he suspected was too large. This estimate published in 1843 is surprisingly near the 1908 figures of the Indian Department, and suggests no material change in the numbers of the Indians during the past seventy years. Cabot has the impression that their numbers are diminishing and stated "The people of the Labrador inland are a remnant." Davies stated that "of the thirty-two families who frequented the bay (lake Melville) in 1840 only nine belonged to it."

The Naskaupis of George river formerly showed relatively little inclination to visit the trading posts. McLean said of them that "of all the Indians I have seen, the Naskaupis seem most averse to locomotion; many of them grow up to man's estate without once visiting a trading post."²

In the old days, savage reprisals resulted when either race entered the hunting territory of the other. Battle Harbour,³ according to tradition, is one of the names which has survived from the days when the Indian and Eskimo tried to settle disputes concerning their hunting grounds with the tomahawk and the spear. The Eskimo have disappeared from the coast south of the Hamilton inlet, which the Newfoundland

¹ Robertson, Samuel, "Notes on the Coast of Labrador," Trans. Lit. and Hist. Soc., Quebec, vol. IV., 1843, p. 40.

² "Notes of a Twenty-five Years' Service in the Hudson's Bay Territory," London, 1849, p. 119.

³ Hawkes, E. W., "The Labrador Eskimo," Geol. Surv., Can., Mem. 91, 1916, p. 17. Gosling (Labrador, 1910, p. 167) considers Battle a modification of the Portuguese word batel-canoe, but admits the immemorial hostility between the two races.

during the summer ; nearly all of them return to Newfoundland for the winter. The Indian still survives in southern Labrador, but lives as his ancestors did, except that canvas canoes and tents have supplanted the birch-bark canoe and the skin-covered tepee.

In Labrador, as elsewhere on the northern frontier, natural selection is producing a type of man well adapted to a changing environment. This new type will in time supplant the Indian.

In a country where elemental conditions prevail as they do in Labrador, natural selection is not an academic term but a stern reality. Nature under-takes to make of every man who claims a home in Labrador either a hunter or a fisherman. For the failure starvation awaits just around the corner. The man who is a produce of an environment where these two arts are not important or essential, must, when he comes to Labrador, speedily acquire them unless he is able to maintain connexion with his old environment and its resources. The tragic death in 1903 of Leonidas Hubbard illustrates the remorseless way in which this fundamental law works in Labrador.

The hardy French and English fishermen, who came into the region a century and a half ago, found it to their liking, as did the Scotch traders of the Hudson's Bay Company who followed them. They and their successors have left as descendants a brown-skinned race of Eskimo or Indian extraction on the maternal side. These are the "liviers," as they are called to distinguish them from the Newfoundland fishermen who do not "live here," but come and go with each fishing season. Unlike the Indian, who is willing to starve but not to work when game is scarce, the "livier" is apt to have the industrious habits of his paternal ancestry. Many of them have comfortable cabins always well stocked with rifles and some supplied with a few books and, in one instance which the writer recalls, with a small organ. Throughout the summer the "livier" devotes himself to the salmon and trout fishing in lake Melville, and in winter to trapping. At the approach of winter he goes into the forest for the trapping season, sometimes with a companion or with dogs, but in many cases, alone, and from 50 to 200 miles from any settlement. The solitary trapper ordinarily knows no other companionship for three or four months except that of the trees, the stars, and the aurora. If the trap-line be a long one, 4 a.m. will find a good trapper on the trail. These men appear to be as perfectly adjusted to, and satisfied with, their environment as the foxes and the otters whose pelts they seek.

The permanent or winter homes of the natives or “ liviers ” are commonly located in groups of three or four near a river mouth. In many cases, however, solitary houses are located many miles from any others. Small shacks have been constructed along some streams at intervals of 20 or more miles, which are occupied only for night camps by trappers in winter.

It is difficult to estimate the number of people living in Lake Melville district. The results of various inquiries and the writer’s own observations indicate that eight or nine families occupy the shores of Double Mer. This probably represents about thirty persons. The population of the shores of lake Melville west of Rigolet includes about two hundred and fifty people. Northwest River and Rigolet have respectively about seventy and forty-five people. The total population of the Lake Melville and Grand Lake basins, exclusive of Indians, appears to be about four hundred and fifteen persons.

p. 2389

Failure to mention the insect pests would render incomplete any discussion of the environment of the people of Eastern Labrador. Packard’s remarks on the mosquitoes and black flies indicate briefly but clearly the disturbing and annoying character of this factor. He states that “ The armies of black flies were supported by light brigades of mosquitoes. They fly into our faces ; they do not bite hard, like the mosquitoes, but the vampires suck long and deep, leaving great clots of blood. No wonder that these entomological pests are a perfect barrier to inland travel, and that few people live during the summer away from the sweep of the high winds and dwell on the exposed shores of the coast to escape these torments.”¹

Whether the insect pests of the interior and the fear of the Indian have been factors in keeping the Eskimo confined to the coast may be questioned, but there is no doubt about the abundant food supply of the seashore being the essential bond between this race and the coastal strip. A race so fully able as the Eskimo to supply all its wants on the seashore would have little reason for exposing itself to the attacks of both its hereditary human and insect enemies by taking up its abode inland.

Freedom from the mosquito and black fly pests has evidently been considered in locating the admirably planned and equipped hospitals established along the coast by Dr. Grenfell. The Indian Harbour hospital, located on an outlying island 40 miles from the head of Hamilton inlet, seems to be entirely free of mosquitoes and flies. An inland hospital at Northwest River, 130 miles west, is occupied by the Indian Harbour hospital staff in winter after the insects have vanished and when people have returned from the islands and seacoast to their winter houses located near the trapping grounds. Very few of the houses about the mosquito-infested bays and river mouths of lake Melville are occupied during the summer.

Most of their owners occupy temporary camps or summer houses along the eastern part of the lake where the salmon fishing is good, or go out to the seacoast for the cod fishing season.

Probably no more definite habitat limits ever existed between native races than those recognized by the Indian and the Eskimo in the Labrador peninsula prior to the advent of the white man. Turner writes of the Eskimo, "The region inhabited by the Innuits is strictly littoral."² Hawkes³ states that "the Eskimo rarely inhabit a border country in heavy numbers, but prefer a screen of hunting territory between themselves and their inveterate enemies, the Indians . . . This is true of northern Alaska, the Mackenzie and Coppermine districts, Hudson Bay, and Labrador as well . . . The

¹ Packard, A. S., "The Labrador Coast," 1891, p. 75.

² Turner, L. M., "Ethnology of the Ungava District, Hudson Bay Territory," Smith, Inst., 11th Ann. Rept., Bureau of Ethnology.

³ Hawkes, E. W., "The Labrador Eskimo," Geol. Surv., Can., Mem. 91, pp. 17 and 24.

p. 2390

coastal habitation of the Labrador Eskimo is broken only at Davis inlet, on the Atlantic coast, where the Eastern Naskapi come out yearly to the Hudson's Bay Company post to trade."

Occasional clashes between the two races were incidental to the maintenance of the inviolability of their respective domains. These were checked and eventually eliminated shortly after the opening of trading posts, through the influence of the traders. Esquimo island, near the eastern end of lake Melville, is said to have been the scene of the last battle over the interracial boundary in the Hamilton Inlet region. This island is a short distance inside the forested zone. The Indians asserted, according to tradition, that the Great Spirit had made an unmistakable sign by which to distinguish the territories of the two races—all that was covered with forest belonging to the Indians and all that was barren being for the Eskimo.

From the coast south of Hamilton inlet the Eskimo has disappeared and the cod fisherman has taken his place. A few Eskimo families still persist in Hamilton Inlet district (Plate IV A). North of that area in many places the Newfoundland fishermen appear to have either supplanted the Eskimo or occupy the coast conjointly with them. The Newfoundland fisherman, like the Eskimo whom he has supplanted, depends upon the sea for his livelihood. He has as a result of his occupation confined his activities to the coastal region as closely as the Eskimo did.

Three trading companies have representatives at Northwest River. These are Hudson's Bay Company, the French Company, and the Porter Company. At Rigolet (Plate IX), the Hudson's Bay Company, and the Porter Company one mile east of Rigolet, operate stores. A Newfoundland trader keeps a store at Indian Harbour.

* * * *

Interior Extent of the Intertidal Fauna.

It might appear upon casual consideration a very simple matter to define for any region the limits or boundaries between the seacoast, on the one hand, and the banks of confluent lakes and rivers, on the other. This, however, is far from true. The banks of rivers with wide, trumpet-shaped mouths, like the St. Lawrence in Canada and the Potomac in the United States, merge into the coast line of the sea without producing the sharp, angular interruption in the shore line which defines the mouths of ordinary rivers. The tide in such streams in many places reaches far up that part of the channel which everyone would agree is that of a river rather than the arm of a bay. No one, for example, would question the fact that Quebec and Washington cities are located respectively on the St. Lawrence and Potomac rivers, although the tides run well above these cities.

It is evident from these considerations that neither configuration of the shore-line nor extent of tidal influence affords in some cases dependable criteria for delimiting the seacoast from the shore of river or lake. Brackish water with a considerable degree of salinity often extends, like the tidal influence, up channels universally regarded as rivers.

p. 2391

There is apparently no single criterion which taken alone, would be generally accepted as an adequate and conclusive test or index of the limit of seashore or river mouth. Salinity, however, is one factor to be considered. Both the plant and animal life of sea-water are delicately adjusted to the salinity of normal sea-water. The seashore and the waters adjacent to it are everywhere characterized by assemblages of animals and plants which cannot live in fresh or brackish water. Where tidal waters extend a long distance inland, as they do in Lake Melville region, a dependable method of ascertaining where salinity changes occur is to note the limit of marine life.

Examination of the shore-line at Rigolet, when the tide is out, discloses a typical marine fauna in the shallow pools and attached to the rocks. The species collected on the south side of The Narrows opposite Rigolet are indicated in the following list :

*Marine Invertebrates from The Narrows opposite Rigolet*¹—Field No. 7.

HYDROIDEA

Thuiaria similis (Clark)—7 pieces

Thuiaria similis (?) (Clark)—1 piece. Differs from Nutting's description in that each node of main stem bears two branches (one on each side) and one hydrotheca on each side. Sub-branches agree with description

AMPHIPODA

Ischyrocerus latipes (Kryer)—19 specimens and fragments

Ischyrocerus anguipes (Kryer)—12 specimens

Erichthonius rubricornis (Stimpson)—6 specimens and fragments

Dulichia porrecta (Bate)—2 fragments

Metopa spectabilis Sars—1 specimen

Stenopleustes malmgreni (Boeck)—6 specimens
Caperella stimpsoni (Bate)—many specimens
Caprella linearis (Linn) (?)—10 small specimens including 3 females Jassa sp. (near J. minutus (Sars)—3 (females only)
Jassa sp.—1 small specimen
Atylus carinatus (Fabr.)—1 specimen
Acanthonotozoma infatium (Kryer)—1 fragment

CIRRIPEDIA

Balanus crenatus —3, and fragments of 1 (?) more

GASTROPODA

sic*

Littorina palliata (Say)—1 specimen
Acmaea testudinalis—1 specimen
Littorina rudis var. groenlandica (Mörch)
Molleria costulata (Möller) —1 (?) small broken shell

AMPHINEURA

Amicula vestia (Sowerby)—1 specimen
Tonicella marmorea (O. Fabr.)—2 specimens

BRACHIPODA

Hemthyris psittacea (Gmelin)—half shell

PELECYPODA

Mya truncata L.— 1 half shell
Mytilus edulis L.—6 shells, and 1 fragment
Saxicava arctica (L.) about* 2 dozen shells and fragments (incomplete)

¹ The species in this list have been determined by Prof. A. G. Huntsman.

ECHINODERMATA

Strongyloentrotus drobachiensis (O. F. Müll.)—1 specimen

SPONGIAE

Halichondria panicea Johnston—1 specimen, and several fragments, apparently the same

ASCIDIACEA

Synoicum haeckeli (Gottsch.)—Several colonies

The strictly marine character of the fauna found in The Narrows will be evident on comparison of the above list with the fauna collected from the sea at Indian Harbour.

*Indian Harbour, Labrador. Small Coves in 1 Foot to 5 Feet of Water*¹—Field No. 14.

AMPHIPODA

Gammarus locusta (L.)—2 specimens (large)

Ischyrocerus anguipes Kryer ?—2 females and 2 young. Agree with anguipes in antennae, gnathopods, and postero-lateral corners of pleon 3. Agree with latipes in telson and uropod 3

Pontogenia inermis (Kryer)—3 specimens

CIRRIPEDIA

Balanus balanoides (Linnaeus)—20 specimens, and fragments

GASTROPODA

Acmaea testudinalis (L.)—1 specimen

Mass of egg capsules—1 specimen

Littorina palliata Say—5 specimens*Littorina littorea* L.—1 specimen

Buccinum undatum L. of the variety figured by Packard as B. undulatum—13 specimens

Littorina rudis var. groenlandica (Mörch)—23 specimens

Margarites helycinus (Fabr.) (of the type formerly called M. campanulata),—17 specimens

PELECYPODA

Mytilus edulis L.—3 specimens*Mya arenaria* L. (incomplete)—1 shell*Crenella* sp.—1 half shell

DECAPODA

Hyas areneus (L.)—1 specimen (5.1 cm)

ECHINODERMATA

Strongylocentrotus drobachiensis (O. F. Müll.)—several broken specimens

The extension of the marine fauna inland beyond Rigolet is most easily ascertained by noting the changes in the molluscan fauna of the intertidal zone as it is traced toward Henrietta island. The two most abundant and persistent of these species are the barnacle Balanus balanoides (L.) and the gastropod Littorina rudis var. groenlandica Mörch. They were found to persist farther toward the interior than any other species of the intertidal zone. Plate XII B indicates the wealth of individuals by which these species are represented on nearly every boulder or rock outcrop on the intertidal zone in the vicinity of Rigolet, where from fifty to a hundred individuals to the square foot is not an unusual number. This gastropod, and the ¹ Specific determinations were made by Prof. A. G. Huntsman.

p. 2393

barnacle which is generally associated with it, are found everywhere on the Labrador seacoast in abundance.

The distribution of these two abundant and characteristic species of the intertidal zone was very carefully investigated along the shores of The Narrows and lake west of Rigolet. Barnacles were found on the east shore one mile west of an old house standing nearly opposite Rigolet or one mile east of the long boulder point near Summer cove. Only three individuals were found here and none farther west. Littorina, however, extends to within one mile of Henrietta island on the east shore of the inlet. Neither barnacles nor Littorina appear to be present on the west shores of The Backway.

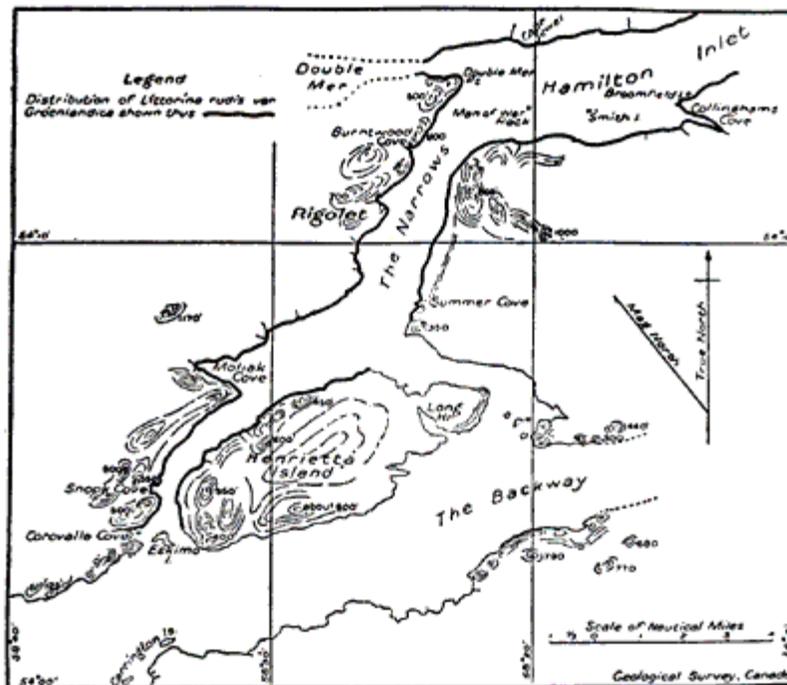

Figure 6.—Map showing the distribution of Littorina rudis var. groenlandica.

Larger Version (41 kb)

On the west shore of The Narrows, Littorina continues abundant to a point 4 miles west of Rigolet, but it is rare in Mullioch bay and Caravalla cove, where only two specimens were found. It is present on the north shore of Henrietta island. West of Henrietta island and Caravalla cove neither Littorina nor barnacles were found. On the west, as on the east shore, barnacles fail to extend as far west as Littorina. The species commonly associated with these typical intertidal shells are likewise absent from the shores to the westward of this island, which fact indicates the decreased salinity of the waters to the westward of Henrietta island (Figure 6).

p. 2394

A consideration of the fish fauna of these waters leads to a similar conclusion. The cod, which is a typical salt-water fish, is not known west of Rigolet. The caplin, which are extensively used as codfish bait, are common at Rigolet, but were not seen west of Henrietta island. West of this island salmon trout are the only fish taken by the fishermen.

The absence of typical marine fishes west of Henrietta island, and the disappearance of the marine intertidal fauna in that vicinity, both indicate the considerable change in the composition of the water which occurs near the eastern end of lake Melville. West of Henrietta island the waters of Lake Melville, though somewhat saline, are too fresh to support a marine fauna in the intertidal zone.

Double Mer is a deep fiord valley which joins Hamilton inlet 3 miles east of Rigolet. An examination of the shores of Double Mer has shown that the fauna represented by Littorina and the barnacle Balanus balanus (L.) persists nearly to the head of this inlet, although the species are represented by greatly diminished numbers in the upper part of the waterway, indicating the decreasing salinity and the nearly complete disappearance of seashore conditions. The relatively small amount of fresh water entering Double Mer, and its wide outlet as compared with lake Melville, explain the much greater extension inland around its shores of a seashore fauna. Seashore conditions may be considered to extend nearly to the head of this waterway.

TEMPERATURE AND DENSITY.

In the following table, which shows the temperature and the relative salinity of the water, as indicated by hydrometer readings, the several stations from 1 to 15 are arranged in a geographical order starting at the outer or sea end of Hamilton inlet and extending inland about 160 miles to station 15. Stations 1 to 4 may be regarded as representing the outside marine conditions, the other stations show the higher temperatures and lower densities of Lake Melville and its connecting waters.

Table of Specific Gravity and Temperature of Waters

No.	Stations	Date	Water temp.		Spec. gravity		Remarks
			Top	Bottom	Top	Bottom
1	Indian Harbour ..	July 13	35° F.	..	1·0182
		Aug. 20	47° F.	..	1·0188
2	Rigolet	July 20	43° F.	..	1·0185
		July 20	41° F.	..	1·0194
3	East side inlet opposite Rigolet	July 21	42° F.	31° F.	1·0201	1·0219
4	East side Henrietta island	July 20	42° F.	..	1·0185
5	The Backway, 6 miles up	July 18, 12.45 p.m.	47° F.	..	1·0149	..	Low tide

Larger HTML Version (16 kb)

p. 2395

*Table of Specific Gravity and Temperature of Waters—
Continued*

No.	Stations	Date	Water temp.		Spec. gravity		Remarks
			Top	Bottom	Top	Bottom
6	The Backway, 6 miles up	July 19, 7.45 a.m.	56° F.	..	1·0066	..	Three-fourths flood
		July 19, 11.30 a.m.	57° F.	..	1·0097
7	The Backway, near head	Aug. 15, 7.00 a.m.	53° F.	..	1·0095	..	Low tide
8	West of Caravalla point, 8 miles ..	July 26, 8.45 a.m.	56° F.	..	1·0096	..
9	Pelters cove	Aug. 14	54° F.	..	1·0094
10	Mulligan bay, 1½ miles off mouth of river ..	July 28	53° F.	..	1·0063	1·0211
11	East side of Long point in bay	Aug. 13, 5.15 a.m.	54° F.	..	1·0003
12	Epinette point ..	Aug. 12, 8.00 a.m.	50° F.	..	0·9995
13	Northwest river, one mile outside mouth of river	July 31, 7.30 p.m.	1·0005	1·0105
14	Northwest river, just inside outlet to Little lake	July 30, 3.15 p.m.	55° F.	..	0·9998
15	Grand lake, opposite cape Blanc	Aug. 4	51½° F.	37° F.	Fresh water depth 90 fathoms.
16	Double Mer, 4 miles from head	Aug. 18, 2.00 p.m.	54° F.	..	1·0099

Larger HTML Version (19 kb)

The densities shown above represent hydrometer readings reduced to specific gravities at a temperature of 60 degrees F. Knudsen's hydrographic tables were used by E. J. Whittaker in adjusting the density figures to this common temperature base. The temperatures of the waters were taken with a Nigretti and Zambra thermometer.

These figures very effectively supplement and confirm the evidence furnished by the distribution of the marine fauna concerning the decreasing salinity of the waterways westward from Indian harbour.

The first station in the table shows the density of an average example of sea-water taken 40 miles from the head of Hamilton inlet. The figures for the water at Rigolet do not differ notably from those of this typical sea-water. After passing west of Henrietta island, however, the figures all depart widely from those representing the densities at Indian Harbour and Rigolet. At Station 13, the density of the water, although taken a mile from the mouth of the river, shows a close approach to that of fresh water. At Station 14, the water, which represents Grand Lake outflow, is perfectly fresh. The water of Carter basin, which is a bay with a narrow outlet on of lake Melville, was not tested for salinity, but the water, though somewhat brackish, is fresh enough to make tea with and was so used by the writer.

It is reported by residents of the region that the waters of Goose bay, although they are brackish in midsummer, are perfectly fresh in spring.

The figures of density represent midsummer conditions when the rivers are at a relatively low stage, as compared with spring conditions. During the spring, when the rivers are in flood, the entire lake would no doubt be much less saline than these figures indicate. They suffice, however, to show clearly the sharp contrast in the physical characters of the water west of Henrietta island as compared with that of Hamilton inlet to the east of it. This contrast indicates that the former represents an inland lake with direct marine connexions, rather than a bay or inlet of the sea.

Lake Melville belongs, with reference to salinity, in the same class as lake Pontchartrain, Louisiana, which is also a tidal lake with waters which are not entirely fresh.

* * * *

SUMMARY.

A summarized review may now be given of the several classes of data which have been presented in the preceding pages.

The coast of Labrador, with its innumerable inlets, bays, islands, and fiords, presents what is known to geologists and geographers as a “drowned coastline.”

The main physiographic features of the region—Lake Melville basin, The Backway, and Double Mer—are in their essential features the products of subaerial and river erosion modified by glaciation and directed in some degree by important structural features (Figure 5 C). These great valleys have suffered some deepening by glacial action, but their main features were developed in Preglacial time when the Labrador coast stood considerably higher than at present and when much or all of Hamilton inlet was a land surface. These waterways cannot, therefore, be regarded as representing in any degree the work of the sea in cutting back or eroding the coast along lines of least resistance.

Mealy mountains are shown to reach a maximum elevation of 3,800 feet—more than twice the height previously ascribed to them.

The physiographic history of the region indicates that the old pre-glacial Hamilton river probably emptied into the sea at some point near West bay through The Backway valley. Some time during the Glacial period glacial damming of The Backway valley forced the Hamilton drainage through The Narrows valley into Hamilton inlet. The eastern end of this valley, which has at Rigolet about the same width as Hamilton river a short distance above lake Melville, may be regarded as the mouth of Hamilton river, lake Melville representing an expansion of that stream which was developed in late geological time. Lake Melville is, geologically speaking, a temporary feature which coastal uplift, if continued, and river filling together will eventually obliterate. Uplift has already raised the region 325 feet higher than it was when Pleistocene submergence reached its maximum.

The shape of Hamilton inlet appears to justify its classification as a ria. This disposition or classification of Hamilton inlet places it in a category of coast-line features which includes both river estuaries and indentations of the seacoast with sides which diverge seawards. The implications of this classification of the shore and coastal forms known as The Narrows and Hamilton inlet as regards the junction of the river mouth and seacoast are not very definite or specific. They appear, however, to preclude placing it farther inland than the junction of Double Mer and The Narrows valleys.

Some geographers might consider it simpler to regard Hamilton inlet as a river estuary, and place the union of seacoast and river much farther eastward, where the coast-line takes its normal trend toward the north and south.

The sharp contrast between the coastal and interior climates is without parallel in any other near-shore region known to the writer. Floating ice may be found on the waters of Hamilton inlet throughout the summer, but ice is unknown in The Narrows or Double Mer after early July. The contrasts between the sub-Arctic climate of the coast and the summer climate of the interior are due to the Labrador current and the floe-ice which it bears southward along the Labrador shore. A journey from the eastern part of Hamilton inlet up lake Melville is, as Holme remarked, "like passing from winter to summer."

The forests also afford a fairly definite index to the climatic change in passing from the icebound coast to the much milder interior. The seacoast is either entirely barren or characterized by small patches of forest with dwarfed trees.

Some of the plants furnish in their distribution important evidence from the botanical viewpoint on the question of the western limit of salt water. This evidence is reflected in the distribution of the halophytes or salt-loving plants.

Perhaps the most striking evidence relating to the western limit of marine conditions is furnished by the distribution (Figure 6) of two of the most abundant sea-shells known on the Labrador coast, Balanus balanus (L.) and Littorina rudis var. groenlandica.

The table of specific gravity and temperature of the waters supplement the biological evidence in showing the great change which the physical character of the water undergoes west of Indian Harbour.

The rocks of the region belong chiefly to Precambrian terrains. Differentiation of these has not been attempted beyond recognizing the very distinctive character of Packard's Domino gneiss.

The Palæozoic sandstone which Low considered to be of Cambrian age was found in Double Mer basin where its occurrence was previously unknown (Figure 4), and the name Double Mer sandstone given to it.

A Pleistocene fauna hitherto unrecognized in this region was found at various points in Lake Melville basin. Many of the fossils in it are partly or completely enclosed in concretions (Plates XVI and XVII). Well-developed terraces were found as far inland as the reconnaissance extended—about 165 miles from the coast (See Figures 4, 8, 9, and 10, and Plate XIII B). Beautifully laminated Postglacial clay occurs in certain inland sections (Plate XV). The stratigraphic equivalence of the fine muds and the sand-terraces now forming and the tendency of the latter to overlap the former was observed at various localities (Figure 10).

p. 2398

The evidence of the terrace is interpreted to indicate an elevation of the coast since the Postglacial submergence amounting to about 325 feet.

Page	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
------	---	---	---	---	---	---	---	---

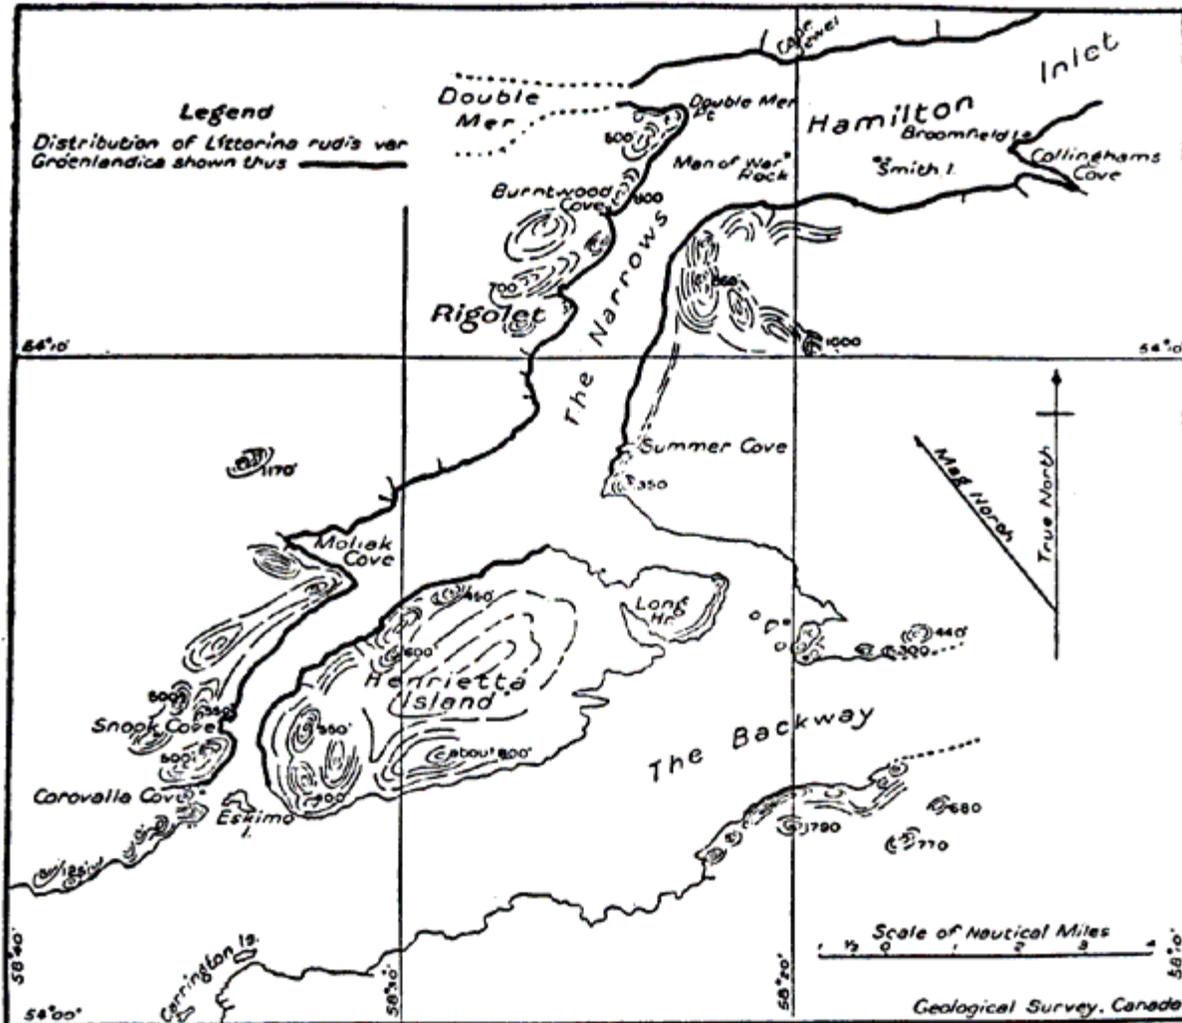

Figure 6.—Map showing the distribution of Littorina rudis var. groenlandica.

Back to Main Page

Table of Specific Gravity and Temperature of Waters

No.	Stations	Date	Water temp.		Spec. gravity		Remarks
			Top	Bottom	Top	Bottom
1	Indian Harbour	July 13	35° F.	..	1.0182
	Indian Harbour	Aug. 20	47° F.	..	1.0188
2	Rigolet	July 20	43° F.	..	1.0185
	Rigolet	July 20	..	41° F.	..	1.0194
3	East side inlet opposite Rigolet	July 21	42° F.	31 ° F.	1.0201	1.0219
4	East side Henrietta island	July 20	42° F.	..	1.0185
5	The Backway, 6 miles up	July 18, 12.45 p.m.	47° F.	..	1.0149	..	Low tide

Table of Specific Gravity and Temperature of Waters—Continued

No.	Stations	Date	Water temp.		Spec. gravity		Remarks
			Top	Bottom	Top	Bottom
	The Backway, 6 miles up	July 19, 7.45 a.m.	56° F.	..	1.0066	..	Three-fourths flood
6	The Backway, 15 miles up	July 19, 11.30 a.m.	57° F.	..	1.0097
7	The Backway, near head	Aug. 15, 7.00 a.m.	53° F.	..	1.0095	..	Low tide
8	West of Caravalla point, 8 miles	July 26, 8.45 a.m.	56° F.	..	1.0096	..
9	Pelters cove	Aug. 14	54° F.	..	1.0094
10	Mulligan bay, 1½ miles off mouth of river	July 28	53° F.	..	1.0063	1.0211
11	East side of Long point in bay	Aug. 13, 5.15 a.m.	54° F.	..	1.0003
12	Epinette point	Aug. 12, 8.00 a.m.	50° F.	..	0.9995
13	Northwest river, one mile outside mouth of river	July 31, 7.30 p.m.	1.0005	1.0105
14	Northwest river, just inside outlet to	July 30, 3.15	55° F.	..	0.9998

	Little lake	p.m.
15	Grand lake, opposite cape Blanc	Aug. 4	51½° F.	37° F.	Fresh water depth 90 fathoms.
16	Double Mer, 4 miles from head	Aug. 18, 2.00 p.m.	54° F.	..	1.0099

Back to Main Page

[23 June,
1924.]No. 1015.MEMORANDUM FROM DOMINION COMMISSIONER OF FISHERIESre UNFAVOURABLE CONDITIONS FOR COD IN THE WATERS OF LAKE MELVILLE.

721-7-9. E.E.P./S.

June 23rd, 1924.

The results which were obtained in regard to temperatures and salinities in Labrador waters, included in the work of officers of the Hydrographic Survey, during July, August and September, 1921, are sufficient to satisfy an expert Marine Biologist that the conditions existing in Lake Melville are so unfavourable for cod that neither their spawning, nor their life-development, nor their adult life would be possible in the waters referred to.

Biologists have determined that the presence of cod requires abundance of food, appropriate temperatures and favourable conditions for schooling and for breeding purposes, dependent especially upon salinity and consequently specific gravity. Specific gravity of sea water in certain areas, such as those under consideration, is such as to prevent cod eggs from floating and to enable them to develop normally. In the records attached, the decision, as to the bearing of existing conditions on the presence or absence of cod fish, is complicated by the fact that the specific gravity of sea water varies with the amount of salts dissolved, and this depends upon temperature. With a rise in temperature, sea water expands and becomes lighter, but the reverse takes place when cold conditions prevail and the water increases in weight down to the freezing point, but the freezing point also varies with the salinity. If, therefore, a series of specific gravity observations are recorded at the same temperature, it is evident that any difference found in this specific gravity is due to salinity alone.

The cod is not a surface fish, but spends most of its life near the bottom at depths from 15 to 50, or 100 fathoms. It is important to notice that the salinities recorded at these depths in the attached salinity determinations are all far below the 35 parts of dissolved salts, which occur in solution in normal sea water, at freezing point.

It must be remembered that in such inlets, lakes, or lagoons, as Lake Melville, there is a restricted entrance or "narrows" admitting inflow or outflow from and to the ocean, and especially submarine ridges, which usually occur in such narrows, either as remains of a former barrier to the sea, or as accumulations of material of a glacial or aquatic origin, that is deposited either by ice sheets in former times and, therefore, of the character of “Moraines,” or as material deposited where the outflow meets the inflow of the tidal water, and the specific gravity is found to decline, and it may sink to so low a salinity as 20, which is that observed in the Baltic Sea and in the Black Sea. The addition of large quantities of fresh water poured down from rivers, ice sheets, or vast areas of deep snow, also tends in the same direction.

In the records attached, the salinities noted, as already pointed out, at depths of from 15 to 50 or 100 fathoms are chiefly interesting because they are practically prohibitive of the presence of large schools of cod and prevent, therefore, the development of fisheries on any commercial or extensive scale. The conditions limit the amount of food on the bottom, which is essential for cod fisheries. The famous Dr. Johan Hjort, one of the greatest fishery experts in the world, and formerly Director of Fisheries for Norway, states in his report on the Canadian Fisheries Expedition, organized in 1914–15 under the auspices of the Dominion Government, that “the cod is a bottom-feeding fish, belonging essentially to the strata near the sea floor where its food is found and where its spawning takes place” (Canadian Fisheries Expedition 1914-15, page 36).

Professor A. P. Coleman, who has published one of the recent scientific reports on Labrador, particularly referring to the geology of the coast, states that cod do not appear to go far into any of the fiords on the Labrador coast, and on his visit to Hamilton Inlet, he saw no cod being taken, and saw not even in fishing schooners, though the waters outside were swarming with fishing craft. In a private letter he agrees that “cod are far less numerous in narrow brackish and shallow waters, is a correct view,” and he adds that he doubts if any cod go so far inland as the waters of Lake Melville.

There is uniformity amongst the leading experts upon sea fisheries that the cod is a typical salt water fish and is a bottom fish and that it occurs normally in salt water. Exceptionally it resorts to inshore shallows, but only spasmodically, when such fish as the “capelin” go inshore for spawning purposes in immense schools. Cod follow the capelin, but the period of spawning lasts a very short time, and the capelin do not enter brackish or fresh water. After the capelin run is over the cod return to their ordinary feeding grounds, where (as Professor Hind in his report published in 1877 on the fisheries of British North America, states) “they are caught with long lines, or baited trawls actually at the bottom of the sea during December, January, February and March, but from July to September they are often found a few fathoms above the bottom.” The whole cod family (Gadidae), as Dr. Günther, Head of the Fisheries Section, British Museum, London, said in his “Study of Fishes,” page 539, that only two or three species inhabit fresh waters, and the cod family includes nearly sixty different species.

Dr. Richard Parnell is even more emphatic in his well-known work on the “Fishes of the Firth of Forth, Scotland,” and said nearly a century ago, that cod are never found but in salt water and remain habitually in the depths of the sea. They never ascend up the rivers or even generally frequent the shores, excepting for the purpose of depositing their spawn, or attracted by migrating hordes of small fish, such as herring and launce. Dr. Theodore Gill, the eminent United States Authority on fish, as quoted by Dr. Starr Jordan ("The Study of Fishes," Vol. II, page 534), said "the ocean banks of moderate depth are the favourite resort of the cod. . . ." It is found up the estuary of the St. Lawrence, though how far has not been definitely stated, probably not beyond the limits of brackish water." Dr. Jordan himself adds "that along the coasts of New England, the Middle States and British North America, and upon all the off-shore banks of these regions, cod are usually found in great abundance during part of the year at least. Some recent investigations in the Bay of Fundy show how marked and definite is the limit of the distribution of cod, as influenced by salinity and temperature, and Dr. A. G. Huntsman, one of our best authorities on the Atlantic Fisheries, recently reported that his investigations in the Bay of Fundy show that cod have a very marked and definite limit in those waters, and that above this limit they practically do not occur.

p. 2401

Dr. Huntsman states in a recent paper on "The Fishes of the Bay of Fundy" (contributions to Canadian Biology, 1921, Nos. III to XII, page 20) "Cod are abundant at Grand Manan, but decrease in abundance towards Passamaquoddy Bay" and he further states on page 5 "in the Bay of Fundy proper, viz., the main portion exclusive of the tributary, the fish fauna shows on the whole what would be expected from its long funnel shape." Outer deep water with a depth of more than 50 fathoms ends at the mouth of the St. John River and the large catches of the important bottom feeding salt-water fishes, viz., the cod, herring, and hake, are restricted to the shoal water bordering this deep basin, the catches decreasing rather abruptly above this basin." Such a sudden cessation of cod at definite limits where the water begins to change from normal sea water to brackish water has been noted in many localities.

Scientific observations have shown that cod eggs are buoyant and float lightly within a few fathoms of the surface, but they will float only in layers of water of the same specific gravity as their own. Experiments have shown that cod eggs, and newly hatched fry, find favourable conditions in strata whose specific gravity is 1.021 with a salinity of at least 30 to 35. When the specific gravity is reduced to 1.020, no less than 50% of the eggs and young have been found, by actual experiment, to sink to the bottom and with the specific gravity reduced to 1,019 nearly the whole of the eggs sink to the bottom. No great fishery like a cod fishery can exist if the conditions are unfavourable for the breeding and for the development of the eggs and fry, for upon this depends the abundance of adult fish essential to an important cod industry.

It is true that Dr. Hjort found cod eggs near the bottom in the Gulf of St. Lawrence at a temperature below freezing (i.e. 32° F.) but this low temperature was demonstrated to be most unfavourable, for it prolonged the development of the eggs to such an extent that the early cleavage stages and very early embryonic condition showed little development even so late

p. 2402

as July and August and the spawning season there apparently commences in April and May.

For favourable development and production of young cod in abundance, the period should not exceed from three to six weeks.

The observations in European waters have shown that cod spawn as early as March and April ; indeed those are the chief months, and all the spawning is over by May. This has been abundantly shown to be true of the cod in Norway. A temperature of 37° F. to 43° F. seems to be the most favourable, although cod will hatch out up to so high a temperature as 54° and 57° F. ; but there is always a loss of eggs and fry by too rapid development, and the same applies to a development which is too slow and prolonged. Proof of this is furnished by the high degree of mortality in cod eggs and young fry reported in Dr. Hjort's investigations in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. The causes of this mortality are no doubt complex, but the low temperature and extremely prolonged development must have been a principal cause. Continuous and extreme cold, and still more, the existence of brackish conditions are detrimental to the breeding of cod, and involve loss of eggs and young fish. There can never be abundant cod supplies if the conditions are fatal to the depositing of eggs, and their development into fry.

Some sea fishes are able to endure a variety of conditions, such as extreme variations in temperature, salinity and specific gravity, and such fish as flounders and other flatfish, shad, alewives or gaspereaux, etc., can endure a wide range of such conditions. Shad and alewives, like salmon and sea trout, have indeed acquired the habit of migrating into fresh water for spawning purposes, but it is doubtful if typical sea fish such as flounders can really breed in fresh water. All observations tend to show that this is important, and even more emphatically does this apply to cod. It is a deep sea type of sea fish and for its food, and growth, and for favourable spawning, and life-development conditions, it must have the normal physical and chemical environment which the open sea provides, and it can only live and grow favourably in inlets or lagoons or shores of the sea where the salinities, specific gravity, temperature, &c., are those of the sea outside.

These conditions, as shown on the attached record of determinations by the Hydrographic Survey, are very unfavourable in Lake Melville.

(Signed) EDWARD E. PRINCE, Dominion Commissioner of Fisheries.

No. 1016.
MEMORANDUM FROM JOHAN HJORT. Sc.D., F.R.S., PROFESSOR AT THE UNIVERSITY OF KRISTIANIA, NORWAY,

*re*THE UNFAVOURABLE CONDITIONS FOR COD IN THE WATERS OF LAKE MELVILLE.

The documents placed before me, viz The Memorandum from the Dominion of Canadas Commissioner of Fisheries, the Extract from Dr. E. M. Kindle's Report of the Geography and Geology of the Lake Melville District considered in the light of modern research in Canadian and North European waters seem to me to give satisfactory proof of the statement made by the Commissioner of the Dominion of Canada in the said Memorandum, " that the conditions existing in Lake Melville are so unfavourable for Cod, that neither their spawning nor their life-development, nor their adult life would be possible in the waters referred to." In addition to this the material at disposal seems to me to warrant the conclusion, that no immigration of cod from the Labrador waters into Lake Melville may be expected, in any case not to such an extent that it could be considered of importance for practical fishing operations.

I base this statement, which gives my answer to the question laid before me, viz., " as to the suitability of the waters of Lake Melville for deep sea codfish " on the following facts and considerations.

The Norwegian coast and coast-waters resemble in many respects the Labrador coast, and the great cod-fisheries of Norway also bear a close resemblance to the cod-fisheries of the Labrador coast.

We find on both sides of the Atlantic a coast-line hundreds of miles long with large inlets or, as they are called in Norway " fjords." In the hydro-graphical character of these fjords there is a great variety. In some of them the depths of coast bank continue like deep-sea-channels into the fjords, such channels having in Norway a depth of several hundred fathoms like the great Laurentian channel of the Gulf of St. Lawrence (See Figure 1). The Canadian Fisheries Expedition 1915. Ottawa 1919, page 22, Fig. 14 which illustrates the field of my investigations in the Gulf of St. Lawrence and which especially gives the depth curves for 200 and for 300 fathoms, as well as the places where floating newly-spawned Cod-eggs were found.

In Norway a distinction is made between two types, sometimes thought to represent different races of Cod. The one belonging to the open waters outside the coast, characterised by its large size, the mature spawning fish

p. 2404

all over 70 or 80 centimeters (i.e., some 30 inches) long. In the long fjords and especially in the southern part of the Norwegian waters, the Skagerrack, there is another type, reaching maturity in some cases at a size of 10 or 11 inches. These types are not everywhere so marked as this, on the contrary there seems to be a great variation in their development according to the natural conditions of the surroundings.

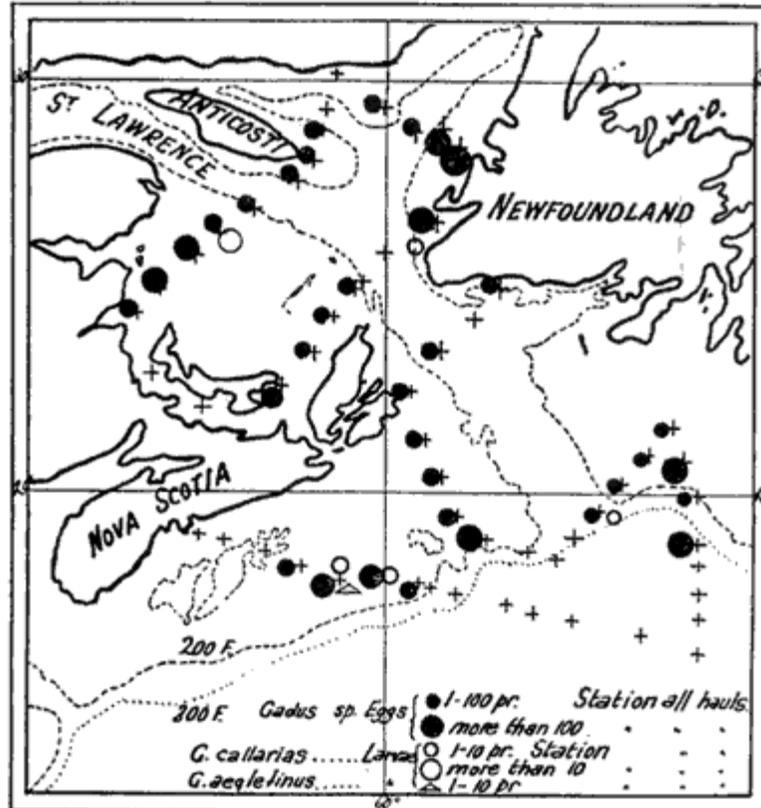

FIG. 1.

Larger Version (46 kb)

The coast type makes enormous migrations of perhaps thousands of miles during a year, a fact which has been established by accurate marking experiments. (Johan Hjort Fluctuations in the great Fisheries of Northern Europe. Rapports et Procès—verbeaux, Vol. X. Copenhagen 1914). Cod marked in Northern Norway have been found as far south as in the neighbourhood of the town Bergen, but all such migrations take place along and outside the coast, only a small part of the migrating shoals being found at the mouth or a few miles inside the deep fjords, where they may be caught mostly at depths of 50 to 100 fathoms. Among some 5,000 marked cod a number of some 500 were recaptured none of which were found further in than the mouth of a fjord.

p. 2405

As a proof of this statement, it may be mentioned that in the

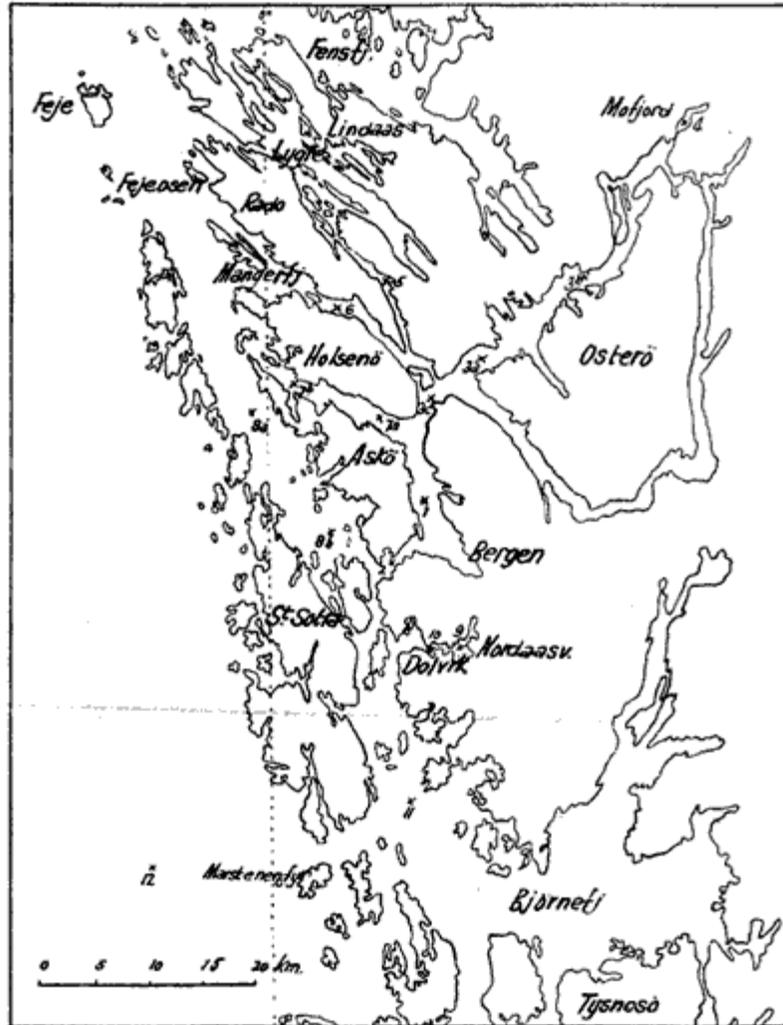

FIG. 2.

Larger Version (53 kb)

year 1919 the catch of large codfish off the coast in the greatest fishing district of Norway, the province Nordland, amounted to some 22,500 tons, while the “ fjordfish ” comprising both immigrating coast fish and the local fjord type amounted to some 890 tons in spite of this district being conspicuous for its large open and deep fjords.

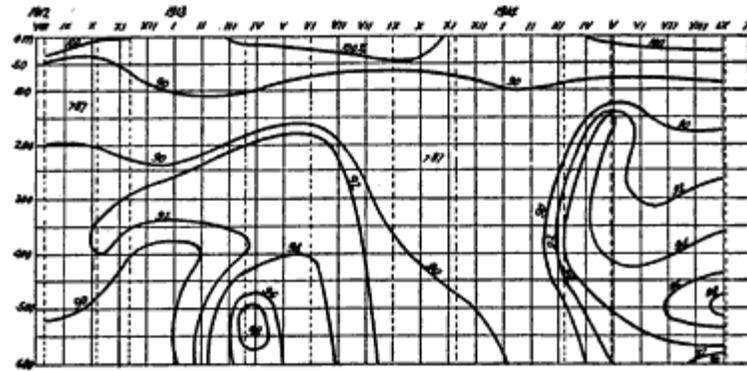

FIG. 3.

Larger Version (38 kb)

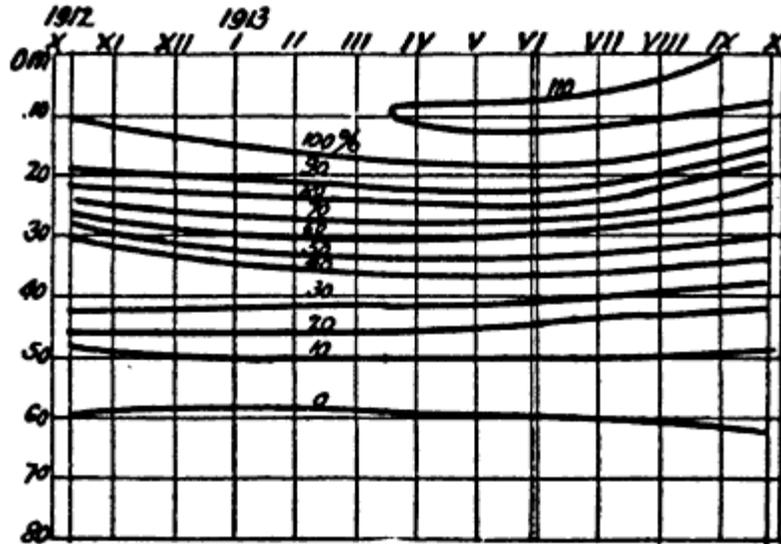

FIG. 4.

Larger Version (34 kb)

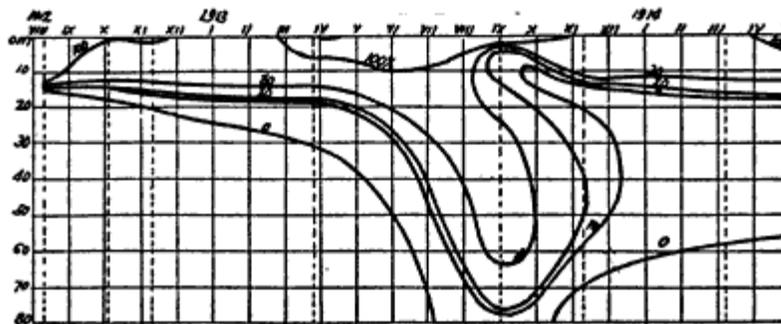

FIG. 5.

Larger Version (32 kb)

The chart, Figure 2, may serve as an example of the variety of the Norwegian fjords with regard to geographical topography, and it is an experience of a hundreds of years, that no immigration of Cod takes place into fjords, where barriers exist and shallow entrances lead into deeper and wider basins farther inland. The water on such barriers may have all depths from say 50 fathoms up to one or two fathoms and the deep basin behind the entrance may be several hundred fathoms deep.

The natural conditions of this special class of fjords have long been an interesting subject for study. In the year 1897 I discovered—(Report on Norwegian Fishery and Marine Investigations, Vol. 1. 1900)—that in the so called “Drammensfjord ” a branch of the Christiania fjord, the water was deficient in Oxygen and poisoned by hydrogen sulphide (H₂S) which of all living organisms only permits some special kind of bacteria to live in the water. Similar conditions were previously found in the Black Sea. Since then extensive and very valuable investigations have been made by Dr. T. Gaarder (Torbjørn Gaarder. Surstoffet i fjordene. Bergens Museums Aarbok 1915–1916)—who determined the oxygen present in the seawater at different depths of a long series of different fjords at different months of the year.

In the following figures (3–5) some examples of his work are given. In these figures the amount of oxygen is expressed in percentages of normal saturation of seawater under the temperatures present. Figure 3 gives an example from the station marked 11 (on the chart, fig. 2) which is situated fairly near the coast in a fjord having a deep channel from the outside waters, and it will be seen that the percentage of oxygen in the seawater here is fairly high (over 90%) all through the year even in depths down to 600 meters (over 300 fathoms). In the other figure (4 and 5) examples are given from fjords having shallow entrances (about 3 meters) and deep basins behind. Here the percentage of oxygen approaches zero in the deep water in any case in some parts of the year. Other examples contained in the paper show intermediate conditions and the whole work furnishes valuable material in explanation of the important fact that these fjords are so poor in organic life and that the great fish-shoals of the outside waters never migrate into these stagnant basins.

From the admiralty chart (No. 375, Sandwich Bay to Nain) it is evident that the depths at the entrance to Lake Melville through the Narrows off Rigoulette may not exceed some ten, or at the most twelve fathoms. The depths of the lake itself are much greater, at least 100 fathoms. From the surrounding land large rivers pour enormous quantities of fresh water into the lake. From this there must result a strong outgoing current carrying very fresh water, which is borne out by the low specific gravity on the surface and at the bottom off Rigoulette observed by Dr. Kindle on the 20th July and by the many observations of low salinity in the surface waters of the lake.

On the other hand there may be a possibility of an accidental and very rare inflow of water from outside at such periods of the year when the outflow of fresh water stops, but the lack of importance of this inflow is evident from

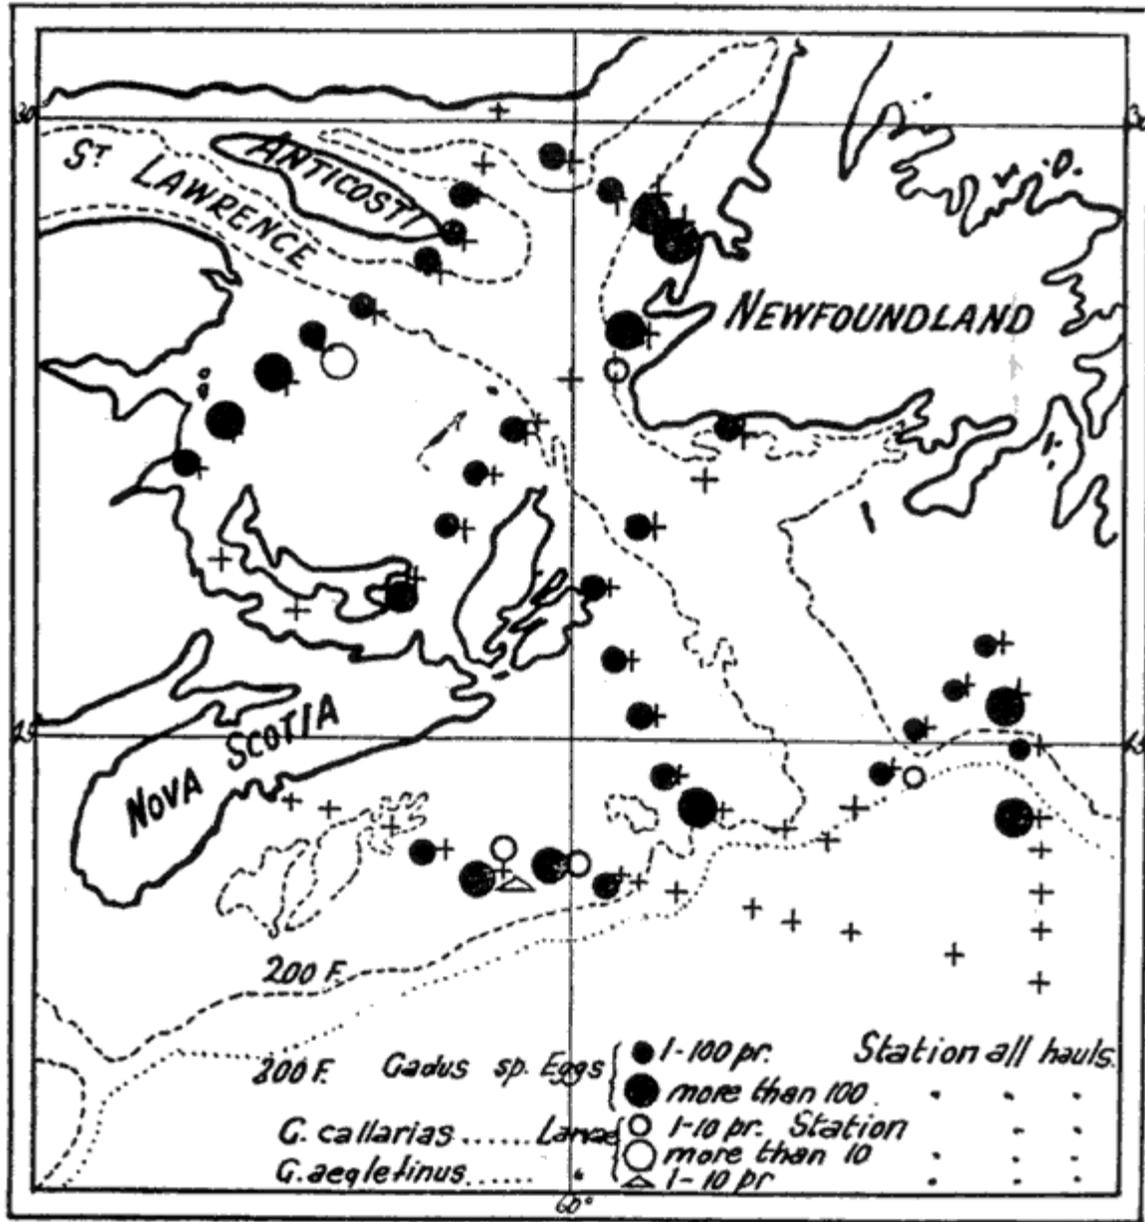

FIG. 1.

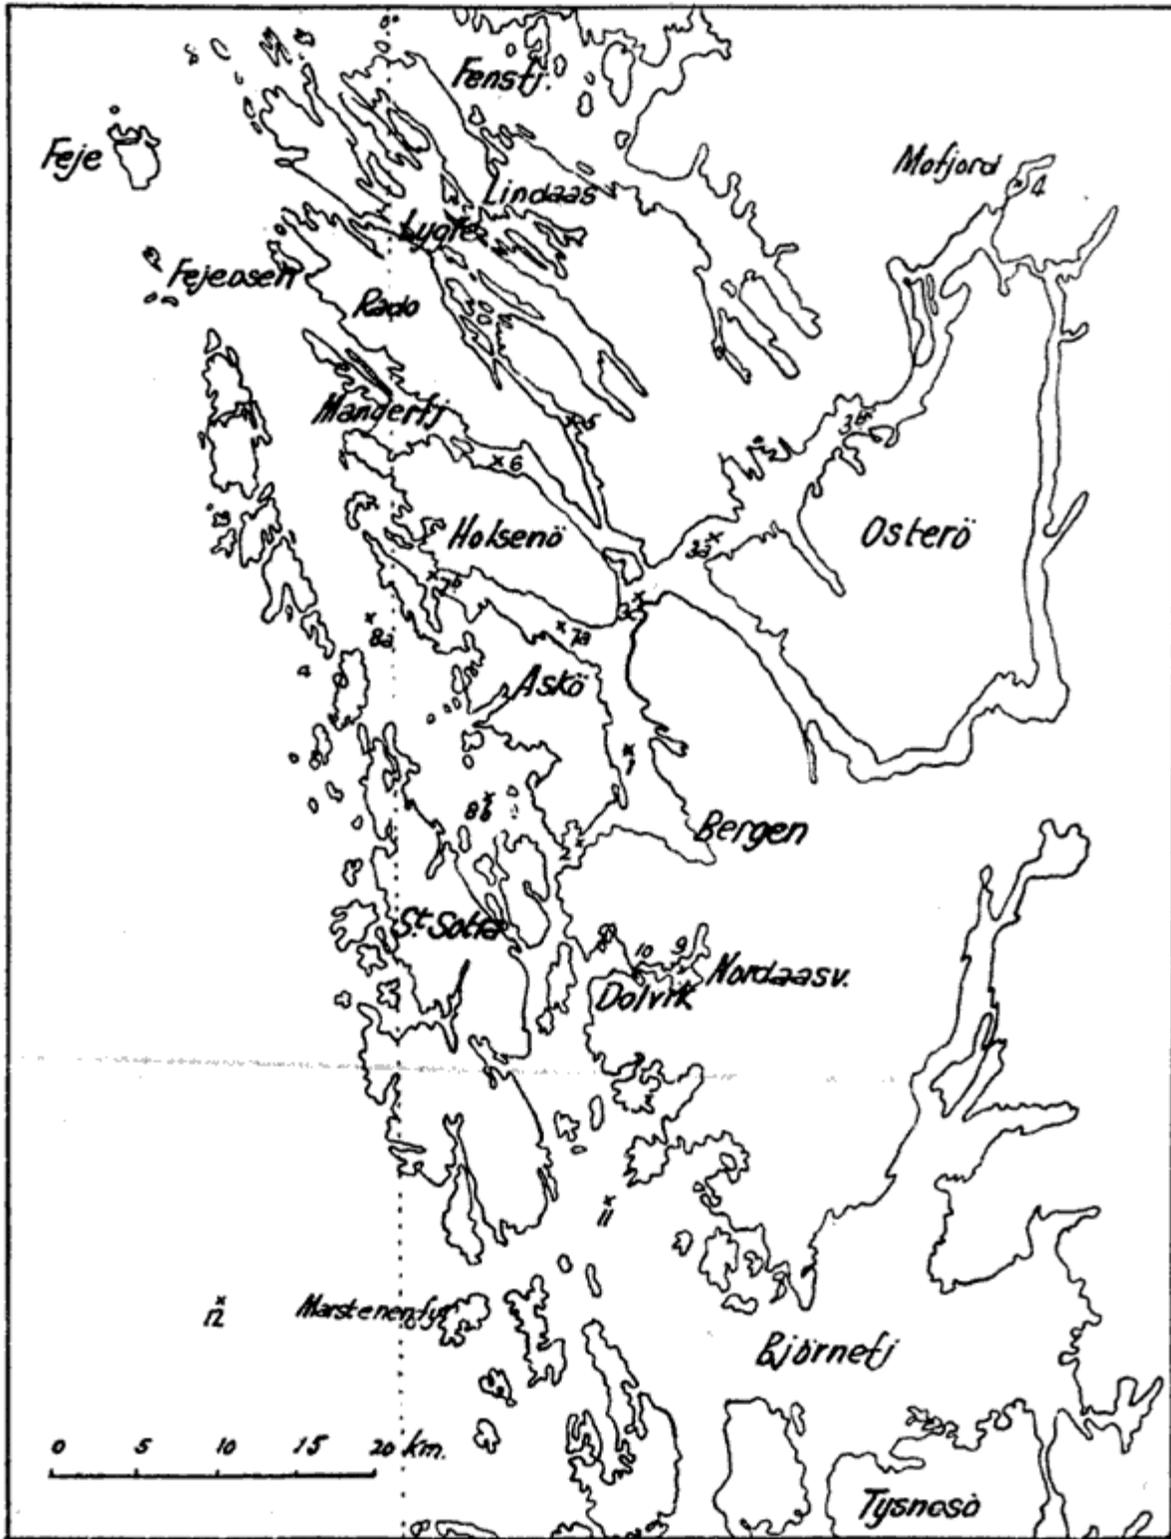

FIG. 2.

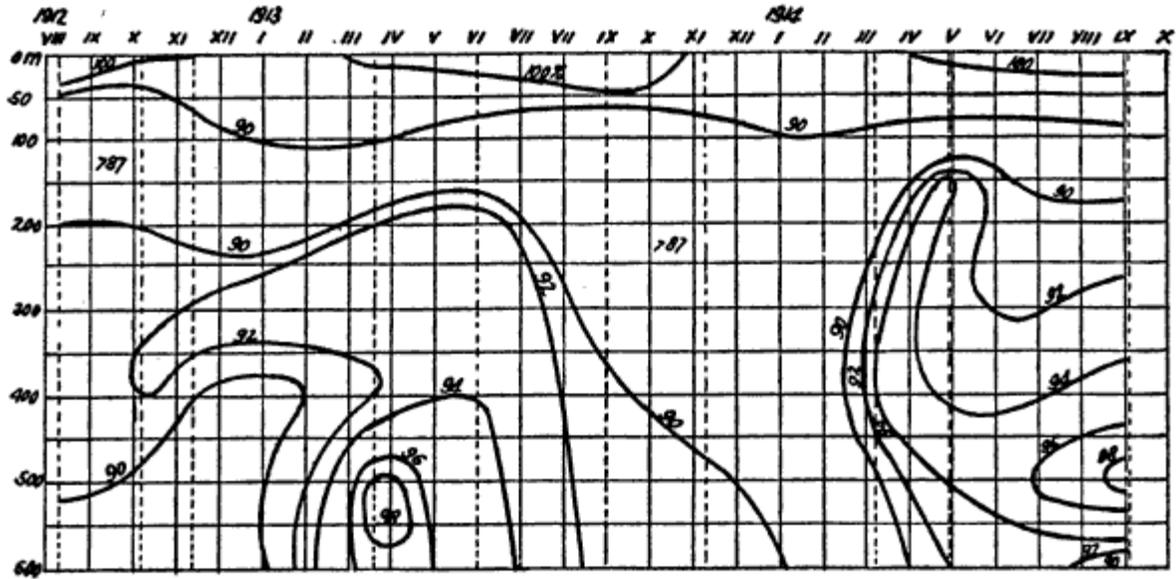

FIG. 3.

Much Larger Version (75 kb)

[1927lab]

Back to Main Page

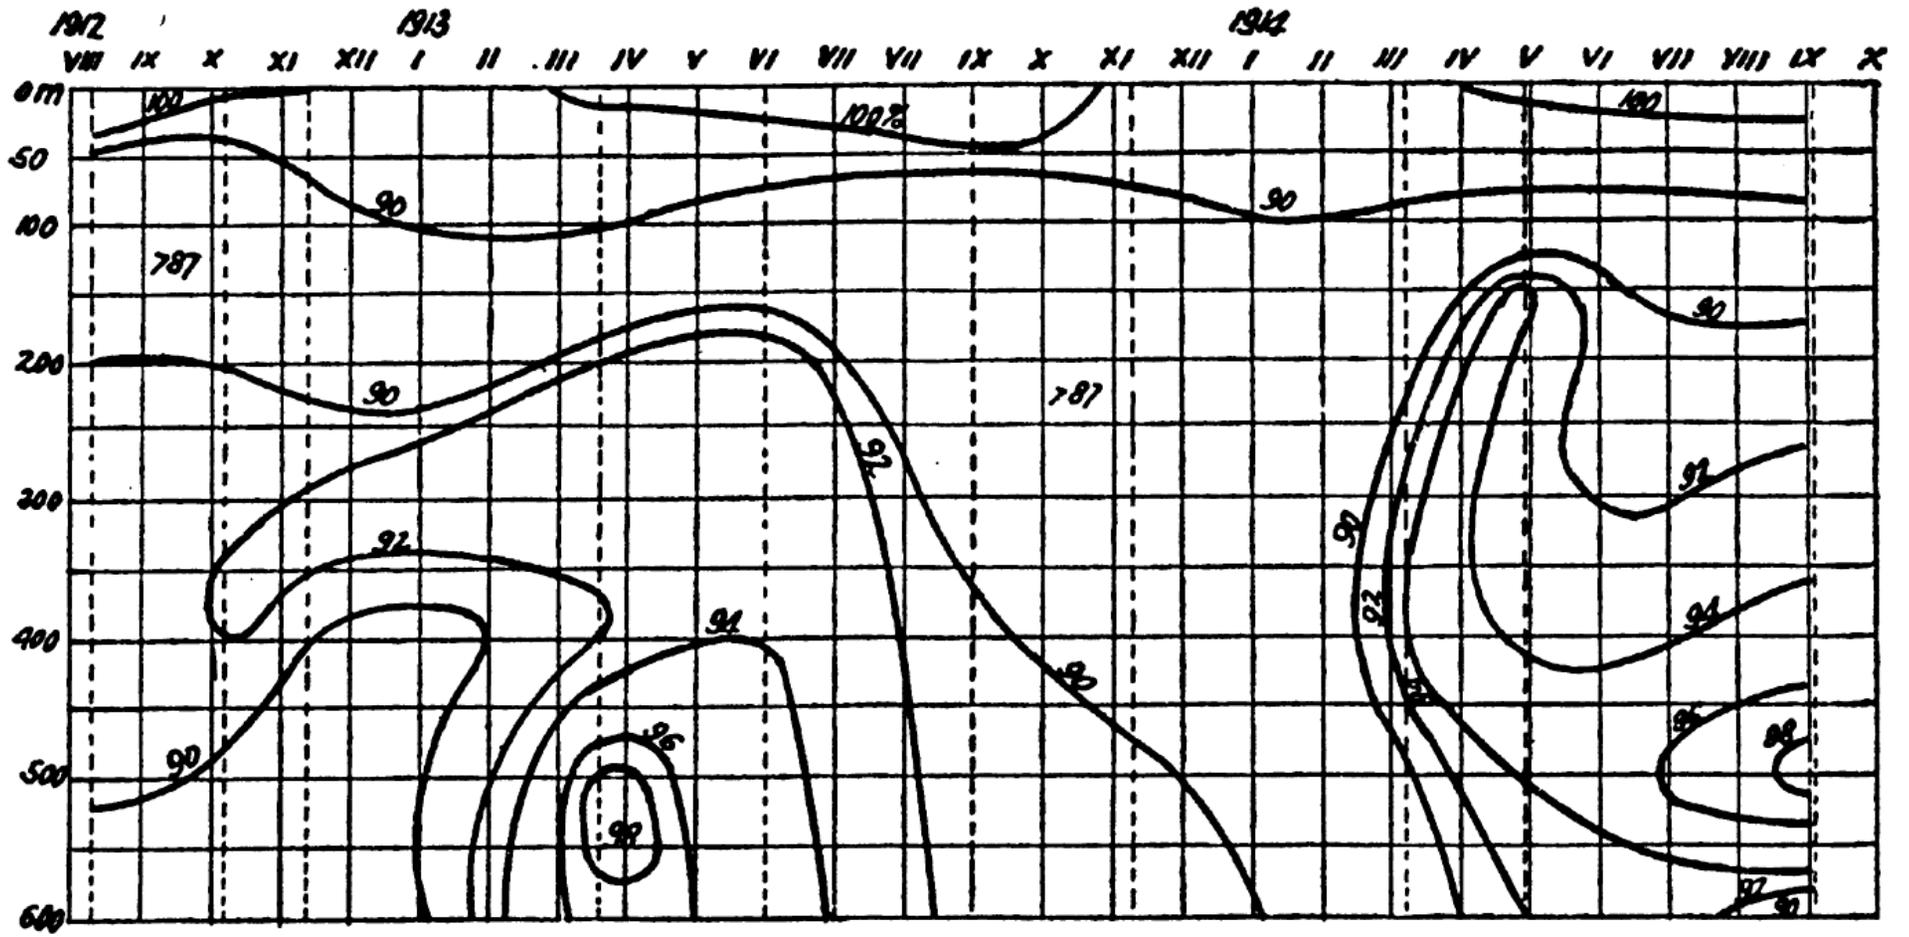

FIG. 3.

[1927tab]

Back to Larger Version Page

[Fig. 4]

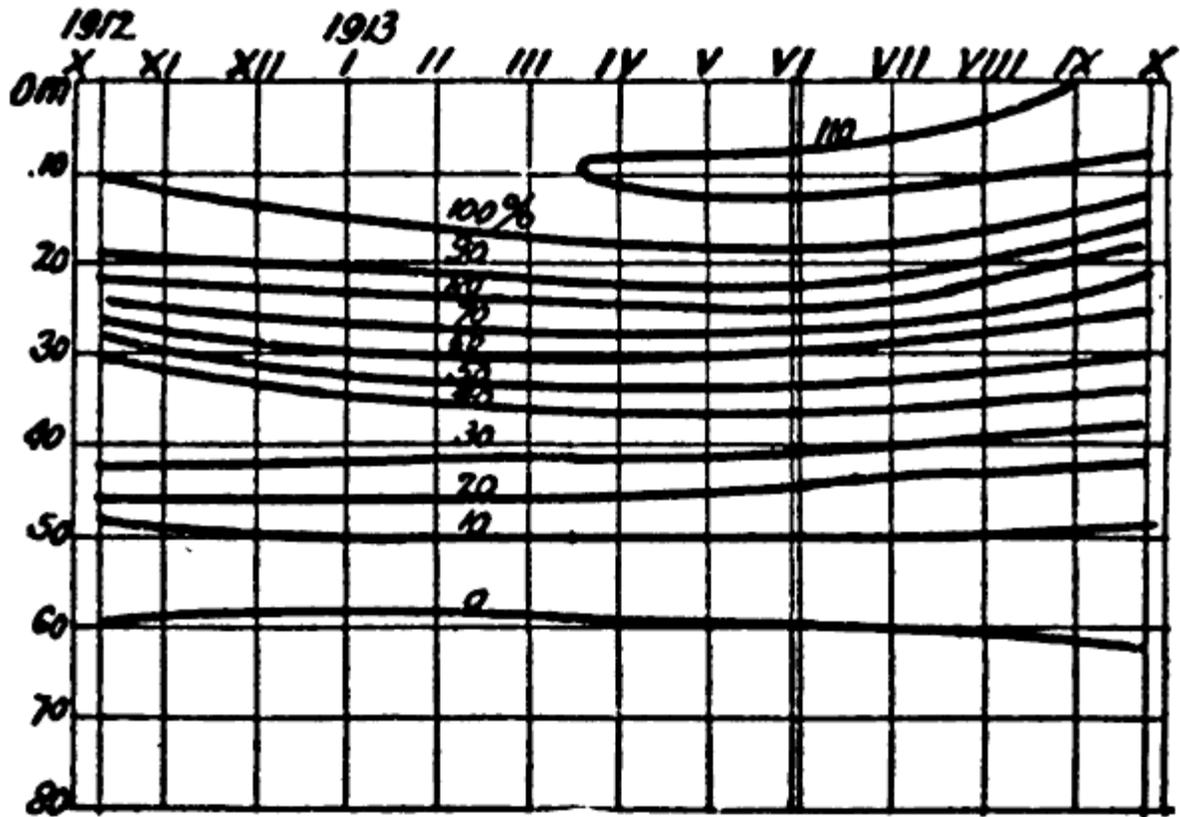

FIG. 4.

[Fig. 4]

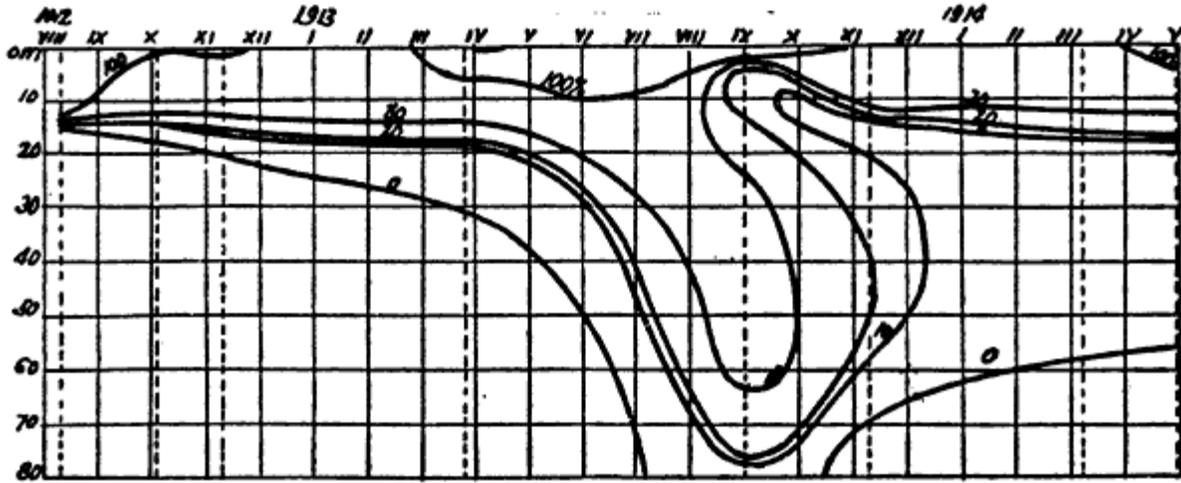

FIG. 5.

Much Larger Version (59 kb)

[1927lab]

Back to Main Page

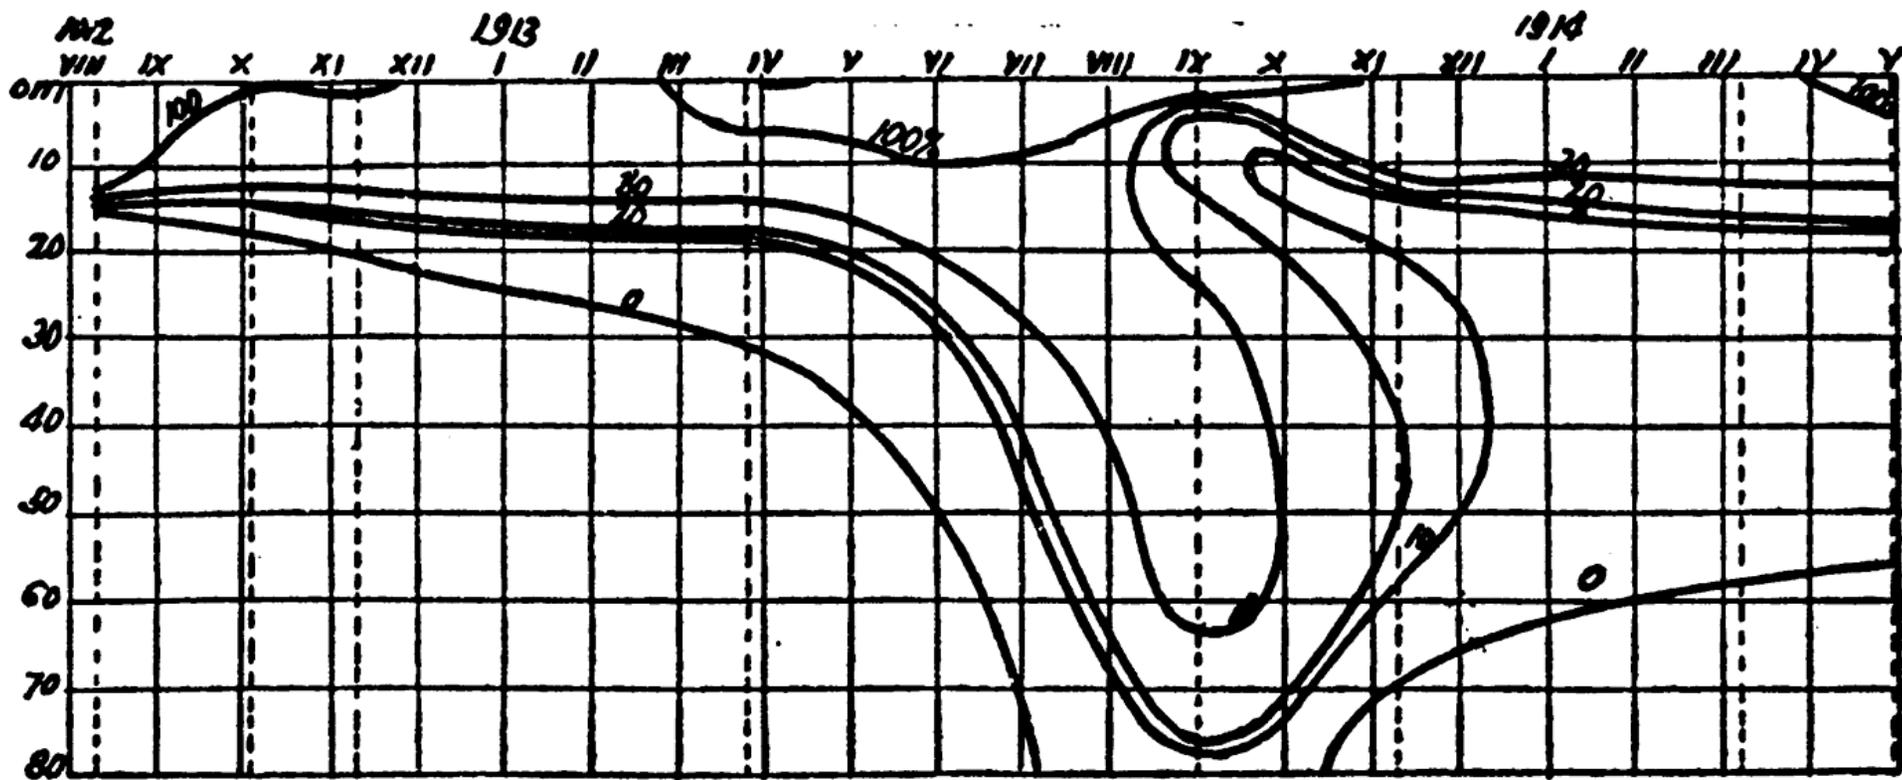

FIG. 5.

[1927tab]

Back to Larger Version Page

the observations which show that the salinity in the deep waters of the lake is much smaller than the salinity observed in similar depths in the waters off the coast. See Sir John Murray and Dr. Johan Hjort The Depths of the Ocean, Macmillan, 1912, Fig. 95, page 110 and the Canadian Fisheries Expedition 1914–1915, mentioned above plate 2, following page 343.

From these facts and the considerations given above I feel confident that the conclusion may be drawn that Lake Melville cannot be considered as a suitable water for the life or even for the periodic visits of the large shoals of Cod migrating off the coast of Labrador.

JOHAN HJORT.

No. 1017.

C

MEMORANDUM FROM JOHAN HJORT, Sc.D., F.R.S.

ON THE PREVALENCE OF UNFAVOURABLE CONDITIONS FOR COD IN THE WATERS OF LAKE MELVELLE FOR SOME TIME PAST, SAY, SINCE 1763.

The unfavourable conditions for cod in the waters of Lake Melville, described in a previous memorandum are mainly due to two factors: the meteorological conditions especially the rainfall and the topographical conditions, especially at the narrow and shallow entrance to the Lake, called “the Narrows.” The question, if these factors have remained unaltered during the last two hundred years, can only be answered on the basis of geological evidence, since no historical reports or material are at hand for all this space of time. As I am no specialist in the science of geology myself, I have consulted my colleague, Dr. J. Schetelig, who is professor of geology at the University of Christiania, and one of the first specialists on the subject. He has sent me the appended letter of the 15th inst., in which he gives all the geological material, which I consider necessary for answering the question laid before me, viz: if the unfavourable conditions for cod in Lake Melville have prevailed for the last two hundred years.

From Dr. Schetelig’s letter it will be seen that the geological evidence favours the view, that rainfall in the last two hundred years has remained of the same order of magnitude, and that there are reasons for the belief that the rainfall one or two hundred years ago was larger than at the present day.

For the consideration of the changes in the topography, the geological evidence goes in the direction of proving that the oscillations, which took place in Northern latitudes on both sides of the Atlantic, came to a stage of rest several hundred years ago, especially along the coast line, f.i. along the Norwegian coast and along the coast of Labrador, where the Narrows are situated.

p. 2409

“ The extracts from reports on the District of Ungava ” (published by the province of Quebec, Canada, by the Dep. of Colonisation, Mines and Fisheries (Mines Branch, Quebec 1913), strongly support the view of the similarity between the oscillations of the Scandinavian and the North American coast since the glacial period, because they describe the uprise of the coast since the glacial period as being of the same magnitude as on the European side, where historical evidence is at hand for the last hundreds of years. Dr. Schetelig states that even if the largest change, which has been observed in any part of these territories, were made a basis for calculation, this would only lead to the conclusion, that the entrance to Lake Melville in 1750 might have been 1·7 meter deeper than it is at present.

I may add, that the latest reports f.i. A. P. Coleman's North Eastern Part of Labrador and New Quebec (Geol. Survey Survey of Canada, Memoir 124, 1921) also supports Mr. Schetelig's view.

On the basis of this material the conclusion follows that the unfavourable conditions for the life, the migrations and fisheries of cod in the waters of Lake Melville have remained unaltered for several hundreds of years past

JOHAN HJORT.

No. 1018.

LETTER FROM DR. SCHETELIO, PROFESSOR OF GEOLOGY AT THE UNIVERSITY AT CHRISTIANIA,
TO DR. JOHAN HJORT,[15 Nov., 1922.]

APPENDED TO PRECEDING MEMORANDUM.

Professor Johan Hjort,
Biological Laboratory,
University, Christiania.

DEAR PROFESSOR HJORT,

I have duly received the documents and charts concerning the Hamilton Inlet of the Labrador Coast and have considered the question which you have placed before me, if the meteorological and topographical conditions of the Hamilton Inlet and Lake Melville have remained unaltered as they are now during the last 150 or 200 years, or more definitely since the year 1763.

There are no reasons for believing that the meteorological conditions have been characterized by less rainfall in this period. On the contrary the great progress of the glaciers of Norway during the eighteenth century indicate that the humidity was greater in this century and that therefore the supply of fresh water by the large rivers, which end in Lake Melville, was larger at that time than it is now, which tends to show that the fjord system of the Hamilton Inlet was then even less favourable for cod than it is now.

The other and still more important factor for a change of the hydro-graphical conditions are the oscillations in the bottom of the sea. If the Labrador coast during the last 150 or 200 years had undergone an uprise of considerable dimensions this might have influenced the hydrographical conditions considerably.

At "the Narrows," the entrance to Lake Melville, the hills on the Southern side have marked terraces of a height of 150 feet above the present water level. Further in towards Southwest in the Hamilton river valley marine terraces have been found in a height of some 300 feet above the sea. If the depths in the narrow entrance (the Narrows) which now are 10 fathoms only, were increased by 150 feet (say 25 fathoms) this would of course also lead to a widening of the entrance and to a considerable increase of the salt water flowing into Lake Melville.

For the consideration of this problem it is first of all of importance to remember the great similarity between the postglacial history on both sides of the Atlantic in the two areas Fennoscandia and the Labrador territory.

p. 2411

The events in these two areas seem to have been synchronous since the late glacial period.

The Labrador district formed a definite and separate glacial area. During the last glacial period, which in America is called the "Wisconsin" period and in Europe the "Mecklenburgian," there was a narrow strip along the coast free of ice along the North coast of Labrador and along the west coast of Norway.

At the end of this period there appear in both these areas the late glacial submergence illustrated on the two appended charts of the "isobases," which are drawn from the investigations of the celebrated Swedish professor G. de Geer, who investigated the areas of Scandinavia as well as of North America. In both areas he found a perfect similarity, a larger submergence in the centre of the area and a smaller submergence towards the coasts. It is now generally accepted that the explanation of this submergence is to be sought in an isostatic movement due to the pressure of the ice. As far as Scandinavia is concerned the maximal submergence coincides with the final melting of the ice.

In the postglacial time an emergence or uplift takes place in both the submerged areas leading to the old position of equilibrium, and the uplift increases from the coast towards the Central areas.

For Norway Professor W. C. Brogger has proved that the uplift of South eastern Norway had already come to the present stationary position during the bronze age, i.e., that the relation between the sea and the land in South eastern Norway has been unaltered during the last 2,500 years. The marine limit is at the town of Christiania at 220 meter and at the mouth of the Christiania fjord at ca. 150 meter above the sea.

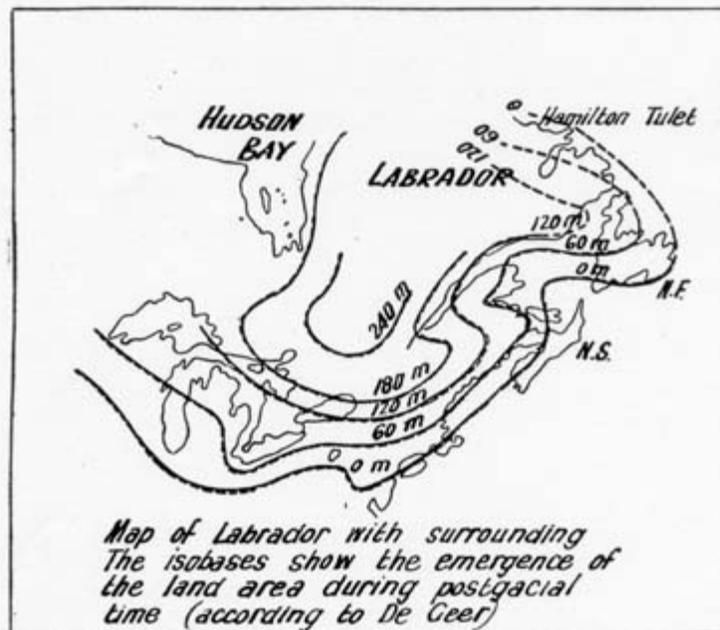

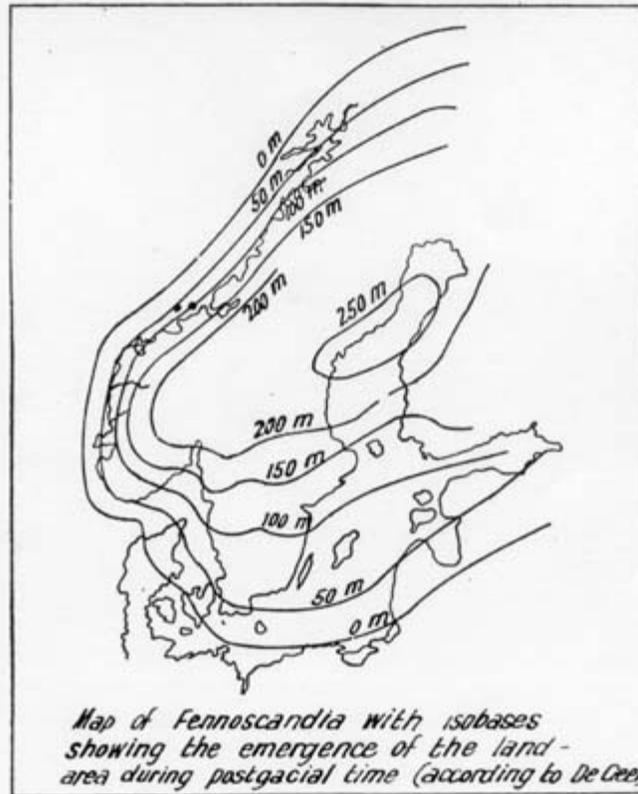

In the central parts of Fennoscandia this is somewhat different, the uplift here has not ended yet. Around the Gulf of Bothnia (a part of the Baltic) the maximum upheaval of the coast line is one centimeter a year or one meter a century. Since the year 1750 the coast line of the Gulf of Bothnia has therefore been lifted 1.7 meter. The uplift is therefore very slow.

For the Canadian area it may be stated generally on the analogy of the events in the Fennoscandian area that the uplift took place at a greater speed in the beginning of the postglacial period than in the later part, that the uplift has been decreasing and that it now is very near the stable state of equilibrium.

My knowledge of the Canadian literature on the subject may not be complete. For the West coast of Labrador towards the Hudson Bay, Tyrrell (American Journal of Science Ser. 4 Vol. II. 1896) states as follows : " The postglacial uplift . . . of the shore of Hudson Bay has virtually ceased, and . . . the land has now reached a stable condition." Referring to the Northern part of the U.S.A. Davis (Physical Geography, 1900) states that the coast of Massachusetts and New Jersey in our time is sinking one or two feet a century. Spencer gives the same statement for the Northern part of the Eastern coast of the States which "is now sinking at the rate of two feet a century." (American Journal of Sc. Vo. 19, 1905.)

p. 2412

p. 2413

The conclusion from these statements seems to be that the peripheral parts of the Canadian area have come to rest, that the uplift is ended and that the neighbouring districts outside the area are found to be sinking very slowly.

The Hamilton Inlet belongs to what is here called the periphery of the Canadian area of glacial submergence. Marine terraces at the height of 150 feet are found at the entrance to Lake Melville and at the height of 300 feet in the Hamilton River Valley. It is very likely that the coast here has long ago been lifted to the stable equilibrium like the Labrador coast bordering the Hudson Bay, since both coasts have the same distance from the central part, which has been lifted to the greatest height.

Moreover it must be concluded that even if we accept an uplift as great as that now taking place in the Gulf of Bothnia—i.e., 1 cm. a year- we cannot even then consider the uplift to exceed one meter and seventy centimeters or approximately one English fathom for the time since the year 1750. Even this uplift, which in itself is very unlikely, would thus not have reduced the depths of the entrance to the Lake Melville, more than by one fathom in the time from the year 1750 to the present day, and such a difference in the topographical conditions can in no way have altered the hydrographical conditions of the fjord to any appreciable extent.

Yours sincerely

JAKOB SCHETELIG.

Christiania, 15th November, 1922.

AUTHORITIES UPON DETERMINATION OF LIMIT BETWEEN “ RIVER” AND “SEA.”

No. 1019.

C

THE TWEE GEBROEDERS, 3 C. ROBB 336, 341, 342, PER SIR W. SCOTT (LORD STOWELL).

No. 21

Vide Vol. V, page 2093.

No. 1020.

C

DUKE OF GORDON v. EARL OF MURRAY (MORAY).

15 MORISON'S DICTIONARY OF DECISIONS, 12797.

* * * *

In this case a judgment of the House of Peers betwixt the Duke of Gordon and Earl of Murray was cited, but was found to be a different case (See APPENDIX.) The Duke of Gordon had a salmon-fishing in ostio fluminis de Spey. The Earl of Murray had the superior fishing of this river ; and the question was, to ascertain the proper limits of these respective fishings. It was the opinion of the Court, that the ostium fluminis is that precise point where the river runs into the sea, at whatever time of the tide ; and, there-fore, that the ostium fluminis is a variable point, sometimes higher and some-times lower, according as the sea approaches or recedes from the land. The House of Peers were of a different opinion. They interpreted a grant of a salmon-fishing in ostio fluminis more benignly. They judged the ostium fluminis not to be confined to a point, but to comprehend the whole space betwixt the lowest ebb and the highest flood-mark ; and thereby to be an immoveable space instead of a moveable point. Therefore it was adjudged, “That the Earl of Murray has the exclusive right of fishing in the river Spey, downward to the place where the line which the sea makes upon the coast cuts the river at high water ; and that he has no right to fish beyond that line : That the appellants the Duke of Gordon has the exclusive right of fishing from and below the said line to the sea ; and that he has no right to fish above that line.” Hence it appears that the point in that case was to determine betwixt two parties, having both right to fish in the same river, but in different places.

*

*

*

*

No. 1021

HORNE v. MACKENZIE (1839) MACLEAN & ROB.
(H.L.) 977.

(No. 37)

(Appeal from the Court of Session, Scotland.)

[1839.]

Archibald Horne, Judicial Factor, on Cromarty, and Colin
M^cKenzie of Newhall, Appellants.¹

[Sir F. Pollock—Pemberton.]

The Honourable Mrs. Maria Hay Mackenzie of Cromarty and Captain Hugh Munro, her Tacksman, Respondents.

[Attorney-General (Campbell)—Buchanan.]

Salmon Fishing—Statutes 1424, c. 11, &c.—Stake Nets— Evidence.—At the trial of an issue as to whether certain stake nets and other engines were placed in situations prohibited by the statutes regulating the salmon fisheries, the judge in the course of his direction to the jury, after defining estuaries as spaces between the strictly proper river and the strictly proper sea, the waters of which were partly salt and partly fresh, proceeded thus :
—“ The mere name is of little importance. The thing to be looked to is the fact of the absence or of the prevalence of the fresh water, though strongly impregnated by salt.
Now, where this fresh water prevails, though in the estuary, these structures are illegal.” The Court of Session disallowed a bill of exceptions to the direction. The House of Lords reversed this judgment, and remitted the cause with directions to allow the bill of exceptions, and grant a new trial.

1ST DIVISION.

—
Ld. Cockburn, Judge
at Trial.

Question raised,—Whether it was matter for exception that a witness had been allowed during his examination to use, for the purpose of reference, a printed copy of a report, with certain jottings and calculations recently made thereon, relative to the subject of his testimony, which report he had prepared on the employment of the party adducing him as a witness :— observed, per L. C.—It is clear that for some purpose at least the witness was at liberty to refer to the paper he produced, and that a bill of exceptions could not have been supported on that ground.

HORNE and another
v. MACKENZIE and another

By a statute of Robert I., A. D. 1318, c. 12, it is enacted thus :— “Item ordinatum est et assensum, quod omnes illi qui habent croas, vel piscarias, vel stagna aut molendina in aquis ubi ascendit mare et se retrahit, et ubi salmunculi vel smolti

“ descendunt et ascendunt, tales croæ et machinæ infrapositæ sint ad minus de mensura duorum pollicum in longitudine et trium pollicum in latitudine, ita quod nulla fria piscium impediatur ascendendo vel descendendo, secundum quod libere possint ascendere et descendere ubique.”

Another statute, in the reign of James I., 1424, c. 12., enacts,—“ Item, It is ordanyt that all cruifis and yairs, set in fresche waters quhair the sea fillis and ebbs, the quhilk destroys the fry of all fisches, be destroyt and put away for three yeirs to cum.”

Another statute, in the reign of James III., 1469, c. 87., enacts,—“ Item, for the multiplication of fish, salmond, grilsis, and trowtes, quhilk are destroyed by cowpes, narrow messes, nettes, pryne, set in rivers that hes course to the sea, within the flude mark of the sea, it is advised in this instant parliament, that all sic cowpes and pryne be destroyed and put away for three ziers. ”

Another statute, in the reign of James IV., 1488, c. 13., enacts,—“ It is statute and ordained, that all cruiffis and fisch-dammys that ar within salt watyrs quhar the sey ebbs and flows, be utterly destroyed and put down, alswell thair belongis to our sovereign lord, as utheris throw all the realme. And as anent the cruiffis in fresche waters, that they be of sic largnes and sic days keepit as is containit in the actis and statutes maid thereupon of befor.”

Another statute, in the reign of Queen Mary, 1563, c. 3., ratifies the preceding statute, with the following addition :— “ That is to say, that all cruives and yairs that ar set. of late upon saundes and schauldes far within the water where they were not of before, that they be incontinent, tane down, and be put away, and the remanent cruives that ar set and put upon the water sandis to stand still quhil the first day of October next to cum, and incontinent after the said first day to be destroyed and put away for ever.”

In 1828 the respondent, as proprietrix of salmon fishings in the river Conon, and her tacksman, Captain Hugh Monro of Teaninich, applied to the 30 Court of Session, by bill of suspension and interdict, against several proprietors of fishings situated to the eastward of her fishings, on the ground, that they were fishing illegally within the locality described by the statutes above recited. In support of this application it was averred, that the whole expanse of water between a point at or near the town of Dingwall and the two great headlands called the Sutors, which abut upon the ocean and form the entrance to what is known as the Frith of Cromarty, was subject to the prohibitions in the said statutes.*

* The following description of the locus in question is taken from the report of the case in the courts below, vide 16 Sess. Cas. (1st Ser.) 1286, 1287 :—

“In the northern shore of that large arm of the sea which is known by the name of the Moray Frith, there is an opening of 4,400 feet in width between two rocky headlands termed the Sutors of Cromarty. The water within the Sutors is the Frith of Cromarty, which expands on either side into the bay of Cromarty on the south, and the bay of Nigg on the north. After passing inwards as far as Invergordon, the breadth of the water is contracted to about three-fourths of a mile, after which it increases, and, at high water, varies from two miles to one mile throughout the remainder of the Cromarty Frith, which reaches above the town of Dingwall.

p. 2417

The application was opposed by Mr. Archibald Horne, accountant in Edinburgh, judicial factor on the estate of Cromarty, situated near the Sutors ; and also by M'Leod of Cadboll, Mackenzie of Newhall, and others whose fishings are situated between the Cromarty fishings and those of the respondent. By these parties it was contended, that all the water below the line of lowest ebb tide beyond which the sea never recedes, whatever shape or form the contiguous coast might assume, was excluded from the operation of the prohibitions aforesaid.

The bill of suspension was passed ; and a record having been made up, issues were adjusted for all the parties in a corresponding form, but it was agreed that the issue as to the Cromarty fishings should be held as the issue for all the others, mutatis mutandis, and that their interests respectively should be determined by the result of that issue. The following accordingly was the issue sent to trial, viz. “Whether the defender, Mr. Horne, or his predecessors in office, has or have wrongfully fished for salmon in the Frith of Cromarty, opposite to the lands and estate of Cromarty and others, during the years 1824, 1825, 1826, 1827, and 1828, or any part thereof, by means of stake nets, bag nets, yairs, or other engines, placed in situations prohibited by statute ? ”

The affirmative of the issue was with the respondents, the pursuers of the action. In the course of the trial a witness for the respondents, who had been employed to make a survey of the subjects in dispute, proposed to refer to a printed paper purporting to be a report of his survey, and containing also certain manuscript jottings on the margin. This was objected to by the appellants, but the objection was over-ruled, and the examination proceeded.

After a variety of evidence adduced by both parties, the judge directed the jury in point of law, and a verdict was returned for the respondents.

The above ruling of the judge in respect to the evidence, and certain parts of his direction to the jury in point of law, were then made the subject of a bill of exceptions.

The first ground of exception was thus set forth in the bill : —“The counsel learned in the law for the said defenders did object to the witness having before him a printed paper, while

About two miles about Dingwall, the water is contracted to the breadth of 290 feet where it is crossed by Conon bridge. The river Conon, descending from Ross-shire, flows under this bridge, after having experienced the first influence of the tide at a distance of about two miles above it. At or near the point of Ardully on the Cromarty Frith, is the line below which the sea never recedes at low ebb tide. At the distance of two miles above this point there are certain lands belonging to Duncan G. Forbes of Culloden, whose titles contain a grant of fishings “ tam in mari quam in aqua de Conon.” The level of the surface of the water at Conon bridge is about twelve feet higher than the level at or near Ardully point ; from which, to the Sutors, the level remains the same. The distance from Conon bridge to the Sutors of Cromarty, is above twenty miles. The superficial area, covered by water, at low tide, within these limits, is about seventeen square miles ; at high water it is 34½ square miles. Between high and low tide, at neap-tides, the difference in the volume of water within these limits is 4,750,000,000 of cubic feet ; and at spring-tides, the difference is twice as great. There is great depth of water, at all times of the tide, between the Sutors, and also in the Cromarty Frith. There is no bar of sand, or other deposit, at or near the Sutors.

p. 2418

“ witness being examined as to the said printed paper, deponed, that it was a copy of a report which he had made to the pursuers on their employment, and on the margin of which he had, two days ago, made a few jottings. The witness stated that he had his original note-book with him, and these jottings are not in it, though their materials are. He could, with a little time, repeat the calculations of which these jottings consist, but he happened to make them, with a view to his own explanations as a witness, on the margin of the printed copy. His report is dated 1st November 1836. It is made from his original notes, but is not a literal transcript of them ; but in substance it is the same. Whereupon the said counsel for the defenders did object to the said witness being allowed, while giving his testimony, to have before him, and refer to the said printed paper, and notes written thereon, which were not made at the time of making the survey or observations with reference to the Frith of Cromarty. But the said Lord Cockburn, after looking at the said printed paper and notes, repelled the objection, whereupon the said counsel for the said defenders did then and there except to the foresaid judgment of the said Lord Cockburn, and insisted that the said George Buchanan ought not, in giving his testimony, to be allowed to have the said paper and jottings thereon before him, or to refer thereto, and that such testimony so given could not be received as legal and competent evidence”

The direction of the judge in point of law was thus set forth in the bill of exceptions :—“ Now, assuming the machines to have been used, the point is, whether they were so wrongfully ? There are many circumstances which might have made the use of them wrongful ; but the only ground on which they can be held to have been so under these issues is, that they were placed in illegal situations. Hence the full question put to you is, whether salmon were wrongfully fished by means of these engines, 'placed in situations prohibited by law.' ”

It may naturally occur to you as odd, that a question so much involved in law should be put to you. But it was unavoidable. Because, though a Court may give the legal rule, which permits or condemns these machines, according to circumstances, the determination of the circumstances, that is, of the facts, to which the rule is to be applied, is the proper province of a jury. I shall therefore begin by giving you as much of the law as is necessary, and shall then leave you, with such observations as may appear to me to be proper, to apply this law to what you shall think the true import of the evidence.

“I say as much as is necessary : for it is not necessary, for the determination of this particular case, that I should give, or attempt to give you, a catalogue or a description of all the circumstances, even of situation, under which stake-nets may be lawful, or the reverse. Many of them have no application to this case ; and it is needless to encumber ourselves with legal matter that is superfluous. Nor shall I trouble you by any observations either on the history or on the policy of the law. These may be useful to lawyers, by assisting them to put the right construction on disputed statutes ;

p. 2419

“but they are of little or no use after the construction of these statutes is fixed, and least of all to juries, who, without any reasoning on the subject, must take the law as they receive it from the Court.

“Now I have to lay it down to you, in the first place, that the statutes, as explained by decisions, make these machines unlawful, if they be placed in what is usually known as a river in the ordinary sense of this word. You have heard enough in this case to let you know that science and investigation may discover rivers where the uninformed eye cannot or does not trace them. Of this case I shall speak instantly. All I now say is, that this apparatus is prohibited by law if it be placed in a river.

“In the second place, there are many rivers which only join the ocean through a firth or through a long land-locked valley, where the fresh and salt waters meet. In this situation it will probably depend upon external appearances,—whether ordinary observers say that the space is occupied by the sea, or by the river, or by both. If it shall be so fully and distinctly occupied by the flowing fresh water as that it is really a river, though the common river features may be periodically effaced by the tide, it comes under the preceding rule ; that is, being still a river, these machines are unlawful.

“Moreover, rivers have estuaries,—that is, spaces intermediate between the strictly proper river and the strictly proper sea. Through these partly fresh and partly salt estuaries, though its ordinary river features may be impaired, or at high tides even obliterated, the river still does in truth exist and operate ; though its existence be only continued among sands and shaulds through which it has to work its way, struggling with the tide. Now these structures are also unlawful in these estuaries. Not that estuaries are specially mentioned by name in the statutes, neither are friths. But the estuary is a part of the river, and is included under this word. The mere name is of little importance. The thing to be looked to is the fact of the absence or of the prevalence of the fresh water, though strongly impregnated by salt. Now, where this fresh water prevails, though in the estuary, these structures are illegal ; and they are not only unlawful (meaning always within the ebbing and flowing of the tide) when placed in the channel of the estuary that is always covered with water, but they are so also if they be placed on the sands which are left dry by the ebbing of the sea.

“In these two situations, viz. in the river, or in its land-locked estuary, the contrivances are illegal. There are two situations of a different description in which they are lawful.

“For, in the third place, some rivers terminate without passing through any frith or estuary, and are lost in the open ocean almost as soon as they touch the salt water. In this case stake-nets are not prohibited, if they be placed away from the immediate mouth of the river, though situated where the sea ebbs and flows. The ebbing and flowing wont of itself render them unlawful, because they may be within the sphere of this phenomenon, and yet in the pure and undoubted sea.”

“ In. the fourth place, there are examples in which the junction of the fresh water and the salt does not take place, as in the case last put, at the edge of the open ocean, but far up in the land, where the river loses itself in arms, or in bays of the sea. These portions of the ocean become what are called arms of the sea, merely because they happen to be enclosed within ridges, which guide their waters into the interior. But this circumstance does not make these arms identical with estuaries. They are the sea. And being so, these machines, if placed in or on arms of the sea, as distinguished from estuaries of rivers, are not unlawful. What shall be held to be an arm, and what an estuary, is a question of fact for you. All I say as to the rule is, that if there be an arm distinct from an estuary, then, in that arm, or, in other words, in that portion of the sea, these fixed traps are not illegal.

“ The substance of these rules is nearly this, that to make the particular engines, with which we are now dealing, unlawful, it must be proved that they are in a river or in its estuary, whether within the channel or on the sands made dry by the ebbing. It is the pursuer's business to prove that they are so placed. If he shall fail, the defenders may have nothing to do. But if, not content with relying on the pursuer's failure, the defenders choose, they may shew, and they have tried to do so, that their structures are truly in the : sea ; whether the open sea, or on one of its arms or bays ; and if so, they are lawful.

“ In short, a river does not lose its legal protection, in reference to salmon fishing, merely by being met by the advancing tide, provided this be within what are called (though usually by two Latin words) the jaws of the land, and provided the relative size of the river and the other circumstances shall satisfy a jury that, on the whole, the space is river, including in this term its estuary. And, on the other hand, the sea does not lose its privileges merely because a river flows into it, or flows through one of its arms or bays where the tide ebbs and flows, provided the relative smallness of the stream and other circumstances shall satisfy a jury that, on the whole, the space is sea and not river, or the continuation of a river through its estuary.”

This direction was excepted to, in the first place, as being in itself erroneous ; and, secondly, in respect the judge “ did not direct the jury, that the prohibitions of the statutes could not extend lower down than to the point where the fresh water of the river joined the salt water of the sea at low ebb tide.”

The Lords of the First Division, having heard parties upon the bill of exceptions, ordered cases, and thereafter pronounced the following interlocutor :—“ 21st Dec. 1837.—The Lords direct the cause to be laid before “ the judges of the other division of the Court and the Lords Ordinary, for their opinions upon both the grounds of exception contained in this bill of exceptions, and with that view appoint the parties to pat into the boxes of the said judges printed copies of said bill of exceptions, record, and cases for the parties, together with the plan of Mr. Buchanan, and that quam primum.”

p. 2421

The consulted judges thereafter returned in writing the opinions, which are subjoined.¹

¹OPINIONS signed by Lords Justice Clerk (Boyle), Glenlee, Meadowbank, Medwyn, Fullerton, Jeffrey, and Cuninghame.

“ We are of opinion, that the first ground of exception, touching the evidence of Mr. Buchanan the engineer, cannot be sustained ; and that the bill, so far as rested on this ground, should therefore be disallowed.

“ As to mere calculations, or statements of averages or general results, we are clearly of opinion that these might with perfect propriety have been read from or referred to by the witness, though made out immediately before his examination. If not so made out indeed they probably must have been framed and reduced to writing while the examination was going on, to the great delay and embarrassment of the proceedings.

“ With regard again to matters of fact and observation, it is admitted that the original notes made at the time might have been competently referred to ; and the witness swore distinctly, that the report, to which he did refer, was made up entirely from these original notes ; and, though, not literally, was ‘in substance the same.’ The defender did not attempt to test or discredit this statement, by calling for the original notes, or by any farther examination ; and the statement must therefore now be taken for true. The result is, that he spoke from a transcript of the original notes, made carefully by himself.

“ As to the separate objection, that the witness referred only to a printed copy of the report, and not to the original, and that there might have been variances or errors, in printing or transcribing, we are of opinion that the defenders have not put themselves in a condition to insist on this objection, inasmuch as they have not sought to ascertain, from the witness himself, or otherwise, in what way the accuracy of the copy had been tested. The witness expressly swears, that the print before him was a ;copy of the report prepared by him from his original field notes ; and we are of opinion this must now be taken to mean that it was a correct copy ; and that, if he had been farther interrogated on the subject, he would have proved this, by specifying the collations or other means by which its correctness had been established. The defenders, we think, having proposed no such interrogatories, are not now entitled to hold that, in positively swearing that it was a copy, the witness was swearing to a fact which he had no sufficient means of knowing, or to assume the existence of variances or errors, without proof, either of their actual existence, or even of its being possible, from the way in which the copy was prepared, that they might have existed.

“ The report, it should also be observed, was not laid before the jury as a piece of documentary evidence, in which case the law as to primary and secondary evidence might have applied, but was merely referred to by the witness to refresh his memory, the only proper evidence on the matters which it might contain being his own oral deposition, and nothing more.

“ As to the argument in the case for the defenders, that they were at all events entitled to see the paper referred to, and to cross-examine the witness on its contents, it seems to us to be a conclusive answer, that it is nowhere stated in the bill of exceptions that they ever asked to see that paper, or proposed to go into such cross-examination ; and the bill being necessarily held to set forth all the facts on which exceptions are to be raised, it is plainly incompetent for the court now to go into any other averments, even if their truth were admitted (as it is here positively denied) by the opposite party.

“ We are therefore clearly of opinion, that none of the grounds of exception as to Buchanan’s testimony have been established ; and that the bill as to these should be dismissed.

“ 2. With regard to the second ground of exception, or that relating to the directions in point of law which the judge addressed to the jury on the merits of the cause, there may, at first sight, appear to be a little more difficulty ; but, on the fullest consideration, we have come to the opinion, that the defenders have failed on this point of the case also, and that the bill ought therefore to be disallowed in toto.

“ If we were satisfied, indeed, as the defenders have contended, that the true import of the whole direction in point of law was; that wherever a river terminated in an estuary the only thing to be looked to, in determining whether stake-nets placed in such estuary were legal or illegal, was, whether there was a preponderance of salt or of fresh water at the place, we should certainly have had great difficulty in finding this to be a correct exposition of the law. But we think it manifest, that such is

p. 2422

The cause having come on, on 30th June 1838, for advising upon these opinions, the following judgment was pronounced by the Lords of the First not the import of the direction ; and that it never can be supposed that the jury took this to be its meaning.

“ In the first place, there is nothing whatever in the passage referred to, as to the comparative prevalence or predominance of salt or of fresh water in a river estuary, affording the only true criterion of the legality or illegality of stake nets in such a situation. What the judge says is to be looked to is, the absence or prevalence of the fresh water only. We think it quite impossible to hold, that prevalence here means presence only ; especially when such a substitution would make the direction more questionable than as it stands. The word prevalence, in fact, is too plain to admit of interpretation ; and the judge told the court in consultation, that he meant it in its natural and plain sense, as equivalent to predominance.

“ Now, even if we could hold (as we certainly do not) that this single passage contained the only direction in law which the judge gave to the jury, and that it could not be qualified or explained by what went before or came after, we are not prepared to say that it would have been absolutely unsound or erroneous. It was confessedly applied only to the case of a river terminating in an estuary, intra fauces terræ ; and is supposed to have been given as a criterion for judging whether that estuary was sea or river, in the sense of the laws about salmon fishings. Now if, in such an estuary, there is absolutely no sensible admixture of fresh water whatever, when the tides are ebbing and flowing (and it is plain that this is the only thing that could be meant by the absence of fresh water), we can scarcely conceive a more decided proof that an estuary of such a description could not be considered as a river, in the sense of the laws referred to. On the other hand, if, during the ebbing and flowing of the tides, and in the average condition of the waters, the fresh water actually predominates, or forms more than a half of the whole, it seems almost as difficult to hold that such an estuary could ever be regarded as the sea, or an arm or branch of the sea.

“ But the substantial ground on which we have come to think that this exception must be dis allowed, is, that this part of the direction must clearly be taken along with all that relates to the same matter in the context ; and that, when so taken, it is quite plain that the absence or prevalence of the fresh water is not meant to be held as the only thing to be looked at, but only as a very material circumstance to be attended to, along with all the other circumstances from which the jury were to form their own conclusion as to the question of fact. Whether, on the whole matter, the estuary in question partook more of the character of a river or of the sea ?

“ That this is the way in which such a direction is to be dealt with can admit of no doubt. Detached words are not to be separated from the context, nor inaccurate or imperfect expressions caught at, to obscure or apparently contradict, what every one must have seen to be the clear meaning of the whole, when taken together. There are other instances, perhaps, of such expressions in the direction now in question ; as, where the judge, after describing estuaries merely as spaces intermediate between the proper river and the proper sea, and where salt and fresh water are mingled, says generally, and apparently without limitation, that such engines as the defenders' 'are unlawful in these estuaries.'— But though this seems to be absolutely stated as law, it is plain from what-follows, that nothing more is meant than that they may be unlawful in such situations for very soon after comes the passage so much relied on, where it is said that they are only unlawful, though in an estuary, if the fresh water prevails or preponderates, but not unlawful if there are indications of any fresh water, though in an estuary. The correction or qualification of the inaccurate expression follows here a little more closely after that expression than in the case now in dispute ; but we think it is, in the last case, if possible, still more complete and decisive.

“ In the first place, the judge states distinctly, in the very beginning of his exposition, that the law ‘ permits or condemns those machines according to circumstances ; and that the determination of these circumstances is the proper province of the jury.’ He then informs them, that in a proper river they are clearly unlawful ; and proceeds to state the effect of their being in an estuary, in the way already referred to. He then speaks to the case of an arm of the sea, which has this much in common with an estuary, that it is intra fauces terræ ; and distinctly tells them that what should be held to be an arm of the sea, and not an estuary, is a question of fact for them. But the most important and decisive passage is that which closes the whole direction, and in which, professedly resuming the whole substance of what had been previously said, and apparently for the very pur-

p. 2423

Division :—“ 10th July 1838. The Lords disallow the bill of exceptions, but find no expenses due.”¹

“ pose of removing ambiguities or supplying defects, he again recurs, though in a different form of expression, to the absence or prevalence of the fresh water, but takes care, in this final summing up, to state, twice over, that it is not the only thing to be looked to, but is always to be taken along with the whole other circumstances of the case. The words are : ‘ In short, a river does not lose its legal protection merely by being met by the advancing tide, provided (1) that this be within what are called the jaws of the land, and provided (2) that the relative size of the river, and (3) the other circumstances, shall satisfy a jury, that on the whole the space is river, including in this term its estuary ; and on the other hand, the sea does not lose its privileges merely because a river flows into it, or flows through one of its arms or bays, where the tide ebbs and flows, provided (1) the relative smallness of the stream, and (2) the other circumstances, shall satisfy a jury, that on the whole the space is sea, and not river, or the continuation of a river through its estuary.’ ”

“ After this, it seems to us impossible to doubt that, when it was previously said that ‘ the thing to be looked to ’ was the absence or prevalence of fresh water, it was only meant, and must have been understood by all who heard the direction to the end, that it was ‘ the great or principal thing,’ but to be taken into view along with all the other circumstances ; not, in short, a legal or exclusive criterion, but merely a very important element in judging of the complex question of river, estuary, or sea. It is to be observed, that it is not said, even in the previous passage, to be the only thing to be looked to, but simply that it is the thing—a form of expression quite common for signifying the chief thing ; as, when it is said that the thing to be looked to in a witness is veracity, or in a lawyer skill or learning ; these expressions certainly could never be conceived to imply, that intelligence or exact memory was of no consequence in the former, or honour or honesty in the other. If the passage therefore stood unexplained by any other we should think that this was its fair meaning ; but when the whole direction is resumed and summed up, in the anxious and accurate words which we have cited, we think there is not even a pretext for saying, that there could be any doubt or mistake about the matter.

“ We are also very clearly of opinion, that the law as suggested in the bill of exceptions is not that which it was the duty of the judge to state to the jury as applicable to the case before them.

Lords Moncrieff and Cockburn added the following concurrence in the foregoing opinion.

Lord Moncrieff.—“ I entirely concur in the first part of the above opinion.

“ I also concur in the second part of it, but with the following explanation : Taking the charge as an entire whole, and looking to the substance and result of it, I think that it amounts to this, that in this question the estuary of a river is to be considered as a part of the river ; that stakenets placed in such an estuary are illegal ; and that the question, whether the particular place or part of the water condescended on is in the estuary of the river or in the sea, is a question of fact for the consideration of the jury, depending on all the various circumstances which may have been brought before them in evidence. Viewing it in this light, I have come to be of opinion that the observations made, or the mere form of expression employed, in pointing out any of the particular circumstances requiring attention, ought not to be regarded as laying down to the jury any unbending rule of law, in opposition to the whole scope and very precise conclusion of the charge, so as in any manner to control or fetter the judgment of the jury on the question of fact expressly left to their determination on the whole evidence ; and therefore that supposing that there may be some inaccuracy of expression, according to the opinion of the court, in the particular passage of the charge excepted to, in so far as the learned judge may seem to have attached more weight than is justly due to one particular circumstance, as a test of the stake-nets being in the estuary of the river and not in the sea, that does not afford a good ground of exception to the charge generally, in so far as it is a charge on the law of the case.

¹ Further OPINIONS at advising (30th June 1838), by Judges of First Division :—

Lord President.—Two points were raised on this bill of exceptions : (1.) one in regard to Buchanan’s evidence ; in regard to it we all agree ; but there is another question, viz. (2.) as to the law contained

Appellants.—(1st exception.) Although the appellants admit that Mr. Buchanan was entitled to refresh his memory in regard to the observations

“ But I think it necessary to qualify my concurrence by observing, “ that in so far as it may be held to be laid down or strongly implied in the above opinion, that if that part of the charge wherein it is said, that, in the question whether it is the estuary of the river or not,

' the thing to be looked to is the fact of the absence or prevalence of the fresh water, though strongly impregnated by salt ; now, where this fresh water prevails, though in the estuary, these structures are illegal,' had stood alone as the substance of the charge, it would not have been liable to exception. I cannot agree in that opinion, because I think that the fact thus rested on is both in its nature exceedingly loose, as affording any legal or decisive rule in the question, and even when definitely ascertained is not such a test as could invariably or in all circumstances lead a jury to a correct result.

“ But being on the whole inclined to think that that particular part of the charge ought not to be so considered, I am, on full consideration, of opinion that the exception should be disallowed.

“ I have no doubt that the law suggested in the bill of exceptions is not that which, consistently with the decisions, it could be the duty of the judge to lay down to the jury,”

Lord Cockburn.—“ I have only to state, that the construction put upon the charge in the preceding opinion gives it the meaning which it was intended to convey ; and that, thus understood, I have not seen ground for thinking it wrong.”

in the charge. As to it, seven judges adhere, and Lord Moncreiff concurs, with an explanation, and Lord Cockburn adheres to his previous opinion.

Lord Gillies.—As the judge who presided at the trial has explained his meaning to be, that in using the expression “ prevalence ” of fresh water he meant by it predominance, I agree in the main with him ; but if he had meant, as I understood it from the charge, to be mere presence of fresh water, I certainly could never agree, because in that way any body of salt water must be held to be a river, if the presence of any portion of fresh water could be detected. We could not stop short after that, and refuse to call the Frith of Forth a river ; and indeed in that way the Mediterranean would become a river, or estuary of the Nile.

Lord Mackenzie.—On the whole, I am inclined to adhere to the opinions delivered.

Lord President.—I have gone over the whole of the statutes referred to. Some of them talk of salt waters, and others of waters, and fresh water that ebbs and flows, and so much confusion prevails in the mode of expression, that it is exceedingly difficult to make sense of any one act.

Lord Corehouse.—I certainly agree with the opinions of the consulted judges, but under the explanation given by Lord Moncreiff. It did not appear to me that it would be just to set aside the verdict of the jury because the charge referred to the prevalence of fresh water, as I did not consider that the prevalence of salt or fresh water was the chief circumstance to be regarded, and I don't think that this was decided in the Tay or other cases. There were other matters in the charge, on which the jury may have proceeded. Therefore, with the caution contained in the charge, I am inclined to hold that we cannot allow the exception to the law ; for I consider the law in the charge to have been properly ruled, and it appears to me that the charge is exceedingly well expressed, and I agree that it was a most fitting question for a jury.

Lord Mackenzie.—I concur with what has just been expressed by Lord Corehouse ; and I ought to have said previously, that it is entirely under the explanation given by Lord Moncreiff that I coincide in the opinions of the other judges. I think the explanation of Lord Moncreiff is very necessary.

Dean of Faculty moved for expenses.

Lord Gillies.—This has been a question of very great difficulty indeed. So I do not see why you should get your expenses. It is not the ordinary case where you would be entitled to expenses. Indeed, I consider that the result is contrary, not only to justice, but it is contrary to common sense, to make a river of the Cromarty Frith.

Lord Mackenzie.—I certainly am against allowing expenses, for it was a question attended with great difficulty.

Lord Corehouse.—I should rather be inclined to give expenses. There was a very ingenious argument by Mr. Solicitor General, but I think after the decision in the Tay case it was clearly made out to my mind that the law in the charge was well laid down by the presiding judge. So I think expenses should be given, and that too where the judges are so unanimous.

made by him while employed in his survey, he could only do so from authentic sources. It was not competent for him to refer, in regard to this matter, to an elaborate report prepared by him at the distance of months. He neither consulted, nor proposed to consult, his field-book, or even his original report. All that he looked at was a printed paper, of which the appellants neither knew nor were allowed to know any thing, but which they were told was a printed copy of the report. To sanction a reference to such a document by a witness when under examination is a latitude hitherto unknown in practice. There are many intermediate stages between the principal copy and the print, in all of which there is much likelihood of error ; a manuscript copy must, in the first place, be made from the principal, and a printed copy from the manuscript. It is impossible to tell how many errors there may have been in the manuscript, and how many additional errors in the print. There was not a vestige of evidence to show that either the manuscript or the print had been compared with the original or with each other. What apology was there for Mr. Buchanan reading from a document, which, as regards authenticity, was utterly worthless, more especially as it must be presumed that the best evidence, viz, the field-books and original notes, were within his reach? The very circumstance that the report contains a detail of many observations and many results in numbers, is one of the strongest reasons that can be urged for the strictest enforcement of all the rules as to authentication. It cannot be supposed that Mr. Buchanan could carry in his memory all those numerical results, and it was therefore impossible for him to check the accuracy of the copy. Blunders might pass unnoticed, and he might give in evidence with the utmost bona fides, on the strength of the printed report, results and observations totally at variance with the truth. It would be dangerous in the extreme to put testimony in jeopardy by such laxity of procedure. Even supposing the report had been duly authenticated, it cannot be regarded otherwise than a plan, a book, or a deed, and ought to have been produced eight days before the trial.¹ In this way it might be made evidence, but it

Lord Gillies.—I cannot think that the case was so clear, for we took the opinions of the other judges after ordering cases. I cannot think it is right to say that the case was clear.

Dean of Faculty.—They may be reserved till the issue of the motion for a new trial ; but the practice has always been to give expenses to the gaining party where the exceptions in a bill are disallowed.

Lord Mackenzie.—I am not for laying it down as a rule abstractly, that in no circumstances should we allow expenses after advising a bill of exceptions ; but certain circumstances may arise in consequence of which we may take the reason of the thing into view, and I don't think here that we ought to give expenses, from the difficulty attending the case.

Lord Corehouse.—I am far from laying down any inflexible rule but it did appear to me that the law was clear, and that after an unanimous opinion of the whole judges sustaining the charge expenses should follow.

Lord President.—I rather concur with Lord Corehouse, that the expenses should be given, as I was inclined to think that the matter was decided in the Tay case.

Lord Mackenzie.—I must say I am against giving expenses.

Lord Gillies.—So am I ; and as that is the case the point will require to be sent to the

would be both unwarrantable and inexpedient to allow a witness to give his testimony from what ought (if admissible at all) to have been treated as documentary evidence. It gives him an advantage which no witness whatever is entitled to claim. The ordinary rules of evidence afford the strongest analogy on this subject. There is no rule in practice better settled, than that secondary evidence will not be admitted, where the best may be obtained. And it is a familiar illustration of this rule, that the copy of a document can never be given in evidence, when the principal document is within reach, or at all events, never without a due authentication of the copy. Thus, if a party tendered in evidence a printed copy of a charter, without any verification of it, while the principal could have been obtained without difficulty, is it not a matter of trite law, that it would be instantly rejected ? A common case is that of a shorthand-writer's notes. To prove what occurred on a former occasion, one is not bound to produce his notes ; but the usual course is, to call the shorthand-writer, and ask him if he had made a transcript from the original. If the opposite counsel object to the transcript, the shorthand-writer must read from the original. The same may be said in regard to entries made in a ledger from a waste-book. Whatever a person sees, and commits to writing, either in his own or the handwriting of another, at the time when the transaction is fresh in his mind, may be used. But a witness cannot refer to a paper made subsequently to the time when the matter was under his consideration. The question is not, as put by the consulted judges, whether the copy is accurate or not accurate, but between a copy and the original. A witness who is compelled to apply to documents in order to aid his memory is as apt to be misled by errors in an unauthenticated copy, which may give a false colour to his whole testimony, as where the documents themselves are tendered as matters of direct evidence to the jury.

(2d exception.)—The direction is objectionable in respect it lays down that stake nets are forbidden in estuaries, and at the same time defines or attempts to define the forbidden locality as consisting in the prevalence of fresh water, although neither the term nor definition used are to be found in any of the enactments on the subject. The question is not within what locality is there the presence, the prevalence, or the absence of fresh water ; but the question is, what is meant by the term aquæ, as distinguished from the term mare, i.e. what is the aqua within which the sea ascendit et se retrahit. The meaning of the term has been established, by a totally different criterion from that given by the learned judge, by our standard institutional writers.¹ But not only so ; in the Don case¹, the Lord Chancellor, in reviewing the salmon fishing statutes, comes to the following conclusion :—“ Taking the latter acts in connexion with the earlier acts, and the whole subject together, construing one with the other, I think I am justified in recommending to your Lordships to come to the conclusion that the whole body of the acts, taken together, refer not to the sea coast, but to rivers and to continuations of rivers. And therefore I should recommend to your Lordships to confirm the judgment of the Court, as far as relates to the construction of those acts of parliament.”

¹ Post, p. 1017.
p. 2427

That the term aquæ denominates the river can therefore no longer be disputed. But it also includes the continuation of the river ; and what is the continuation of the river, as distinguished from the river, but that part of the river which continues to flow after the sea has receded from it. This definition corresponds precisely with the term ostium fluminis, which, in the Spey case (as stated by Lord Kames),¹ this House judged to comprehend the space betwixt the lowest ebb and the highest flood mark. Even if the learned judge, in using the term estuary, meant to indicate the ostium fluminis, his definition was clearly at variance with the legal one. A river ceases to be a river or the continuation of a river when it ceases to descend to the level of the sea. [Lord Chancellor.—At low or high water ?] At low water.

But again, there is a further criterion by which to determine the forbidden territory. The statute says also “ ubi salmunculi,” &c.² The avowed object of the prohibition was to protect the fry. This demonstrates how anxiously the attention of the legislature had been directed to this subject. They had observed, that the cruives and yairs set in rivers were very injurious to the salmon fry in their descent to the sea. This was the great evil complained of. But farther, the other facts connected with the natural history of salmon could not have escaped their observation. At first the fry keep the shallow water about the sides of the river ; but as their strength increases they are seen on the middle of the river descending with the stream. The first flood or fresh which occurs at this period hurries them to that part of the river affected by the tide which is protected by the statutes, where for a time they remain in the tide-way, ascending and descending with the flux and reflux of the tide, till, having gained additional strength, they at once sink down into the bed or channel of the sea or firth, and go off to the ocean. They do not swim about the shallow parts of the firth, but proceed at once to the ocean from the place where the river joins the sea at low ebb. Their natural instinct seems to lead them to select the deep water at that point, because they are more secure from interruption or disturbance, occasioned by the ripple arising from the constant flux and reflux of the tide. Experience and observation would shew to the early Scottish legislators that yairs or other stationary engines could not obstruct the descent of the fry below the line of low ebb tide.

Looking to the declared object as well as to the express provisions of the statute,—to the habits of the salmon as well as to the leading features connected with the flux and reflux of the tide,—that no line can be pointed out, the boundaries of which quadrate so nearly with the enactment, as that contended for by the appellants. Below the line of low ebb tide the sea never recedes. It never withdraws itself. It constantly occupies and holds possession of that space. Above that point the contending influence of the river becomes apparent. There is a periodical balance between the force of the ascending tide and that of the descending fresh water stream, which maintains the river in a state of comparative quietude, certainly favourable to the motion of the fry, “ascendendo et descendendo ubique.” Within that locality it may be said that the fishings are in aquis ubi ascendit mare et se retrahit ; and it may be said, with equal truth and accuracy, that they are situated ubi salmunculi vel smolti ascendunt et descendunt ; and where such fry and smolts, when they approach the sides, would be interrupted in their course and destroyed.

¹ Post, P. 1017

² Ante, p. 978.

Much reliance seemed to be placed by the respondent on the statute of James IV., 1448, c. 13.¹ The particular sorts of apparatus mentioned in that statute of themselves sufficiently indicate the local situations referred to. It is on all hands admitted as the very essence of a cruive-fishing, that there be a mound or dike stretched across the river from side to side, and it follows of course that such fisheries must be peculiar to rivers properly so called. The same thing is equally true of what are called fisch dammys. A dam is a mole or bank to confine water. A fish dam is therefore a mound erected across the stream for the purpose of intercepting and catching the fish, by means of some apparatus of the nature of a cruive inserted into it. But such an erection, it is obvious, could be made only in rivers by cutting the stream across from bank to bank. When, therefore, by this statute it was ordained that all cruives and fish-dams should be destroyed, “that ar within salt watyrs, quhar the sey ebbis and flowis,” the epithet “salt” must have been introduced merely for the purpose of contradistinguishing those fisheries from the “cruivs in fresch waterys ;” that is, in the higher parts of rivers where the tide does not reach, to which a different class of regulations were to be applicable. In this view the lower portion of a river, ubi ascendit mare et se retrahit, may, without any violence or impropriety, be denominated the salt part of a river ; for with every return of the tide, its own proper fresh water is not merely re-stagnated, but is also strongly impregnated with the salt water of the ocean, which then flows into it. That “the salt waters” of this statute do not mean the salt waters of the sea itself, is abundantly obvious from the structure of the remaining clause, “quhar the sey ebbis and flowis.” It is impossible, indeed, to read the whole clause, without being satisfied that these words are used in contradistinction to each other. They cannot be read as implying the same thing, without involving an absurdity. To say that cruives and fish dams are prohibited in the sea where the sea ebbs and flows, is ludicrous ; for it is the characteristic of all sea, that it is always in a state of ebb or flow. It is clear, therefore, that the term “ salt waters ” was employed to denote something different from the sea ; and it is equally clear that this prohibition cannot extend below the line of low ebb-tide ; because the engines here denounced cannot, from the very nature of their construction, be erected below it.

The Tay case² proceeds on specialties. One important specialty is, that it went entirely upon the terms of the statute 1581, c. 15, which, in appointing conservators for the protection of the fishings, fixed the limits within which this protection was to extend. Another important specialty was the fact of the bar of the river being below the Drumly Sands ; whereas, in the present case, there is no bar or alluvial deposit below the town of Dingwall. The non-existence of yairs in the Tay was also strongly relied on. The extent therefore to which fishing by yairs has been carried in the Frith of Cromarty, while it demonstrates the general understanding in favour of their legality in these localities, serves to distinguish it from the case of the Tay in one of its most important features. The last but not the least important of these specialties is rested on the title deeds of the several proprietors. If the Court had not been satisfied as to the position of “ the natural bar of the river,” and if there had not been before them any evidence of the existence of a special office of conservator for the protection of the salmon of the river, and if in other respects the case had been presented as a perfectly pure and abstract case of legal construction on the statutes themselves, who can take it upon him to say what would have been the decision of the Court in the Tay case ? None of the other decisions referred to in the slightest degree interfere with the interpretation of the prohibited locality above contended for. But, apart from this, the respondents have examined the whole of the cases with the utmost minuteness, and they affirm, without fear of contradiction, that throughout these multifarious processes, beginning with the Tay and proceeding onwards to the South-Esk, the Don, the Beaully, the Dornoch, and the Nith, ¹ there is not a finding in any interlocutor, or even the opinion of a single judge, which sanctions the notion now promulgated as law for the first time, that the absence or prevalence of fresh water is the thing to be looked at in determining what waters fall under the statutory prohibitions. In not one of them was it laid down that this was the test to be adopted.

¹ Ante, p. 979.

² Post, p. 1017.

But again, the arguments of the respondents, as well as the proceedings on the bench in considering the bill of exceptions, show distinctly that it will admit of a doubt whether the expressions used by the learned judge import presence or prevalence of fresh water. If this be so, the direction given was not a fitting direction for a jury. From its obscurity it was calculated to mislead them. What was stated had been so misapprehended, that reference was actually made to the learned judge for an explanation of his meaning. But the jury had got no such explanation ; and who can tell what construction they had put upon the expressions ?

Respondents' Argument.

(2d branch.)—If the interpretation of the statutes above contended for be the true one, it follows of course that the learned judge should have directed the jury that the prohibitions of the statute could not extend lower than the confluence of the river with the sea at low ebb tide.

Respondents.—(1st exception.) The objection to Mr. Buchanan's examination clearly rests upon an attempt to confound the different objects and purposes for which a witness may refer to a manuscript. Reference to manuscript to enable a witness to speak correctly as to facts, is altogether different from the object and purpose Mr. Buchanan had in view, and hence the authorities referred to on the other side do not apply. Measurements, soundings, &c., are not occurrences or facts as to which a witness is to speak from recollection. Whether the witness saw strata or rocks of a particular character in the course of his survey, whether he found sea-weed or marine plants, &c., in different parts of the frith, these may be matters of fact as to which he is either to speak from recollection or from notes made at the time. But measurements, soundings, analyses of water, &c., are not matters of recollection at all. They are the witness's experiments, and if the witness has before him that which he depones to be the record of such experiments, it is not for the purpose of refreshing his recollection that he refers to the paper, but of enabling him to report to the Court the experiment made by the witness, and which the court and jury could not see made.

¹ Post, p. 1017.

Again, if from a variety of soundings an average is to be struck and stated, such calculation is not the recollection of an occurrence, and in using materials for giving that calculation, the witness is not refreshing his memory, but he is reporting to the court and the jury that which he himself had previously done, instead of making the calculation on the spot. In fact the calculation was not made at all at the time of making his survey and taking his field notes. The rule that a copy of a document cannot be taken when the principal document exists, has no application to this case. There is no question as to the admissibility of documents ; there is no document sent to the jury ; there is a witness before the jury. He has before him a report or document entirely of his own creation, made for the sake of accuracy, and as the result of scientific inquiry. He has with him the original rough notes from which that report is prepared ; and why should he not refer to that which is in substance the same, and which for the sake of convenience and ready reference has been printed ? It is ridiculous to liken this to the tender of a printed copy of a charter instead of the charter itself. That would be a muniment wholly independent of the witness. The notes and report, on the other hand, were made by the witness for the sake of giving evidence. It is of the very nature of this kind of evidence that it must be so got up. The notes are not the evidence, like the charter ; they are ancillary to the testimony of the witness given by parole, which parole testimony is the matter, and the only matter put in evidence. The witness speaks partly by recollection and knowledge, abstracted from his notes and report, and partly from the aid of that report. He knows the truth of his statement, and he knows the accuracy of his report. He may have erred in his calculations when he made them on the field,—he may have erred when he checked them in his closet. But this is nothing more than an observation on his accuracy, which it is quite open to make to the jury, or in the motion for a new trial, but is wholly unavailing as matter of legal exception.

(2d exception.)—The Spey case¹. has no bearing whatever upon the present discussion ; the question there was not as to the interpretation of the statutes, but as to the meaning of a term used to denote the boundary of certain fishings in a river by private grant. Assuming that the term “ ostium fluminis ” was rightly defined in that case, it merely denotes the termination of the river proper ; there is an expanse of water between the proper river and the sea ; i.e. between the ostium fluminis and the sea proper, which is also part of the forbidden territory. It may be true, as has been stated, that in the Don case¹ this expanse of water has been denominated the continuation of the river ; but it does not on that account follow, that it is not distinguishable from the river proper. So far as that case went the question was just as open as before, what is and what is not the continuation of the river. The words used in the statute are, not “ in rivers,” but “ in aquis.” This is something different from the river proper, and the defenders are right in saying that it was fixed in the Don case¹ to be something different from the sea proper. It is in waters where the sea ascends and draws itself back. Surely this does not mean the point of low water ebb. It means in waters where the sea is filling and ebbing. There must be river, and there must be sea. But if there be both in the valley or channel, and if the sea is ebbing and flowing within that valley, this is all that is required to characterize the prohibited ground. The statute is intended to describe the space both upwards and downwards, and if it be water where the sea ascends and descends—ebbs and fills—this is all that the act requires. The sea proper is excluded, because although it ebbs and flows upon the open coast, “ ascendit et se retrahit,” it does not ebb and flow “ in aquis.”

¹ Post, p. 1017.

But, say the appellants, it is not only where the sea fills and ebbs, it is also “ ubi salmunculi,² ” &c. Now, how can this apply to the point of the lowest ebbing of the tide ? It is where not only salmon fry, but the fry of all other fish, whether of the sea or of the fresh water, descend and ascend. The fry of salmon, in point of fact, never ascend. When the salmon come up to spawn, or when the fry come down, they regulate their motions in no degree by the point of the lowest ebb. On the other hand, do the fry of sea fish, which are equally protected by the statute, come up where they could not exist.

Again, in the statute 1488, c. 13.,² the expression “ salt ” is used in contrast to the “ fresche watteris.” The salt water cannot mean the river, it clearly means something different from both the river and the sea proper. In which of the statutes is it set forth, that the confluence of the river and the salt water at the low ebb is the boundary of the prohibited territory towards the sea ? Had an inflexible rule been fixed, such as that contended for on the other side, the matter ought not to have been settled by a jury trial at all. Besides, the point fixed on by the appellants is one to be disclosed by the ingenuity of modern science, not known or capable of being acted on in a comparatively rude age, when the statutes on this subject were passed ; and it would lead to results of a most startling description, as applicable to various rivers,—results for which no reason either in law or sound policy can be assigned.

¹ Post, p. 1017.

² Ante, p. 979.

The general position contended for by the appellants, was expressly and solemnly overruled in the Tay case.¹ It was so completely overruled, that the Court, finding that there was no exclusive test, were obliged as a jury to enter into consideration of the whole circumstances of the case, and to fix the boundaries as to that frith, within which the stake-nets were illegal. That case has been regarded ever since in Scotland as a leading case on this subject. The same rule was followed in the case of the Clyde in 1813¹—of the South Esk¹—of the Beaully¹— and the Dornoch¹— in 1817 and 1818,—and then followed the Don¹ case, in which it was held that stake-nets were not illegal in the sea proper, as contrasted with rivers, friths, or estuaries, or continuations of rivers. The whole train of decisions, therefore, has conclusively fixed that stake-nets, although legal in the sea, are unlawful in rivers or estuaries ; and whether any particular place is to be held as forming part of a river or frith, estuary, or continuation of a river, on the one hand,—or part of the sea proper on the other,—is a question depending on a variety of circumstances connected with the locality, which question is fitted for the determination of a jury. It has been ruled over and over again, that there is no fixed and absolute criterion which in law determines whether the place be a prohibited place or not, and it has been specially determined that the meeting of the salt and fresh waters at low ebb is not a criterion which is adapted for determining the legality or illegality of the position of stake-nets.

The presiding judge properly and legally directed the jury to take into view the whole circumstances proved in evidence.

His Lordship treated it throughout as a question of circumstances. He did not state that the absence or presence of fresh water, although a circumstance of material importance, was to form the rule, or to exclude from consideration other material circumstances. The direction throughout was abundantly clear and explicit, and in no respect whatever calculated to mislead. It was the duty of the judge to give the jury some direction to guide them in their finding, whether the places in question were within the estuary of the Conon or not. The consideration of the quality of the water, whether salt or

[26th Aug., 1839.]
—
Ld.
Chancellor's
Speech
16th April,
1839.

fresh, its existence in certain quantities, more or less,—was but an ingredient in the investigation, and had only been so put to the jury. No difficulty had been raised by the jury. It did not appear that the judge was asked by the court to give any explanation of the sense in which he had used the expression, in order to solve any doubt which the consulted judges had as to the sense in which the words were used, or as to the jury rightly apprehending the import and meaning of the words, coupled with the whole charge, but rather with the view of satisfying their own minds by the authoritative declaration of the judge as to the actual res gestae on the trial.

(2d branch.)—Had the learned judge directed the jury in the terms suggested by the appellant, it is clear from what is above stated, that his

¹ Post, p. 1017.
p. 2433

direction would have been directly at variance with the established law of Scotland.

LORD CHANCELLOR.—My Lords, this case seems to be one of very considerable importance, both as to the question upon the evidence, and upon the merits.

As to the point of evidence, this case lays down a rule which will have the effect of securing a uniform practice, in the course of proceeding in the courts of Scotland, similar to that which prevails in the courts in this country. The results of this case however do not depend upon this rule.

With respect to the principle which has been discussed in reference to the main question, it is one of very considerable importance, and the property in these salmon-fisheries is of very considerable magnitude. I cannot but think that a great deal of difficulty has arisen from the introduction of terms very difficult of definition, nowhere to be found in the statute. Arguments are used, and discussions take place, upon the meaning of the word “estuary,” and even upon what is the meaning of the word “river ;” and neither of these words is to be found in the statutes. The matter of law involved is neither more nor less than the construction to be put upon the statutes ; and to that extent the party had a right to have the opinion of the learned judge. Whether the particular water in question in the particular suit does or not come within the definition, (if any definition can be found,) is matter very properly within the province of the jury.

The first question will be, whether your Lordships can, by any reasonable rule of construction, drawn from the statutes themselves, at once ascertain whether the learned judge has accurately explained to the jury the definition to be fairly inferred from the provisions of these statutes. If your Lordships find that has not been the case, however desirable it may be to lay down the rule, it is not the province of your Lordships to do so, and it may not be safe to attempt it. The point is, whether the rule laid down is the proper rule, within the meaning of the act.

If there had been no decisions of your Lordships House, and it had been a new question, and merely turned upon the observations of the learned judge, compared with what appears to have been the objects of the statutes, your Lordships might not feel it necessary to postpone the further consideration of this matter. But, my Lords, that is far from being the fact : much litigation has taken place ; and your Lordships House has proceeded to adjudication upon cases similar to the present ; and, in any course your Lordships may think fit to take, it is undoubtedly most important to ascertain the course adopted by this House when the former cases were brought before it.

In order to proceed accurately in the examination of what has been done upon this subject, I should propose to adjourn the further consideration of this case to a future day.

Further consideration adjourned.
p. 2434

Ld.
Chancellor's
Speech
26th August,
1839.

LORD CHANCELLOR.—My Lords, this appeal is from a judgment of the Court of Session disallowing a bill of exceptions. The whole case, therefore, must be found within the bill of exceptions ; and the question is, whether the direction of the learned judge to the jury was right in law.

The issue was : “ Whether the defender, or his predecessors in office, has or have wrongfully fished for salmon in the Frith of Cromarty, opposite to the lands and estate of Cromarty and others, during the years 1824, 1825, 1826, 1827, and 1828, or during any part thereof, by means of stake-nets, bag-nets, yairs, or other engines, placed in situations prohibited by statute.”

These latter words comprehend the whole question ; viz., what are the situations prohibited by statute ? If it was the duty of, the House to lay down a rule upon this subject, and to prescribe the principles upon which this question ought to be tried, it would be necessary to consider carefully, not only the words of the statute, but the various decisions which have taken place. That, however, is not, at this stage of the cause, the duty of this House, nor would it be proper to do so. All that this House has to consider is, whether the rule, as laid down to the jury by the learned judge, was correct.

That learned judge, after mentioning that estuaries were spaces intermediate between the strictly proper river and the strictly proper sea, and that they were partly fresh and partly salt, stated that the structures in question were unlawful in those estuaries, and then proceeded thus : “ The thing to be looked to is the fact of the absence or of the prevalence of the fresh water, though strongly impregnated by salt. Now, where this fresh water prevails, though in the estuary, these structures are illegal.”

The learned judge, when the case came before the court upon the bill of exceptions, stated, that by the word “ prevails,” he meant “ predominates ; ” but the question is, not what he intended, but what the terms used were calculated to impress upon the jury. The word “prevalence” is put in opposition to “absence ;” if it meant “predominates,” why were the words added, “though strongly impregnated by salt ?” In speaking of the predominance of one thing over another, the presence of the minor is assumed ; but absence and predominance are not properly put in contradistinction. Predominance, therefore, if necessary to the proposition, should have been distinctly expressed in terms.

That the jury understood the term to mean presence I have no doubt, for such is the natural construction of the sentence ; and the respondents, in their printed case,¹ (signed by three most learned persons,) insist that such is the true construction of the sentence. After quoting the sentence, inter alia, they say, “In doing justice to the meaning of these sentences, it is plain, from the context, that the word prevalence must mean presence, which is one of the most common and most appropriate significations of the word, as opposed to the expression absence ; and the meaning of the whole is just this, that in estuaries, where these structures are unlawful, there is always some portion of fresh water.”

¹ See page 26 of printed Appeal Case for respondents.

The word prevalence then, as used by the learned judge, was by the respondents understood as presence ; the consulted judges however say, that it is quite impossible to hold the prevalence means presence only ; Lord Gillies says expressly, that if prevalence was to be understood as mere presence, he could not agree to the direction.

From this, I think, it may be assumed, that if the word presence had been used instead of the word prevalence, the court would have held the direction to be erroneous, as, beyond all doubt, it would have been. But the judges seem to have been influenced by the explanation of the term used by the learned judge who directed the jury, as if the question were, whether the judge was right in his view of the law, instead of being, what it really and solely is, whether the direction was in terms calculated to lead the jury to a right understanding of the law. I have no doubt but that the jury understood the word prevalence to mean presence, and that, so understood, the direction was erroneous. Let it, however, be assumed that it means predominance I think it scarcely less erroneous.

The consulted judges say, that if they were satisfied that the true import of the whole direction, in point of law, was, that the only thing to be looked to was, whether there was a preponderance of salt or of fresh water at the place, they should certainly have had great difficulty in finding it to be a correct exposition of the law ; and the Lords Moncreiff and Cockburn say, that if the sentence had stood alone as the substance of the charge, it would have been liable to exception ; and Lords Corehouse and Mackenzie say, that they did not consider that the prevalence of salt or fresh water was the chief circumstance to be regarded.

I quite agree with the consulted judges and others, who thought, that if the direction was to be considered as implying, that the fact of the absence or predominance of fresh water was the only thing to be looked to, or, in other terms, was the thing upon which in their opinion the verdict was to be founded, it would be erroneous ; but I totally differ from them in thinking that such is not the natural and obvious construction and meaning of the words used. The question is, not what was the meaning of the author of these words, to be collected from different passages, but what effect the words spoken were calculated to produce upon the jury. And when we find that they were told, that the thing to be looked to was the fact of the presence or of the prevalence of fresh water, it must be assumed that they understood that such was the test upon which they were to try the question between the parties.

But were it otherwise, if the words imported only that this was an important subject for consideration, I could not agree that the direction would be sound in point of law. I see nothing in the statutes, or in any authority, to justify the putting the legality or illegality of the act upon such a test ; and on principle there is nothing to support it. If this were the test, the legality of the act at any particular place would depend upon the state of the tide, and the right of fishing would belong to one party at high tide, and to another at low tide. Suppose a small river flowing into a large estuary, at low water there might at any particular place be scarcely any salt water, whereas at high water the presence of fresh water might be scarcely perceptible. Whereas in a large river the fresh water might predominate long after the junction with the sea. The large rivers of America are perceptible at a great distance from the shore, and in the Mediterranean ships take in their water from the Rhone in the open sea. The test suggested is therefore, I think, erroneous, whether it be treated as exclusive, or as an important ingredient in the consideration of the question.

p. 2436

If your Lordships should agree with me in this view of the direction of the learned judge, it follows that the bill of exceptions ought to have been allowed, and that the judgment of the court below ought therefore to be reversed. It is therefore unnecessary, and would be improper, to pronounce any opinion or decision as to what ought to have been the direction. But as there is much of uncertainty in the decisions which have taken place, and much doubt appears to exist as to the proper rule to be followed, I think it may be useful to throw out some suggestions, to which those who may have to decide upon the merits of this and other similar cases, in the first instance, will give such weight as they may think them entitled to.

The statute of Robert the First, in the year 1318, speaks of waters in which the sea rises and falls, and in which the fish descend and ascend. The waters mentioned must be distinct from the sea, and this the Don case¹ has established. They must also be waters above the level of the sea, at least at low water, because otherwise the sea could not rise in them, nor would the fish, having the level of the sea, be said to ascend in such waters.

In the subsequent statutes the expressions vary, but it being decided that none of these include the sea proper, I do not apprehend that they in fact extend the limits beyond those prescribed by the statute of Robert the First.

In those waters which are above the point at which the river reaches the level of the sea at low tide, all the circumstances described in the statute of Robert the First concur, but in no others. Down to the point of low tide the waters of the river descend, but no further. Into these waters the sea rises, and the fish ascend, which cannot be said of any part beyond that point. This also is a point capable of being ascertained with much precision. The definitions in Lord Stair, Lord Bankton, and Mr. Erskine, coincide very much with this view of the case ; and the decisions of the House of Lords, in the case of the Earl of Moray v. the Duke of Gordon, (Spey Case,) deciding that “ the ostium fluminis ” comprehended that space betwixt the lowest ebb and the highest flood mark, and in Lord Kintore v. Forbes, (Don Case,) seem strongly to confirm their authority. Finding, however, that the learned judges of the court below rejected this as the proper rule, I abstain from expressing any opinion upon the subject.

If your Lordships shall concur with me in thinking, that upon these grounds, there must be a new trial, it is unnecessary to come to any decision upon the point of evidence raised by the bill of exceptions. I am, however, clearly of opinion, that for some purpose at least the witness was at liberty to refer to the paper he produced, and that the bill of exceptions could not have been supported upon that ground.

¹ Earl of Kintore v. Forbes and others, post, p. 2438.
p. 2437

I therefore move your Lordships that the interlocutor appealed from be reversed, and the bill of exceptions allowed.

The House of Lords ordered and adjudged, that the said interlocutor complained of in the said appeal be, and the same is hereby reversed ; and it is further ordered, that the cause be remitted back to the Court of Session in Scotland, with directions to allow the bill of exceptions, and to grant a new trial, and to proceed further in the said cause as shall be just, and consistent with this judgment.

SPOTTISWOODE and ROBERTSON—RICHARDSON and CONNELL, Solicitors.

APPELLANTS AUTHORITIES. (1st Exception.) Robertson, 2 Murr. Rep. 304, 368 ; Lindsay, 3 Murr. 99 ; Oswald, 5 Murr. 8 ; Graham's Trustees, 5 Murr. 99 ; Graham, 5 Murr. 75 ; Jones, 2 Carr. & Pay. 196 ; Starkie on Evid. 154 ; Burton v. Plummer, 2 Ad. & El. 341, and 4 Nev. & Man. 315 ; Doe v. Perkins, 3 T. R. 749 ; Adam on Trial by Jury, 171. 238. 306.

(2d Exception.) Balfour, voce Fishings ; Stair, b. ii. tit. iii. sec. 70 ; Ersk. b. ii. tit. vi. sec. 15 ; Bank. b. ii. tit. iii. sec. 70 ; Earl of Moray v. Duke of Gordon, (Spey Case,) 16th April 1728, Morr. 12797 ; Earl of Kintore v. Forbes, (Don Case,) 31st May 1826, F. C., 4 Sh. & D. 641, or 648 new edit., S. C., 11th July 1828, as affirmed, 3 W. & S. 265 ; Oswald v. M'Whir, (Solway Case,) 11th March 1837, F. C., 15 D., B., & M., 873: Statutes, (Scots Acts,) see Thomson's edit., Robert I., 1318, c. 12; James I., 1424, c. 12 ; 1427, c. 6 or 116 ; 1429, c. 22 or 131 ; James II., 1457, c. 34 or 66 ; James III., 1469, c. 13 or 87 ; 1477 or 1478, c. 6 or 73 ; James IV., 1488, c. 13 or 16 ; 1489, c. 16 ; 1503, c. 17 or 72 ; James V., 1535, c. 16 ; Mary, 1563, c. 3 ; James VI., 1579, c. 27 ; 1581, c. 15 ; 1685, May 30 ; William III., 1696, c. 35 ; 1698, c. 3 ; Anne, 1705, c. 12.

RESPONDENTS AUTHORITIES. (1st Exception.) 1 Phillipps on Evidence, 289 (7th edit.) ; Starkie on Evidence, 155 (2d edit.) ; Tait on Evidence, 372 (2d edit.) ; Bell's Princ. 653.

(2d Exception.) Bell's Princ. 296, 8 ; Bell's (Wm.) Digest, voce Salmon ; Earl of Kinnoul v. Hunter and others, (Seaside Case,) 26th Jan. 1802, Mor. 14301 ; Duke of Athol and others v. Maule, (Tay Case,) 7th March 1812, F. C. and Buchanan's Rep. 254 ; S. C. 5 Dow, 282, 4th Feb. 1817, F. C. ; Magistrates of Dumbarton v. Colquhoun, (Clyde,) 16th Jan. 1813, F. C. ; Carnegie's Trustees v. Erskine and Ross, (South Esk,) 1812, not rep. ; Carnegie, (South Esk,) 7 S. & D. 284 ; Fraser v. Grant and others, 5th Dec. 1817, (Beauly,) not rep. ; Fraser, 13th Nov. 1829, (Beauly,) 8 S. & D. 14 ; M'Kenzie and others v. Magistrates of Tain, 7th Mar. 1817 and 5th June 1818, (Dornoch,) not rep. ; M'Kenzie v. Houston, 26th Feb. 1831, (Dornoch,) not rep. ; Sir James Colquhoun v. Duke of Montrose, Mor. 14283 ; Duke of Queensberry v. Marquess of Annandale, Mor. 14279.

[11 July,
1828.]EARL OF KINTORE V. FORBES (1828-9) 3 WIL. &
SHAW. APP. CAS. 261.2D DIVISION.
Lord
Mackenzie.

Salmon Fishing—Title to Pursue.—Found, (affirming the judgment of the Court of Session), 1. That stake-nets erected on the proper shore of the sea, are not illegal ; and, 2. That proprietors of salmon fishings in an adjacent river, have no title to object to heritors on the sea-coast, who hold a right of fishing by net and coble from the Crown, exercising their right by stake-nets.

Forbes, and other proprietors of land, stretching northward along the sea-shore six or seven miles, from about two miles from the mouth of the river Don in Aberdeenshire, (a river that issues into the ocean without any frith or estuary), held by their title-deeds the right of salmon fishing by net and coble ex adverso of their estates. These fishings they let to tenants, who erected stake-nets in the sea, and caught white fish and salmon. The Earl of Kintore, and other proprietors of the salmon fishings in the river itself, and of the sea fishings at its mouth, challenged these erections, and raised an action of declarator before the Court of Session, concluding that it should be declared, that Forbes, and the other proprietors, had “ no right, by themselves, or other persons employed or authorized by them, to erect or use the said dams, stake-nets, yairs, or machinery aforesaid, or other machinery of the same nature, within the salt water that ebbs and flows, or upon the sands and schaulds adjacent thereto : ” “that the defenders should be ordained to demolish them, and pay damage for the loss already sustained by these erections ; and be interdicted from erecting or using in future the machinery foresaid, or any other machinery of the same nature, within the salt water that ebbs and flows adjacent to the said river Don, or upon the sands and schaulds within the said water, where they were not before, in all time hereafter.” The defenders objected to the pursuers' title to pursue ; and, on the merits, maintained that the statutes relied on, as prohibiting these erections, did not apply to stake-nets on the shore of the ocean.

The Lord Ordinary having reported the case to the Court on informations, their Lordships, after a hearing in presence, assolized the defenders on the 31st May 1826, “ In respect that the stake-nets and machinery complained of are confessedly erected and placed in the sea, and not in any river or estuary.” *

The pursuers appealed.

Appellants.—I. (Title to Pursue). The appellants have an important interest to put down these stake-nets. Salmon, by a law of nature, return

* 4. Shaw and Dunlop, No. 397, where the opinions of the Judges will be found.

p. 2439

to the river where they were spawned ; in their progress they coast the shore, are intercepted by the respondents' erections, and thus the profits of the appellants' fishings in and at the mouth of the river are reduced, if not annihilated.

II. (Merits). Fixed machinery, similar in principle to stake-nets, placed in situations within the influence of the tide, was used in Scotland as early as the beginning of the sixteenth century. By degrees it appears to have been abandoned, except on the Solway, where it is protected by statute. When attempted to be revived in the firth of Tay, the erections were challenged and declared illegal. No doubt these stake-nets were in an estuary : But the statutes prohibiting their erection in the mouths of rivers, when properly understood, apply also to the shores of the ocean. These statutes distinguish between fixed machinery in fresh and in salt water. Cruives and yairs in rivers are not in themselves illegal ; but the party claiming to erect them must hold a special right to the privilege, and obey the regulations of the statutes enacted for the purpose of allowing the fish free access to the upper part of the sea, and to preserve the fry. But this sort of machinery, and the regulations applicable to it, are not calculated for situations open to the influence of the tide. Accordingly, the prohibitions in the statutes are invariably directed against machinery, under the general denomination of cruives, yairs, &c. set where the sea ebbs and flows, and that whether in the very sea, or elsewhere in which the tide is influential ; in “ all manner of watteris,”—in “ omnimodis acquis,” as the statute of Robert I. expresses it ;— the object of the Legislature being to protect every kind of fish, whether white or salmon. This is apparent from an attentive comparison of the various statutes on this subject. No doubt, the word “ water ” sometimes signifies river, but not always. It is a flexible term, explainable by the subject and the context ; and in the statutes clearly means “ sea.” Besides, in several statutes, the word water is not used at “ all.” The allegation, that the law of England prohibits wears (zaires) in rivers, and allows kiddels (open wears) erected on the sea-coast, is of no moment ; for the law of England, in a question of Scotch Statutory law, must be quite irrelevant. But, independent of the illegality of the erections in question, they are not warranted or covered by the titles of the respondents, who have merely a grant from the Crown to fish with net and coble, and not by stake-nets.

Respondents.—I. (Title to Pursue). The appellants have no title to sue. They have no right to fish ex adverso of the respondents' land ; and if they had a title, they have no interest, for their fishings have not been diminished ; and even if their fishings had become less productive, that could not be traced to the erection of the stake-nets. Neither have they any title to object to the mode in which the respondents exercise their right.

II. (Merits). The statutes regulating salmon fishings arose from general and public views, and not merely with reference to private interests. Their object was to protect the fry and unspawned salmon, and therefore secured a free access to the sea. The appellants' whole argument rests on the fallacy that “water” signifies ocean. But there is not a single authority for such an assumption. In the statutes, the word uniformly means “river.” What could be more absurd than to enact prohibitions as to machinery placed where “the sea ebbs and flows,” when round the island there is no spot where it does not ebb and flow ? In the statute of King Robert, the expression is “in omnibus aquis ;” and even if “in omnimodis aquis” were the true reading, that would only mean, “rivers of all sorts and sizes.” There is something preposterous in the appellants saying that they have a right of embargo on all the proprietors on the sea-coast. According to their argument, that embargo would extend to a proprietor a mile from the mouth of the river, or even to a party whose lands were a hundred miles off. The law of England supports the respondents' views. As to the separate ground of appeal, the respondents' titles unquestionably give them a right to fish ex adverso of their lands in the way they see proper.

p. 2440

The House of Lords ordered and adjudged, that the interlocutors complained of be affirmed, and the appeal dismissed.

LORD CHANCELLOR.—My Lords, There is a case of the Earl of Kintore against Forbes and others, which was argued some time back at your Lordships' Bar,—a case of very considerable importance in point of value, and important also relating to a public question. The appellants in this case are owners of fisheries in the river Don in Scotland. The respondents are owners of the property along the sea coast, not far from the mouth of the river Don. The property of Mr. Forbes, who is one of the respondents, lies about two miles from the river Don. General Gordon Cumming Skene, I think, has property contiguous to that of Mr. Forbes. Mr. Forbes's property is beyond that of General Gordon Cumming Skene :—in fact, the property altogether comprises about seven miles, commencing at a part about two miles from the mouth of the river Don, their property being on the sea-shore, for the purpose of catching salmon among other fish. The proprietors of the fisheries of the river Don have complained of this as being an injury to the fishery.

The question is, Whether persons occupying property on the sea-coast have, by the law of Scotland, a right, provided they have a right to fish for salmon, to place stake-nets for the purpose of fishing. This depends on the construction of certain Acts of Parliament passed in Scotland at a very early period, and continued down for many years ; and it is proper I should state to your Lordships, in the first instance, that which is not disputed. It is not denied that persons are entitled by the law of Scotland, to place cruives and other machinery in rivers above the point the tide flows, under certain circumstances, and under certain limitations and restrictions as to the manner in which that machinery is to be used, as to the construction of the machinery, and as to the time and period for which it is to be used. What I have stated relates to those parts of rivers which are above the point to which the tide flows. No persons, by the law of Scotland, are entitled in those parts of the river where the tide flows, to place machinery of this description.

p. 2441

The question came on in the year 1816, with respect to the river Tay, before the Court of Session, and afterwards came by appeal to this House. The river Tay terminates in a firth or arm of the sea ; and the question was agitated in the Courts of Scotland, whether or not, consistently with those Acts of Parliament, and by the law of Scotland, stake-nets could be put in the river Tay ? or rather, I should say, in the waters of the firth of the Tay, consistently with the Acts of Parliament to which I have referred ? The Court of Session in Scotland was of opinion, that the Acts of Parliament prohibited absolutely the placing of machinery of this description in, that part of the water or firth of Tay. The case then came to this House, and your Lordships affirmed the decision of the Court of Session ; but in the argument that took place upon that subject, and finally in the judgment of your Lordships, care was taken not to decide the question with respect to the right of placing stake-nets on the sea-coast ; and therefore the question between those parties who are the parties to this appeal came, on the present occasion for the first time, unfettered before the Court of Session in Scotland.

My Lords,—The case was argued at great length, and with very great minuteness and intelligence, in the Court below. It came up to your Lordships' House, and was argued very minutely, and with great ability at your Lordships' Bar. The Court of Session was of opinion that those Acts of Parliament did not apply to the sea-coast ; and the question for your Lordships' consideration will be, whether the judgment of the Court of Session in that respect be, or be not correct. Now, if your Lordships have adverted to the papers upon your table, you will have found there all the Acts of Parliament set out upon which this question principally depends ; you will have found the case argued on both sides in those papers, with respect to the construction of those Acts of Parliament ; and it is unnecessary for me therefore to detain your Lordships by going minutely through them. I will only state, that, as far as relates to the earlier of those Acts of Parliament, the language appears to be so clear and so distinct, as not to admit of any doubt with respect to the construction of them.

The first statute that was referred to was passed in the reign of Robert the First, as far back as the year 1318. I think it is quite obvious, upon the language and construction of that Act of Parliament, that it was never intended to apply to the sea-coast. It is very short,—the words are these:— “Item ordinatum est et assensum quod omnes illi qui habent croias vel piscarias vel stagna aut molendina in aquis ubi ascendit mare et se retrahit et ubi salmunculi vel smolti seu fria alterius generis piscium maris vel aquæ dulcis descendunt et ascendunt tales croiæ et machinæ infrapositæ sint ad minus de mensura duorum pollicum in longitudine et trium pollicum et latitudinæ ita quod nulla fria piscium impediatur ascendendo vel descendendo secundum quod libere possint ascendere et descendere ubique.” It talks of ascending and descending,—that particular expression is repeated two or three times in the Act of Parliament ; and it is clear, therefore, that it had reference to streams, or the continuation of streams,—that it had in point of construction no reference whatever to the sea-coast.

p. 2442

My Lords,—The next Act of Parliament was passed about a hundred years afterwards, in the reign of James the First of Scotland. It is in these words :—“It is ordanyt, that all cruives and zaires”—which words, by the judgment of this House, have been interpreted to mean machinery similar to stake-nets—“set in fresh waters, quhair the sea fillis and ebbis, the quhilk destroyes the frie of all fisches, be destroyed and put away for evermair, not again standing ony priviledge and freedome given in the contrairie, under the pain of ane hundredth shillinges ; and they that hes cruives in fresh waters, that they gar keepe the lawes anentes Satterdies slop and suffer them not to stande in forbidden time, under the said paine ; and that ilk heck of the foresaides cruives be three inche wide, as the aulde statute requires.” It speaks, therefore, first of fresh water, and it speaks also of fresh water “quhair the sea fillis and ebbis,” evidently denoting rivers, and channels similar to rivers. It has been said, that the word “fresh” may possibly be a mistake ; that we have not the original record of this Act of Parliament, and that the word “fresh” may have been introduced ; because, in reciting this Act of Parliament in a subsequent Act, the word “fresh” is omitted ; but still the words “ water quhair the sea fillis and ebbis” are retained.

Without troubling your Lordships with going through other Acts, I think I am justified, upon the terms of this Act, in repeating that which I before stated to your Lordships, that in the earlier Acts it is perfectly clear that they do not in their terms embrace the sea-coast. Certainly, when we come to advert to Acts of a later period, the language is more equivocal and more general ; but taking the later Acts in connexion with the earlier Acts, and construing the whole subject together, construing one by the other, I think I am justified in recommending to your Lordships to come to the conclusion, that the whole body of the Acts, taken together, refer not to the sea-coast, but to rivers, and to continuations of rivers ; and therefore I should recommend to your Lordships to confirm the judgment of the Court, as far as relates to the construction of those Acts of Parliament.

In the case to which I have referred, of Dalglish v. the Duke of Athole, with respect to the waters of the firth of Tay, when your Lordships come to look at that particular case, and to apply the language of the particular Acts of Parliament to which I have referred to that case, the construction which the Court of Session have put upon them now is perfectly consistent with the construction the Court of Session put upon the Acts in that former case, and to the construction which this House, when the case came under the review of this House, put upon those Acts.

My Lords,—It is remarkable also, that the writers on the Scotch law, I mean Bankton, Erskine, and Lord Stair, in referring to those Acts of Parliament, do not in any instance apply them to the sea-coast,—they speak of the prohibition as applicable to rivers, and to rivers only. I am not insensible of the argument which was urged at the Bar, that the attention of those writers was not directed to the question precisely as it is now raised ; but it is impossible to suppose that those learned writers, in writing their institutional works, and adverting to those particular Acts of Parliament, should not have taken the pains to read them ; and it is impossible to suppose, that if they had considered the interpretation of them as extending to the sea-coast, they would have expressed themselves in the limited way in which they have expressed themselves, confining themselves to rivers, and to rivers only.

My Lords,—The case at your Lordships' Bar was also argued upon another principle, which is alluded to in the papers now upon your Lordships' table—the papers sent up from Scotland ; namely, that even independently of the construction of these Acts of Parliament, the owners of the fisheries in the Don would have a right to complain of the erection of these works on the principles of the common law. Now, although that point was glanced at in the Court below, it does not appear to have been seriously argued before the Court of Session ; and at your Lordships' Bar it was argued by one of the Counsel, not, I think, the Counsel from the northern part of the kingdom, but by an English Counsel, arguing it upon English principles, and citing English cases, most of which I have looked at with considerable attention, but which, when they come to be sifted and examined, appear to me to have no bearing whatever upon the present question. I think, therefore, that if your Lordships are satisfied upon my representation as to the interpretation of these Acts of Parliament, that they are not to be considered as extending to the sea-coast, the position of this question cannot be at all altered by any reference to the principle of the common law, either as applicable to Scotland or England.

My Lords,—Another point has been insisted upon in the papers, and also at the Bar ; but it does not appear to me to be entitled to much attention. It is said, that the proprietors of these fisheries on the sea-coast have no right, by the terms of their grant, to fish in this manner ; that they are entitled only to fish with what is called a net and coble ; and that, having taken upon themselves to fish in a different mode, the proprietors of the fisheries in the river Don have a right to complain of it, and on that ground to sustain this suit. My Lords, I apprehend that is quite a mistake ; these persons became proprietors of fisheries on the coast originally by grant from the Crown ; and if their grants are so limited, that in point of law (upon which I do not wish at present to pronounce any opinion) they are not entitled to fish in the manner described, namely, by the use of stake-nets, that is a question between them and the Crown ;—the Crown may have a right to complain that the exercise of the right conveyed by the Crown has, in that instance, been exceeded ; and possibly, under such circumstances, the Crown might, by its public officer, institute some proceeding against them ; upon which, however, I wish carefully to abstain from expressing any opinion ; but the proprietors of the fisheries on the Don have nothing to do with that. The question with respect to the proprietors of the fisheries on the Don is, Whether they have a right, by the existing law, to complain, that persons who possess property on the sea-coast, and have a right of fishery on the sea-coast as extensive as the Crown can grant, are entitled to fish by means of stake-nets ; and whether they can make out that the laws of Scotland prohibit, under such circumstances, where the sea ebbs and flows, the use of machinery of that description ? Now I apprehend that, looking at these Acts of Parliament, they do not apply to fisheries on the sea-coast, and that the proprietors of fisheries on the Don have no right to maintain this suit. I should recommend to your Lordships, under these circumstances, that the judgment of the Court below be affirmed.

2444

Appellants' Authorities.—(Title.)—Colquhoun, July 6, 1804, (14,283.); Kinnoul, Jan. 26, 1802, (14,301.); Athole, March 7. 1812, (Fac. Coll.); Hamilton, March 5. 1793, (12,824.); Braid, Jan. 24. 1800, (No. 2. App. Prop.)—(Merits.)—Kinnoul, (supra); Athole, (supra, and Dow's Reports, vol. v. p. 291.); Leslie, June 29, 1593, (14,249.); Gairlies, July 30. 1605, (14,249.); Magistrates of Inverness, Jan. 27, 1776, (14,257).

Respondents' Authorities.—Bocce, fol. 5, edit. 1574 ; Discrittionne del regno di Scotia, p. 17.—(Title.)—Coble Fishers of Don, Feb. 10. 1693, (14,287.); Colquhoun, July 6. 1804, (14,283.); Athole, March 7. 1812, (Fac. Coll. and Buchanan's Reports, p. 263. and 300.); Grotius de Jure Belli, lib. 11. c. 2. § 3. ; Puffendorf, lib. 4. c. 5. ; Dig. 1. lib. 47. tit. 10.—(Merits.)—Balfour's Pract. p. 544. ; Rhymer's Foedera, tom. 7. p. 246. ; tom. 8. p. 271, 551.; Bellend. Decrip. de Alb. c. 1. ; Spalding's Troubles, 1. 60. ; 2. Stair, 3. 70. ; 2. Bank. 3. 8. ; 2. Ersk. 6. 15. ; Mag. Chart. c. 23. ; 12. Edw. 42. c. 7.; 1705, c. 2. Queen Anne.

Statutes relied on by both Parties.—Alex. II. c. 16. (or William the Lion); Rob. I. c. 12. ; 1424, c. 11. and 12. ; 1427, c. 6. ; 1429, c. 131. (c. 22. new edit.) ; 1457, c. 86. (c. 33. 34. new edit.) ; 1469, c. 38. (c. 13. new edit.) ; 1477, c. 73. (1478, c. 6. new edit.) ; 1488, c 16 ; 1489, c 15. ; 1535, c. 17.; 1563; c. 3. ; 1579, c. 89. ; 1581, c. 111. ; 1685, c. 20. ; 3. Jac. I. c. 12.

A. M' CRAE—RICHARDSON and CONNELL,— Solicitors.

[5 June,
1854.]

No. 1023.

TREATY BETWEEN GREAT BRITAIN AND THE UNITED STATES, RELATIVE TO FISHERIES, COMMERCE, AND NAVIGATION.

SIGNED AT WASHINGTON, 5 JUNE, 1854.* (RECIPROCITY TREATY.)†

HER Majesty the Queen of Great Britain, being equally desirous with the Government of the United States, to avoid further misunderstanding between their respective subjects and citizens in regard to the extent of the right of fishing on the coasts of British North America, secured to each by Article I of a Convention between Great Britain and the United States, signed at London on the 20th day of October, 1818; and being also desirous to regulate the commerce and navigation between their respective territories and people, and more especially between Her Majesty's possessions in North America and the United States, in such manner as to render the same reciprocally beneficial and satisfactory, have respectively named Plenipotentiaries to confer and agree thereupon, that is to say:

Her Majesty the Queen of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, James, Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, Lord Bruce and Elgin, a Peer of the United Kingdom, Knight of the most ancient and most noble Order of the Thistle, and Governor-General in and over all Her Britannia Majesty's provinces on the continent of North America, and in and over the Island of Prince Edward;

And the President of the United States of America, William L. Marcy, Secretary of State of the United States;

Who, after having communicated to each other their respective full powers, found in good and due form, have agreed upon the following Articles:

ART. I. It is agreed by the High Contracting Parties, that in addition to the liberty secured to the United States' fishermen by the above-mentioned Convention of October 20, 1818, of taking, curing, and drying fish on certain coasts of the British North American colonies therein defined, the inhabitants of the United States shall have, in common with the subjects of Her Britannic Majesty, the liberty to take fish of every kind, except shell-fish, on the sea-coasts and shores, and in the bays, harbours, and creeks of Canada, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward's Island, and of the several islands thereunto adjacent, without being restricted to any distance from the shore;

* Ratifications exchanged at Washington, September 9, 1854.

with permission to land upon the coasts and shores of those colonies and the islands thereof, and also upon the Magdalon Islands, for the purpose of drying their nets and curing their fish : provided that in so doing they do not interfere with the rights of private property, or with British fishermen in the peaceable use of any part of the said coast in their occupancy for the same purpose.

It is understood that the above-mentioned liberty applies solely to the sea fishery, and that the salmon and shad fisheries, and all fisheries in rivers and the mouths of rivers, are hereby reserved exclusively for British fishermen.

And it is further agreed that in order to prevent or settle any disputes as to the places to which the reservation of exclusive right to British fishermen contained in this Article, and that of fishermen of the United States contained in the next succeeding Article, apply, each of the High Contracting Parties, on the application of either to the other, shall, within 6 months thereafter, appoint a Commissioner. The said Commissioners, before proceeding to any business, shall make and subscribe a solemn declaration that they will impartially and carefully examine and decide, to the best of their judgment, and according to justice and equity, without fear, favour, or affection to their own country, upon all such places as are intended to be reserved and excluded from the common liberty of fishing under this and the next succeeding Article ; and such declaration shall be entered on the record of their proceedings. The Commissioners shall name some third person to act as an Arbitrator or Umpire in any case or cases on which they may themselves differ in opinion. If they should not be able to agree upon the name of such third person, they shall each name a person, and it shall be determined by lot which of the 2 persons so named shall be the Arbitrator or Umpire in cases of difference or disagreement between the Commissioners. The person so to be chosen to be Arbitrator or Umpire shall, before proceeding to act as such in any case, make and subscribe a solemn declaration in a form similar to that which shall already have been made and subscribed by the Commissioners, which shall be entered on the record of their proceedings. In the event of the death, absence, or incapacity of either of the Commissioners or of the Arbitrator or Umpire, or of their or his omitting, declining, or ceasing to act as such Commissioner, Arbitrator, or Umpire, another and different person shall be appointed or named as aforesaid, to act as such Commissioner, Arbitrator, or Umpire, in the place and stead of the person so originally appointed or named as aforesaid, and shall make and subscribe such declaration as aforesaid.

Such Commissioners shall proceed to examine the coasts of the North American provinces and of the United States embraced within the provisions of Articles I and II, of this Treaty, and shall designate the places reserved by the said Articles from the common right of fishing therein.

The decision of the Commissioners and of the Arbitrator or Umpire shall be given in writing in each case, and shall be signed by them respectively.

The High Contracting Parties hereby solemnly engage to consider the decision of the Commissioners conjointly, or of the Arbitrator or Umpire, as the case may be, as absolutely final and conclusive in each case decided upon by them or him respectively.

p. 2447

II. It is agreed by the High Contracting parties that British subjects shall have, in common with the citizens of the United States, the liberty to take fish of every kind, except shell-fish, on the eastern sea coasts and shores of the United States north of the 36th parallel of north latitude, and on the shores of the several islands thereunto adjacent, and in the bays, harbours, and creeks of the said sea-coasts and shores of the United States and of the said islands, without being restricted to any distance from the shore ; with permission to land upon the said coasts of the United States and of the islands aforesaid for the purpose of drying their nets and curing their fish, provided that in so doing they do not interfere with the rights of private property, or with the fishermen of the United States in the peaceable use of any part of the said coasts in their occupancy for the same purpose.

It is understood that the above-mentioned liberty applies solely to the sea fishery, and that salmon and shad fisheries and all fisheries in rivers and mouths of rivers, are hereby reserved exclusively for fishermen of the United States.

III. It is agreed that the articles enumerated in the Schedule hereunto annexed, being the growth and produce of the aforesaid British colonies or of the United States, shall be admitted into each country respectively free of duty :

Schedule.—Grain, flour, and bread-stuffs of all kinds ; animals of all kinds ; fresh, smoked, and salted meats ; cotton-wool, seeds, and vegetables ; undried fruits ; dried fruits ; fish of all kinds ; products of fish and of all other creatures living in the water ; poultry ; eggs ; hides, furs, skins, or tails undressed ; stone or marble, in its crude or unwrought state ; slate ; butter, cheese, tallow ; lard, horns, manures ; ores of metals of all kinds ; coal ; pitch, tar, turpentine, ashes ; timber and lumber of all kinds, round, hewed, and sawed, unmanufactured in whole or in part ; fire-wood ; plants, shrubs, and trees ; pelts, wool ; fish-oil ; rice, broom-corn, and bark ; gypsum, ground or unground ; hewn, or wrought or unwrought burr or grindstones ; dye-stuffs ; flax, hemp, and tow, unmanufactured ; unmanufactured tobacco ; rags.

IV. It is agreed that the citizens and inhabitants of the United States shall have the right to navigate the River St. Lawrence and the canals in Canada used as the means of communicating between the Great Lakes and the Atlantic Ocean, with their vessels, boats, and crafts, as fully and freely as the subjects of Her Britannic Majesty, subject only to the same tolls and other assessments as now are, or may hereafter be, exacted of Her Majesty's said subjects ; it being understood, however, that the British Government retains the right of suspending this privilege, on giving due notice thereof to the Government of the United States.

It is further agreed, that if at any time the British Government should exercise the said reserved right, the Government of the United States shall have the right of suspending, if it think fit, the operation of Article III of the present Treaty, in so far as the province of Canada is affected thereby, for so long as the suspension of the free navigation of the River St. Lawrence or the canals may continue.

p. 2448

It is further agreed, that British subjects shall have the right freely to navigate Lake Michigan with their vessels, boats, and crafts, so long as the privilege of navigating the River St. Lawrence, secured to American citizens by the above clause of the present Article shall continue ; and the Government of the United States further engages to urge upon the State Governments to secure to the subjects of her Britannic Majesty the use of the several State canals on terms of equality with the inhabitants of the United States.

And it is further agreed, that no export duty or other duty shall be levied on lumber or timber of any kind cut on that portion of the American territory in the State of Maine watered by the River St. John and its tributaries and floated down that river to the sea, when the same is shipped to the United States from the province of New Brunswick.

V. The present Treaty shall take effect as soon as the laws required to carry it into operation shall have been passed by the Imperial Parliament of Great Britain and by the Provincial Parliaments of those of the British North American Colonies which are affected by this Treaty on the one hand, and by the Congress of the United States on the other. Such assent having been given, the Treaty shall remain in force for 10 years from the date at which it may come into operation, and further, until the expiration of 12 months after either of the High Contracting Parties shall give notice to the other of its wish to terminate the same ; each of the High Contracting Parties being at liberty to give such notice to the other at the end of the said term of 10 years, or at any time afterwards.

It is clearly understood, however, that this stipulation is not intended to affect the reservation made by Article IV of the present Treaty with regard to the right of temporarily suspending the operation of Articles III and IV thereof.

VI. And it is hereby further agreed, that the provisions and stipulations of the foregoing Articles shall extend to the Island of Newfoundland, so far as they are applicable to that colony. But if the Imperial Parliament, the Provincial Parliament of Newfoundland, or the Congress of the United States, shall not embrace, in their laws enacted for carrying this Treaty into effect, the Colony of Newfoundland, then this Article shall be of no effect ; but the omission to make provision by law to give it effect, by either of the legislative bodies aforesaid, shall not in any way impair the remaining Articles of this Treaty.

VII. The present Treaty shall be duly ratified, and the mutual exchange of ratifications shall take place in Washington, within 6 months from the date hereof, or earlier if possible.

In faith whereof, we, the respective Plenipotentiaries, have signed this Treaty, and have hereunto affixed our seals.

Done, in triplicate, at Washington, the 5th of June, Anno Domini, 1854,

(L.S.) ELGIN AND KINCARDINE,

(L.S.) W. L. MARCY.

[8 April,
1858.]No. 1024.*AWARDS BY THE HON. JOHN HAMILTON GRAY, UMPIRE UNDER THE RECIPROCITY TREATY.

By the 3rd Article of the Treaty of 1783 between Great Britain and the United States, it was stipulated—" That the people of the United States should continue to enjoy, unmolested, the right to take Fish of every kind on the Grand Bank, and on all the other Banks of Newfoundland, also in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, and at all other places in the Sea, where the inhabitants of both countries used at any time theretofore to fish. That the inhabitants of the United States shall have liberty to take Fish of every kind, on such parts of the coast of Newfoundland as British Fishermen shall use (but not to cure or dry them on the Island), and also on the coasts, bays and creeks of all other of His Britannic Majesty's dominions in America. And that the American Fishermen shall have liberty to dry and cure Fish in any of the unsettled bays, harbours and creeks in Nova Scotia, Magdalen Islands and Labrador, so long as the same shall remain unsettled ; but as soon as the same, or either of them, shall be settled, it shall not be lawful for the said Fishermen to dry or cure Fish at such settlement, without a previous agreement for that purpose, with the inhabitants, proprietors, or possessors of the ground." The War of 1814 between Great Britain and the United States, was held by the former to have abrogated this stipulation, and the declaration of peace, and Treaty of Ghent, which subsequently followed, were entirely silent on the point. This silence was intentional—during the negotiations the question had been expressly raised, and the claim of the United States to the continued enjoyment of the rights secured by that stipulation denied. By the Convention of the 20th October, 1818, the privilege of the Fisheries within certain limits was again conceded to the United States—and the United States, by that Convention, " renounced any liberty before enjoyed or claimed by them or their inhabitants, to take, dry, or cure Fish, on, or within three marine miles of any of the coasts, bays, creeks, or harbours of any of the British dominions of America, not included within that part of the Southern Coast of Newfoundland, extending from Cape Ray to the Rameau Islands ; on the Western and Northern Coast of Newfoundland, from Cape Ray to the Quirpon Islands—on the shores of the Magdalen Islands—and also on the coasts, bays, harbours and creeks, from Mount Joly on the South of Labrador, to and through the Straits of Belleisle, and thence Northerly along the coast." This concession was to be without prejudice to any of the exclusive rights of the Hudson Bay Company, and the American Fishermen were also to have the liberty, for ever, to dry and cure Fish in any of the unsettled bays, harbours and creeks of the Southern part of the Coast of Newfoundland, therein described, and of the Coast of Labrador, but so soon as the same or any portion thereof should be settled, it should not be lawful for the said Fishermen to dry or cure Fish at such portion so settled, without previous agreement for such purpose with the inhabitants, proprietors, or possessors of the ground ; and was further subject to a proviso, that the American Fishermen should be permitted to enter the bays and harbours in His Britannic Majesty's dominions in America not included within those limits, “ for the purpose of shelter, and of repairing damages therein, of purchasing wood, and of obtaining water, and for no other purpose whatever. But they should be under such restrictions as might be necessary to prevent their taking, drying, or curing Fish therein, or in any other manner whatever abusing the privileges thereby reserved to them.”

*Reproduced from Journal of the Assembly (Newfoundland) 1863, App. 1239-1273

A difference arose between the two countries, Great Britain contending that the prescribed limits of “ three marine miles,” the line of exclusion, should be measured from headland to headland, while the United States Government contended it should be measured from the interior of the bays and the sinuosities of the coasts. The mutual enforcement of these positions led to further misunderstandings between the two countries.”

To do away with the cause of these misunderstandings, and to remove all grounds of future embroilment, by the Treaty of Washington, June 5th, 1854, it was, by Article the 1st, agreed :—“That in addition to the liberty secured to the United States Fishermen by the above mentioned Convention of October 20th, 1818, of taking, curing, and drying Fish on certain coasts of the British North American Colonies, therein defined,—the inhabitants of the United States shall have, in common with the subjects of Her Britannic Majesty, the liberty to take Fish of every kind (except shell fish) on the sea coasts and shores, and in the bays, harbours and creeks of Canada, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island, and of the several Islands thereunto adjacent, without being restricted to any distance from the shore ; with permission to land upon the coast and shores of those Colonies, and the Islands thereof, and also upon the Magdalen Islands, for the purpose of drying their nets and curing their fish; provided, that in so doing, they do not interfere with the rights of private property, or with British Fishermen in the peaceable use of any parts of the said Coast, in their occupancy for the same purpose.

“ It is understood that the above mentioned liberty applies solely to the Sea Fishery, and that the Salmon and Shad Fisheries, and all Fisheries in Rivers, and the mouths of Rivers, are hereby reserved exclusively for British Fishermen.”

p. 2451

By Article the 2nd :— “It is agreed by the high contracting parties, that British subjects shall have, in common with the citizens of the United States, the liberty to take Fish of every kind (except shell fish) on the Eastern sea-coasts and shores of the United States, North of the 36th parallel of North Latitude, and on the shores of the several Islands thereunto adjacent, and in the bays, harbours and creeks of the said sea-coasts, and shores of the said United States, and of the said Islands, without being restricted to any distance from the shore, with permission to land upon the said coasts of the United States, and of the Islands aforesaid, for the purpose of drying their nets and curing their Fish. Provided that in so doing they do not interfere with the rights of private property, or with the Fishermen of the United States, in the peaceable use of any part of the said coasts in their occupancy for the same purpose.”

“ It is understood that the above mentioned liberty applies solely to the Sea Fishery ; and that the Salmon and Shad Fisheries, and all Fisheries in Rivers, and the mouths of Rivers, are hereby reserved exclusively for Fishermen of the United States.”

By the first Article it was also further agreed :— “ That in order to prevent or settle any dispute as to the places to which the reservation of exclusive right to British Fishermen contained in this Article, and that of Fishermen of the United States, contained in the second Article, should apply—each of the high contracting parties, on the application of either to the other, shall, within six months thereafter, appoint a Commissioner. The said Commissioners, before proceeding to any business, shall make and subscribe a solemn declaration that they will impartially and carefully examine and decide to the best of their judgment, and according to justice and equity, without fear, favour, or affection, to their own country, upon all such places as are intended to be reserved and excluded from the common liberty of fishing under the said two articles.” In cases of disagreement, provision is made for an umpire, and the “High contracting parties solemnly engage to consider the decision of the Commissioners conjointly, or of the arbitrator or umpire, as the case may be, absolutely final and conclusive in each case decided upon by them, or him, respectively.”

By article 5, the Treaty was to “ Take effect as soon as the laws required to carry it into operation should be passed by the Imperial Parliament of Great Britain, and by the Provincial Parliaments of those of the British North American Colonies which are affected by this Treaty, on the one hand, and by the Congress of the United States on the other.”

It is understood, that in making this last named Treaty, neither Government admitted itself to have been in error, with reference to the position it had before maintained. The Treaty was emphatically an arrangement for the future. “ The Government of the United States being equally desirous with Her Majesty the Queen of Great Britain (as declared in the preamble)” to avoid further misunderstanding between their respective citizens, and subjects, in regard to the extent of the right of fishing on the coasts of British North America, secured to each by Article I, of a Convention between the United States and Great Britain, signed at London on the 20th day of October, 1818.

p. 2452

The Commissioners appointed under the provisions of this Treaty, proceeded to examine and decide upon “The places intended to be reserved and excluded from the common liberty of fishing ” under the first and second Articles. They differed in opinion as to the places hereinafter named, and it has been submitted to me, as the Umpire under the provisions of that Treaty, to determine those differences.

The copies of the Records of disagreement between the Commissioners, transmitted to me, are as follows :

RECORD, NO. 1.

We, the undersigned, Commissioners respectively, on the part of Great Britain and the United States, under the Reciprocity Treaty concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having met at Halifax, in the Province of Nova Scotia, on the 27th day of August, A.D. 1855, thence proceeded to sea in the British Brigantine Halifax, and passing through the Strait of Canso, first examined the River Buctouche, in the Province of New Brunswick.

“ A survey was made of the mouth of the said River Buctouche by the Surveyors attached to the Commission, George H. Perley, on the part of Great Britain, and Richard D. Cutts, on the part of the United States, a plan of which marked No. 1, and signed by the Commissioners respectively, will be found in Record Book No. 2.

“ We, the Commissioners are unable to agree upon a line defining the mouth of said River.”

“ Her Majesty's Commissioner claims that a line from Glover's Point to the Southern extremity of the Sand Bar, (marked in red on the aforesaid Plan No. 1), designates the mouth of the said River Buctouche ; the United States Commissioner claims that a line from Chapel point, bearing south, 4 West, (magnetic,) marked in blue on the aforesaid Plan, No. 1. designates the mouth of the said River ; and of this disagreement record is here made accordingly.

“ Dated at Buctouche, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 19th day of September, A.D. 1856.

(Signed,) M. H. PERLEY, H.M. Commissioner.
(Signed,) G. G. CUSHMAN, U.S. Commissioner.”

p. 2453

RECORD NO. 2.

“ We, the undersigned Commissioners respectively on the part of Great Britain and the United States, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having examined the River Miramichi, in the Province of New Brunswick, are unable to agree upon a line defining the mouth of said River.

“ Her Majesty's Commissioner claims that a line connecting Fox and Portage Islands, marked in red, Plan No. 2, Record Book No. 2, designates the mouth of the Miramichi River ; the United States Commissioner claims, that a line from Spit Point to Moody Point, marked in blue, Plan No. 2, Record Book No. 2, designates the mouth of said River, and of this disagreement record is here made accordingly.

“ Dated at Chatham, on the Miramichi, in the Province of New Brunswick on this 27th day of September, A.D. 1855.”

(Signed,) M. H. PERLEY, H.M. Commissioner.
(Signed,) G. G. CUSHMAN, U.S. Commissioner.”

RECORD NO. 9.

“ We, the undersigned, Commissioners under the Reciprocity Treaty between Great Britain and the United States, signed at Washington on the 5th day of June, A.D., 1854, having examined the Elliot River, emptying into Hilsborough Bay, on the Coast of Prince Edward Island, one of the British North American Colonies, Do hereby agree and decide, that a line bearing North 85° East, (magnetic) drawn from Block House Point to Sea Trout Point, as shown on Plan No. 7, Record Book No. 2, shall mark the mouth, or outer limit, of the said Elliot River ; and that all the waters within, or to the Northward of such line, shall be reserved and excluded from the common right of fishing therein, under the first and second articles of the Treaty aforesaid.

“ Her Majesty's Commissioner, in marking the above line, claims the same as defining the joint mouth of the Elliot, York, and Hillsborough Rivers.

“ The United States Commissioner agrees to the above line as the mouth of the Elliot River only, not recognizing or acknowledging any other River.

“ Dated at Bangor, in the State of Maine, United States, this 27th day of September, A.D. 1856.

(Signed,) M. H. PERLEY, H.M. Commissioner.

(Signed,) G. G. CUSHMAN, U.S. Commissioner,”

RECORD, NO. 10.

“ We, the undersigned, Commissioners under the Reciprocity Treaty, between Great Britain and the United States, signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having examined the Montague River, emptying into Cardigan Bay, on the Coast of Prince Edward Island, one of the British North American Colonies, Do hereby agree and decide, that a line bearing North, 72° East, (magnetic) drawn from Grave Point, to Cardigan Point, as shewn on the Plan No. 7, Record Book No. 2, shall mark the mouth, or outer limit, of the said Montague River ; and that all the waters within, or to the Westward of such line, shall be reserved and excluded from the common right of Fishing therein, under the first and second Articles of the Treaty aforesaid.

“ Her Majesty's Commissioner, in marking the above line, claims the same as defining the joint mouth of the Montague and Brudenell Rivers.

“ The United States Commissioner agrees to the above line, as marking the mouth of the Montague only, not recognizing or acknowledging any other River.

“ Dated at Bangor, in the State of Maine, United States, this 27th day of September, A.D. 1856.

(Signed,) M. H. PERLEY, H.M. Commissioner.

(Signed,) G. G. CUSHMAN, U.S. Commissioner.”

RECORD, NO. 11.

“ We, the undersigned, Commissioners under the Reciprocity Treaty between Great Britain and the United States, signed at Washington on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having examined the Coasts of Prince Edward Island, one of the British North American Colonies, are unable to agree in the following respect :—

“Her Majesty's Commissioner claims that the undermentioned places are Rivers, and that their mouths should be marked and defined under the provisions of the said Treaty :—

“Seal,	St. Peter's (designated St.	Foxley,
Orwell,	Peter's Bay on the Map	Pierre Jacques,
Vernon,	of the Island),	Brae,
Pinnette,	Tryon,	Enmore,
Murray,	Crapaud,	Enmore,

Cardigan, Winter,	Ox,
Boughton, Hunter,	Haldiman,
Forutne, Stanley,	Sable.
Souris, Ellis,

p. 2455

“ The United States Commissioner denies that the above mentioned places are Rivers, or such places as are intended to be reserved and excluded from the common liberty of Fishing.

“ Dated at Bangor, in the State of Maine, United States, this 27th day of September, A.D. 1856.

(Signed,) “ M. H. PERLEY, H.M. Commissioner.

(Signed,) “ G. G. CUSHMAN, U.S. Commissioner.”

It will thus be seen that the differences between the Commissioners resolve themselves into two divisions :— 1st. Whether the twenty-four places named in Prince Edward Island, or any of them, as is contended by Her Majesty's Commissioner, are to be deemed rivers, and therefore reserved and excluded from the common liberty of the Fishery ? Or whether, as is contended by the United States Commissioner, these places, or some of them, are not Rivers, and therefore open to the common liberty of the Fishery ? 2nd. The Miramichi and Buctouche in New Brunswick, being submitted to be Rivers, by what lines are the mouths of those Rivers respectively to be determined?

In coming to any conclusion on these points, it is unquestionably the duty of the Umpire to look at the spirit and object of the Treaty,— the causes of difficulty it was intended to remove— the mode of removal proposed.

The classes of Fish sought for in the deep-sea Fisheries strike within “ three marine miles ” from the shore ; the “ bays ” within the headlands are their places of resort, but unlike the Salmon, or the Shad, they do not ascend the Rivers, or particularly seek their entrances. To prosecute the Mackerel Fishery with success, the right of Fishing on the “ sea coast and shores ” within “ three marine miles,” and within the “ bays ” with the privilege of landing for drying nets and curing Fish, was absolutely necessary ; the convenience of a “ harbour,” and the right of Fishing therein, desirable. A “ creek,” which Webster and Maunders both define to be, according to English usage and etymology, “ a small inlet, bay or cove, a recess in the shore of the Sea, or of a River,” and which though, “ in some of the American States,” meaning a small River, Webster says, “ is contrary to English usage, and not justified by etymology, ” would also, in many instances, afford accommodation. A right to the “ sea coast and the shores ”— to the “ harbours ” and the “ creeks,” would thus afford to the Fisherman all that he would require, and leave to the Rivers, rising far in the interior of the respective Countries, and flowing by the homes and hearths of a different nation, the sacred character which would save them from the stranger's intrusion.

The question then that first presents itself, are the twenty-four places named, or any, and which of them, in Prince Edward Island, to be deemed Rivers ?

p. 2456

It is difficult to lay down any general proposition, the application of which would determine the question. There is no limitation as to size, or volume ; the Mississippi and the Amazon, roll their waters over one-fourth the circumference of the earth. The “ Tamar,” the “ Ex,” and the “ Tweed,” would hardly add a ripple to the “ Saint Lawrence,”—yet all alike bear the designation, are vested with the privileges, and governed by the laws and regulations of Rivers. It is not the absence, or prevalence, of fresh or salt water ; that distinction has been expressly ignored in the celebrated case of Horne against McKenzie, on appeal to the House of Lords. It is not the height or lowness of the banks ; the Rhine is still the same River, whether flowing amid the mountains of Germany, or fertilizing the low plains of Holland. It is not the rise or fall of tide, or the fact that there may be little, if any water when the tide is out. The Stour and Orwell in England are dry at low water ; yet they have always been recognized, and treated, as Rivers. The Petitcodiac, in New Brunswick, and the Avon in Nova Scotia, owe their width, their waters, their utility, entirely to the Bay of Fundy ; yet their claim to be classed among rivers has never been doubted. The permanent, or extraordinary extent of the stream, in cases where not at all, or but little influenced by the tides, is no criterion. The periodical thaws, and freshets of Spring and Autumn, in America, make Rivers of vast magnitude, useful for a thousand commercial purposes, in places where, when those thaws and freshets have passed away, their dry beds are visible for weeks. The term “ flottable,” applied to such streams, is well recognized in the Courts of the United States, classing them among Rivers, and clothing the inhabitants upon their banks, with the rights of riparian proprietors, and the public at large with the privilege of accommodation.

An important test may be said to be, the existence or non-existence of bars at the mouths of waters, or streams running into the sea. The existence of such bars necessarily presupposes a conflict of antagonistic powers. An interior water forcing its way out, yet not of sufficient strength to plough a direct passage through the sands accumulated by the inward rolling of the sea, would necessarily diverge, and thus leave a bar in front of its passage, just at that distance where the force of its direct action would be expended. Some Rivers, such as the Mississippi and the Nile, make deltas, and run into the Sea. In this case, the extreme land would give a natural outlet. Others again run straight into the Sea, without any delta, and without any estuary. In these cases the bar at the mouth would give a natural limit ; but the bar at the mouth is equally characteristic of its being a River. There are cases again, where the estuary, gradually widening into the Sea, leaves neither bar nor delta to mark its outlet, or determine its character. In such cases, for the latter object, other grounds must be sought on which to base a decision ; and in marking the former, the exercise of a sound discretion could be the only guide.

The decision upon any such question, must, after all, be more or less arbitrary. The physical features of the surrounding country, the impressions created by local inspection, the recognized and admitted character the disputed places have always borne, constitute material elements in forming a conclusion. The possibility that the privileges conceded by this Treaty may be abused, can have no weight. There will doubtless be found in both countries, men who will disregard its solemn obligations, and take advantage of its concessions, to defraud the revenue, violate local laws, and infringe private rights ; and in thus disgracing themselves, affect the character of the nation to which they belong ; they will, however, meet with no consideration at the hands of the honorable and right thinking people of either country. The framers of this Treaty would not permit such minor difficulties to stand in the way of the great object they had in view, to cement the alliance, and further the commercial prosperity of two Empires. Such difficulties can be obviated, if necessary, by national or local legislation.

p. 2457

The Rivers of Prince Edward Island, whether one or one hundred in number, must, as to length, necessarily be small. The Island is in no part much over thirty miles in width, and the streams run through it, more or less transversely, not longitudinally. Captain now (Admiral) Bayfield, the accomplished hydrographer, and surveyor of the Gulf of Saint Lawrence, thus describes it :—

“ Prince Edward Island, separated from the Southern shore of the Gulf of the Saint Lawrence by Northumberland Strait, is one hundred and two miles long, and, in one part, about thirty miles broad : but the breadth is rendered extremely irregular by large bays, inlets, and Rivers, or rather sea creeks, which penetrate the Island, so that no part of it is distant more than seven or eight miles from navigable water. Its shape is an irregular crescent, concave towards the Gulf, the Northern shore forming a great bay, ninety-one miles wide, and twenty-two miles deep, out of which, the set of the tides, and the heavy sea, render it very difficult to extricate a ship when caught in the North East gales which frequently occur towards the fall of the year, occasionally blowing with great strength and duration, and, at such times, proving fatal to many vessels.”

This passage has been particularly called to my attention in a very elaborate and able statement of his views, placed before me by the United States Commissioner, who further adds,— “ That Sir Charles A. Fitzroy, the Lieutenant Governor of the Island of Prince Edward, in an official communication to the British Government, calls the Island Rivers, ‘ strictly speaking, narrow arms of the Sea, ’”—and that “ Lord Glenelg, in his reply, alludes to them as ‘ inlets of the Sea. ’ ” On examining the Records referred to by the Commissioner, I find the first to be a dispatch (in January, 1858,) from Sir Charles Fitzroy, to the Colonial Secretary, Lord Glenelg, with reference to the reserves for Fisheries, contained in the original grants in the Island, arising out of the order in Council, under which those grants were issued, and which was as follows :—“ That in order to promote and encourage the fishing, for which many parts of the Island are conveniently situated, there be a clause in the grants of each Township that abuts upon the sea shore, containing a reservation of liberty to all His Majesty's subjects in general, of carrying on a free Fishery on the coasts of the said Townships, and of erecting stages and other necessary buildings, for the said Fishery, within the distance of five hundred feet from high water mark.”

p. 2458

He then states he enclosed for the information of the Government :—“ A return shewing the several reserves for this purpose contained in the different Townships, from which it will appear that the reservation, as contemplated in the order of Council, has been strictly followed in only twelve Townships. In thirty-two Townships, the reservation is as follows,—‘ and further saving and reserving for the disposal of His Majesty, his heirs and successors, five hundred feet from high water mark, on the coast of the tract of land hereby granted, to erect stages and other necessary buildings for carrying on the Fishery, ’—of the remaining twenty-three Townships, eighteen contain no Fishery reservation ; and of five, no grants whatever are on record.” And he then remarks :— “ By reference to a plan of the Island, annexed to the return, your Lordship will perceive that several of the Townships which do contain reservations, abut upon Rivers only ; or more strictly speaking, narrow arms of the Sea.”

Lord Glenelg, in his reply, (May 1838,) says,—“ It appears to me that the reservation made of lands adjacent to the sea coast, or to the shores of inlets from the Sea, for the purpose of Fishing, so far as the right has been reserved to the Queen's subjects collectively, constitute a property over which the power of the Crown is exceedingly questionable.”

It does not appear to me, that these passages bear the construction put upon them, or were intended to designate the Island Rivers generally, or in any way determine their character. Is it not rather a mere qualified mode of expression used at the time, without any definite object, or perhaps if any, to avoid being concluded by either term ? But if the use of a term, by one or two of the local authorities, is to be deemed of such weight, of how much more weight would be the continued use by the Legislature, for years, of a contrary term ? There are Acts of the Assembly vesting rights, imposing penalties, and creating privileges, with reference to these waters, under the name and designation of Rivers, to a series of which I call attention, namely :

10 Geo. IV., c. 11.	1 Vic. c. 19.	7 Vic. c. 3.
2 Wm. IV., c. 2 & 13.	2 Vic. c. 10.	8 Vic. c. 20.
3 Wm. IV., c. 8, 9 & 10.	3 Vic. c. 12.	12 Vic. c. 18,
5 Wm. IV., c. 3 & 7.	4 Vic. c. 16.	c. 35 & 22.
6 Wm. IV., c. 25.	4 Vic. c. 18.	15 Vic. c. 34.
7 Wm. IV., c. 23.	5 Vic. c. 9.	16 Vic. c. 28.

Also, to the various reports of the Annual appropriations and Expenditures, to be found in the Journals of the Legislature.

On an examination of these Acts, it will be found, that the Legislature of the Island has, by a continued series of enactments, extending over a period of thirty years, legislated upon the “rivers,”—“bays,”—“creeks,”—“harbours,”—and “lesser streams,”—of the Island, recognizing their existence, and difference,—appropriating the local revenues to their improvement—establishing rights, and creating private interests with reference to them, entirely inconsistent with their being aught but the internal waters, and Rivers of the Island, and directly at variance with the terms and character of legislation, which would have been used, had they been considered “arms,” or mere “inlets of the Sea.” Such acts by the Congress of the United States, or by the respective Legislatures of the several States, on any matter within their jurisdiction, would be regarded as conclusive of the character of the subject legislated upon. The legislation of Prince Edward Island, in pari materia, is entitled to the same consideration. The British Government, at the present day, neither legislates away, nor interferes with, the local administration of the affairs of the Colonies. This very Treaty is dependent upon the action of the Provincial Parliaments, and based upon the preservation of private rights. Can it be contended, or shall it be admitted, that this Treaty abrogates the legislation of years, ignores the laws of the Island, and, by implication, annuls rights and privileges the most sacred a colony can possess? Certainly not. If it be desirable, from the peculiar conformation of this Island and its waters, that the latter should be viewed in a light different from that in which they have been hitherto regarded, the local Legislature can so determine.

In a very important decision in the Supreme Court of Iowa, reported in the American Law Register, issued at Philadelphia, in August, 1857, it was determined,—“That the real test of navigability in the United States, was ascertained by use, or by public act of declaration; and that the acts and declarations of the United States, declare and constitute the Mississippi River, a public highway, in the highest and broadest intentment possible.” Shall not therefore the public acts and declarations, of the Legislature of Prince Edward Island, be considered of some authority, in determining what are the Rivers of that Island?—and particularly when those acts and declarations were made long anterior to the present question being raised? But might it not also be assumed, that where a country had, by a long series of public documents, legislative enactments, grants and proclamations, defined certain waters to be Rivers, or spoken of them as such, or defined where the mouths of certain Rivers were, and another country subsequently entered into a treaty with the former respecting those very waters, and used the same terms, without specifically assigning to them a different meaning, nay, further stipulated that the Treaty should not take effect in the localities where those waters were, until confirmed by the local authorities,—might it not be well assumed that the definitions previously used, and adopted, would be mutually binding in interpreting the Treaty, and that the two countries had consented to use the terms in the sense in which each had before treated them in their public instruments, and to apply them as they had been previously applied, in the localities where used ? I think it might.

p. 2460

Admiral Bayfield did not intend by the term “ sea creeks,” as he informed me in reply to a communication on this subject, to convey the impression contended for by the United States Commissioner, that they were not Rivers. He says, under date of 3rd September, 1857 :—“ With reference to the term 'sea creeks,' to which your attention has been called, as having been used by me at page 92, “ and various other parts of the Directions, I have used that term in order to distinguish the inlets from the small streams (disproportionably small in summer) that flow through them to the sea.”

“ In the instances referred to, I mean by ' sea creeks,' inlets formed by the combined action of the Rivers and the tides, and through which those Rivers flow in channels, more or less direct, and more or less plainly defined by shoals on either side. Whenever there are bars across the inlets, as is very generally the case, I consider the channels through those bars, to form the common entrances from the Sea to both inlets and Rivers ; for it appears to me that a River is not the less a River, because it flows through a creek, an inlet, or an estuary. The point where the fresh water enters the estuary, and mixes with the tide waters, may be miles inland, but it does not, I think, cease to be a River until it flows over its bar into the Sea.”

This view of Admiral Bayfield, that such waters do not lose their character as Rivers because flowing through an inlet, or an estuary, is confirmed by the principles laid down to determine what are “ navigable ” Rivers, in the technical sense of the term, as distinguished from its common acceptation. To the extent that fresh waters are backwardly propelled by the ingress and pressure of the tide, they are denominated navigable Rivers ; and to determine whether or not a River is navigable, both in the common law and in the Admiralty acceptation of that term, regard must be had to the ebbing and the flowing of the tide. In the celebrated case of the River Bann, in Ireland, the Sea is spoken of, as ebbing and flowing in the River. These principles are recognized in the Courts of the United States and the authorities collated, and most ably commented upon by Angel.

Indeed, it would seem that the Commissioners themselves have not attached to this term, “ sea creeks,” as used by Admiral Bayfield, the force or character which it is now alleged it shall bear, as they have by their Record. No. 10, under the 27th September, 1856, transmitted to me with the other official documents in this matter, pronounced the “ Montague ” to be a “ River,” and determined upon its mouths, though Admiral Bayfield, in his Sailing Directions, before referred to, page 123, speaks of it as a “ sea creek.” It has been urged, that if these places are declared to be Rivers, and not creeks or harbours, then where are the creeks and harbours contemplated by the Treaty ? To this it may be answered, that this Treaty does not contemplate Prince Edward Island alone—and even though none such might be found within its narrow circle— yet they may be found in numbers along the five

p. 2461

[8 April,
1858.]

thousand miles of coast, exclusive of Newfoundland, which this Treaty covers, extending from the 36 parallel of North latitude in the United States, to the furtherest limits of Labrador.

With these preliminary observations, I shall take up the disputed places in Prince Edward Island, and proceed to decide upon them, in the order in which they have been submitted:—

No. 1.—VERNON.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having proceeded to, and examined, the Vernon, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion, that the Vernon is entitled to be considered a River.

It has, at low tide, water for boat and shallop navigation. It has good breadth, requiring a long and strong bridge to cross it. Vessels are built two miles from its mouth. As you drive along its banks there would be no hesitation in speaking of it, were no question raised, as a River. It would appear as if the salt water were an intrusion into a channel, formed and supplied by a running stream, enlarging and deepening the channel, but finding it there, the banks and surrounding lands all bearing towards the Vernon, the same relative formation as the banks towards admitted Rivers. It is spoken of in Bayfield's Sailing Directions as a River, and as such in various Acts of Assembly.

[8 April,
1858.]

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that the Vernon is a River.

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick,
this 8th day of April, A.D., 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 2.—ORWELL.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D., 1854, having proceeded to, and examined the Orwell, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Orwell is entitled to be considered a River.

It is spoken of by Bayfield, in conjunction with the Vernon, as a River ; has been recognized as such in the Public Acts of the Island ; and described under that designation as a boundary in the ancient grants, as far back as 1769.

p. 2462

[8 April,
1858.]

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that the Orwell is a River.

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick,
this 8th day of April, A.D., 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 3.—SEAL.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D., 1854, having proceeded to and examined the Seal, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Seal is entitled to be considered a river.

The Seal is spoken of by Bayfield as a River, and recognized as such in the public Acts of the Island. It is a small tributary of the Vernon, and as such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that it is a River.

[8 April,
1858.]

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick,
this 8th day of April, A.D., 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 4.—PINNETTE.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having proceeded to, and examined, the Pinnette, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion, that the Pinnette is a tidal basin, or harbour, and as such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that it is not a River.

[8 April,
1858.]

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D., 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 5.—MURRAY.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854,

p. 2463

having proceeded to, and examined, the Murray, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Murray is entitled to be considered a River.

The Murray is a River, and entitled to be so considered in view of its abundant supply of fresh water, its formation, and deep and navigable channel. By reference to the original grants, 1769, of Lots 63 and 64, bordering on the Murray, it will be seen that the Crown, at that early day, drew the distinction between the river, the harbour, and the sea coast, and bounds these lots by the harbour and river, and by the sea coast, respectively. It is also recognized in the public acts of appropriation of the Island, under that designation.

[8 April,
1858.]

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that the Murray is a River.

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick,

this 8th day of April, A.D., 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 6.—CARDIGAN.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having proceeded to, and examined the Cardigan, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Cardigan is entitled to be considered a River.

It is so described by Bayfield. It bears a close resemblance to the Montague and the Elliot, which have been declared by both Commissioners, as appears by Records Nos. 9 and 10, to be Rivers. It is so designated by the Crown, in the grant of Lot 34, in 1769 ; and has been repeatedly recognized as such by the Legislature.

[8 April,
1858.]

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that the Cardigan is a River.

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 7.—BOUGHTON.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having proceeded to, and examined the Boughton, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Boughton is entitled to be considered a River.

It is deep and broad, affording accommodation for vessels, and facilities for ship building, far in the interior. Its comparatively narrow entrance, and bar across its mouth, are observable and striking characteristics. It is described as such by the Crown, in the grant of Lot 56, in 1769 ; has been repeatedly recognized by the Legislature, under the name of Grand River ; and by Bayfield, in his Sailing Directions.

[8 April,
1858.]

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that the Boughton is a River.

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D. 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 8.—FORTUNE.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D., 1854, having proceeded to and examined the Fortune, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Fortune is a River.

[8 April,
1858.]

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that the Fortune is a River.

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D. 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 9.—SOURIS.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D., 1854, having proceeded to, and examined the Souris, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Souris is entitled to be considered a River.

The Souris is called by Bayfield, Colville River.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that the Souris is a River.

[8 April,
1858.]

Dated at St. John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D. 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

p. 2465

No. 10.—SAINT PETER'S.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having proceeded to, and examined St. Peter's, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that St. Peter's is not entitled to be considered a River.

It is claimed by Her Majesty's Commissioner, as a River ; by the United States Commissioner, as an inlet of the Sea ; or at most, a harbor. I think the view taken by the United States Commissioner is correct. It certainly is not formed by the Morel, the Midgie, or the Marie, which run into it, and the little stream called Saint Peter's, at its head, is entirely unequal to the task. It is also to be observed, that in the ancient grant of Lot 39, in 1769, it is given as a boundary under the designation of St. Peter's Bay ; and in the grants of lots 40 and 41, in the same year, 1769, partly bordering on, and partly embracing within their boundaries, St. Peter's Bay, it is described (though inaccurately as a boundary) as “ the Sea.” I do not find it anywhere recognized in the legislation of the Island, as a River ; but always as St. Peter's Bay.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that Saint Peter's is not a River.

[8 April,
1858.]

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick,
this 8th day of April, A.D., 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 11.—TRYON.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having proceeded to, and examined the Tryon, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Tryon is entitled to be considered a River.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide the Tryon to be a River.

[8 April,
1858.]

Dated at St. John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D. 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

p. 2466

No. 12.—CRAPAUD.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D., 1854, having proceeded to, and examined the Crapaud, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Crapaud is not a River.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide the Crapaud not to be a River.

[8 April,
1858.]

Dated at St. John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 13.—WINTER.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having proceeded to, and examined the Winter, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Winter is entitled to be considered a River.

Apart from its rise in the interior, and its abundant fresh water, its channel through Bedford Bay, (as it is called) is marked and distinct, shewing a continuous flow, or current of water, from the interior towards the Sea ; a channel bounded by shoals ; and proving by its deflected course, that the breach in the sands on the sea shore, forming the entrance to the so called Bedford Bay, has been formed by the water seeking an outlet for itself, not from the Sea making a passage in. In fact, if there was no River or stream in the interior, of sufficient strength to make the outlet and keep it open, the water of the Sea would only make the embankment more solid, and there would be no bay or harbor at all.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide the Winter to be a River.

[8 April,
1858.]

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick,
this 8th day of April, A.D. 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 14.—HUNTER.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D., 1854,

p. 2467

having proceeded to and examined the Hunter, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Hunter is entitled to be considered a River.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that the Hunter is a River.

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick,
this 8th day of April, A.D. 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

[8 April,
1858.]

No. 15.—STANLEY.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D., 1854, having proceeded to, and examined the Stanley, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Stanley is entitled to be considered a River.

The Stanley is a full, deep stream, having, if the expression may be used, two or three heads, and several affluents, and is surrounded, from its sources to its outlet, by a succession of hills, of rapid elevation and descent, converging in many different parts towards the River, and affording, by their slopes, and the courses at their base, numerous feeders. Its large tributaries, the Trent and Old Mill Rivers, help to swell its volume. It is described as one of the boundaries of Lot 21, in the ancient grant of 1769, and recognized by the Legislature under the designation of Stanley River.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide the Stanley to be a River.

Dated at St. John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D. 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

[8 April,
1858.]

No. 16.—ELLIS.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D., 1854, having proceeded to, and examined the Ellis, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Ellis is a River.

p. 2468

In the grants of lots 14 and 16, in 1769, it is so described. A long succession of Legislative enactments, so recognizes it. Its broad, deep channel ; its abundant supply of fresh water ; and the extent of country it drains, leave no question about it.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide the Ellis to be a River.

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D., 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

[8 April,
1858.]

No. 17.—FOXLEY.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having proceeded to, and examined the Foxley, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Foxley is entitled to be considered a River.

The Foxley is described as a River in the ancient grants in 1769.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide the Foxley to be a River.

Dated at St. John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D. 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

[8 April,
1858.]

No. 18.—PIERRE JACQUES.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having proceeded to, and examined the Pierre Jacques, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Pierre Jacques is entitled to be considered a River.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that the Pierre Jacques is a River.

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D. 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

[8 April,
1858.]

No. 19.—BRAE.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having proceeded to, and examined the Brae, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion, that Brae is not entitled to be considered a River.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that the Brae is not a River.

[8 April,
1858.]

Dated as Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D., 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 20.—PERCIVAL.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington on the 5th day of June, A.D., 1854, having proceeded to, and examined the Percival, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Tier Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion, that the Percival is a River.

The Percival is spoken of by Bayfield as a River.

It is so described in the grant of Lot 10, in 1769 ; and like the Stour and the Orwell, in England, owes its waters almost entirely to the Sea.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide the Percival to be a River.

[8 April,
1858.]

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D. 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 21.—ENMORE.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D., 1854, having proceeded to and examined the Enmore, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Enmore is entitled to be considered a River.

p. 2470

The Enmore was treated as a River in the grants of Lots 10 and 13, in 1769 ; is so recognized by Bayfield ; and has a bar at its mouth, formed by the conflict of the tides and the descending stream.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide the Enmore to be a River.

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D., 1858.

[8 April,
1858.]

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 22.—OX.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having proceeded to and examined the Ox, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Ox is not entitled to be considered a River.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that the Ox is not a River.

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D., 1858.

[8 April,
1858.]

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

No. 23.—HALDIMAN.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having proceeded to and examined the Haldiman, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Haldiman is entitled to be considered a River.

The Haldiman is described as a River in the grant of Lot 15, in 1769 ; and is so regarded by Bayfield.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide the Haldiman to be a River.

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D. 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

[8 April,
1858.]

p. 2471

No. 24.—SABLE .

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having proceeded to and examined the Sable, in Prince Edward Island, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 11, of their proceedings, am of opinion that the Sable is not entitled to be considered a River.

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that the Sable is not a River.

Dated at Saint John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D. 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

PART SECOND

I come now to the second division, namely :— The Miramichi and Buctouche, being admitted to be Rivers, which of the lines pointed out by the Commissioners shall respectively designate the mouths of those Rivers ?

[8 April,
1858.]

THE MIRAMICHI.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D. 1854, having proceeded to, and examined the mouth of the Miramichi, in the Province of New Brunswick, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 2, of their proceedings, declare as follows.

With reference to the Miramichi, it will be seen by Record No. 2 :—“ Her Majesty's Commissioner claims, that a line connecting Fox and Portage Islands, (marked in red, Plan No. 2, Record Book No. 2,) designates the mouth of the Miramichi River. The United States Commissioner claims that a line from Spit Point to Moody Point, (marked in blue, Plan No. 2, Record Book, No. 2,) designates the mouth of said River.

By the Treaty it is provided that—“ the above mentioned liberty applies solely to the Sea Fishery ; and that the Salmon and Shad Fisheries, and all Fisheries in Rivers, and the mouths of Rivers, are reserved exclusively,” &c., &c.

p. 2472

The preceding portion of Article 1st gives the right to Fish—“On the Sea Coasts and shores, and in the bays, harbours and creeks.”

The inner Bay of the Miramichi, and the harbour of Buctouche, are, among other grounds, claimed as coming within the definition of “ bays and harbours,” and it has been urged that the clause just referred to, is conclusive in favour of that claim, whether such bay or harbour does, or does not, constitute the mouth of a River.

It is, therefore, necessary, before deciding which of the lines above designated as the mouth of the Miramichi, is the correct one, to dispose of this preliminary question,—namely : —Does the mouth of a River forfeit its exclusive character, under this Treaty, because it may constitute a bay, or harbour ? Is the restriction imposed limited to particular fish, or locality ? The spirit with which this Treaty was made, and the object it has in view, demand for it the most liberal construction ; but, consistently with the most liberal construction, there are many wise and judicious reasons why the exception should be made. The joint or common Fishery in those places where the forbidden fish resort, would be a prolific cause of dispute. The very fact that, after the forbidden fish are named, there should follow the significant expression that all Fisheries in those places should be reserved, is conclusive as to the idea predominant in the minds of the framers of the Treaty. They wanted peace ; they would not put the Fishermen of the two nations together, on the same ground, where they would have unequal rights. Considerations of a national, administrative, or fiscal character, may have determined them to exclude the entrances of the great thoroughfares into the respective countries, from a common possession. There are large and magnificent bays, and harbours, unconnected with rivers ; there are bays, and harbours, dependent upon, and formed by the mouths of Rivers. The terms are not indicative of locality. Bays and harbours may be found far up in the interior of a country ; in lakes, or in rivers ; and on the sea-board. The “ mouths of rivers,” are found only in one locality,—namely, in that part of the River by which its waters are discharged into the Sea or Ocean ; or into a Lake, and that part of the River is, by the express language of this Treaty, excluded. Is the use of a term which may be applicable to many places, to supersede that which can only be applied to a particular place, when the latter is pointedly, eo nomine, excluded ? But why should such a construction be required, when the object of the Treaty can be attained without it ? The cause of the difficulty was, not the refusal to permit a common Fishery within the mouths of Rivers, but within three marine miles of the sea coast. That difficulty is entirely removed by the liberty to take Fish “ on the sea coast and shores, and in the bays, harbours, and creeks, without being restricted to any distance from the shore.”

The position taken by the Commissioner of the United States, is further pressed, upon the ground,—“ That the terms of a grant are always to be construed most strongly against the granting party.” The application of that principle to the present case is not very perceptible. This is rather the case of two contracting parties exchanging equal advantages ; and the contract must be governed by the ordinary rules of interpretation. Vattel says,—“ In the interpretation of Treaties, compacts, and promises, we ought not to deviate from the common use of the language, unless we have very strong reasons for it.” And,—“ When we evidently see what is the sense that agrees with the intention of the contracting parties, it is not allowable to wrest their words to a contrary meaning.” It is plain that the framers of this Treaty intended to exclude the “ mouths of rivers ” from a common possession. Ought we, by construing the terms of the Treaty most strongly against the nation where the River in dispute may happen to be, to “ wrest their words to a contrary meaning ? ” I think not.

p. 2473

Mr. Andrews, for many years the United States Consul in New Brunswick and in Canada, a gentleman whose great researches and untiring energies were materially instrumental in bringing about this Treaty, and to whom the British Colonies are much indebted for the benefits they are now deriving, and may yet derive, from its adoption, thus speaks of the Miramichi, in his Report to his Government, in 1852 :—“ The extensive harbour of Miramichi is formed by the estuary of the beautiful River of that name, which is two hundred and twenty miles in length. At its entrance into the Gulf, this River is nine miles in width.”

“ There is a bar at the entrance to the Miramichi, but the River is of such great size, and pours forth such a volume of water, that the bar offers no impediment to navigation, there being sufficient depth of water on it at all times, for ships of six and seven hundred tons, or even more. The tide flows nearly forty miles up the Miramichi, from the Gulf. The River is navigable for vessels of the largest class full thirty miles of that distance, there being from five to eight fathoms of water in the channel ; but schooners and small craft, can proceed nearly to the head of the tide. Owing to the size and depth of the Miramichi, ships can load along its banks for miles.”

In Brookes' Gazetteer, an American work of authority, the width of the Potomac, at its entrance into the Chesapeake, is given at seven and a half miles.

In the same work, the mouth of the Amazon is given at “ one hundred and fifty nine miles broad.”

In Harper's Gazetteer, (edition of 1855), the width of the Severn, at its junction with the Bristol channel, is given at ten miles across. That of the Humber, at its mouth, at six or seven miles ; and that of the Thames, at its junction with the North Sea, at the Nore, between the Isle of Sheppey and Foulness Point, or between Sheerness and Southend, at fifteen miles across. And the Saint Lawrence, in two different places, in the same work, is described as entering “ the Gulf of Saint Lawrence, at Gaspe Point, by a mouth one hundred miles wide.” And also, “ that at its mouth, the Gulf from Cape Rosiere to Mingan settlement, in Labrador, is one hundred and five miles in length.”

Thus, width is no objection. The real entrance to the Miramichi is, however, but one and a half miles wide. Admiral Bayfield may, apparently, be cited by both Commissioners as authority. He says, pages 30, 31, and 32 :—

“ Miramichi Bay is nearly fourteen miles wide, from the sand-bars off Point Blackland to Point Escuminac beacon, and six and a half miles deep, from that line across its mouth, to the main entrance of the Miramichi, between Portage and Fox Islands. The bay is formed by a semi-circular range of low, sandy islands, between which there are three small passages, and one main, or ship channel, leading into the inner bay, or estuary, of the Miramichi. The Neguac Gully, between the sand bar of the same name, and a small one to the South West, is 280 fathoms wide, and three fathoms deep ; but a sandy bar of the usual mutable character, lies off it, nearly a mile to the S.S.E., and had about nine feet over it at low water, at the time of our survey. Within the Gully, a very narrow channel, only fit for boats, or very small craft, leads Westward, up the inner bay. The shoal water extends one and a quarter miles off this Gully, but there is excellent warning, by the lead, here and everywhere in this bay, as will be seen by the chart. Shoals, nearly dry at low water, extend from the Neguac Gully to Portage Island, a distance of one and a quarter miles to the South West. Portage Island is four miles long, in a South-West-by-South direction ; narrow, low, and partially wooded with small spruce trees and bushes. The ship channel, between this Island and Fox Island, is one and a half miles wide.”

“ Fox Island, three and three quarters miles long, in a S.S.E. direction, is narrow and partially wooded : like Portage Island, it is formed of parallel ranges of sand hills, which contain imbedded drift timber, and have evidently been thrown up by the Sea, in the course of ages. These islands are merely sand-bars on a large scale, and no where rise higher than fifty feet above the sea. They are incapable of agricultural cultivation, but yet they abound in plants and shrubs, suited to such a locality, and in wild fruits, such as the blueberry, strawberry, and raspberry. Wild fowl of various kinds are also plentiful in their season ; and so also are salmon, which are taken in nets and weirs, along the beaches outside the Islands as well as in the Gullies.

“ The next, and last, of these islands, is Huckleberry Island, which is nearly one and a half miles long, in a South East direction. Fox Gully, between Huckleberry and Fox Islands, is about 150 fathoms wide at high water, and from 2 to 2 ½ fathoms deep, but there is a bar outside, with seven feet at low water. Huckleberry Gully, between the Island of the same name and the mainland, is about 200 fathoms wide ; but is not quite so deep as Fox Gully. They are both only fit for boats, or very small craft ; and the channels leading from them to the Westward, up a bay of the main within Huckleberry Island, or across to the French River and village, are narrow and intricate, between flats of sand, mud, and eel-grass, and with only water enough for boats. Six and a quarter miles from the Huckleberry Gully, along the low shore of the mainland, in an E.S.E. $\frac{1}{2}$ E. direction, brings us to the beacon at Point Escuminac, and completes the circuit of the bay.

p. 2475

“ The bar of Miramichi commences from the South East end of Portage Island, and extends across the main entrance, and parallel to Fox Island, nearly six miles in a South East by South direction. It consists of sand, and has not more than a foot or two of water over it, in some parts, at low spring tides.”

He also says pp. 37 and 39 :—“ The Inner Bay of Miramichi is of great extent, being about thirteen miles long, from its entrance at Fox Island to Sheldrake Island, (where the River may properly be said to commence,) and seven or eight miles wide. The depth of water across the Bay is sufficient for the largest vessels that can cross the inner bar, being $2\frac{3}{4}$ fathoms at low water, in ordinary spring tides, with muddy bottom.

“ Sheldrake Island lies off Napan Point, at the distance of rather more than three quarters of a mile, and bears from Point Cheval, North-West by West one and three-quarters of a mile. Shallow water extends far off this Island, in every direction, Westward to Bartibogue Island and Eastward to Oak Point. It also sweeps round to the South and South East, so as to leave only a very narrow channel between it and the shoal which fills Napan Bay, and trending away to the Eastward past Point Cheval, forms the Middle Ground already mentioned. Murdock Spit and Murdock Point are two sandy points, a third of a mile apart, with a cove between them, and about a mile W.S.W. of Sheldrake Island. The entrance of Miramichi River is three-quarters of a mile wide, between these points and Moody Point, which has a small Indian church upon it, and is the East Point of entrance of Bartibogue River, a mile North West-by-West half West from Sheldrake Island.”

But a strong, and I may add, a conclusive point, in shewing the passage between Fox and Portage Island, to be the main entrance, or mouth of the Miramichi, is the peculiar action of the tides. It is thus described by Bayfield, p. 35 :—

“ The stream of the tides is not strong in the open bay, outside the bar of Miramichi. The flood draws in towards the entrance, as into a funnel, coming both from the North East and South East, alongshore from Tabusintac as well as Point Escuminac. It sets fairly through the ship channel at the rate of 1 ½ knots, at the Black buoy, increasing to 2, or 2 ½ knots, in strong spring tides, between Portage and Fox Islands, where it is strongest. The principal part of the stream continues to flow Westward, in the direction of the buoys of the Horse-shoe, although some part of it flows to the North-ward, between that shoal and Portage Island.”

p. 2476

The effect of this is thus singularly felt. A boat leaving Neguac, to ascend the Miramichi with the flood tide, is absolutely met by the tide flowing Northerly against it, until coming abreast of the Horse-shoe Shoal, or in the line of the main entrance ; and a boat at the Horse-shoe Shoal, steering for Neguac, with the ebb-tide making, would have the current against it, though Neguac is on a line as far seaward as the entrance to the Portage and Fox Islands—thus shewing conclusively that the main inlet and outlet of the tidal waters, to and from the mouth or entrance of the Miramichi, is between Portage and Fox Islands.

[8 April,
1858.]

As such Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that a line connecting Fox and Portage Islands, (marked in red, Plan No. 2, Record Book No. 2,) designates the mouth of the Miramichi River.

Dated at St. John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D. 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY

THE BUCTOUCHE.

I, the undersigned Arbitrator or Umpire, under the Reciprocity Treaty, concluded and signed at Washington, on the 5th day of June, A.D., 1854, have proceeded to, and examined the mouth of the River Buctouche, in the Province of New Brunswick, concerning which a difference of opinion had arisen between Her Britannic Majesty's Commissioner, and the Commissioner of the United States, as disclosed in Record No. 1, of their proceedings :

With reference to the Buctouche, it will be seen by Record No. 1 :—“ Her Majesty's Commissioner claims that a line from Glover's Point to the southern extremity of the Sand bar, marked in red on the Plan, No. 1, designates the mouth of the said River Buctouche. The United States Commissioner claims that a line from Chapel Point, bearing South 4° West, (magnetic) marked in blue on said plan, No. 1, designates the mouth of said River.”

On the subject of this River the United States Commissioner addresses me as follows :—“ The red line, extending from ' Glover's Point' to the point of the ' Sand Bar,' is the line marked by Her Majesty's Commissioner, as designating the mouth of the River ; in that line I could not concur, because it excludes from the common right of fishing the whole of Buctouche harbour, in contravention of the express words of the Treaty.”“ If it had been the duty and office of the Commissioners to indicate the point which constituted the mouth of the harbour, I should have been disposed to acquiesce in the point and line thus denoted ; but from the proposition, that it marks the entrance of these rivers, or any one of them, into the sea, or bay, or harbour, and constitutes their mouth, I entirely dissent.”

p. 2477

With the views I have already expressed, that the mouth of a River does not lose its Treaty character because it constitutes a harbour, it becomes important to determine which is the principal agent in forming this harbour, the river, or the sea ? If it is a mere indentation of the coast, formed by the sea—a creek—a bay—or harbour—unformed by, and unconnected with any River—one of those indentations in a coast, indebted to the Sea mainly for its waters, then plainly it is not intended, or entitled to be reserved ; but if, on the contrary, it is formed by the escape of waters from the interior, by a River seeking its outlet to the deep, shewing by the width and depth of its channel, at low water, that it is not to the Sea it owes its formation—then plainly, it is to the mouth of a River, and intended to be reserved.

Admiral Bayfield describes the Buctouche as follows, pp. 53 and 54 :—

“ Buctouche Roadstead, off the entrance of Buctouche River, and in the widest part of the channel within the outer bar, is perfectly safe for a vessel with good anchors and cables ; the ground being a stiff tenacious clay, and the outer bar preventing any very heavy sea from coming into the anchorage. It is here that vessels of too great draft of water to enter the River, lie moored to take in cargoes of lumber.

“ Buctouche River enters the Sea to the South East, through the shallow bay within the Buctouche sand bar, as will be seen in the chart. The two white beacons which I have mentioned as pointing out the best anchorage in the roadstead, are intended to lead in over the bar of sand and flat sandstone, in the best water, namely, eight feet at low water, and twelve feet at high water, in ordinary spring tides. But the channel is so narrow, intricate, and encumbered with oyster beds, that written directions are as useless as the assistance of a pilot is absolutely necessary to take a vessel safely into the River. Within the bar is a wide part of the channel, in which vessels may ride safely, in two-and-a-half, and three fathoms, over mud bottom ; but off Giddis Point, the channel becomes as difficult, narrow, and shallow, as at the bar. It is in its course through the bay, that the Buctouche is so shallow and intricate ; higher up, its channel being free from obstruction, and in some places five fathoms deep. Having crossed the bar, a vessel may ascend about ten miles further, and boats thirteen or fourteen miles, to where the tide water ends.”

By an examination of the channel, we find, miles up this River, a deep continuous channel, of twelve, fifteen, twenty, twenty-four, and thirty feet, down to Priest Point, varying from eighteen to twenty-four feet, to Giddis Point, and thence to a line drawn across from the Sand Bar to Glover's Point, from seven to twenty feet, but of greater width. On the outside of this channel, which is clearly defined, and between the sand bar and the channel, we find mud flats, with dry patches, and oyster beds, —“ flats of mud and eel grass, with dry patches at low water ;” with depths from Priest Point to the sand bar, varying from four to six feet ; and from the channel off Giddis Point to the bar, from one foot to three. On the other side of the channel, between Priest Point and Giddis Point, we find—“ flats of mud and weeds, with dry patches and oyster beds.” What has given depth and breadth to this channel ? The tide rises in the vicinity about four feet ; would that rise create a channel of the average depth above named ? Can there be any doubt that it is created by the great body of the River water finding its way to the Sea ? The line from “Glover's Point to the Southern extremity of the sand bar, marked in red on Plan No. 1,” is claimed by Her Majesty's Commissioner as the mouth of the River, and admitted by the United States Commissioner as the mouth of the harbour ; but if there were no River here, would there be any harbour at all ? I think not, and this line, therefore, while it constitutes the mouth of the harbour, also constitutes the mouth of the River.

p. 2478

This conclusion is consonant with the conclusion at which the Commissioners themselves arrived, in the cases of the Elliot and Montague Rivers in Prince Edward Island, as shewn by Records Nos. 9 and 10. The harbours of Charlottetown and Georgetown, are clearly within the lines they have marked and designated as the mouths of those Rivers respectively, and thus within the lines of exclusion ; but if the express words of the Treaty gave a right to such harbours, because “ harbours,” then why did the Commissioners exclude them ? And why should not the same principle which governed the Commissioners in their decision with regard to those “ harbours,” also govern with regard to the Buctouche harbour ?

As Arbitrator or Umpire, I decide that a line from Glover's Point to the Southern extremity of the sand bar, marked in red on Plan No. 1, in Record No. 2, designates the mouth of the River Buctouche.

Dated at St. John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April A.D. 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

It may not come within the exact line of my duty, but I cannot forbear remarking that the true benefits of this Treaty can only be realized to the inhabitants of both countries, by a course of mutual forbearance and enlightened liberality. Captious objections, fancied violations and insults, should be discountenanced ; and, above all, there should be an abstinence from attributing to either nation or people, as a national feeling, the spirit of aggression which may occasionally lead individuals to act in direct contravention of its terms. Every friend of humanity would regret further misunderstanding between Great Britain and the United States. The march of improvement, which is to bring the broad regions of North America, between the Atlantic and Pacific, within the pale of civilization, is committed by Providence to their direction ; fearful will be the responsibility of that nation which mars so noble a heritage.

Dated at St. John, in the Province of New Brunswick, this 8th day of April, A.D., 1858.

JOHN HAMILTON GRAY.

SUBMITTED BY NEWFOUNDLAND.

No. 1025.EXTRACTS FROM NOTES ON ESQUIMAUX BAY AND THE SURROUNDING COUNTRY.

By W. H. A. DAVIES, ESQ.

TRANSACTIONS OF THE HISTORICAL SOCIETY OF QUEBEC. VOL. IV.
(Read 19th February, 1842.)

The Great Bay of Esquimaux, or as it is more generally called, Esquimaux Bay, is a large inlet, on the east coast of Labrador, penetrating into the country in a south-westerly direction. It is situated about 250 miles beyond the Straits of Belleisle ; the entrance lying in N. Lat. $54^{\circ} 23'$ West Long. $57^{\circ} 25'$.

It is by far the largest of the numerous inlets that indent that part of the coast. At its entrance it is upwards of thirty miles in breadth, from thence it decreases, until at the Post of Rigolet, about fifty miles from the sea, it is reduced to about a mile in width, beyond this it again expands, and about 90 miles from the sea, it forms a magnificent salt-water lake of upwards of 20 miles in breadth, and in length fully 30 miles ; at the western extremity of the lake, it again contracts to a narrow width for a short distance, above which it forms another lake about 7 miles wide and 20 long, when the head of the inlet is reached. Its total length may be taken at 150 miles and its mean breadth about 15 miles, exclusive of two large arms that join it in the neighbourhood of Rigolet, the one running to the south-east about 40 miles, and the other having a course nearly parallel to the main bay, and a length of 60 miles—including these arms, the surface covered by its waters may be taken at about 1,700 miles.

* * * *

Such are the scenes presented by the entrance of the Bay ; as it is ascended an amelioration is perceived in the landscape by the gradual introduction of trees, first appearing at the bottom of the small coves, and then gradually climbing up the sides of the mountains, until on arriving at the Post of Rigolet, the whole country is found covered with timber, small and stunted it is true, but still large enough to hide the ruggedness of the ground. Above the Post of Rigolet and on the shores of the salt-water lake, mentioned above, the scenery becomes very grand ; the range of the Mealy Mountains here strikes the shores of the Bay, leaving but a narrow strip of land between the water and their base, from whence they rise 1,400 to 1,500 feet in height, almost perpendicularly, presenting the appearance of an immense wall, the resemblance to which is much increased by the extraordinary evenness of their summit. The Mealy Mountains are a range of mountains whose tops are first perceived about 100 miles to the south of Esquimaux Bay, running nearly parallel to the coast—they strike the shores of the bay, as already observed, near the commencement of the salt-water lake, along which they continue for about 25 miles, they then gradually leave the shore and after some distance, meeting with another range, coming in an opposite direction, they lose a part of their height, and are lost amidst the confused mass of hills that fill the interior of the country. The only level ground of any extent in the neighbourhood of the bay reaches from the head of it to the foot of these mountains.

Cartwright, as well as the Moravian Missionaries, state, that these mountains are always covered with snow, this is not exactly the case, at least, in that part that I am acquainted with—there is an interval of about 15 to 20 days at the latter end of August and first days of September, when they are free from snow except in the deep ravines, where the snow remains constantly. They derive their name, I believe, from the patches of snow distributed over their surface during the greatest part of the summer, giving them the appearance of being powdered over with meal. When viewed in winter, in fine weather, at the time of sunset, these mountains present scenes of great beauty ; and it is difficult for the imagination to conceive anything more beautiful than the tints that their summits assume as they are touched by the last rays of the setting sun, long after he has disappeared from the eye, while every little ravine, every inequality in their surface is chiselled out against the clear cold sky with a precision and vividness that are alike beautiful and wonderful.

RIVERS AND LAKES.

As may be supposed in such an extensive bay, numerous rivers flow into it, but three only are of large size, viz. : The Grand or Hamilton River, the Kenamou, and the Nascapsee or North West River—of these the Grand or Hamilton River, flowing in at the head of the bay, is by far the most considerable, both as regards the length of its course and the volume of water it discharges. It is nearly half a league in breadth at its entrance gradually decreasing in width for about twenty-five miles from its mouth ; it then becomes from one-eighth to one-quarter of a mile wide ; from this size it never varies very much as far up as it has been followed. Two hundred miles from its mouth it forces itself through a range of mountains that seem to border the table land of the interior, in a succession of tremendous falls and rapids for nearly 20 miles. These falls were accidentally discovered, in 1839, by a gentleman engaged in exploring a route to Esquimaux Bay from the interior. Above these falls, the river flows with a very smooth and even current ; it has been followed for 100 miles further, where a Post has lately been established—between the falls and the Post it passes through a succession of very large lakes, communicating with one another by short straits—these lakes appear to cover a very considerable part of the table land ; they have not yet been explored, and their dimensions are, consequently, not known but from Indian report ; many present a water horizon in different directions as portions of them are crossed. Above the Post, called Fort Nascapsee, the river has not been explored, but the Indians report that it comes from a long distance to the westward, and runs with a deep and gentle current unobstructed by falls or rapids—it is supposed to come from lakes in the rear of the Seven Islands. If this is the case, and there is every reason to believe it to be so, it develops a curious fact in the formation of that country, viz. : that a large river should flow for so considerable distance on the top of the ridge, if I may so express it, between the head waters of the rivers falling into the St. Lawrence and those falling into the Hudson's Bay and Straits, for they are said, by the Indians, to be quite close to the waters of the Grand River on either side. The course of the river from Fort Nascapsee to the place where it forces itself through the mountains is to the southward of east, it then turns to the east, and finally to the north-east, the latter course it pursues until it falls into Esquimaux Bay.

p. 2481

The Kenamou River flows in from the south, about 13 miles from the entrance of the Grand River—it is a considerable stream, taking its rise in the country lying between the Gulf of St. Lawrence and Esquimaux Bay ; its course is therefore short, and as the lakes from whence it takes its rise, are at a high elevation, it is extremely rapid and full of falls. I had it explored for about 80 miles ; in the whole of this distance it was nothing but a succession of rapids. Its banks are mountainous. About 30 miles from its mouth it cuts through the range of the Mealy Mountains.

The Nascapsee River or North West River is rather a large one, and falls into the Bay on the north side, very nearly opposite to the mouth of the Kenamou River ; the distance between the entrances of these two rivers (which is the breadth of the Bay at this place) is 12 miles. About 2 miles from its mouth, it passes through a narrow lake, about 40 miles long, bordered by high mountains ; a little below the head of the lake (called the Grand Lake) the river flows in from the north-east, it keeps this course for about 25 miles, when it bends very considerably and flows from the north, its course from thence to its source is only known at intervals, as in consequence of numerous rapids and falls, the river is left and the route to the interior is pursued through a series of lakes until close to Lake Meshagamou, from whence its waters flow, when the river is again followed as far as that lake. Meshagamou, or the Great Lake, is one of the lakes occupying the table land of the interior—it is of considerable size ; it has not however been explored, as yet, by the whites. It is one of the lakes with which the Grand River communicates. Among the largest of the other rivers flowing into Esquimaux Bay, may be mentioned the Goose Brook, the Double M^{er} River, Moulagan River, the River of Goose Bay ; the whole of these rivers, though some are of large size at their entrance, are short and are not navigable for anything larger than a small canoe.

p. 2482

The country, in the neighbourhood of Esquimaux Bay, abounds in lakes of all sizes and shapes, from the small pond of a few acres in length to the large lake of twelve or fourteen leagues long ; this is indeed, the case with the whole of the Labrador coast, but however they may vary as to their sizes and shapes, there is one feature in which they all agree, that is in their shallowness— and this is found to be the case in all the lakes of the Atlantic slope, with the exception of those which communicate directly with the ocean or with some of its bays, these are in general distinguished for their depth. This almost universal shallowness of the lakes is a singular feature, when the nature of their borders is taken into consideration, as they are generally surrounded by hills, which would lead one to look for a corresponding depth in the lake ; but, instead of this, some are so shallow, that for miles there is hardly water enough to float a half-loaded canoe. I am informed by my friend John M'Lean, Esq., that this is likewise the case with the lakes lying on the watershed of Ungava Bay. The lakes, lying on the table-land, are said to be deep.

* * * *

FACE OF THE COUNTRY.

The face of the country, in the vicinity of Esquimaux Bay, on proceeding to the northward and westward is extremely rugged and hilly ; it is composed of ranges of round-backed hills, traversing the country in all directions ; they do not, in the interior at least, assume the altitude of mountains—the intervals between them are filled either by lakes or marshes ; so that in looking down from the brow of some more elevated hill, an interminable succession of naked hills and lakes is seen, giving an indescribable aspect of desolation to the country, which is greatly heightened by the effects of the fires that have ravaged the whole country. Indeed, there can be but little doubt, that at one time nearly, if not the whole, of the interior of Labrador was covered with wood, which has since been destroyed by fire ; in almost every direction, the naked stumps of trees are seen, rising out of the moss that now covers the country. Hundreds of miles of the country are now nothing but a barren waste of naked rock from this cause, which in the recollection of some of the old hunters were covered with wood formerly.

The following extracts, from the report of a gentleman, who was sent to explore the country on the Nascapsee River, will give a very good idea of it :—

“ From North-west River House, the River Nascapsee is ascended for about 65 miles when it is left at Mont a Peine Portage, from thence you follow from one lake to another—most of them very small. The country, from Mont a Peine Portage, as far as the Little Seal Lake, is as barren and as miserable as can be seen anywhere ; the trees are all burnt, and nothing but stones and dry stumps to be seen—there is not even earth or moss enough, in most of the carrying-places, to make a foot path. Beyond the Little Seal Lake, the country becomes a little better ; a few green trees are met with, until the Portage called Shepay tau-wa Kaw, or Seven Mile Portage, where the country becomes still more barren and burnt— this continues to be the case as far as Meshagamou Lake, where, on the First of July, the ice was still firm— there is no wood to build there ; it is only at Gull Nest Lake where wood to build could be found ; this Lake is but a short distance from Lake Meshagamou. From the North-west River House to the latter lake there are 45 Portages, two of which are from 5 to 7 miles long, and several are 2 miles. Of the lakes passed through, 10 were from two miles and a-half to 12 miles long, and from 5 to 6 miles broad ; these were the largest— the others were from 2 acres to one mile and a-half ; most of them are destitute of fish and all very shallow. On the 22d, 23d, and 24th June, we found the lakes full of ice ; we advanced by making portages over the ice or through the woods, and by creeping along the small lanes of water near the shore—the borders of the River Nascapsee, when we ascended it, were still lined by ice, some of it ten feet thick.”

p. 2483

Such is the nature of the country to the northward of Esquimaux Bay ; to the southward of it, the country, though in some respects similar, is much more level and is more clothed with trees. After passing the first range of mountains, on leaving the Bay, an elevated plateau is gained, which continues until the shores of the Gulf of St. Lawrence are approached, when the country becomes more mountainous and slopes rapidly to the seaside ; the breadth of the plateau may be about 140 miles—it abounds with lakes, some of them of considerable size, but so shallow, that according to the gentleman who explored it by my orders, “ they might rather be called swamps overflowed with water than lakes” ; the rivers likewise that traverse this part of the country though broad are exceedingly shallow. The whole of the interior of it is covered with wood, though it is very stunted and thin in some places ; but, as you approach the coast of the Gulf, the wood diminishes until it disappears altogether on the coast.

The Valley of the Grand River, for about 100 miles from its entrance, presents a pleasing contrast to the barrenness of every other part of the country round the Bay. This valley is very well timbered, and some of the trees are of a large size ; intermixed with the spruce is a considerable quantity of white birch, and a few poplars are also to be seen ; a light loamy soil is also, frequently to be found on the points of the river. There is a difference of 20 days in favor of this valley in the spring and fall, this difference of climate is to be attributed, in a great degree to its favorable aspect, to the south and west, and also, in some measure to the superior warmth of the water coming from the westward.

TRADE.

The trade of Esquimaux Bay, formerly of some consequence, has been gradually diminishing for some years past, and is now extremely limited—it is confined to a trifling, bartering trade in cloth, blankets, guns, ammunition, and provisions, with the Planters and Esquimauxs, who in return give a little seal oil, salmon, codfish, and a few furs—this trade is principally carried on at the Post of Rigolet, about fifty miles from the sea. The trade with the Mountaineers, as already mentioned, is carried on at the head of the Bay—cloths, blankets, guns, ammunition, and a little flour, are given to them, in exchange for the skins of martens, foxes, deer, lynxes, wolverines, minks, beaver, &c.—the quantity procured is very small in proportion to the number of Indians, and the trade is very far from being a profitable one, on account of the expense attending it. It is at present, entirely monopolized by the Hudson's Bay Company, as well as the trade of Rigolet.

p. 2484

At the entrance of the Bay, are situated two small codfishing establishments, carried on by people from Newfoundland, who likewise have a little trade with the Planters and Esquimauxs, but the amount of business thus done is very trifling. During the codfishing, a few American vessels visit the Bay—of late years the catch has not been great—the fish appear to be more numerous further north, where the Americans generally follow them—a solitary trading-vessel, from Nova Scotia, now and then finds its way as far as the Bay.

The salmon fishery is principally carried on in the neighbourhood of Rigolet—the nets are set at the different points of the Bay when the current is strongest. The catch is now very small—the total export of the Bay hardly exceeding 120 tierces when formerly it surpassed 400. Nearly all the seal oil exported from the Bay is the produce of the hunt of the Esquimauxs ; the Bay not being advantageous for carrying on fisheries for the animal. One small vessel is employed by the Hudson's Bay Company in the trade of the Bay—it is found more than sufficient for it, and it is sent every second year, as far as Ungava Bay, in Hudson's Straits, to collect the returns of that district.

No. 1026.

10th Oct., 1902—LETTER FROM SECRETARY FOR DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR TO GRAND RIVER PULP AND LUMBER COMPANY.

Vide Vol. I, p. 145.

No. 1027.

16th Feb. 1926—AFFIDAVIT OF W. E. SWAFFIELD.

Vide Vol. II, p. 384.

No. 1028.

30th Nov., 1823—GOVERNOR HAMILTON TO THE SECRETARY OF THE ADMIRALTY.

Vide Vol. III, p. 1258.

No. 1029.

30th Sept., 1863—EXTRACT FROM CAPTAIN
HAMILTON'S REPORT TO THE ADMIRAL AND GOVERNOR, RELATIVE TO THE FISHERIES.

Vide Vol. III, p. 1524.

No. 1030.

4th March, 1926—AFFIDAVIT OF RALPH PARSONS.

Vide Vol. III, p. 1562.

No. 1031.

18th June, 1926—AFFIDAVIT OF W. J. CARSON.

Vide Vol. III, p. 1589.

No. 1032.

EXTRACTS FROM NEWFOUNDLAND AND LABRADOR PILOT.

VOL 11, FIFTH EDTN., 1917.

Chap. 1. Page 3.
RIVERS.

The Atlantic coast range throws most of the drainage northwards into Ungava bay, and only small streams fall into the Atlantic, except the Gilles-port (Hamilton), Nasquapee, and Kenamou.

Gillesport (Grand, Ashwanipi, or Hamilton) river, supposed to be the largest in Labrador, drains a vast interior plateau ; it rises northward of Seven islands bay, in the gulf of St. Lawrence, and falls into Hamilton inlet, which also receives the waters of Kenamou river, and Nasquapee or North-west river. Eagle, West and East rivers, abounding in salmon and trout, fall into Sandwich bay, while Koksoak or Big river, Whale river, and Kangerthialuksoak or George river have their outlets in Ungava bay.

Chap. V. Page 405.
HAMILTON INLET.

Chart 375, Sandwich bay to Nain.

Hamilton Inlet (Ivucktoke or Grosse water bay) is entered between Tub island and Pompey island, which bears 2° true, distant 15 miles. It extends west-south-westward 35 miles to the Narrows, the intervening space containing several islands.

Within the Narrows which are 3½ cables wide, the inlet extends south-westward 90 miles, opening to the width of 18 miles in Lake Melville, and narrowing again at its head, into which Gillesport (Hamilton or Grand) river, a large stream, flows.

Hamilton inlet is the largest of the many long fiords which indent the north-east coast of Labrador. Like many others it is deep, and is surrounded by high hills, often rising a thousand feet sheer from the water, while its surface is frequently broken by large, bold, rocky islands. The lower slope and islands are wooded with dark spruce, mingled with the lighter coloured birch and aspen, forming a contrast with the bare rocks of the summits. The Narrows extend for upwards of 5 miles, with an average width of about a mile, and during each change of tide a strong current, with rapids, occurs at the south-western end. A village of Eskimo, made up of a log houses, occupies the shore of a small cove near Rigoulette ; its chief interest lies in the fact that it is the most southerly community of these people. The inhabitants have been long in contact with white men, and have acquired many of the virtues and vices of civilisation. The north-eastern third of Lake Melville is full of wild, rocky islands. The Mealy Mountains rise directly from its south-eastern shores ; the north-western shore is also high, but there is often a wide margin of lowland between the water and the rocky wall of the fiord. North-west river enters the lake on the western side about 80 miles beyond the Narrows. The stream is only about 100 yards wide at its mouth, but averages 15 feet in depth. Half a mile up stream it expands into a small lake, which, 3 miles farther up, again contracts for 400 yards to form the outlet of Grand lake, a large body of fresh water extending north-westward about 40 miles in a deep valley between high rocks.

A Hudson Bay Company's post is situated at the mouth of North-west river. It consists of half-a-dozen small log buildings. Its importance has greatly diminished, as the Indians no longer take the proceeds of their winter's hunt there, but to the posts on the north side of St. Lawrence river, so that at present the trade of the post is exclusively with the whites living about the inlet. A fur-trading station of Revillon Frère, of Paris, is also established at North-west river. Almost opposite North-west river, on the south-eastern side of Lake Melville, is Carter basin, a small bay into which empty the Kenamou and Kenemichic rivers. The former is much the larger, and drains an extensive area of highlands to the southward. It is very rapid, and practically unnavigable. Southward from North-west river the inlet has been silted up by sand brought down and deposited there by the Gillesport (Hamilton) river, which flows into the head of the inlet. A long, narrow point, stretching out from the shore southward from North-west river entrance, divides the shallows from the deeper portion of the inlet ; the south-western part is Goose bay which extends about 20 miles to its head, where it receives a small river, famous for the large brook trout taken about its mouth in the autumn months. A large lumber mill, belonging to the Grand River Lumber Company, is established here. Beside their buildings, small log houses are scattered along the shores of the inlet, wherever the ground is sufficiently level for a small garden ; these are the winter houses of the white people, who reside permanently on the Atlantic coast. They are called " planters " or " livyeres " to distinguish them from the summer fishing population from Newfoundland. Some of their ancestors were among the original settlers who came to Sandwich bay with Cartwright in 1770 ; others are descended from servants of the Hudson Bay Company. They are all poor and hopelessly in debt. Vegetables can be grown about Hamilton inlet, owing to the shore not being near the Arctic current, which washes the outer coast, and are grown at Northwest river station (Lat 53° 32' N., Long 60° 09' W.) to supply the outer posts of the Hudson Bay Company.

Game. The big game consists of barren-ground and woodland caribou, black bears, and seals: Caribou are found in small bands on the Mealy mountains on the south side, while in the winter large herds of barren-ground

p. 2488

caribou come out on the coast to the northward and have been killed in great numbers within a few miles of the inlet. Bears are found on the burnt areas, where they feed on blueberries in the late summer. The seals, especially the harbour seal, are common in the waters of the inlet. Wild fowl and geese are very abundant in the spring and fall of the year, and are killed in great number below Rigoulette. The curlew, formerly so plentiful, are now nearly extinct; the Canada grouse, or spruce partridge, is abundant about the head of the inlet, and the ruffled grouse is also common. During the winter great numbers of willow ptarmigan migrate southward.

Salmon Fishery. Hamilton inlet was once famous for its salmon fishery, but the use of numerous cod traps along the coast has practically exterminated the salmon, as far as concerns rod-fishing in the rivers. Trout are plentiful.

Gillesport. (Hamilton or Grand) river is the most important stream of the eastern watershed of the Labrador peninsula. It is upwards of 500 miles in length, and extends westward half-way to Hudson bay. To the north and west its tributaries interlock with those of the North-west river, and with the head waters of the George and Koksoak rivers, both of which flow north into Ungava bay, while to the south the Gillesport river is separated by a low, sinuous watershed from the rivers flowing southward into the Gulf of St. Lawrence. At the Grand falls, about 250 miles above its mouth, the river is naturally divided into two parts, which are quite dissimilar in physical character. The lower part occupies a deep, ancient valley cut down into the hard crystalline rocks of the plateau so that the present level of the river is from 500 to a 1,000 feet below the general level of the surrounding country. This deep valley varies in width from a 100 yards to more than 2 miles between the rocky walls. The river flows with a strong current often broken by rapids, especially along the upper stretches. Only in one place has it a direct fall over a rock obstruction, and that is at the Musk rat fall, 27 miles above its mouth, where a dam of glacial drift has diverted the stream from its ancient course, and caused it to find a new channel on the south side of a rocky knoll where the river falls 70 feet over ledges in a distance of 400 yards. The river flows into the head of Lake Melville on the southern side of Goose bay, and is separated from it by a long, low, sandy point. The mouth of the river is obstructed by wide shoals with numerous narrow channels between them. (Abridged from description by Dr. A. P. Low.)

No. 1033.

GEOGRAPHICAL CONSIDERATIONS AS TO THE CANADIAN-NEWFOUNDLAND BOUNDARY IN LABRADOR.

BY PROFESSOR J. W. GREGORY, F.R.S., D.Sc.

I. THE LABRADOR COASTAL BELT A “DISTINCT GEOGRAPHICAL ENTITY.”

The Geography of Labrador presents two striking contrasts between the eastern and western parts. The first contrast is between the fiord-indented Atlantic coast and the comparatively even shore of Hudson Bay. The second contrast is between the rugged mountainous belt along the Atlantic coast and the undulating plateau which extends westward from the Atlantic coastal belt to Hudson Bay. These contrasts both depend upon geographical features, and not on geological composition, for Labrador consists of one vast slab of ancient rocks, which are among the oldest known to geologists.

A. GEOLOGICAL ANTIQUITY OF THE PENINSULA.

“Labrador,” says Packard ('Labrador Coast,' 1891, p. 279) “is an oblong mass of Laurentian rocks.” E. M. Kindle (Mem. Geol. Surv. Can., 1924, No. 141, p. 56 and fig. 4) has recently doubtfully suggested that some of the sandstones may be Cambrian ;* but that identification, if confirmed, would only extend the range to the earliest division of the succeeding group. After these primeval rocks the next deposits known in Labrador are the glacial beds, sea beaches, and river terraces, which all belong to the most recent geological period. Between these first and last chapters in the geological record nothing is known of Labrador except from indirect evidence, which shows however that it was once part of a much larger land that extended westward and also eastward into the Atlantic.

Geographically also Labrador is simple. It consists of a great plateau which presents a steep front to the Atlantic, and on the western side slopes more gradually downward to Hudson Bay. Most of the plateau is between 1,000 and 1,500 ft. above sea level ; the highest extensive area is in the upper part of the basin of the Hamilton River at about 1,800 ft. The rise inland from James Bay is gentle ; the coast in the northern part of Hudson Bay is usually bold, and the ascent inland to the height of about 500 ft. is steeper than near James Bay ; on the Atlantic side the ascent is abrupt to the height

* Kindle calls them “Cambrian ?” as they were so named by Low ; R. Bell (1895, p. 35) stated that these sandstones “bear a close resemblance to the Animikie,” which are now of 1,000 to 4,000 ft. Most of the western plateau consists of undulating moorland, with the hills rising not more than about 500 ft. above the general level, with broad valleys, and with innumerable lakes in shallow depressions.

B. THE COASTAL CHAIN OF EASTERN LABRADOR

In contrast to the gentle undulations of the western plateau the eastern belt consists of rugged mountains which rise to the greatest height found anywhere along the Atlantic coast of North and South America. They reach a height which, according to Professor Daly (1902, p. 233) is at least 7,500 ft., and is the "most lofty land immediately adjacent to the coast in all the long stretch from Baffin Land to Cape Horn" (Daly, 1909, p. 102). These mountains are the remnants of an ancient mountain chain, which has now been broken up into detached ranges situated along the coastal region. These ranges in order from north to south are the Torngat Mountains between Cape Chidley and Hebron, which rise to the height of from 3,000 to 7,500 ft., and face the Atlantic in precipitous cliffs. The second group are the Kaumajet Mountains, or Shining Mountains, near Cape Mugford, a little south of lat. 58°. The third block is the Kiglapait Mountains (or Saw-Tooth or Sierra Mountains) from behind Cape Mugford to behind Nain: they rise from the shore to 2,500 ft. and include summits of 4,000 ft. Further south the highest summits are in the Kokkok Mountains, 4,500 ft. to the north of Hamilton Inlet, and to the south of it in the Mealy Mountains, which Mr. E. N. Kindle has shown are twice as high as was thought and include several summits of over 3,000 ft. and one of 3,800 ft. The three northern ranges form, according to Professor Daly (Joint Appendix, p. 2537) "an almost continuous mountain land." Taken as a whole," says Professor Daly (Ibid, p. 2537) "the Nain-Kiglapait-Kaumajet-Torngat Mountain group is a distinct entity, a distinct topographic province of the Labrador Peninsula."

The essential feature of this distinctness is the mountain structure which, as Prof. Daly has shown (1909, pp. 88-89), continues all along the coastal region of eastern Labrador. The difference between the western plateau and the mountain group in the Northern part of the coastal region continues to the south, though it is less clear there, as between the northern mountain group and the mountains rising to 4,500 ft. near Hamilton Inlet the country is less well known. Some maps, however, indicate the existence of high intermediate mountains. Packard's general map of Labrador (1891, opp. p. 232) shows high "wooded Mountains" south-west of Hopedale which represent the coastal mountain chain. Further south his map of 1888 (reprinted Packard, 1891, opp. p. 90) marks Mount Allaigaigai, 2,170 ft. north of Hamilton Inlet and opposite Mount Cabot, 1,482 ft., which is at the eastern end of the Mealy Mountains. According to Dr. Robert Bell (1895, p. 340), formerly Director of the Geological Survey of Canada, Hamilton Inlet, and not the country west of Nain, marks the division between the less regular southern and the more regular northern parts of the eastern mountains. He states that the chain is “ scattered and ill-defined from the Straits of Belle Isle to Hamilton Inlet, but northward of this great fiord it becomes more regular.”*

p. 2491

The geographical character of eastern Labrador is determined mainly by the structures due to this ancient mountain chain. Its former existence and influence on the present topography is shown by the strike of the rocks, in accordance with which Professor Daly's Map (1909, fig. 13, p. 88) marks “ the Labrador Trend ” as extending behind the coast all the way from near Cape Chidley to the Strait of Belle Isle. That figure, Professor Daly remarks (1909, p. 89) “ is intended to show that there is a definite trend of the rocks of the Basement Complex, and that this trend has a remarkable parallelism with the present north-east coast of the peninsula.” Daly had previously pointed out (1902, p. 234) in a discussion of “ the general structure of the Coastal Belt,” that the Archean shield [i.e. the area of Archean rocks which forms the foundation of eastern Canada] is rather definitely framed on the border, and that the average direction of the coast-line is related to the tectonic trend of the ancient mountain-system of which the Labrador Plateau is a diminished remnant.” The evidence for the continuity of the strike in the rocks is even stronger than appears from Professor Daly's list (1902, p. 235, 1909, p. 88), for he states that the parallel strike of the schists was often seen from the schooner at other places. He remarks (Daly, 1902, p. 234) “ The impression thus gained is sufficient to warrant our regarding the fidelity of the structure to a general north-west to south-east trend as of a higher order than is shown in the table or in the sketch map.” This ancient mountain chain was formed when the rocks were given their strike parallel to the Labrador coast. The mountain chain was subsequently worn down to a plain. The present coastal mountains are due to re-elevation along the lines of the ancient mountain chain. This comparatively modern uplift produced, in the words of Daly (1909, p. 100), “ a veritable resurrection of the Archean mountain-chain.” This re-elevation has given “ a distinct entity,” to use the phrase of Professor Daly (Jt. App. p. 2537), to the whole coastal belt of eastern Labrador.

C. TWO COASTAL TYPES

The second great contrast in Labrador is between the eastern and western shore lines. The Labrador shore in Hudson Bay extends in long even curves, although the curves may have many minor irregularities, and may be fringed with islets.

The cliffs of Labrador along Hudson Bay, though bold in many places, are generally lower than those on the Atlantic coast, and the rivers are usually much longer than those that discharge to the Atlantic. The eastern coast, on the contrary, is intensely indented by inlets which

* Stanford's maps, 1891 and 1899, cf. Atlas No. 44, mark the coastal range as continuous from the western part of Kiglapait past Nain to the north side of Hamilton Inlet.

p. 2492

run far inland ; the cliffs are precipitous, and the rivers, with one exception, are short.

Eastern Labrador consists of a belt of country very distinct in its geographical character from the country west of the watershed, and forms a geographical unit marked by three characteristics. First, this eastern belt is intersected by deep fiord valleys, many of which run for 20 to 40 or more miles inland, and have branch valleys which are also deep and have straight steep sides. The extension of the northern fiords across the coastal mountain belt was described by Koch in 1884 (Deut. Geogr. Blatt., VII. Pt. 2, 1884, pp. 151 – 163) as quoted by Packard (1891, p. 227).

Second, the land between these valleys consists of high isolated, steep-sided blocks. Professor Daly's photographs and descriptions show that these blocks rise to the same general level, and are parts of an ancient plateau which has been dismembered by the formation of the inlets and the land valleys continuous with the inlets. This feature is most typically shown in Northern Labrador, but the same structure occurs as far south as the Strait of Belle Isle ; it is shown by the wall-like front of the Mealy Mountains above the Hamilton Inlet, and by some of Professor Daly's photographs of the southern coast (e.g. Jt. App : fig. 33, p. 2555 at 55° N., fig. 35, p.2556 at 53° 14', fig. 37, p. 2557) which show high lands rising abruptly from the plain along the shore.

Third, the possibilities of geographical development of the coast region are different from those of the country to the west. The development of the coastal region has been hampered by the difficulty of communication and transport, as the larger part of the surface is isolated by the deep intersecting fiords and fiord valleys. Throughout this belt communication is possible only by going to the coast along the inlets and fiord valleys ; traverse from north-west to south-east parallel to the coast is impracticable, owing to the height and steepness of the intervening mountains.

D. THE WATERSHED THE NATURAL BOUNDARY

The coastland is separated from the western moorlands by the watershed which for most of the peninsula is the natural separation. The watershed is the natural geographical division as it determines the direction of trade and commerce, since exports would go down the waterways to the sea.

II. THE ATLANTIC COAST AND ITS INLETS.

A. THE NORTHERN FIORDS

The eastern coastland is divided into two sections, the northern in which the arms of the sea are fiords, and the southern, in which as the level of the land is lower, the valleys are less deep and reach the sea as fiards. In the northern part the arms of the sea are typical fiords. In my book on Fiords

p. 2492A

